Good Results from the Oscar Wilde Furor and Liven from the Dude.

The natural tendency to run after fads is a constant source of ridicule and if it were not for the constant in fluence of such ridicule society would be kept in a state of absurd extremes by the freaks of fashion. As it is these fads often subserve useful ends and on the whole do good. They accentuate ideas, and by their very exaggeration are educational in effect.

A few years ago Oscar Wilde came among us with his Little Lord Fauntleroy hair and knee breeches. His dress was grotesque, his manner open to criticism in many ways, and intellectually be was little better than a pretender. The furor over him was one of the most absurd fads that ever swept the public from moorings of common sense. But even that fad had its uses. The fellow provided hinrself with a small quantity of Ruskin's ideas of art, more especially in their application to household adornment. A great many people with more money than culture listened to his suggest tions, or, more likely still, received: them through what might be called them through what night to carried atmospheric pressure. The result was wholesome. Some American crudities were climinated. A little more attention is now hald to harmony in color wide the inheritance with me." What an unitary them is now hald to harmony in color. and the other rudimentary principles of decorative art. This country is no doubt better for that visitation, even though it did serve to expose our people to ridicule.

There is no end of fun made of the dude. He is a preposterous specimen. of humanity, but he is less harmful than the old fashioned prodigal son, Better that his father's surplus money should be squandered on clothes than on whisky, and the general influence is far less harmful. The average young American is not in much danger of being too genteel. On the contrary, can stand a good deal more of it and still not have his manliness impaired.

The dude is not only an improve ment on the prodigal son, but from him goes out a general influence that makes for refinement of manners. He is an exaggeration, and when toned down to reason is a gentleman. The influence that goes out from dissipation in high life is altogether bad and pernicious.

In the constant shifting of the sands of fashion the gregariousness of human nature seeks for itself new channels from time to time, and it is no little comfort to know that the foibles of fashion have their bright side, their redeeming qualities. Much as could be said with fairness against the folly of fads, they are not without their defensible qualities.-Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Bird Caught by a Clam. Harvey Cook, of Saratoga Lake, tells the following story:

"I have lived on these waters, so to speak, for fifty-four years, but I never before saw anything like what I saw a few days ago. I was moving along the shore of the lake when I saw a sand snipe, or 'tip up,' as the boys call them, standing at the water's edge, and struggling as if its feet were in a trap.

"Soon the bird arose a little way in the air and flew as far as the road, where it fell and fluttered as though calling on me, as on an old friend, for belp.

"When I reached the spot I saw that one of the bird's feet was clasped by a large fresh water clam, but before I could render aid the bird again with a great effort arose into the air and made a few wild circles, unfortunately over the lake, but the clam held on, and in a minute more both were in the water.

"After a brief, fluttering resistance the poor sand snipe succumbed to the weight of the clinging clam and was Harrisburg Telegraph.

Reform in Men's Dress, Too Even men wear too many clothes, with an awful waste of material that does not embellish or add to comfort. Some day the "biled shirt," with its starched front, will disappear. It cannot go too soon. Why should a man vear a stiff board under his waistcoat? It may be useful and ornamental for evening wear, when it certainly looks clean. But with the wonderful development in the manufac-ture of materials, why should soft white silk not take its place? Or, indeed, why should all colors be left to the female sex? Between the gaudy and the tasteful there is a great difference. Oscar Wilde only carried his ideas a little too far. He had sense at the bottom of them. We will come to

THE RICH MAN'S FOLLY.

LESSON XI, SECOND QUARTER, IN TERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 15.

Fext of the Lesson, Luke xii, 13-21 - Com mit Verses 19-21-Golden Text, Luke xil, 15-Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns. Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by per mission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel

mission phia.]

13. "And one of the company said unto Him." In the first verse of this chapter we are told that this company consisted of an innumerable multitude, such a throng that they trole one upon another. The following verses down to this first one of our lesson tell us that in the midst of this multitude He taught His disciples that they should beware of the leaven (the hypocrisy) of the Pharisees: that they should not fear the death of the body, but rather fear the death of soul and body in hell compare Matt. x, 28); that they should not fear to deny Him before men, but rather fearlessly confess Him, looking to the rather fearlessly confess firm, looking to the future, and that they should not be anxious as to what they should say when arrested and brought before the authorities for His sake, for the Holy Spirit would teach them to say the right words at the right time. In order to see why He thus teaches. His disciples, let in whole of the previous chapter after our lastlesson be carefully read, and learn from it the attitude of the religious rulers of the nation towards Him, and re-member that He seemly interruption! Jesus had been speak ing of judgment and eternity, of future glory and future torment (xi, 20, 31, 32; xii, 5, 8, 9); but here is a man who is more interested in a share of some property in this world than in any future good or evil. He does not seem to have heeded anything that Jesus had said. And yet his is not an uncommon case, for un-der the next stemm discourses upon eternal realities, there may be found in worshiping congregations, even today, men and women so occupied with present things that the preacher's words are of no use to them. It is preacher's words are of no use to them. Less just the same if in Sunday school a boy is thinking more about his marbles, or ball, of kite, "or- top," than "about, the lesson being taught. Ezek, xxxiii, 31, well describes all

