SPHERES OF INFLUENCE IN CHINA GIVEN UP BY POWERS

The map shows the various spheres of influence of the powers in China, Manchuria omitted. The arrow points to the sphere abandoned by Germany, an action that, if followed by the other powers with respect to their spheres, will mean much for the integrity of the Chinese empire. The key in the lower right hand corner of the map gives the significance of the shading.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

Representative Lord, of Detroit, expects to draft a bill for extension of the term of office for governor, lieutenant governor and the other officers of state, not including legislators. Mr. Lord thinks that would tend to enhance the dignity of the governorship and efficiency of the incumbent. This important bill Mr. Lord has been considering a long time.

Sherman T. Handy, of Sault Ste. Marie, former member of the legislature from Ionia county, says it will be a good step if the game warden's department was done away with and the protection of game placed entirely in the hands of the fish commissioner. He will work among legislators to this end. "It would place the office far beyond the reach of politics," he said, "and that is to be desired, but it would be opposed by every aspirant for the governorship because it would lessen the number of offices at the disposal of Rep. Stout, of Ingham, chairman of the committee on elections, is preparing for the reception of the senate primary bill by the house by drafting a substitute measure, providing for the direct nomination of governor, lieutenant-governor and legislators. It preserves the state convention referendum clause.

Senator Pyfe, of Grand Rapids, has introduced a bill making it lawful for surety companies to sign liquor bonds. Chairman Ward, of the ways and means committee of the house, says he will recommend tacking a clause to every institutional appropriation bill providing that money allotted can be spent only for the purpose designated, unless the institutions obtain the written consent of the board of corrections and charities and the auditor-general to transfer a surplus from one fund to another. The idea originated with ex-Rep. Neal, of Northville, two years ago, and according to the report of the auditor-general has saved the state $20,000 in the two years.

The legislature, it is now expected, will do something in the form of a primary election bill. Senator Brown, who is to look after the legislative part of the proposed law, has said: "I expect that the bill will be introduced in the senate in about a week. I have been looking up decisions on questions involved, and find that the courts of all the states, except California, have been the same. In drawing the primary bill it will be necessary to conform to the general election law of Michigan." The new Wayne county primary bill is now law. Gov. Warner signed it as soon as it came to him. His attention was called to a claim that the law is unconstitutional, to which he replied: "The question of the law's unconstitutionality is something for the courts to determine. It may easily be tested, and if so found to be unconstitutional, it will be invalid. It may be amended."

A large number of bills were introduced Wednesday, most of them being measures to amend the drain law and the fish laws.

In the house Representatives Turner, Head and Deary were appointed a committee to prepare resolutions on the general election law of Michigan.

Representative Blaine will introduce a bill to prevent Christian Scientists from practicing medicine. His measure will probably stir up a lively time.

THE MARKETS.
Detroit—Cattle—This was light; all kinds strong; 22 higher than they were a week ago. The quality was not so good as last week. The market was good enough to bring over $1.25.

The Uncrowned King

Or God of Mammon, as he serves
Straight to his goal he goes his way,
Perhaps on some vast continent
His hand was closed but yesterday.

"Aye, yesterday," you say, "but Death,"
Because one died is all life gone?
The uncrowned monarch never dies.
The sun hath set—there springs the sun.

Nor shall his power be the less
If in his childhood's bygone peace
The gutter cradled him, nor may
A staller birth his strength increase.

He is. For good or ill, he is:
And woe to those who blindly cling
Unseeing to the ancient thrones:
And reck not of the Uncrowned King!

AT THE CALL OF DUTY

BY NELLIE CRAWLEY GILLYOKE

(Copyright, 1904, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

When I entered Thompson's room, he was pacing excitedly up and down the floor in a way that was altogether new in my experience of him. He paused a moment to look at me in a half-startled, half-uncertain way; then resumed his pacing without a word beyond an abrupt "Good morning!"

