A few days ago a customer asked to see some specimens of yellew topes.

"Ahi" he said, holding one up to the light, "this shows more remarkable coloring than my I have seen. How much do you want for this stone?"

The kepidary held it up to the light and told the price.

"I'll take it," said the customer. "I have never seen a yellow topez which showed such remarkable coloring of red and blue."

Then the untoner observed that the windows which faced the smilight were set with a border of small panes of blue and red glazs, and the light coming through them was reflected in the extension of articlating substitutionus ponderosity.