14 "And Hossaid unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?"
The man did not know the Teacher whom he had thus addressed. The one seeking a share of an earthly inheritance was a man entirely of this world, while the one whom he asked to interfere on his behalf was a man not of this world. Jesus had come to lead people to the possession of an inheritance incorrupti-ble, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven (I Pet. i, 4). The glories of that inheritance He will divide and appor-tion to the overcomers in due time. (See Luke xxii, 28-20; Rev. xxi, 7; iii, 21; ii, 20, 27). But as to this present world, it is an evil one; it lieth in wickedness (or the wicked one); Satan is its acknowledged prince and god; we are not to love it, for its friendship is enmity with God, and it is reserved unto for against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men (Gal. i, 4; I John v. 12: John xiv, 30: II Cor. iv, 4; I John ii, xv. James iv, 4; II Pet. iii, 6. 7:

What a poor place to possess an inheritance. How much better to be content with food and raiment here and wait for the redemption of this earth, when it shall rejoice in the liberty of the glory of the sons of God and we shall reign over it with Jesus Christ.

15. "And He said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness." The tenth commandment forbids coveting. Moses was to choose rulers who were God fearing men. men of truth, hating covetousness. Ex. xx 17; xviii, 21. The word has several mean ings, such as a wish to have more, love of money, dishonest gain; the first is the mean-ing of the word here, and in Mark vii, 20-23, it is classed by the Saviour with all manner of evil which proceeds from within and de-files us. All can see that dishonest fain is sinful, but some may question the sinfulness-of a wish to have more either of money or

16. "The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully." Jesus now speaks a parable to make more clear to those who have ears to hear the truth He has presented. Here is an abundant harvest from the ground of one who knew not Got. He is already rich and his riches are increased. God's rain and sunshine have done it, and yet it would seem as if the man was no child of God. It was this sort of thing that puzzled Asaph. He saw the ungodly prospering, increasing in riches, their eyes standing out with fatness, having more than heart could wish, not in trouble nor plagued like other men, and yet blaspheming God (Ps. lxxiii); but as he waited upon God he saw the reason of it all and was led to rejoice more than ever in God Himself. Prosperity in the things of this world

17. "What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?" Thus this rich man thought within himself. His increase was an anxiety to him, he looked upon crease was an anxiety to him, he looked upon them as his fruits, evidently not thinking of the God who gave them to him, nor that the goodness of God was intended to lead him to repentance (Rom. ii, 4). 18. "And he said, This will I do: I-will pulldown my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods." He had talked with himself about it, and this was the decision of the most important perwas the decision of the most important per-son in the world, the only one who knew any-thing, the only one to be pleased, the only one worth living for, he himself. So the old barns come down, the large new ones go up, and there all my fruits and my goods are carefully bestowed for the personal comfort of I myself.

19. "And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take nast much goods and up to many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." The soul to which he talked links him with the brute creation, for. if they could not build barns, they could do any of these four things which he tells his soul to do, just as well as himself aso that he talks simply as an ox o hog might talk (if they had the power of speech) which were being unconsciously far-feshed for the slaughter.

20. "But God said unto him, Thou fool! THE MICHIGAN SAVINGS

this night, thy soul shall be required of thee."
How often thus suddenly does the summons come, and from the midst of earth's abundarfce the thoughtless one is cut off, not hav affecthe thoughtless one is cut off, not having been led to repentance by the goodness and forebearance and long suffering of God, they go out to find that while they have been laying up treasure on earth for their own enjoyment, they have also unconsciously been treasuring up unto themselves, wrath against the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God (Rom. ii, 4, 5). That side of the case, however, is brought out more fully in the however, is brought out more fully in the sequel to this story as given in chap. xvi, 19-31.

"Then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?" "He heapeth up riches and knoweth not who shall gather them." "When he dieth, he shall carry nothing away; his glory shall not descend after him." "He that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool" (Ps. xxxvii, 9; xiix, 17; Jer. xvii, 11).
