But 'twas not wisely done and so we draw Before the treachery of the smilling eyes A heavy veil. The cold world if it saw Would proffer pity in a thousand lies.

So life goes on. We lay the forms away,

Of things we loved not wisely but too well,
And in the laspe of years we learn to stay.
The fretful chanting of their funeral knell,
We learn to smile, before the smilling throng,
Although the Adder's fangs be deeply set;
And join, perhaps, our voices in the song.
To soothe the pain we never can forget.

And thus we learn to envy the calm rest revived the incidents of the trip, and the connection of Mr. Roosevelt with the pplication of steam to water locome ion, both of which are matters of his torical record. The first steamboat that plied these waters was the "New Orleans." She was built at Pittsburg by Mr. Roosevelt in 1811, and cost in the neighborhood of $38,000. Whether team could be employed on the Western rivers was a question, as its success be-tween New York and Albany, at that time, as applied by Mr. Fulton, was not regarded as being entirely solved, and after the idea had been suggested of building a boat at Pittsburg to ply be-tween Natchez and New Orleans it was considered necessary that investigations should be made as to the currents of the
