2. If subscribers wish their papers discontinued, they must notify the publisher, and pay up all arrearages, or the papers will be continued.

3. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publisher, and papers are sent to the former place they are still responsible. Notice should be given when papers are to be stopped.

4. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office to which they are directed, they will be held responsible until they settle the bill and order the paper discontinued.

5. If the courts have decided that refusing to take a paper from the office is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud, the publishers believe it to be the duty of editors to follow the decisions.

6. Any person who receives a newspaper and makes use of it, whether he has ordered it or not, will be held responsible for the price of the paper.

7. If subscribers pay in advance they are bound to settle their subscriptions at whatever time they may discontinue, or the publisher may continue to send them, and the subscribers will be responsible until all arrearages are paid, and the publication of all articles, if sent to the publisher.
