One, the Archduke Leopold Salvator of Austria-Hungary, recently made a remarkable journey across the Alps in his balloon, the Meteor. Not content with making trips on his own account in one or another of the three large ballons which he had made, he has commenced taking his wife and children with him.

There are many members of the other reigning houses who have made aerial trips, notably the King-of Italy's two cousins, the Count of Turin and the Duke Abruzzi. The Duke of Abruzzi, in particular, made a numper of ballooning trips before starting on his arctic expedition with the ob ject of ascertaining to what extent he ould utilize this mode of conveyance in the polar regions. I. Planning for the Second Missionary Tour.—Acts 15: 35-41. After their return from the Jerusalem visit described in our last lesson, Paul and Barnabas remained some time in the Syrian Antioch Then Paul proposed to Barnabas that they revisit the churches which they had founded in Asia Minor during their first missionary tour (A. D. 65-63). He would visit his spiritual children to see how they were growing in grace. Barnabas was quite ready to go. But when they began to form their plans of campaign, a practical question areae. Barnabas was quite ready to go. But when they began to form their plans of campaign, a practical question areae. Barnabas was wished to take with them his relative John Mark. But Faul was unwilling to risk taking with them as a helper one who had left them in the lurch in the midst of their first fourney. Each one was sedecided in his own judgment that they agreed to separate. Thus the missionary work flowed in two streams instead of one.

Paul chose Silas, who probably did not start with him from Antioch, but joined him in Asia Minor, at v. 4, where the plural "they" is first used.

We would caution all people against accepting substitutes for Peruna. Insist upon having Peruna. There is no other internal remedy for catarrh that will take the place of Peruna. Allow a weak and vacillating nature. He may have sincere and good motives, but, being by nature weak, he is first used.
