Drinking Water on a Wager.

Edmund Spencer stepped forward, flanked on his right side by Johnny Clark and Mr. Byrne, who made the bet with the former that Spencer could not drink a quart of Schuykill water in five minutes on six consecutive nights.

Spencer lifted the quart glass with a trembling hand, and filled one by one the five beer glasses. This melancholy task having been accomplished, he cleared his throat, winked both eyes violently several times, and composed his nerves and directed his thoughts heavenward.

Spencer lifted the second glass to his lips, and after surveying for an instant the troubled surface of the water, drank it at a gulp. Again the audience manifested its friendly joy, and once more did Spencer smile, this time plaintively as one who would say: "Ain't I a darter?"

Conger-Fishing off the Coast of Cornwall.

In the early history of England, conger fishing, and the preparation and exportation, seem to have played an important part. In King John's time there was an established trade in the congers of the coast, and to certain merchants of Bournemouth was accorded the privilege of catching and drying congers in England, and the sending of them to Spain and Portugal.

Conger-fishing off the coast of Cornwall is still presented both for business and sport. There seem to be certain localities where congers are the most abundant, and their peculiar haunts are in proximity to those bold rocks which stud the deep water along the Cornish coast.

Astrological Predictions.

The papers are again experiencing a revival of interest in the Star of Bethlehem reappearance theory. We publish the latest version of the astrological hypothesis in another column.

As an evidence that the theory must necessarily be correct, the observations of Tycho Brahe as to the appearance of a new star in 1572 are quoted at great length. Tycho Brahe described this new star that appeared suddenly, and diminished in brilliancy until at the end of sixteen months it disappeared.

The Coming Man.

"Do comin' man hasn't come yet," said Brother Gardner to the Lime-Kiln Club, as he looked down from Jones square in the eye and motioned to Elder Root to draw his feet and let the heat of the stove have a chance to circulate around the Hall.

"Do comin' man will be lected State, County or City Treasurer, an' when his term has expired his books will balance an' his accounts will be square to a cent."

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

"Liberty Enlightening the World" will set her torch ablaze on Bedloe's Island, in New York harbor, November 23, the centennial anniversary of the evacuation of the British from the city.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

Only two of the forty-two Methodist churches in Baltimore have voted to vote. The others are free.

The Philadelphia Record wants "all the grammar books out of public schools," and other papers, more advanced, want text books replaced with a shingle hatchet, a paper of shoe pegs and a blacksmith's bellows.

Thomas W. Pierce, of Texas, who made his millions from railway operations, has given a $25,000 church to the town of Dover, N. H. The church, which is known as the Pierce Memorial Church, serves as a monument to his parents, once residents of Dover.

The Chicago Times finds that it costs twenty-seven dollars a head to provide schooling for children in that city, against $6.70 for those in the State outside. It is afraid that the city schools foot- away the time and money on languages that do not belong to this country, or in a desperate effort to make musical or mechanical artists of the pupils.

Jonathan Longfellow, of Whitesburg, Del., having twenty-eight children, has built a school house of his own, employs a teacher of his own, and has a school of his own. He is seventy years old, and came from breaking up the school, which was known as the Longfellow school, but another was found to take her place, and the educational institution went along without a jar.

An exchange suggests the reading of the morning newspaper in the school by teachers as an effective way of teaching current history. "A better way still," says the New York Examiner, "would be to get the teacher to give the pupils a short talk on any topic of special interest in the morning paper. This demands more knowledge than most teachers possess, it is true, but something may be done in that line by any one who is to teach at all, and its effectiveness is very great."

PUNY PARAGRAPHS.

The ad-eyed poet sings and sighs because there are no birds in last year's nests. Such a man would howl for the banana in the peel of the past.

A Philadelphia man who wants to die, but doesn't want to disgrace his friends by committing suicide, has engaged a fifth-story room in a hotel and is awaiting his fate.

Sunflower leaves are now used in the manufacture of cigars. If they have an aesthetic effect on a man it shows itself very singularly in his discourse after he has tried to smoke one.

Nothing is better calculated to destroy a man's equanimity than to have a lady walk up to him while he is lingering near a fruit-stand and offer him two cents for a peach, when in reality he is only waiting for a horse-car to come along.

A poet in the Cambridge Tribune begins: "Am I well or unwell? Am I living or dead?" After looking the end through, the reader is bound to conclude that the writer was decidedly unwell, and it is very doubtful if by this time he is "living at all."

An exchange announces in a tone of surprise: "The Czar and Czarina were dancing at a ball." There doesn't seem to be anything out of the way in such conduct. The czar and his wife are known to be dancing at a ball.

Bad Manners in Parliament.

There was a time when manners were very bad in the English Parliament, but this was when Parliament had not established its supremacy, and it is worth remarking that manners improved from that time when the Parliament grew strong in house, and when it came to be recognized that this supremacy could only be maintained if in many great questions both parties acted in concert.

Children's entertainments. The latest craze of the fashionable mamma is giving a "reception" to her children. It may be these are still in long clothes and riding breeches, but all the pomp and parade of the people's party is carried out.

NORVELL FARMERS CLUB.

The March meeting of the Norvell Farmer's Club was held at the residence of James Fay, about four miles south of the village, on Friday, March 30th.

Having had an invitation to attend the meeting we were only too glad of an excuse to leave the office and enjoy a little sunshine after being cooped up in the house nearly all winter.

Reaching his house we stopped a few moments while Mrs. H. got ready, and we could hardly give ourself the privilege of seeing John's fine lot of sheep.

Arriving at Mr. Fay's we found several members of the club assembled, and soon President Halladay called the meeting to order and proceeded to business.

The Treasurer read his report, which showed that there were 21 members of the club, also that the club was out of debt and had $4.50 in the treasury.

They then proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year with the following result: President—T. B. Halladay. Vice President—Wilder Baneroff.

The President appointed George Rbead, S. W. Holmes and C. L. Hall as executive and viewing committee.

head of cattle, three of which are thoroughbred short horns, and a half blood Jersey cow; 31 lambs and three work horses.

Mr. Fay came to this state in 1841, being 10 years old; in 1851 he bought the 80 acres that he now owns, for which he ran in debt.

Household Hints for Spring. For ordinary woodwork use whitening for the dirt off, and ammonia.

One-way to clean the inside of pots and pans is to fill them with water in which a few ounces of washing soda is dissolved, and set them on the fire.

Before paint or calcimine is applied to walls every crevice should be filled with plaster or cement.

The Michigan Farmer thinks that the prospects at one time were that our Michigan sheep would not reach the market this year which they brought in 1882.

As we were obliged to return home on the 4 o'clock train we did not learn where the next club meeting will be held, but presume it will be at John Horning's.

Then an Ectavian fellow with big whiskers, he, the villain's pal, comes in, and the villain tells him that the girl must be hid away wild, so he can get the booty.

Then the old man with a white wig comes in, he's the doctor, and he looks at the girl's eyes and says that he can cure 'em, but it may kill her.

Then the girl comes in, and she says that she is a Dutchman's daughter, and she is in a big way.
