MANCHESTER, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, MAY 27. 1897.

JERUD'S RHEUMATIZ.

ICH-I-TA!" This was name that the brakeman screamed, as our train steamed slowly up to a low, unpainted freight house, at the terminus of the railroad. One car conveyed the passengers, three in number, to this wilderness station. We took up our bags and walked out on the platform. There was no waitng-room; nor was there even a solitary backman to whom we might appeal for ransportation. If hackmen there had een, we could not have given him oriers where to drive us.

The sun was setting. There was no hadow of a hill or tree. Slowly the rairie changed from green and brown o pale yellow, and there were no outines of irregularity to mark its outer ircumference

A few blanketed Indians stood about, ratching their "supplies" with evident inxiety. An occasional cath, borrowed rom the vocabulary of the white men bout them, was all the English which hey uttered or knew.

No other building was in sight, save one-storied red structure just across what is now, I supppose, the main treet in the city of Wichita, Kansas. In the doorway of this red structure bove which was a sign in black leters, "Tavern," a woman suddenly ap-

She beckoned to us in the twilight ind seconded her motions by a shrill ry of "Come over here!"

We obeyed, and entered the tavern.

Supper was soon provided at a long poard table, where we ate with the owhovs and the freight hands. We had corn bread, white bread, canned blee and fresh nork roasted and Black coffee was served racked cups without saucers.

We were government employes, or our way to Fort Sill. At Wichita the railroad gave place to the stage line. Before daylight we were aroused for breakfast, which was what was left of supper, made into hash. We paid our bill to the landlady, who wrapped our greenbacks in a piece of buckskin and deposited them in a long, homeknit stocking which hung from her apron band. The stage-coach was drawn up to the door by four horses, as gay and prancing steeds as one could wish to see. The vehicle itself, a stage-coach of the true overland style, was large and strong, with three seats beside the driver's The canopy, sides and cushioned seats were of genuine brown leather

We started off at high speed. The curly spring buffalo-grass seemed as soft as wool. The ground was unbroken save by the settlements of the prairie-dogs, whose towns made almost continuous city on each side of the trail for many miles. The saucy inhabitants were out early, probably in the interests of farming, standing straight up and talking to one another darting out of sight down their doorways, and peeping out again as suddenly.

The morning sun appeared without chadows, as he had set the night before There were now and then little farm: planted with small peach-trees,

From the doors of dugouts, or tiny frame houses, half-dressed children peeped curiously forth. On we sped through creek and river, up slipper; anks and on over the plains.

"If this is staging," we said, "then rood-by to steam cars for the prairie." But our pleasant way, like many another, was subject to change. At the end of fifteen miles we halted for a relay. Our horses were foaming, and must be replaced by fresh ones. We alighted at a small stage-line station, and were told to "take out our lug-

In six minutes we were ready to start again. The four horses and leathercovered vehicle, which had dashed out of Wichita with its piedge of comfort and rapidity, gave place to a dirty, canvas-topped, two-mule coach without

The seats were high, and without against the slender supports which held up the canopy. Our new steeds were slow and stubborn. By much flogging from a rawhide instrument, whose like I have never seen, they were induced to plod They were thin in flesh, and lame. Now and then we saw early wild crocuses and canterbury-bells, and the soft, trailing sensitive plant, with its silken balls spattered with golden dust. There were no more houses—only level, unbroken plain, with an occasional steep-banked stream, on whose margins grew a sparse fringe of cottonwood-

A gray wolf trotted out of the timber and stared at us. Deer in the distance bounded away, while one solitary "prairie schooner" crossed our path, with its jingling kettles hung low underneath the wagon, grazing the tips of the grass.

"Twenty-five miles before another relay," said the driver, "and it will take

If the driver had been communica ive the hours might have passed quickly; but he was taciturn. pay as he drew from the stage company was well earned, for between the stubborn mules and the sometimes bad road he had a hard time of it.

Toward evening we drew up to a little shanty, the first building we had seen for twenty miles, and alighted for supper and to change mules.

An old woman and her son kept the house. She was "glad to see me," she said, "for women don't come this way much, and I get lonesome.' We had expected to move on after supper, but the driver came in to say that the relay mule had strayed away and we should have to wait till morn-The old woman was delighted, nor were we sorry. "Staging" was losing its fascination, and we felt much obliged to the relay mule for running away.

