VOL. 10.--NO. 39. LETTING THE OLD CAT DIE. MANCHESTER ENTERPRISE Not long ago I wandered near
A pixyground in the wood,
And there heard words from a youngst
That I never quite understood.

Now let the cid cat die," he laughed I saw him give a push, Then gayly stamper away as he spied My face peep over the bush.

But what he pushed, or where he went,

" The little villain has stoned a cat.

Her bright hair floated to and fro.

ut the love lest thing of all. I thou Was the gleam of her laughing eye

Swinging and swaying back and forth, With the ros-li, ht in her face, She seemed like a bird and a flower in one, And the forest her native place.

"Go 'way! go way! Don't touch me, please "I'm lettring the old cat die!"

"Why, don't you know " said the little maid-

Then swinging and swinging and looking beck, With the merriest look in her eye, She bade me "Good day," and I left her alone, A-letting the old cat dis.

"You letting him die!" I ctied, aghast — — Why, where a the cat, my dear?" And lo! the lau, her that filled the woods Was a thirg for the birds to hear.

"That we call it 'letting the old cat die,"
When the awing stope all of itself?"

"Steady! I'll send you up, my child," or hung it upon a limb, nd left it to die all alone," I said, "But I'll play the misculef with him." I forced my way between the boughs,

The poor old cat to seek, ut what did I find but a swinging child, With her bright hair brushing her cheek

It took me about two minutes to deliver that sentence. It was literally jerked out of me word by word. Never did I labor under greater embarrassment in expressing myself. In the meanwhile Martin was meeting with difficulty. The bank of the river was steep, and the light cedar shell with only himself in it was out of all balance and hard to manage. It may be that his very strong desire to get on the meadow where strong desire to get on the meadow where the buck or the guide would have come off the winner, it is not easy to say. Nor is it easy to speculate, for the close was speedily reached, and in an unlooked-for manner. The deer had led off some dozen jumps out of the circle of light, and I was beginning to think that he had shaken himself loose from his enemy. I was holding his deer for him operated to confuse and embarrass his movements. to confuse and embarrass his movements to confuse and embarrass his movements.
