tion." We are glad he does and hope he will set a good example in that respect. He thinks "we are blameworthy when we open our land to the surplus population of all nations." This population are here; they have sought our country with its institutions, and ought they not to obey its laws; sunday and liquor laws with others?

Again, he thinks there is "less evil now than ever before." Let him compare the calendar of the courts now with those 35 years ago, or count the inmates of our prisons and compare the number now and then, or read the list of crimes in our daily papers and he will find a larger list than in former years.

Now, Americus, if you are worthy any name appertaining to America, you will uphold American institutions and American laws, and not "be conquered" by any customs or institutions of the old world. And let us as Americans and Citizens do all we can to right all wrongs in our midst, to promote good morals in our community, and our higher standard of manhood in its fullest sense. Looking for this we again subscribe

A Word to Travelers,

We have a word to say in favor of the Missouri Pacific Railroad. It was the "pioneer" line Westward and is the "old reliable" route to St. Louis.

Improvements which have been made during the past year, we believe that the Missouri Pacific Railroad has the best track and is the finest and safest equipment of any line west of the Mississippi. It is the only line which runs three daily express trains of first-class coaches and one man Sleepers, equipped with the Miller platform and patent air brake, from leading points in the West, through Kansas City, Sedalia and Jefferson City to St. Louis WITHOUT CHANGE, connecting at St. Louis with express trains for all points North, East and South. Particular information, with maps, time tables, &c., may be had at the various "Through Ticket Railroad Stations in the West, or upon personal or written application to G. H. Baxter, Western Passenger Agent, Kansas City, Mo., or E. A. Ford, General Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo." 1y

PSALM XC.

Founded in majesty and might,
Built on the wonders of the past,
The world through each age past the test
Of the eternal years to last.

Throughout the past unfathomed,
Thy throne has stood from age to age,
Thy word has been the mighty cause
Of all the earth's ever-changing scene.

The ocean, leaked from shore to shore
By eternal currents like an ever-flowing river,
Has ebbed and flowed at Thy command
To break because it was unbroken.

The Lord and God is the Eternal!
As his ashes by the sea of old,
So his dust to-day must be still
The winds and waves obey his will.

Thy testimonies, Lord, are pure;
Thy statutes are righteous and true;
And as that would be of old, see,
So shall righteousness endure.

THE ORIGIN OF LOVE.

AN ALLEGORY FROM THE GREEK OF PLATO.

When Beauty was born, a magnificent feast
Was given to celebrate the event;
And to all the Olympians, little and great,
And many terrestrials, an invitation was sent.

In the famous Dryope was attended the most Splendid banquet ever since the world began;
A rare ambrosial pot, when the wine was drunk
In the garden of Jove, when the banquet was done.

Here, sailing asleep at the close of the night,
Miss Poverty—a maiden of beauty and worth—
Who chanced at the time to be passing the earth,
And entered the garden of Jupiter's mirth.

Here she dozed at the night, fell in love with the youth,
It is said, to grace; though I never could
Believe that a goddess, a maiden of worth,
Was willing to marry one wonderful truth.

How she managed to waken Air love in return
Is a matter of fact;
But to it belief; and the marriage came of
In a manner so natural, so free from constraint
As to fill with spirit, and Poverty sent
When cupcake forgave the connubial gift.

The scene changed, and the guests were no more,
And gossip, of course, was exceedingly free
With many opinions of Love's parentage,
As to what in creation the offspring would be like.

But Time, the expositor, settled the doubt:
To the question, so oft asking, he gave answer
Our unanimity mocked the secret was out—
Love's father was Plenty, his mother was Want.

As the orchid grew up, it was plain to be seen
He shared all the traits both of mother and father.

Like Want he was needy, and Plenty he was
As the grandson of Prudence, the youthful he
A hero for courage and a maiden queen
When he was with either, he was with them.

A slave to fawning and a cowardly spirit,
Another, a tyrant, a master of men,
Be his character, substance we quote certain,
Love's father was Plenty, his mother was Want.

How a Guileless Professor Proposed and was Accepted in the Hour.

A correspondent of the Indianapolis Journal tells the following specimen of Professor Baldy, the distinguished astronomer of Pendell, who is remembered in connection with the comets of the Faculty of the College in Knoxville, Tenn.

Prof. Baldy was a man who lived in the sciences usually taught in college, but his judgment in the practical affairs of life rendered him a remarkable exception to the rule. He had conducted a study of human nature in one of his multiform phases. "Being advised by some of his friends that a wife, with child-like faith and simplicity, according their advice and by long study to the Professor and myself, I therefore set myself at work to find a wife. I was convinced from my study of human nature that the most desirable wife would be found among the country girls, and therefore I concluded to go to the country and look around. I went to Farmer Jones' and found a number of girls there, but I was not pleased with any of them. I then went to Farmer Smith's, and found a number of girls there, but I was not pleased with any of them. PSALM XC.

