eds Along a Ray of Ligh Dr. Beil's Experiments.

When walking through the labora ory of the "Volta bureau" with Dr. A. Graham Bell, the inventor of the teletone, I picked up on one of the thelves a piece of pine board about half an inch thick and eight inches square, ays World's Progress. Out of the center of it extended a speaking tube, which apparently rested against a thin lisk of bright metal sunk into the opposite side.

This metal was like a silver mirror and was about as large around as the bottom of a tumbler. I asked Dr. Bell What to was and he told me it was a perfected instrument. whose original construction enabled him to project his voice from one point to another through the medium of a sunbeam. It enabled him, in other words, to send ounds along a ray of light without the hid of an electric wire. He took the instrument and put the tube to his mouth, holding the mirror so that it caught the sun and cast a little shadowdisk of light on the opposite wall. Then by breathing slightly he made this shadow increase and diminish and as-sume various shapes by the action of his breath against the mirror dia-

"That shows you," said he, "how the action of the diaphragm is carried along the ray. Now, if you will put a bottle with some soot in it where that shadow is on the well and speak into the tube you will find that the sound will travel along the ray of light, and by having a receiver conected with the bottle one would be able to hear what you were saying. We have spoken by this means to and seems to be no reason to doubt that fell from the fifth story." eech may be sent along a beam of light for great distances. In our exriment in this we first used salenium, very rare substance and very sensilight. We have found, however, that we can produce very good results with common soot, and the disveries may yet be made which will make such an invention commercially racticable."

upon a gentleman who was passing beneath, and made a deep dent in his elegant silk hat. It took him but two seconds to reach the landing on the second floor, when a door suddenly opened and a person rushed out in a great hurry and fell heavily into his arms. The two men eyed each other for a moment with angry and astonished looks, ready to abuse each other, when both simultaneously attered an exclamation of surprise. "Anatole!

"Edgar!"

Anatole Baudruche and Edgar Bricheton were two old college chums. They had not met since the day when they took their bachelor of arts degree together twelve years before. In spite of this long interval in their intercourse they found on the occasion of this sudden meeting that they had very little ready change of conversation. Edgar was the first to speak: "Say, your hat looks very pretty,"

he said.
"Do not speak of it. It has just from points 200 yards apart, and there served for a target for a potato that "And now you are going upstairs to you might as well tackle a corpse." "And why, if you please?" "Because old Bidoche is an old hedgehog who will kick you downstairs, even if he opens the door for you at all."

"Old Bidoche?" "Yes, the man you are after, for it can be no other than he. All the tenants in the building are always having trouble with him. One might think that he made a point of being as disagree able to everyone as he possibly can. Then do you live in this house?"

"No, but an aunt of mine does, and scarcely a day passes without her having a scrap with old Bidoche. If you will allow me I will go up with you: two heads are better than one in a matter like this."

So Edgar and Aanatole went up three flights together, and stopped outside a door through which came softly the sounds of a melodious musical instru-

"This is the room," said Edgar.
"He's practicing on his bassoon." With these words he pulled the bell and the bassoon suddenly ceased. Then the shuffling of feet was heard along

"I only eat green vegetables," answered Molesquin. "Nevertheless, If the gentlemen will come in for a short while I will play them my part in the "Tour de Nesles." There are some interesting passages in it." Anatole and Edgar did not like to refuse, and went into the old musician's room. Molesquin gave them a seat and ome cigarettes and then, going up to the stand, he played through for their benefit the whole of the first bassoon part in the "Tour de Nesles."

Edgar made a brave face over it while Anatole sat in the window with his potato in his hand, scarcely able to contain his patience.

Suddenly the musician struck a false note. It increased Anatole's impa-tience so much that he gave a jump, and in doing so allowed the potato to allo from his ungers. It rolled over the window sill, and, with a hop, disappeared in the street below:

When Mile. Aglae dropped her potato into the street she was overcome with fear. She hurriedly shut the win dow so that in case there had been ar accident no one would suspect her Then she sat down and quietly waited the turn of events. What, then, was her terror when she heard steps coming up her stairs—the steps of men, of

Still she was afraid to move for some time, fearing, with logical mind, that when the policemen found that the tenants next door were innocent they would come in and accuse her. After some moments, however, she gained enough courage to conceal the basket of potatoes, which must otherwise have appeared so much against her, and forced herself to put on an innocent expression with which to meet the po-

In order to make assurance doubly sure, she opened her cupboard, and, taking out the milk far, opened the door quietly and crept down the stairs to get four sous' worth of milk from the dairy at the corner. In this way she hoped to make an alibi, and her case would be too strong for the slightest suspicion. Besides, she wanted some milk to boil her potatoes in, and it was her intention to put in a arliflower as well.

So she bought her four sous' worth of milk and started on the return journey with her spirit at rest and her milk bottle carefully held in front of her. Suddenly she felt a violent blow on her fingers, and at the same moment her hands, her bare arms, her corsage, face, hair and mouth were covered with milk It was the potato that had slipped from Anatole's hand and had landed with remarkable precision right in the mouth of the milk jar.

A strange experience befell some thieves who had broken into the parish church at Suelli a few nights ago. A man of the name of Francesco Lecca. who was supposed to be dead, had been taken to the church and left there for some hours previous to his burial. At 7 o'clock in the evening, while his relatives were gathered around him, he suddenly gave signs of life.

The relatives, terror-stricken, called out loudly for help. The thieves, has agining that they had been discovered down the valuable booty which they had secured and escaped by the front door of the church. The man who had so strangely come to life again really expired two hours afterward. The population of Suelli attribute this event to Saint George, patron of the village.-London Daily News.

and Pains, and How to Cure it. De you know what it is to have a back that is never free from sches and constant pain, a lame back, a sore back, an aching back, in fact, a back that makes your life a burden? What have you done for it? And does it still keep you from the happiness that perfect health brings to all? We know full well if such is your condition a cure for it will be a blessing you no doubt desire. Plasters won't do it, but may assist in bringing strength. Liniment won't do it; for, while it may give temporary relief, it does not reach the cause. The cause, there's the point; there's where to make the attack. Most backaches come from disordered kidneys, therefore you must correct their action if you would be cured. Read the following from D. D. Cook, whose address is No. 18 Michigan Street, Grand Rapids. He says:—

"I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and wish to say it is a truly great medicine. Do vou-know what it is to have a back wish to say it is a truly great medicine. Thirty years ago I had nervous prostra-tion while in the army, where I served for over four years. I think it was during over four years. I think it was during this service that the seeds were sown which have caused all my trouble. Severe billous attacks bothered me, and at such times my kidneys were worse. It is almost impossible to describe the pain which soften lamed me. I have been so lame that to stand up after I had been sitting down required a great exertion. Walking was at times an impossibility, even at night I did not reat being forced to get un during did not rest, being forced to get up during the night.
