CLEVER PANISIAN DRESSMAKER. Humble Beginning of Gay City's Leading Man Milliner. Paguin, the leading man milliner of Paris, was a clerk on the hourse a few years ago, with no knowledge of dressmaking. He is a fery handsome man and when he met a pretty dressmaker who had a small shop he married her Gradually the two extended their establishment until to day they are the joint aristocrats of fashion, standing asily at the head of all dressmakers in the French capital. Once thoroughy established in a prominent way, the clever and ornamental young couple inaugurated a new regime. No haughty seclusion, no barred doors at the Maison Pequin. Madame was met at the door by monsieur himself, and to be met by Pequin was a treat. The most beautiful of Parisian elegantes and
