In leaftes woods the wind held tryst,
Ant warmly tell some showers of rain,
Then softened into billowy mit.
A vaporous sea that filled the plain;
But when the star of morning waned,
And glowed the East with purple light,
the more the colder winds complained, and changed the mit to organish height. There, as if rippl s of the deep, By sunder spell had been congested. With dimpling smiles had dropped asless Wood by a fit bruese, kay cated field:
