The remarks made by a countryman when he gets his first view of the ocean are not always remarkable for depth and appropriateness. A stroller on the beach of a Massachusetts seaport overheard the opening remarks of a farmer and his wife who had come from northern New Hampshire, as he subsequently learned from their conversation. "Well, I feel to be glad we've come," said the woman, "with a sigh of pleasure, turning from the sea to face her spouse. 'Would you ever have believed there was such a sight of water in one place in this world?' 'No, I wouldn't,' returned William. 'And when you consider that we can't see any, but just what's on top, it's all the more astonishing.' Sarah, now ain't it?"

A GIRL'S STRATAGEM.

"Kate," said Harry Winslow, looking at her cousin, "I won't send papa's objection to Harry any longer. You know there is a perfect gentleman, honorable and industrious, and it is only because he is comparatively poor that papa objects to my marrying him."

"But what can you do, Levia? Your father is so determined that you and Harry shall not marry as you seem to be contrary-minded," Kate Winslow said, smiling at her cousin's desperate air. Levia came closer and whispered in Kate's ear:

"We're going to elope!—And you must help us, won't you?"

"Don't, darling; don't think of such a thing. Wait and try persuasion with your father. When he finds out that your heart is really set on Harry he surely will relent," pleaded Kate earnestly, for she knew how hot-headed her Kentucky uncle was and feared the result of an elopement.

"Pshaw! Kate, I've tried persuasion and everything else until I'm tired, and I promised Harry last night that you and I would go to Louisville Thursday on the morning train. He and Phil Lee will get on at La Grange and we will go over to Jeffersonville and get that famous squire to marry us. Then Harry and I will begin life together on his little farm and be happy ever after," she ended, with a delighted laugh.

Kate argued with her for some time, but finding that her cousin had fully determined upon the elopement she at last gave a reluctant assent to accompany her, hoping that all would be for the best.

Had it not been that she knew that Harry Carroll was all that Levia fondly pictured him, she would never have consented; but she knew that it was only a lack of riches in the suitor which caused Judge Winslow's objection to the match, and she believed that Harry would make her cousin happier than any one whom the judge might choose.

The plan worked smoothly, and Thursday, at noon, two young men, accompanied by two charming, pretty girls, stepped out of the train at the Louisville & Nashville depot in Louisville. As they did so they noticed a policeman among the crowd, holding a telegram in his hand. When he saw the little group he started toward them.

"It's all up with us, Levia," groaned Harry, "your father has found us out and telegraphed them to stop us."

Levia began to cry, but Kate, speaking very rapidly, said:

"No, it's not all up. Keep quiet and I believe I can manage it. Don't any of you show surprise no matter what I do."

The policeman came up at this moment and, touching his hat politely, said:

"Very sorry to interrupt you, but I am ordered to stop an eloping party and take Miss Levia Winslow into custody until her father arrives to take her home. Now, which of these young ladies is it, for I'm sure this is the party?" "Shirley wait, dark skirt, sister hat, dark hair and eyes; 19 years old," he read from his telegram.

"The description suits either of you ladies," he said, with a twinkle in his eyes, "so you'll have to help me out."

At these words Kate sprang forward and, throwing her arms around Harry's neck, regardless of spectators, exclaimed: "You shan't take me away from him! How dare you interfere!"

Still clinging to Harry she turned on the officer with flashing eyes and looked so angry that he became impatient.

"Come, Miss Winslow," he said, coolly. "I am authorized to arrest you and must do my duty. Your friends may go free, as they are not included in the order."

Kate felt back and spoke a few words to Harry in a whisper. He in turn whispered to Levia and Kate turned reluctantly to the officer.

"I suppose I can't escape you," she said, laughing feebly. "But warn you I will accomplish my object before you kiss Harry good-by very affectionately, promising to be true to him forever, bade Levia and Philip good-by, and went to the station house with the officer. The latter was much relieved, for he had expected trouble, as he feared the prospective groom would be armed.

"I don't believe he deserved her, after all," he said to himself. "She's a mighty handsome girl, but he made very little fuss about having her torn away from him."

Two hours later Judge Winslow, red and angry for he had nursed his wrath ever since a telegram from a friend, who had seen the young men, told him the girls on the train at La Grange, disclosed the elopement. Rushed into the room at the station house to upbraid his undutiful daughter. He found only his niece, Kate, in the room, coolly reading a paper.

"Where is Levia?" he gasped in dismay.

"Well, my dear uncle," said Kate calmly, "I am not sure, but I think that Mr. and Mrs. Harry Carroll are just leaving the city for their country home. At least, looking at her watch, 'It is just train time.'"

"What do you mean, girl?" cried the judge, redder and angrier than ever.

"I mean this, uncle," Kate answered bravely, "that, as the policeman could not tell us apart, I assumed Levia's name and came to the station house as

SUCCESS IN FICTION.

The Best Writers Are Those Who Regard It as Their Chief Mission.

