Community Development Journal

Editor: Gary Craig

Community Development Journal covers political, economic and social programmes that link the activities of people with institutions and government. Issues covered include, for example, community action, village, town and regional planning, community studies, and rural development. The Journal occasionally sponsors conferences and seminars on relevant topics.

Community Development Journal is published four times a year and circulates in over 80 countries. It has 27 editorial correspondents throughout the world to whom initial enquiries and contributions may be sent.