Everyone is subject and obedient
Liberal, eager in world or Church;
The world through ages past has stood
To the same pattern as it would.

Then, Lord, be Thou our refuge,
Thy throne has been our home
Before the mountains first arose,
Before the earth was born.

Thou art the same to-day,
Thy years no limit know;
Time, in its ever-changing course,
Can never change Thee now.

Thou, Lord, hast been a shelter
For mortal mortals, life up it past;
Thou, God, art from everlasting on,
To break beneath is eternal throw.

The Lord says: "Return, ye children
At his behest they rise or fall;
In his sight a thousand years are
The yesterday that's gone by.

Thy testimonies, Lord, are pure;
Thy judgments righteous are;
And we the words Thy Lord, do keep
Which Thou hast spoken here.

THE ORIGIN OF LOVE.

AN ALLEGORY FROM THE GREEK OF PLATO.

When Beauty was born, a magnificence event!
All the immortals were present;
And to all the Olympians, little apt event,
Also Poverty, Need, was invited.

To the various throng who attended the feast,
Was Plenty or Prudence the favorite nose,
A Nectar, the wine of the gods, was abundant
In the garden of Jove, when the banquet began.

Here, talking asleep at the edge of the cart,
Was Poverty, new born in misery and want,
Who chanced at the time to be passing that
And entered the garden to ridicule her trade.

How the demons, in sport, were all in the Youth,
It is easy to guess; though I never could learn,
As unmarried another more wonderful truth,
How she managed to waken Ao love in her turn.

But so it befell; and the marriage came of
In a manner, of course, quite unusual thing;
And Venus still social, and Poverty sour,
When couples forget the commercial ring.

Into intimate union they entered at once
And gaily, of course, was extremely free
From money matters, as Love is a child
As to what in connection the offspring would be.

But Time, the executor, settles the doubt
Of what in the union the issue would be;
One boy came, sometimes the secret was out—
Love's child was a mixture of Poverty and Love.

As the orphan grew up it was plain to be seen
He shared all the traits both of mother and sire;
A singular mixture of noble and mean
A dual in degree, a dual in mind and desire.

As the gamut he runs, by turns and by twists,
A hero for intrigue and a masterly mind;
Plans, all beautiful, he weaves and he lists
A treacherous web and begging meanwhile.

By his sire he is courtly, contemptuous, proud,
Ah! what is there he cannot compass?
By his mother, submissive and easily cowed,
Sometimes he's a beggar, sometimes he's a lord.

AGREEABLE COURTSHIP.

How a Guileless Professor Proposed and was Accepted in the Heat.

A correspondent of the Indianapolis Journal tells the following anecdote of Prof. Foster, who filled with much credit the chair of mathematics in Asbury University, now DePauw University, at Greencastle, Ind., and afterward in the college in Knoxville, Tenn.

Prof. Foster was well versed in the sciences usually taught in college, but his ignorance of the common affairs of life caused him frequently to be mistaken for a simpleton. Being advised by some of his friends to get married, he accepted their advice and promised to do so. He soon found a young lady willing to have him.

They referred him to a matron of the best social standing in the town as one of whom they had no doubts would be willing to undertake the task of making him happy. He was one of the most learned professors in the school of his day, and he started away amid the loud cheers of the entire student body, who accompanied Mr. Donaldson to the depot. The professor was happy. Visit and Fort Donaldson were the names of the two young ladies in the matron's family, and she had written to Mr. Donaldson that they were pretty, well educated, and accomplished. Mr. Donaldson was happy. Visit and Fort Donaldson danced in the professor's head. The ladies were hopeful, and every one. They told of Donaldson's sunshine, the fiery Miss Mc at House, and the other maid known as the object of his visit by saying in a clear and distinct voice:

Well, Mrs. Sarah, my friends have afforded me to get married, and have recommended you and a number of other young ladies to me as suitable persons, and I have come down here to see if you are willing to marry me."

Had a mythical bolt violently shaken the premises, the household could not have been more astonished. Sarah, the frightened one, Sarah started to run, when her mother caught her and said:

"Why, child, what's the matter? The Professor won't hurt you."

Being thus reassured of deep bluish sincerity the paleness which had been caused by the sudden announcement and she rallied enough to be able to say to the Professor that as his proposition was entirely unexpected she must have some time to consider the matter. His time was limited.

As I am anxious, in case of your refusal, to be able to reach the depot by 4 o'clock to-day, I can only wait one hour for your answer."

A startling fact.

Knowing the worthiness, sincerity and simplicity of the Professor, the matron took the blushing maiden upstairs for consultation, while the father was left entertaining his prospective son-in-law as best he could under the novel circumstances. He was not long in the room of the bridal proposition between Sarah and her mother was private and cannot be given in full. The most essential points of it, however, were told afterward. The mother responded that she was entirely worthy of Sarah's hand and heart.