He carried an open letter in his hand, and I noted that his face bore a strained, tense look and that it was perfectly pallid.

Presently he stopped in front of me and flung himself dejectedly into the chair opposite. After a second's hesitation, he leaned over and thrust the letter into my fingers.

"Read it, Dick, and for God's sake, tell me what I'm to do."

The letter ran:

My Dear Mr. Thompson—I have under my care, a patient in whom you will recognize the wife supposed to be dead for many years. Briefly, her story is this:—Seven years ago, she left your house in an impulsive moment—she says you will remember the details well enough—so I pass them over. The only thing clear to her seems to be the recollection of a heavy snow storm and the fact that she was insufficiently protected from the bitter cold. She sat down on someone's doorstep to rest, after hours of distracted wandering. She realized then what she had done, but a sense of foolish pride kept her from going back. After that, her mind became a blank, and so it has remained through all these years—till now.

If this letter reaches you, come at once to the hospital. Mrs. Thompson has so far recovered that she will be able to return to her home within the week, unless some unexpected complication ensues. Respectfully yours,
Dr. L. S. Whiddon.

P. S.—The above letter is written with your wife's full permission.

L. S. W.

I could not restrain a glance of compassion as I returned it to Thompson. His face was like ashes and he trembled visibly from head to foot.

My first thought was for poor little Elsie. Thompson must have divined this, for when he next spoke, it was as though he had been just talking of her. He looked at me a moment with dry, pain-dark eyes before he spoke.

"You will explain—this to her, old fellow? You know, you understand—you believe in my good faith, Dick, do you not?" He regarded me anxiously. Then, in a dull tone, he went on:—"Thank heaven I told you the whole story of my wife's strange desertion of me—of her complete disappearance into the world for many months—of the sudden intelligence I received of her death, and—he broke off abruptly and walking over to an open window, stood for many minutes, looking down into the crowded street.

"You never investigated the circumstances surrounding her death?" I asked after a pause.

"The proofs I had, or thought I had, seemed incontestable enough," he replied despondently. "I mourned her sincerely and genuinely for long months after."

"My sister is too true and sensible a woman not to understand—everything," I said presently, "and I—I hope I am too good a friend to doubt."

Thompson's eyes flashed a quick gleam of gratitude into mine at this.

"You will do your duty, Jack," suddenly and laid his palm over the written words. "Don't," he said hoarsely. "I'd rather tell you myself."

She looked up at him dazedly, all the light dying out of her eyes as they recognized the tragedy in his. She sat quite still, almost statue-like, waiting for him to speak.

He hesitated a moment, then broke out passionately, the despair in him rushing to uncontrolled utterance:—"I have just learned that I have a living wife—the woman who deserted me in a fit of petty temper—the woman whom I mourned as dead—whom I honored and cherished in my home while she made it hers! There's no human law now to hold me to her. There is a law that will give me my freedom."

Elsie interrupted him with a depressive gesture. "There is a divine law," she said in a tone of finality.

Thompson did not speak for several seconds. Afterwards, he said, dully:—"You are right in this—as in everything. I shall, of course, do what is right."

"You will do your duty, Jack, I am sure of that," she returned in a low tone. Elsie rose as she spoke, and a few moments later, we took our leave.

At the foot of the steps, we came face to face with a special messenger. "Mr. Thompson lives?" she asked.

"He does. Anything wrong?"

"Yes. A woman just died at the Charity Hospital. She—"

"Yes, I know. Three doors to the left—up this flight."

Elsie had entered the coupe and was waiting for me. "To the Metropolitan Opera House," I told the driver. She looked at me in hurt bewilderment. "Oh no—not there—not now!" she cried, a quick reproach leaping to her tear-blinded eyes.

I took her hands in mine and held them close till she calmed herself.

"Everything is all right," I said, then, "I have just found out that the woman—that she is—dead. But this day, at least, belongs to him and—to her."

When We Did Not Care for Japan.

