Historical outline of Manchester Union School.

In January, 1867, Districts number one and two, of the township of Manchester, were united into one for the purpose of building a school-house, and maintaining a Union School. At a special meeting called for the purpose, money was voted with which to build, and other steps necessary for the speedy execution of the project were taken.

As early as practicable in the spring, the work was begun and rapidly pushed forward during the summer, so that the new school-house was ready for occupancy at the end of October of the same year.

The house cost, including building lot, furniture and other necessary incidentals, about $91,000. The building is of brick and three stories in height, with a basement beneath. It contains seven rooms, one recitation room and a common modicum, chapt, the latter being also used for recitations of the high school classes. The house is seated with modern furniture and will accommodate about 400 pupils.

The school was organized in November, 1867, under the principalship of Mr. E. C. O'Neal. There were at first only four grades, namely: Primary, Intermediate, Grammar and High School, and the principal had no assistant.

After a few weeks it became necessary to organize a Second Primary Department. During the latter part of the year Miss Kate Howe took the position of assistant. Mr. O'Neal retained his position as principal two years and left the school in a prosperous condition. During the second year, Miss Eva Stone was as student.

For the school year 1869-70, Mr. D. L. Bell was engaged as principal with Miss Mary Hitchcock as assistant. Mr. Bell possessed good executive ability, and the school was ordinarily popular, and the school was managed by persons under his management till near the close of the year. But unfortunately, he was a man of immoral character and being involved in a scandal was obliged to leave the school about three weeks before the close of the year. Rev. J. C. Worley took charge of chapel exercises, and heard the Latin and Greek classes for the remainder of the term.

In the fall of 1870, Mr. C. G. Wren was engaged as principal and held the position for two years. Miss Jessie Pease, being his assistant. At the close of the first year, Mr. Wren's administration was succeeded by the second class, who were to have the school about three weeks.

On Christmas Eve our citizens had a service at the Baptist Church, which was well attended with beautiful and appropriate music. At the end, the presiders were distributed among the choir and their helpers.