Mr. James Bryce, who has achieved fame as an essayist on economic problems and as a political analyst, contemplates devoting his pen to fiction, as a writer in the St. Louis Republic. It is not stated whether his motive is amusement or profit. Perhaps it is a mixture of both. If he achieves popular applause, he will disclose a versatility unsuspected by those who have pursued his efforts along the more serious lines of literature. It appears that nearly all literary men at some time in their lives have been attracted toward the task of making novels. The tuneful and witty Dr. Holmes yielded to the temptation, and Lowell was credited with a strong hankering. The erudite and didactic George William Curtis wrote one novel, and showed the possession of a conscientious regard for the reading public by not repeating the offense. Bayard Taylor also invaded the field with much promise of success, but wisely concluded that the novelist's vocation did not fit his talents. There have been several noted writers of English who might have proved shining successes as novelists. Among them might be classed the brilliant and meteoric Macaulay, whose thrilling prose and inspiring verse indicate the possession of those qualities of narrative and imagination which are perhaps the most effective weapons in the novelist's armory.

WAR NOTES.

The United States cruiser Charleston, the monitor Monterey and the gunboat Concord and Zafiro, with marines and blue jackets from the cruiser Baltimore, left Cavite Sept. 18 and proceeded to Subig Bay to destroy an insurgent cannon there. Owing to the bad weather the operation was postponed until Sept. 23d, when the warships for three hours bombarded the town of Olanguapo and the entrenchments where the gun was situated. Men on the Charleston, Concord and Zafiro were then landed under a heavy insurgent fire, proceeding to the cannon they destroyed it with gun cotton and then returned to the warships. The Americans had one man wounded during the engagement. The number of Filipinos who took part could not be ascertained and no dead were seen. The Monterey fired for four hours 21 shots from her 10-inch guns and 17 from her 12-inch guns. The town, which was riddled with shells, took fire at several points.

The insurgents captured the United States gunboat Urdaneta, in the Orani river, on the northwest side of Manila bay, where she was patrolling. One officer and nine of her crew are missing. The Urdaneta is beached opposite the town of Orani, on the Orani river. She was riddled with bullets and burned and the following guns, with their ammunition were captured: A one pounder, one Colt automatic gun, and one Nordenfeldt 25-millimeter gun. The crew of the Urdaneta are prisoners, or have been killed. Further details are lacking.

Two important dispatches from Gen. Otis at Manila were made public by the war department on the 25th. The first indicates that the insurgents on the island of Negros are about to recognize the authority of the United States. An election in Negros will be held on the 2d of October. The second dispatch says the American flag will be raised in Sulu island. The chief insurgents in Zamboanga are reported willing to accept the authority of the United States, but desire to name conditions which Gen. Otis would not accept.

Word has reached the war department that Gen. Otis has sought to initiate the policy employed in Cuba of luring Filipino army leaders to surrender by giving them a guarantee of immunity from arrest for previous armed opposition to the United States and protection for the future. Notwithstanding this tempting offer, but one bona fide surrender of a gun is reported.

Recently Commander Davidson of the little transport Thetis, and a sharp engagement at San Fabian, Lingayen, with about 100 insurgents heavily intruded at a distance of from 1,000 to 700 yards. The insurgents fled, their fire being weak and ineffective. On the Thetis there were no casualties. The Thetis is one of the little Admiral Watson, and Davidson, the commander, is a young ensign.

A dispatch has been received from Manila by the war department stating that Gen. Snyder attacked the position of the insurgents at the west of Cebu on the 26th and destroyed seven fortifications and a number of smooth bore cannons. The insurgents were utterly routed and Snyder returned with his force to Cebu. The Tennessee regiment was already aboard transport to come home, but disembarked to take part in the engagement.

A party of insurgents ditched a railroad train a mile and a half south of Angeles on the 23d and then opened fire on the derailed cars from a bamboo thicket close to the track, killing two Americans and wounding five others. Lieutenant Lome and six of his scouts, who were on the train, made a vigorous defense and caused the enemy to flee. Six dead rebels were afterward found in the thicket from which the rebel fire came.

Cable reports from Iloilo concerning the results of Gen. Bates' second trip among the southern islands indicate that about 400 rebels at Zamboanga refuse to recognize American authority. The Moros and Filipinos are unfriendly and disturbances between them are liable to occur. Iloilo is quiet and the natives continue friendly.

The war department has issued a general order in regard to the examination of officers of the volunteer army, an important provision of which is that vacancies of second lieutenants are to be filled by promotion from the ranks of the regiments in which they occur.

The 26th regiment U. S. V. sailed from San Francisco for Manila on the transport Grant on the 24th, which also carried 250 recruits for other regiments.

The war department has directed the transports Sikh and City of Rio to go to Portland, Ore., and take the 35th volunteers to Manila.

According to the Volkstein the Transvaal government has decided to return to the donor the young lion which Cecil Rhodes recently presented to the Transvaal delegates to the agricultural union in Cape Town about 10 days ago, as it declines to have anything whatever to do with that gentleman.

The war department has information concerning the escape from Aguinaldo of Dr. Gonzalez and Sr. Romelio Arvalo. These men were in the insurgent camp for some time, and being very wealthy they were assessed quite heavily to assist the cause. Gonzalez was offered the position of minister of foreign affairs by Aguinaldo, but declined.

The settlers are organized and well armed and apparently mean business. The deputies have camped where they were stopped and are waiting instructions from the marshal's office in Denver.

The hero of Manila Bay, Admiral Dewey, arrived at New York on the morning of Sept. 26th, two days ahead of time. It is needless to say that his unexpected arrival created much surprise. The trip from Gibraltar to New York took 16 days, a much shorter time than was estimated, and this of course accounts for the surprise to some degree.