"He'll be back bright and early in the morning," said the old woman.
"Elnathan, he tied the big dinner-bell in onto his neck so's to be sure to find him. To-morrow's Decoration day; did you know it?" she asked, as we sat by the corn-cob fire. We had almost forgotten it. Our hostess went on:

"We always decorate, Elnathan and There ain't any graveyards around here, only just one single soli-She wiped her eyes, which had filled with tears. "See it out there, that bit of white loomin' up lose to the parn?"

head. Like to look at it?" We answered that we certainly should like to see it, and followed her. In the barn-yard were our mules, some orairie hay, a bunch of last year's cornstalks and a Texas cow with wide branching horns, a look of defiance in her bony, repulsive shape. The fence the south of it, on the outside, was the

At the head was a very large Queen's ware platter, with "Jerud Whitehead" painted across it in black letters. It stood straight up, like any headstone and though, as the old woman said, "It sometimes topples over, especially in the spring when the ground thaws," it was little trouble to right it again to-morrow," she said, on our way back

"Was your husband a soldier?" we sked, sadly and respectfully.

"No," she answered, "not exactly; but he would 'a' been. They was going to draft 'em in our town one time, and ferud he was took with rheumatiz so he was confined to his bed for a month. He was awful sorry, for he did want to fight for his country; and he said he'd just as soon be drafted as to volunteer-it showed how bad they want-

"Then another time," she went on, Squire Smith offered him five hundred dollars to go as his substitute; and I was willing, for we needed the noney bad enough. Jerud got all ready to start, as peart as could be, but the very last thing he was took down with the rheumatiz again. Jerud was as good as could be, and as brave; and I've seen him stand in the door leaning on his cane and cheering the boys when they marched away, and saying how he did wish he could go, too.

"'Well, Jerud,' I would say, 'suppose you start in one of your good spells?'
And he'd answer, 'All right.' Half a dozen times I'd pack up his things and get him ready to go, when all of a sudden his rheumatiz would come back, and he'd have to stay at home. So the war passed, and poor Jerud, he sighed when the boys came home, and pretty near almost cried.

"Jerud wasn't given to work very much, on account of his rheumatiz; but I never laid that up against him. We come out here for the stage company five year ago, and done pretty well. Elnathan and I done most of the work.

"It always seemed to weigh on Jerud that he hadn't been a soldier. Hε would sit out on a bench at the door for hours, watching Elnathan and me plant the corn, and having that far-

"Oh, no, there ain't no flowers, so to speak. I don't care much for them .ittle wild things, and I ain't never planted any poppy seeds and hollyhocks and geraniums and pinies. I've got something in that trunk over there that's 300 or 400 men better than flowers to decorate gra with." We looked at the trunk. It was cov ered with calfskin, tanned with the hair on, the fur side out, and studded with brass nails. We wanted to ask what was in it which was "better than flowers to decorate graves with," but we restrained our curiosity.

That night we went to sleep to dream of grassy mounds and shining concave

It was late in the morning when the relay mule was found; but the driver himself had then disappeared, and our starting was postponed. After the breakfast dishes were washed the old woman dressed herself in her old-fashioned best clothes, put on a bonnet which had been hers "before the war," and sat down by the ancient trunk. We did not talk, for she seemed sad and absent-minded.

She unlocked the receptacle which neld something better than flowers to ing a crooked toe that bothered him a decorate graves with, and drew carefully forth a neatly-folded patch-work quilt. Then she walked slowly out to

After standing for a few minutes talking with Elnathan, the two took the quilt by each of its four corners and spread it evenly above the grave. Then the old woman sat down on one corner of the "decoration," while Elnathan went away to his work.

The quilt was set in diamond pieces —grass-green and yellow and blue and black and purple. It was the gayest of its kind that I had ever seen. The warm spring sunshine lighted up the bright tints into a kaleidoscope of beauty.

The Texas cow peered through the not too substantial fence at the amazing brightness, astonished into a be-trayal of unusual emotions. Presently she wisked around the yard in a freedom of movement which startled me. The old woman, after sitting for an hour with her head bent low upon her loyal breast, rose and folded the quilt.