When the first embassy from Japan arrived in Washington a member of the Senate rose and said: "Mr. President, the first ambassadors from the venerable country of Japan are about to arrive. I move the Senate do now adjourn to meet and welcome the Japanese." Immediately another senator was on his feet, not to second the motion, but to say sharply: "Mr. President, I humbly trust the Senate of the United States of America will not adjourn for every show that comes along." That settled it.—From Mrs. Roger A. Pryor's "Reminiscences."

Hair-Splitting.

Senator Beveridge was answering an argument.

"The gentlemen have been splitting hairs," he said. "The hair has been trying to prove that two like things are different. He resembles the young lady who defended her own reputation."

"Some one said that's a secret," some one said to this young lady.

"She can, too," the young lady answered. "It isn't the woman who gives away the secret. It is the people she tells it to who let it out."

SET OF FARM BUILDINGS.

Designed to Accommodate Animals of All Kinds.

J. McP.—Please publish two plans, one for a poultry, hog and wood house, and the other for larger stock and feed. I should like the barn to hold 40 or 50 tons of hay, 10 or 12 tons of grain, 8 cows and 2 horses on the ground floor. I want to have about 12 young cattle down in the cellar, and manure in the cellar, too. I intend to build it on a hill, with driveway door on north and door for manure on the south. I would like to have a room for grains. Can you

A, granary; B, mow for hay; C, threshing floor 14 feet wide; D, cow stable; E, harness room; F, horse stalls; G, trap doors for manure chute to basement. arrange the plan so that I can keep 20 sheep in the barn for winter? I intend to build a building to keep 20 hens for winter, 2 or 3 broods of chickens in spring, and 4 pigs and a room for breeding sow and a room for 5 or 8 cords of wood. Also I would like to have a room in which to boll feed.

The size of the barn is 46 x 56 feet, with 18 feet posts with hip roof. It contains four bents—a twenty-two foot bent, where horses and cattle stand; a fourteen foot driveway, and a twenty foot bent, where granary and mow are shown. There is an overlay in front of cattle and horses and to give room for feeding and also room to take a team out if there is a load of hay or grain on the barn floor. There is a trap door behind both horse and cow stable to drop the manure through into the manure shed below.

The basement contains a room for young cattle to run loose in, a feed room, and sheep pen, also a manure room under cow and horse stable. If the young cattle are to be tied up, the partition between feed room and where the cattle are can be moved back so that there are thirteen feet from the wall to front of manger; this will give plenty of room behind cattle. The sheep pen can then be made wider and shorter and leave room for two box stalls along the north end of the feed alley.

The plan shown at Fig. 3, consists of two pig pens 11 feet x 8 feet 6 ins. each, feed room, hen house and wood house. The pig pens have windows above the doors. The roosts in hen house are at the north end, and nest boxes along wood house partitions. The windows at south end of hen

A, pig pens, each 11x9 ft.; B, feed alley, 3 ft. wide; C, poultry pen, 2x15 ft.; D, wood house, 2x15 ft.

The house should not be over one foot from floor, so that the hens can get the full benefit of the sun.

The Planning of a Barn.

H.—I am building a basement barn 60x35 feet and would be glad if you could inform me through your columns, how many posts and joists would be necessary and their dimensions. The basement would be used as cow-stabling, 7-feet-high, and the upper part will be 20 feet. What would be the best way of framing the upper part, which would be used as a threshing floor and hay-mows?

For a barn 35 x 60 feet, the posts 20 feet high, should be twelve inches square. If the bents are placed the following distances apart they make a very handy barn: First a mow eighteen feet, then a driveway of twelve feet, then another of fourteen feet, and one of sixteen feet, making in all sixty feet. In the fourteen feet space, beside the driveway, an overlay of six feet should be made; this gives a threshing floor eighteen feet wide and also room for a team to be taken out of the barn alongside of a loaded wagon.

Small Aids.

Cook scalloped potatoes in a hot oven.

Soak cauliflower an hour before cooking, head downward.

Make the vegetable salad of yesterday's and to-day's vegetables.

Trim cobs carefully before cooking. Never fry them unless breaded.

It is easy to keep a salad dressing on hand and it makes very many "cold bites" delicious.

Many a good man who contributes to foreign mission funds never even thinks of the heathen at home.

SCOTT'S SCHOOLS

LESSON IX, FEB. 26.

GOLDEN TEXT.—I am the living bread which came down from heaven.—John 6:51.

This lesson can be made vivid by causing the events to pass before the scholars as scenes in a moving panorama.

Scene I. Jesus Leaving Galilee for Philip's Kingdom Beyond Jordan.—V. 1; Matt. 14:1-3, 13; Mark 6:30, 31; Luke 9:7-10. 1. "After these things," How long the interval between John 5, our last lesson, and John 6, depends on the feast alluded to in John 5:1. "If it was Purim, only a month had elapsed; if it was Passover, a year." "Jesus went over the Sea of Galilee."

Scene II. The Gathering Multitudes.—Vs. 2-5. 2. "And a great multitude followed him." The multitudes came from two sources. (1) The multitudes of Capernaum and the other villages on the Galilean shore of the lake, restless and excited by the political atmosphere, followed him because they "saw his miracles (R. V., "the signs") which he did on them that were diseased."

2. The second source of the multitudes is shown in v. 5 when Jesus "saw a great company come unto him," not the same crowd as was mentioned in v. 2, else the article would have been inserted; but a Passover caravan coming from some other direction." (Expositor's Greek Testament), perhaps from the roads east of the Jordan and the lake, on their way to Jerusalem.

Scene III. A Day with Jesus.—V. 3; Matt. 14:14; Mark 6:34; Luke 9:11. "Jesus went up into a mountain." The mountain that rises from the plain back from the lake. He and his disciples came into this region before the crowds could reach the plain by the long road around the shore. It is probable that Jesus also called his disciples apart from the multitudes in the afternoon, after his busy work for the people. "And there he sat with his disciples." Here in seclusion they could rest, and report more fully what they had done on the evangelizing tour from which they had just returned; could talk over their plans, their successes, their mistakes and receive the instruction they would soon need as to the true way of preaching the gospel to the world, and as to the gospel they should preach.

Scene IV. The Hungering Multitudes.—V. 5. "When Jesus then lifted up his eyes." On the mountain side where he was talking with his disciples. "And saw a great company come." Apparently another one in addition to those who had come from Capernaum and vicinity. These would add greatly to the number. The day was "wearing away," and was "far spent" (Matt. Mark, Luke). In this uninhabited place there was no opportunity to buy provisions. Many had come unsupplied, either in their haste, or because they did not know that Jesus was going into a desert place, or that they would remain so long. The need was therefore great, and real, though in their enthusiasm they may not have realized it till quite late.

Scene V. Jesus and His Disciples Considering the Situation.—Vs. 5-9. Jesus "saith unto Philip." Why was Philip the one singled out from the disciples for this purpose? In v. 6 it is stated that "he said this to prove him," to test him, not for counsel or advice. Jesus was in no perplexity, "It was not bread he sought from Philip, but faith," says Augustine. It was to lead him and the other disciples to understand Jesus better and to trust him more. The process of testing both showed him himself, and then strengthened the good.

Jesus (speaking to Philip, whose home was at Bethsaida, and who, therefore, was acquainted with the region and the people). "Whence shall we buy bread that these may eat?" (John).

Philip. "Two hundred pennyworth ($32.00) of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little" (John).

The Apostles. "Send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge and get victuals" (Luke).

Jesus. "Give them to eat" (Luke).

The Apostles. "Shall we go and buy two hundred pennyworth of bread, and give them to eat?" (Mark).

Jesus. "How many loaves have ye? go and see" (Mark).

Andrew. "There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes."

