Manufacture of Antiseptics
BY H. D. BROWN
The great benefit of antiseptics is that they kill the germs that cause disease. They are used in hospitals, in the homes of the sick, and in the streets of our cities. They are also used in the manufacture of food and drink. They are the most important discovery of modern science.

THE GREAT DIFFERENCE
One of the great female writers on dress reform, in referring to the dress reform she writes: "The great difference between the old and the new is that the old was made to show the figure, and the new is made to show the face."

Report of the Farmers' Club Committee on Richard Green's Farm.
We find Mr. Green located on a fine productive farm of one hundred and eighty-eight acres, stocked with one hundred and forty sheep, head of live stock, and a fine stock of cattle. He has twenty acres in corn which he has already thrashed, yielding several hundred bushels, thrasher's measure. We were pleased to note that Mr. Green has followed the advice of the committee on one year ago, and trimmed up the trees in his fruit yard. We had supposed that Mr. G. was satisfied with the good body of a farmer and should be sorry indeed to lose him from our circle, but when we found that a part of his herbs, certain predominate, stored in the basement of his house, we came to the conclusion that he was about to depart. In the limited time at our disposal, we found no special improvement in his farm.

Sheep Notes.
Coach Dorr says he has sold 16 rams thus far this fall.
Van Clippo Bros, of Bridgewater, add three rams to Justin Cook to make a total last Saturday for $120.
E. H. Phelps sold eight ewes of his own and Vermont breeding to A. H. Hamble of Loon on Saturday last.
H. M. Fuller of Orono, Mich., has purchased from the Shropshire flock of Wesley J. Gage, a two-year-old, six aged ewe and two ewe lambs, with an imported ram he now has, gives him the foundation for one of the finest Shropshire flocks in Michigan.

Looking schools, to initiate young ladies into the mysteries of first class cooking are becoming very popular. It is said that a recent graduate from one of these institutions is now teaching the kitchen at a boarding house. She is a very good cook, and her pupils are very happy.
