The British fruit steamer Lamington

The British fruit steamer Lamington went ashore off Blue Point, Long Island, during a heavy fog and is pounding herself to pieces. Seven of her crew and seven employees of the Merritt Wrecking Co. are on board. Lifesavers went to the scene, but were unable to get a line to her. The men took to the rigging and after several hours hard work them were taken off in the breeches buoy by the lifesavers.

The recent finding of the headless body of a young woman in a lonely spot near Ft. Thomas, Ky., across the Ohio river from Cincinnati has proved a sensation which shocked three states. For two weeks detectives followed a province and were almost ready to For two weeks detectives followed every clue and were almost ready to give up when someone recognized a description of the shoes worn by the woman as being that of a certain style made by a Portsmouth, O., firm. It was found that only a small number of this particular shape had been made and that they had been sold to a firm at Greencastle, Ind. Thence each pair was traced and accounted for until it became evident that Miss Pearl Bryan. was traced and accounted for until is became evident that Miss Pearl Bryan, aged 23, a farmer's daughter, was the victim and after the headless trunk had been fully identified the trail be-came clearer. It was shown that the poor girl was about to become a mother; that Scott Lackson a dantal student came clearer. It was shown that the poor girl was about to become a mother; that Scott-Jackson, a dental student in a Cincinnati college, and Wm. Wood, of Greencastle, were intimate with the girl; that she had left home ostensibly to go to Indianapolis, but instead had gone to Cincinnati where she was met by Scott Jackson and Alonzo Walling, his roommate. These two, and Wm. Wood, were arrested and each made partial confessions implicating each other. It was thus learned that an abortion was performed on Miss Bryan, but that she died from its effects and that to hide the crime the body was taken to the place where it was found, and in order to prevent identification the head was cut off and thrown away, probably into the Ohio river.

Suppose, further, that the artist holds his job thirty-six and a half years, and afterwards suffers in purgatory one day for every piece of violent language caused by him, as computed above, he will be there 10,000,000 years, and I do not call it enough, writes Howard Fielding in

New York paper of recent date. These mathematical operations are founded upon exact facts. In this letter I am simply trying to state a matter of news in plain words.

I have known the valentine artist for a long time, but never suspected him of doing anything of that kind. It was only resterday that I learned about it. Ditter the thoughts of a corresponding I went into his work shop just as he number of women who ought rather to finished a drawing. I looked over his have been congratulated. That naturally led to a discussion of the whole subject. It appears that Howard does not allow these drawings to-interfere in any way with his art work. He has a very nice way of getting the time to do them. In those moments of dissatisfaction which an ordinary man would waste in swearing or in throwing a fellow creature down stairs Howard simply draws valentines It relieves his feelings perfectly. I was glad to know this, for I had been at a loss to account for the exemplary mildness of his disposition. It would be unjust, of course, to compare so favored a person with ourselves. when it is received on the day sacred to lovers' tokens.

Mr. Howard tells me that these valentines are all directed to the pictorial exhibition of some human fault or folly If they were confined to any other field be might find it difficult to draw as many as 900 in a single year.

A considerable number of the valentines intended for women satirize eccentricities of fashion. This winter there is a great field for that sort of work in the prevailing style of capes. The preposterously broad and stiff shoulders with their convoluted edges turned up, make a woman look like the head of John the Baptist on a charger. Mr. Howard tells me that he has tried to exaggerate the absurdities of this kind of cape and has failed.

"I can't make it look worse than it are stored to receive the distribution of the subject of his recent severe sickness and subject of his recent severe sickness and trouble with rheumatism has entirely disappeared, but I am still taking Pink Pills and will keep on taking them as long as I continue to grow stronger and heatthler, as I have been every day and the continue to grow stronger and the cape and has failed. kind of cape and has failed.

Of course, there were many other sude caricatures that year, but this was the most offensive by long odds. It happened that a young man of Mr. Howard's acquaintance got three valentines that year from three different cities, and every one of his unknown admirers picked out this identical valentine. What could a man think under such exceptional circumstances except that was a distinct resemblance be tween himself and the fellow in the pic-It must have been deeply depressing. I learn from Mr. Howard hat this gentleman did not commit suicide, but he would have committed murder under favorable conditions. One of the most successful valentines ever sent out was entitled "The Slug-It represented a man in bed. A pair of naked and gigantic feet hung over the footboard, which was in the foreground: and the sun, with a smile of derision on his countenance, was seen looking in through an open window. Mr. Howard gave this to me in a philosophical spirit as a sample of what is considered a rare joke by many thousands of persons. Perhaps the richest thing-if popular applause be the criterion-in the fine of comic valentines for women was a picture entitled "Going to Seed." It represented a particularly ill-conditioned plant in a large red flower-pot, and the flower was the typical head of an old maid. Thousands upon thousands of these were sold, and they served, doubtless, to em-

I have learned what I myself laugh at-but the remaining persons mentioned in Mr. Porter's census have thus far eluded me. And even in my own case the result is not constant. One day, perhaps, I can laugh at one of my own jokes, and a few days was born, it don't seem funny at all. But Mr. Howard has gone farther. He has not only discovered the secret of what is humor to a great class of our citizens, but he has learned what will make one man laugh and another man swear. I call that a considerable triúmoh.

the Result. (From Detroit News.)

Our representative called at 118 Michigan Avenue, the residence of Mr. Quintus Hummel. Mr. Hummel is a veteran of the late war, and received, in the campaign, an injury which has given him much pained auffering since. He belonged to a Vichia resident regiment and his horse and suffering since. He belonged to a Michigan cavalry regiment and his horse becoming frightened one day reared up throwing him backward. In falling he struck his spine on a sharp stone, inflicting a deep cut over five inches long. The injury affected the kidneys. About two years ago the left kidney started to bleed, and has been doing so ever since. Mr. Hummel, in a few pointed sentences, gave our representative the following account: "The accident of my 'war days' left me in bad shape; pain in my back an spine rendered me almost useless, and was compelled to give up work entirely.

Walter Baker & Co., Limited, Dorchester, Mass., the well-known manufacturers of Brenkfast Cocoa and other Cocoa and Chocoflate preparations, have an extraordinary collection of medals and diplomas awarded at the great international and other exhibitions in Europe and America. The louse has had uninternupted prosperity for nearly, a century and a quarter and is now not only the oldest but the largest establishment of the kind on this continent. The high degree of perfection which the company has attained in its manufactured products is the result of long experience combined with an intelligent use of the new forces which are constantly being introduced to increase the power and improve the quality of production, and cheapen the cost to the consumer.

The full strength and the exquisite natural flavor of the raw material are preserved unimpaired in all of Walter Baker & Company's preparations; so that their products may truly be said to form the standard for purity and excellence.

In view of the many imitations of the name, labels and wrappers on their goods consumers should ask for and be sure that they get the genuine articles made at Dorchester, Mass.