Philip. "Five barley loaves." Or round, flat cakes like large crackers. Barley was the poorest food of the people. The lad probably brought them for his own lunch, possibly to find a market for them. "Two small fishes."

Scene VI. Feeding of the Multitudes by the Miraculous Power of Jesus.—Vs. 10, 11. 10. "Make the men sit down." For three reasons: (1) That there might be no unnecessary crowding, with the disasters and crushing of the weak, which would naturally follow a rush; (2) "that they might understand they were to have a full meal and not a mere bite they could take in their hand in passing" (Exp. Greek Test.); (3) for the convenience of distribution, so that none should be overlooked. "Now there was much grass in the place." The grass was luxuriant at this time.

11. "Jesus took the loaves," which were in the form of thin cakes or crackers. "Given thanks." In Mark

Faith a Necessity.

Abraham believed, and, committing himself to his faith, he went out, not knowing whether he went. If he had known, declared Prof. Drummond, he would not have believed. If the spiritual world were mapped out to us, it could hardly be said that we believe. Faith strikes its roots into darkness. Take up its roots to examine them, and it would be like unearthing the roots of a tree. It would die.

The Shadow of Life.

We must all go in the shadow some time. The glare of the daylight is too brilliant. Our eyes become injured and unable to discern the delicate shades of color or appreciate neutral tints—the shadowed chamber of sickness, the shadowed house of mourning, the shadowed life from which the sunlight has gone. Fear not. It is the shadow of God's hand. He is leading you.

God's love for the lost has kept the world from the loss of all love.

When the worst comes to the worst, it is best to make the best of it.

Eggs are very easily digested. Raw eggs are more quickly digested than cooked eggs. Soft-boiled eggs, roasted eggs and poached eggs are more easily digested than fried or hard-boiled eggs. The stomach will digest a raw egg in from one and a half to two hours.

What is Energy?

Two men talking over what happened ten years ago, when they failed to make a pet plan work, decided that they had been right in every way except having enough energy. Energy is part of executive ability.—From "Short Talks" by Earl M. Pratt.

When Nerves Are Distressed.

That sinking sensation is due to the effects of indigestion, grief or nervous depression from some cause or other acting upon the large, sympathetic nerves. Stimulants should be avoided, and great care exercised as to diet.

Dawn of Japanese Freedom.

It was only in 1866 that the Emperor repealed the law forbidding Japanese subjects to leave their own country. In 1900 there were 124,000 Japanese living abroad, fifteen of whom were in Russia.

A Russian bride is not submitted to the trying ordeal of appearing in white satin and lace in broad daylight. The wedding takes place by candlelight in a drawing-room.

Apples in China.

Apples, in central China, are soft, lack flavor, and have no-keeping qualities. Imported American varieties are doing comparatively well, but soon lose their best qualities.

A Foregone Conclusion.

When a husband and wife are both of one mind it isn't a difficult task to figure out which originally owned the mind.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Swore on His Own Bible.

A cautious grand juror at the Old Bailey, London, brought his own Bible with him, to be sworn upon and so took no risk of microbes.

Back to the Sell.

At an agricultural dinner the following toast was given:—"The game of fortune! Shume the cards as you will, spades must win."

CURES STOMACH TROUBLES

THE body gets its life from food properly digested. Healthy digestion means pure blood for the body, but stomach troubles arise from carelessness in eating and stomach disorders upset the entire system. Improperly masticated food sours on the stomach, causing distressing pains, belching and nausea. When over-eating is persisted in the stomach becomes weakened and dyspepsia and dyspepsia claims the victim.

Theodore's Black-Draught cures dyspepsia. It frees the stomach and bowels of congested matter and gives the stomach new life. The stomach is quickly invigorated and the daily stimulation results in a good appetite, with the power to thoroughly digest food.

You can build up your stomach with this mild and natural remedy. Try Theodore's Black-Draught today. You can buy a package from your druggist or, if he does not keep it, send the money to The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., and a package will be mailed you.
