Bits of News Gathered Here and There About the State and Briefly Told For Busy Readers.

Attorney General Bird, who recently notified the surety bondsmen of Frank P. Glazier that they would be held to ecount for the full amount of the onds securing the state against loss through irregularities committed by the deposed state treasurer Friday morning received a telegram from the American Surety Co., of New York that they have shipped the amount called for by their contract. This is $50,000 with interest. The department soo, you with interest. The department expects that the other companies on Glazier's bond will likewise come to the front. The total of the surety is $200,000.

With this load he hit the trail for the wide, wide world, but soon was overcome with a desire for sleep and peaceful dreams. He was found slumbering by the roadside and Judge Nelso falled. He refuses to give his name but the officers call him Philup.

Who Was She?

A woman, who gave the name of Edith Smith, died in Hamburg township, Livingston county, February 5. Secretary Tyrrell, of the poor commission, believed she was the grand-daughter of the late Col. Jerome B. daugnter of the late Col. Jerome B. Eaton, once mayor of lackson, and she was buried as such. The story was printed and both Mrs. Edith Smith, now Mrs. Bonnell of Sturfgis, and her divorced husband, A. B. Smith, a divorced hisband, A. B. Smith a Grand Rapids traveling man, read it. Mrs. Bonnell came to deny the report and her husband to look after the body. They met in a telegraph office.

Telephone Franchises.

Another fight will come in the constitutional convention on the proposal compelling public utility companies, and especially telephone companies, to franchise rights in cities, villages townships. H. P. Stewart, of St. Joseph, will attempt to have town-ships stricken out. He is attorney for an independent telephone company in the southwestern part of the state.

The Wisconsin & Michigan Rati road company may get a readjusted assessment of its property which was valued at $1,500,000. This year the tax commission, after looking over the road, reduced the assessment to $750,-000 and Prof. M. E. The man charged with manataughter in the collision on Main street last September and James Hill, charged with old constitution has been retained, including taxation.

Some of the persons in authority at the grand jury investigation of former State Treasurer Frank P. Glazier asserted that two indictments will be brought against the Chelsea man, as esult of the findings. It was declared that the true bills will embody embezzlement and fraud. However, Glazier's friends staunchly refused to take cog nizance of that talk and up to the wind-up of the inquiry looked for no sensations.

While nothing came out of the jury room, everything was so matter of fact and perfunctory that it seemed to be all over but the filing of the important apers.

Judge Wiest in his charge specifical y pointed out actions which would constitute violations of laws and witsses have testified that Mr. Glazier committed these acts. Therefore an indictment was said to be the only ogical conclusion.

Under the statute the jury can return indictments at any time while it is sitting. It is customary to wait until just before the closing sessions and then return the indictments in a bunch. But a different course may be pursued with reference to Glazier. The case is well known, and it is not like ly that Glazier will attempt to avoid facing a court if indicted.

Gov. Warner was a witness before the grand jury investigating the al-leged attempt of the binder twine trust to bribe Michigan senators, and which also is inquiring into the official conduct of ex-State Treasurer Frank P. Glazier. He was fortified with letters, figures and papers to substantiate his statements. He had copies of letters written to Glazier in regard to state deposits, some of which have been published. As a result of the givernor's testimony, it is said, subpoenas were issued for prominent men the following day.

Auditor General Bradley, Secretary State Prescott and State Land Commissioner Rose testified regarding their knowledge of the handling of state funds during the term of office of former State Trea arer Glazier, who recently failed in business and who resigned upon demand of Gov. Warner.

Content to Remain in State. *

Every once in awhile some enthusi-ast of the idea revives the time-honored proposition of detaching the upper peninsula from the rest of Mich igan and forming a separate state to be known as "Superior:" The great bulk of the people of the territory north and west of the Straits of Mack inac are well content to continue as residents of the Wolverine commonvealth. The overwhelming sentiment was given expression in the constitutional convention when in the course of an eloquent speech Attorney R. C. Flannigan of Norway, one of the three. torial district, offered the suggestion forever eliminated from the constitution. There are some believers in the statehood idea, particularly in the eastern end of the peninsula, but the whole population considered their numbers constitute a very measure proportion. In any event, the people of lower Michigan would never con-sent to the secession these advocates suggest. As far as the territory is concerned, the upper peninsula is amply big enough for a state. The of its 15 counties, which contain in all some 18,000 square larger than that of four of the smaller eastern states put together. Marquette county alone is greater in extent than Rhode Island. But in all the region there are only 300,000 people.

Did Wheat Suffer in January?

Crop correspondents do not as to whether wheat suffered injury from any cause during January. Replies to this question received by the ecretary of state from the southern counties disagree, 138 answering "yes" and 21 "no." A majority of the orrespondents from northern coun ties report damage to wheat. The crop report says that the average condition of live stock in the state is good.

T. E. Wood, cashier of the Chelses Savings bank and the man who was closest to the financial operations of Frank P. Glazier, was the first witness to be called to the grand jury room at Mason when the jury convened Tuesday morning, though C. J. Barnett, controller of Bay City, had been announced as the witness and was on the ground waiting.

Wood was cashier of the Chelsea Savings bank during the entire regime of Glazier as the president of the now defunct institution. It was he who made up the minutes of the meetings. T. E. Wood, cashier of the Chelses

Governor Warner and Prosecuting Attorney Foster, of Lansing, who are directing the investigations of the grand jury, returned from Chicago, where they had a long conference with high officials of the American Harvest-ing Co, over the alleged attempt of certain legislators last winter to exact pay for the promised killing of the bill to install a binder twine plant in Jackson prison. Both the governor and Prosecuting Attorney Foster decline to say whether or not the conference with the officials gave them any further information than the governor got on his first visit. There is a rumor, though, that while they might not have gotten all they would like they have not by any means returned empty-handed. Also that when the grand jury shall have concluded its work the prosecutor appear well satisfied over their trip.

The 1908 flood of the River Raisin has passed into history, going as rapidly as it came, but leaving a path of desolation, damage and ice cakes be hind it. Cattle, pigs and poultry have been swept away on the flood and drowned, fences were carried away residents fled from their homes and abandoned their property until the flood recedes. Their fear was no mere-selfish pasgentle, motherly woman, would sit ocking in the sunny porch, and thinking, thinking, thinking, of what Stony-Lonesome would be without "Lyddy." Far worse than this, to John Cassidy, was a black horror of Boston, which was a black horror of Boston, which lay like a nightmare on his soul. He loved Lydia with all the pent-up force of a grim undemonstrative nature; yet the thought of his own pain at losing the sunshine of her presence hard fouched him. His dreams were racked with visions of Lydia's ruin-ie had never seen a city; and he had imagination. In his eyes Boston was a sort of Babylon, where vice, in grotesquely leering shapes (fashioned from boyish memories of an illustrated copy of the "Pilgrim's Progress"), caught openly in the streets at the white skirts of innocence. Lydia knew that her grandfather hated Boston with a hate that would endure no argument; and she knew that her grandmother also trembled however, was far indeed from her emotest guess. The old, old tragedy was at the foundation of it. Lydia's mother, grown heartsick at 18 with the bright desolation of Stony-Lonesome, had shaken off restraint and fled away to Boston. After two years at service there she had come back t Stony-Lonesome, broken with pain sching heart, had striven to comfort itter months, had held sternly aloof of love and grief which she had pitifully tried to soothe, he had taken her child to his heart with a consuming devotion.