My companion was sure that she had een asleep, but I saw traces of tears as she laid the quilt away in the old trunk. remarking, as if to herself "Yes, I shall always decorate Jerud's grave. He would 'a' been a soldier if hadn't been for his rheumatis."--

THE 55TH CONGRESS AT WORK

SENATE. - 43d day. - The Cuban debate was continued with a series of red-hot speeches by Senators Foraker, of Ohio; Cannon, of Utah; Lindsay, of Kentucky, and Hoar, of Massachusetts. It was the first speech of any length made by Mr. Foraker since he entered the Senate. He announced some startling facts regarding the past and present condition of affairs in Cuba which had been obtained from the heretofore secret archives of the state department. Especially interesting was the letter from Secretary Olney. in which this country offered media-tion to Spain, and the refusal of that country to accept the proffered aid. A number of consular reports told of such misdoings of the Spanish that it was feared that the consuls would killed should it become known that they had given the information. Mr. Cannon was bitter in his denunciation of Spanish atrocity. House .-

No session SENATE-44th day-A brighter day is apparently dawning for Cuba. The Senate has ended the long and exciting debate and passed the Morgan res-olution to recognize the belligerency of the Cuban patriots by the decisive vote of 41 to 14. The resolution as passed is as follows: Resolved, etc., That a condition of public war exists between the government of Spain and the government proclaimed and for some time maintained by force of arms by the people of Cuba, and that the United States of America shall maintain a strict neutrality between the contending parties, according to each all the rights of belligerents in the ports and territory of the United States.
The voting occurred after an exciting debate, participated in by Senators Thurston, Elkins, White, Fairbanks, Hale, Spooner and Gorman. Mr. Thurston, who presided over the Republican national convention at St. Louis, recalled the stirring scene when that convention enthusiastically in-serted a Cuban plank in the platform. and declared that this resolution was in partial fulfillment of that pledge. Messrs. Elkins and White urged a conservative course, and an inquiry by a committee. Mr. Hale expressed the fear that war with Spain would result, and he and Mr. Spooner protested against the Democrats and Populists dictating the foreign policy of the administration. House — Cuban affairs furnished the House with a day of bitter partisan debate. The resolution appropriating $50,000 for the relief of American citizens was adopted without a distenting vote, but the Democrats endeavored to force consideration also of the Morgan resolution for recognition of the belligerency of the insurgents. They accused the Republicans of endeavoring to evade this issue, but that party, through its spokes-man, Mr. Hitt, made the important statement that the Republicans desired not to embarrass negotiations which were being projected by President Mc-Kinley to secure the independence of Cuba. While Mr. Hitt disclaimed presidential authority for the statement it was well known that he had been in consultation with Mr. McKinley on the question, and knew whereof he spoke SENATE.—46th day.— The death of Senator Earle, of South Carolina, was referred to in eloquent terms in Chap-lain Milburn's prayer. REVIEW OF TRADE.

Unmistakable evidence of improvement comes in the general increase of commercial ioans, mostly for eastern merchants or companies, though some well-known houses in the middle west appear with considerable re-discounts from the south. Not for a long time have commercial 'oans been fully half the whole. The distinct change gives proof that new business has been larger than many have supposed. The excess of mexchandise imports to answer demands for half a year to come involves a greater excess of exports when the anticipatory movement ends and crops begin to move, which fact renders large outgoes of gold less likely and gives the country a stronger position in international markets. Meanwhile there is a continuing increase, distinct though-gradual, in the volume of business, in demand for products of manufacture and, considering the time of year, in movement of grain. I'nmistakable evidence of improvement find no rest for the sole of his foot.

Healthy Existence.-That's For a Why the Kidneys so often Fail.

Nature has provided a certain amount f work for every organ of the human ody; overtax them and disease eventubody; overtax them and disease eventually follows. There is not one portion of our organism that is so overworked as the kidneys; on them is placed the important function of filtering the blood of the impurities which naturally form in the scribe region of life and direction. The the impurities which naturally form in the regular action of life and digestion. The kidneys are consequently termed the sewerage of the system; clog up this sewer, and the blood becomes tainted with poisonous urie acid, which brings on disease in many forms. The back is the first to show this stoppage. From there comes the warning note; it should be heeded, and the kidneys receive prompt attention. Doan's Kidney Pills will right the action of the kidneys quickly, relieve the back of pains and aches, and cure all troubles of kidneys and bladder. Read the following:

The conference committee on the specific railroad taxation bill patched up a compromise which is practically a victory for the Schate. It increases the taxes to be raised by the original Merriam bill only $32,000 per year making the total tax to be raised from iff Bill Opened in the Senate by railroads under the terms of the bill about $946,000, or an increase over the tax of the present law of about $205, 000. By the terms of the compromise the House conference committee gave in to the Senate committee just $269,000 of annual taxes as compared with a concession of $32,000 on the part of the Senate committee. In the Senate the compromise was explained by Sepator Merriam and then Senator Thompson the finance committee, opened the de- made a bitter attack upon Gov. Pinbate for the Republicans. After speak- gree in a lengthy speech in which be criticised the governor's recent railroad taxation message as a tissue of false hood and declared that if the governor does what he has threatened to dorefuses to sign appropriation bills and keeps the legislature in session all summer-then the duty of the legisla ture, he said, was to impeach the governor. At the conclusion of Senator Thompson's speech the Senate concurred in the report of the conference committee without a a negative vote. but Senators Bostwick, Mudge, Hughes and Moore refrained from voting. The Senate then ordered the speech printed in full in the legislative journal and also ordered 5,000 extra copies of the speech printed. Action on the compromise bill went over for the day the House. Gov. Pingree returned to had vetoed, viz: The bill to increase the salaries of Detroit justices, he considered out of line with the hard times; the appropriation of $3,000 for the Michigan Historical and Pioneer society; the appropriation of $5,000 for improvements on Mackinac island. There was a beautiful row in the Senate over the the uniform text book bill, which lacked one vote to pass, but was reconsidered and tabled. The second attempt to pass the bill to allow steam and electric railroads to exchange service was foiled by Col. Atkinson who said it was a scheme of the Grand Trunk railroad to secure possession of the Detroit and Mt. Clemens electric road and cut off competition. The bill was referred for future action. Bills passed by the House: To prevent the spread of noxious weeds; amending the tax law so the owners of land sold for taxes shall pay the cost of advertising the same; limiting the liability of hotelkeepers in case of loss or theft of guests' effects to the value of $500, nn less the guest gives previous notice of the value of such property; authorizing the building and loan associations to borrow money and issue paid-up stock and create reserve funds, also to increase or decrease their capital stock: authorizing the commissioner of highways in towships to purchase machines for road making. Bills passed by the Senate: Appropriations of $80,000 for the industrial home for girls, $3,700 for improvements to the upper p ninsula prison, $134,800 for state normal school. $80,000 for the Michigan college of mines; for the appointment of fire mar > that they be printed and providing for a legislative proofreader; providing for a more accurate registration of deaths. Senator Thompson's attack upon Gov. Pingree received a red hot reply from Col. Atkinson in a communication n which he roasts the railroad con ference committee for its communication with railroad lobbyists while in secret session, which he terms a shameful scene. He jumps on Speaker Gor don for his appointments on the committee, intimating that the speaker was influenced directly by the railroads in making the appointments. The colonel says in this connection that un less the people elect representatives who represent them instead of the railroads the people deserve to be op-pressed. He charges that the set pressed. speech of Senator Thompson was prepared for him by the railroad compan ies, and characterizes much of the speech as fiction and a barefaced attempt to prevert facts. The House in committee of the whole agreed to an excise bill, by which it is hoped to raise $320,000 per year by a tax of one cent per gallon on all beer, ale and porter manufactured or imported into the state. The bill creates 32 new officers, to be known as excise inspectors, with a salary of $1,000 per year, to be appointed by the auditor-general, and to act as member of county excise boards with the county treasurer and prosecutor of each county. These county boards are to issue liquor li censes in place of the common councils, etc., as under the the present system The House passed the following bills: For better protection against fraud in primary elections; appropriating $29, 000 for the Central Michigan norma the appraisal of property sold under for less than two-thirds of appraised values; increasing the number of stock holders allowed military companies and authorizing them to rent their armories; providing for a similarity of studies in Michigan normal schools; al lowing building and loan association to create a reserve fund. The Senate passed the uniform text book bill with only one negative vote—Campbell.

> The bill will not go into effect until 1899, and between now and ther the school districts must vote whether they will adopt the free text book o the uniform text book system. Other bills passed by the Senate: Prescribing an agricultural course for country schools; to prohibit paying labor in store orders or other script not legal tender; for a lien upon horses and same; appropriating $22,000 for im provements at the agricultural college, including an electric lighting plant:

ary, of Wayne, had a scrap on the floor of the House which resulted in the lie peing passed, over the bill to allow Detroit's board of public works to do $100,000 worth of repaving each year without letting it out on contract or ecuring the council's authorization.