"But, Mamma," said Sarah, "what would it look to other people for me to have to go into an interview with a man one hour—only sixty minutes—time at a time, a character—and then, when my young friends would see and laugh at me. Wouldn't they tease me to death?"

No, ma," answered her mother, "they would not."

"But stop, my child, and listen to me. There is now a young man in the city that would not jump at the offer made you. Let them laugh, but you must have something to laugh at, but it won't hurt you. Tell him yes, and be gladdened by the knowledge that those whose antecedents were unknown to you, however perfect they may be in manners, or profound in the professions of love, will not gain your consent. But we have long known the honest character of Professor ——, and will become a dear relative. With an honorable position in the college, and he makes no false pretenses. You know just what he is. What more do you want?"

Well, mamma, I don't know—I don't love him, haven't seen enough—"

"O, well, daughter, never mind that; consequently those who are the most brilliant professors of love, have never the power to love you. He is far better than people."

Sarah's head had been upon the mother's breast, but she now raised it, and with a look of confidence in her mother's judgment said:

"Well, mamma, just as you think best in this matter, I will go down and tell him yes, but although the hour is almost up, I don't want to go down alone. Let me have the last minute of the hour."

As the expiration of the fifty-ninth minute had been agreed upon between Sarah and pupa, Sarah still blushing, but much calm than before. Then with a

The old saying "up up like a rocket and down down like a stick," was never more strikingly illustrated than by the case of the Cygnet balloon, which came to grief in a field and ultimately ended up in Mousley. The aeronauts rose with their provisions, with their European guide books, with their compass and in consequence of a long and uncomfortable journey, were anxious to descend. MANCHESTER, OCT., 19th, 1873.

DIED.

In this Village on Monday, Oct. 13th, 1873, Miss MARY J. CURTIS. Aged 19 years.

At Worcester, Clinton Co., Mich., on Thursday, Oct. 16th, 1873, Mrs. ELIZA, wife of Mr. Stephen Wood, of Plain Township, aged 57 years, 8 months and 16 days.

Mrs. Wood was a native of Ohio, and one of the saddest events that has transpired in our midst for a long time; that of the death of Miss ANNA E. BLOSSER, of this village. And it is doubtful if any one in the community can remember of the saddest events that has transpired in our midst for a long time; that of the death of Miss ANNA E. BLOSSER, of this village. And it is doubtful if any one in the community can remember of the saddest events that has transpired in our midst for a long time; that of the death of Miss ANNA E. BLOSSER, of this village. Aged 20 years, 8 months and 15 days.

Miss Blosser was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Blosser, and was engaged in the school room when she sickened and died. She was a young woman of fine intellectual abilities, and was engaged as teacher in the Primary Department of the Public School, and in this capacity, as also in the hearts of all the little children entrusted to her charge, was she the highest respect of the entire School Board and corps of Teachers.

For a number of years Miss Blosser has endeared herself to a large circle of friends, many suffering, caused by a tumor on her neck. Each and every day this tumor grew larger, and more painful, until it became a burden to her. Still undaunted, this more than brave young woman still with a smile, "Doctor, I fully understand the situation, and am willing to accept my case." And accepting her decision, the Doctor, who attended her, she walked with usual firm and elastic step to the chair, and without the least hesitation took her seat for the operation. Investigation disclosed the fact that the difficulties attending the operation were more complicated than the surgeon had anticipated, still, with a master's skill Dr. Chamberlain severed the tumor. His work was done thoroughly and with perfect success, but the operation involved so many complications that three hours time was necessary to complete the work, and then it was that while the operation was a perfect success, it was not within the power of man to restore her to consciousness.

Previous to her going to Jackson, she, with a confidence that would have done honor to a spartan, gave directions to Mrs. G. M. Hewett how and in what manner to conduct her funeral in case she should die. She was modest, yet fearless; she did not want any unnecessary display. But she is gone, and the school has lost one of its best teachers, and society, a bright parlor star. Those who knew her best, love her most.

Her remains were brought to this village, and Rev. E. W. Rogers of Ann Arbor, administered the beautiful service of the Episcopal church, on Saturday, at the Presbyterian Church, at 2 o'clock P. M. The school, and citizens generally, paid their last respect, and while her body rests in our modern cemetery, her spirit beckons us to a more beautiful hill, o'er the river.

With the improvements which have been made during the past year, we believe that the Missouri Pacific Railroad has the best track and the finest and safest equipment of any line west of the Mississippi. It is the only line which runs three daily express trains of line coaches and Pullman Sleepers, equipped with the Miller platform and patent air brake, from leading points in the West, through Kansas City, Sedalia and Jefferson City to St. Louis WITHOUT CHANGE, connecting at St. Louis with eleven different through routes to points North, East and South.
