It is as much an injustice against the past to wrongly arrange its events, as it would be an injustice against the past to knowledge to depend on the substitution of sixty million. Where then is the so-called impossibility that the seventy Jews who went into Egypt in through neglect of chronology and give the chronology. let us be careful that we do not put them in the wrong place. And from that we go back and see the world was created 4,004 years before Christ, the deluge came 2,338 years before Christ, the exodus out of Egypt 1,491 years before Christ, and Solomon's temple was destroyed 586 years before Christ, Chronology enters the first chapter of Genesis, and say the day mentioned there is not a day but of of twenty-four hours, but of ages; the word there translated as "day," in other places meaning ages, and so the Bible account of the ages, and so the nione account of the creation and the geologists' account of the creation are completely harmonious. Chronology enters the Book of Daniel, and says that the words "time ries abreast; epochs abreast;" and a-half. mean a year and a-half. Chronology enters at another point and shows us that the seasons of the year were then only two—summer and winter. We find that the Bible year was 360 days, instead of 365; that the

But the other thought coming this subject is that Biblical chronology, is urging and indeed all chronology, is arging the world to more punctuality and im-mediateness. What an unsatisfactory and indefinite thing it must have been for two business men in the time of Ahaz to make an appointment, saying:
"We will settle that business matter to-morrow when the shadow of the dial of Ahaz reaches the tenth step from the top," or, "I will meet you in the street called Straight in Damascus n the time of the new moon," or, when asked in a court room, what time an occurrence took place, should answer: "It was during the time of the latter rain," or, "it was at the time of latter rain," or, "it was at the time of the third crowing of the barnyard." the third crowing of the barnyard.', You and I remember when ministers of the Gospel in the country, giving out a notice of an evening service, instead of saying at 6 or 7 or 8 o'clock would say, "The service will begin at early candle light." Thank God for chronological achievements which have ushered in calendars and almanacs and clocks and at so cheap a clocks and watches, and at so cheap a rate all may possess them: Chrono-logy, beginning by appreciating the value of years and the value of days, has kept on until it cris out. Man, immortal; woman, immor tal; look out for that minute; look out for that second!" We talk a great deal about the value of time, but never fully appreciate its value until the last fragment of it has passed out of our possession forever. The out of our possession forever. The greatest fraud a man can commit is to rob another of his time. Hear it, ye laggards, and repent! All the fingers of chronology point to punctuality as one of the graces. The minister or of the graces. The ministed lecturer or business man comes to his place ten minutes after appointed time commits the appointed time commits a crime, the enormity of which can only be estimated by multiplying the number of persons present by ten. If the engagement be made with five persons, he has stolen fifty minutes, for he is ten minutes too late and he has robbed each of the five persons of ten minutes apiece, and ten times five are fifty. If there are five hundred persons present, there are five hundred persons present, and he be ten minutes too late, he has committed a robbery of five thousand minutes, for ten times five hundred a e make more than three days. The thief of dry goods, the thief of bank bills, is not half so bad as the thief of time. "It is all over." So this mighty pro cession of earthly years will terminate. Just when, I have no power to prognosticate, but science confirms the Bible prophecy that the earth cannot always last. Indeed there has been a fatality of words. The moon is merely the corpse of what it once was, and scientists have again and again gone up in their observatories to attend the death-bed of dying worlds, and have seen them cremated. So I am certain, both from the World of God and science that the worlds. cession of earthly years will terminate So I am certain, both from the world of God and science, that the world's chronology will sconer or later come to its last chapter. The final century will arrive and pass on, and then will come the final decade, and then the final the final decade, and then will come the final decade, and their the final year and the final month and the final day. The last spring will swing its censer of apple blossoms, and the last winter bank its anows. The last sunset will burn like Moscow and the last morning radiate the hills. The clocks will strike their last bour, and the watches will tick their last second. No incendiaries will be needed to run hither and you with torches to set the world on fire.