The beginning of the closing week of the legislative session did not show any great desire on the part of the legislators to push matters through. The Senate held a short session in committee of the whole where the inherit ance tax bill was sent away to its last slumber; the bill was killed to provide for maintenance of minor children when divorce is granted the parents; and the House cut in the mirring school appropriation was non-concurred in. The Senate passed the following bills: Requiring township boards to publish annually an itemized statement of township finances; fixing the per diem of members of the railroad crossing poard at $5; permitting the annual meeting of stockholders of Michigan railroads to be held anywhere in the state; repealing obsolete laws; repeallaw for the collection of cereal statistics: taxing the gross Michigan earnings of express companies 2 per cent. The Senate knocked out the bill permitting the townships between Lansing and St. Johns to grant electric railway franchises. Senator Thomp-son was responsible for its defeat. The House session was a little more lively and the following bills were passed: Making the offense of attempting to wreck or rob railroad trains a felony; for the incorporation of societies for the study of literature and for educational and philanthropic work; prohibiting employment of ermitting state institutions during the years of legislative sessions to draw upon the state's general funds for current expenses with the approval of the auditor-general, the amount being limited to one-third of previous year's appropriation for the institution making the draft; providing that musical societies' property shall be exempt from taxation, except where they ren their halls; permitting plank road companies to use gravel on road beds instead of plank. The committee of the whole agreed to the anti-trust bill which provides a penalty for all persons entering into agreements which tend to lessen free competition in the importation or sale cles in the state, or which tend to advance the rates or control the price of any such articles to the proucer or consumer. The bill provides that no property shall be exempt from execution under the terms of the law and declares void any co-partnership unless affidavit is made every year to to the secretary of state that the partnership is formed to do business under the provisions of the bill. It also excludes from the state all foreign corpo rations that do not do business under the terms of the measure. The Lusk home rule bill for cities; the bill raising the franchise fees of corporations from one-half of a mill to one and a half mills on the dollar and providing that the minimum fee be $20 instead of $5: the bill to increase the allowance for factory inspection under the labor

Just 89 members of the House voted to adopt the conference committee re port on the Merriam railroad specific tax bill and only one-Rep. Clute voted against the report. Rep. Chamberlain, who was chairman of the conference committee, and Rep. Atkinson, who has all along fought tooth and nail for a much higher tax than the report contemplates, had one of the hottest debates of the session, but finally the Pingreeites agreed to accept the conference figures and when it came to a vote the report was adopted by the vote above stated-89 to 1. As ssed the bill will increase the specific taxes on railroads and depot com panies $205,000 over the present law. It requires only the governor's signato become a law. Gov. Pingree says he will not decide upon his course in the matter until he sees how the people take it. The Lusk home rule bill, permitting cities and villages by popular vote to amend their charters except in the matter of increasing representation, raising the limit of taxation, borrowing money or extending limits, passed the House by of 54 to 13. The anti-trust bill was killed, owing to Rep. Adams, who contended that the bill was a dangerous one. The House also passed the following: Increasing the franchise fee commissioner from $8,000 to $12,000, and the bill to permit electric light companies to furnish gas were all of corporations from 1/4 to 11/4 mills on the dollar, and making the minimum fee $20 instead of $5; appropriating $12,000 for the state factory inspectors, an increase of $4,000 over old appropriation; preventing appeals from justice courts in cases involving less toan $25. The House concurred in the Senate amendments to the Graham uniform text book bill, and it needs now is the signature of the governor to make it a law. The Senate passed the following bills: Providing half-pay pension for disabled and retired Detroit police, providing it never exceeds $50 per month; amending the divorce law so as to protect the interests of minor children; providing that the reserve funds of mutual and co-operative benefit associations shall be deposited in the state treasury; changing the time for the sale of dolinquent tax lands from December to Senator Blakeslee's hanging bill was favorably reported by the Ser ate committee on state affairs.

The bill providing for a board of public works in villages of 1,000 was killed by the House.

Mrs. Platt Talks About Hysteria.

When a nerve or a set of nerves supplying any organ in the body with its due nutri-ment grows weak, that organ languishes. When the nerves become exhausted and die, so to speak, the organ falls into decay. What is to be done? The answer is, do not allow the weakness to progress; stop the deteriorating process at once!

Do you experience fits of depression, alternating with restlessness? Are your spirits easily affected, so that one moment you laugh and the next fall into convultive weeping Again, do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you, all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound, pain in ovary, and pain especially between the shoulders, sometimes loss of voice and nervous dyspepsia? If so, you are hysterical, your uterine nerves are at fault. You must do something to restore their tone.
