VOL 52 MANCHESTER, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, MAY 9, 1918 NO. 39

If German autocracy is victorious, we see France crushed and dying: Russia a fragment; England at one side, sharing the fate of ancient Venice; once a maritime power like England, but short of her glory, left with nothing but bitter memories to point to this one time power. If that came about, the only country in the world holding out any promise of liberty would be this country, and we must question gravely, if, in the end, this country, too, would not bow to the yoke. I do not believe we could stand long against a power that had conquered modern Europe. On the other hand, if Germany loses, she will never regain the power she has had.

SAYS SMILE AND SAVE

This is Advice to Americans of Jean Picard, One of Heroes of the Struggle at The Marne.

"I want to tell you mothers something. You must smile. You must be cheerful. I have personally known one case and heard of others, where American soldiers in France have actually been killed by their mother's letters. You must make your letters cheerful," said M. Jean Picard, veteran of the Battle of the Marne, who spoke at an audience in Ann Arbor last week.

Another bit of advice he gave American mothers was this: "Don't send money to your boys over there. The main trouble with American boys is that they have too much money to spend," said he and he went on to tell that the American soldier was the best paid soldier in the world, and that even after deducting insurance and other necessary expenses from his monthly pay check, he would have between $7.00 and $8.00 a month left for spending money, which according to M. Picard is enough and to spare.

"Your American boys have too much money to spend and too little knowledge of what to do with it. Each time you mothers send your sons a ten-dollar bill you send him $10.00 worth of trouble. If you want to give your boy $10.00 a month buy war savings stamps or war certificates, and save them for him when he gets back.

"Don't worry about your boys in France. Your boys in France will be just as comfortable as it is possible to make any American boys in France."

He urged the young man who will be going to war to study French. "If you are going to be officers, it will be absolutely necessary that you know French," said he and he added that it would be a great advantage for any soldier to know French. "If you are an officer, it will be necessary for you to speak the French language, when you go into a new town, and have to billet your men. If you try to speak to those French people in English, the war will be over before you make them understand what you want.

"One thing you must keep in your mind, you young men, is this: That you are going to France to fight, not for a picnic.

"France for nearly four years has fought, and she has fought with a smile. Not a family in France today that is not mourning some one of its flesh and blood, and yet on every Frenchman's face and on the face of every French woman, there is always a smile. If they must weep they weep in private, but they keep on smiling in this kind of war, once you remember that, being right, we cannot be beaten. We have known it France ever since the Battle of the Marne, that whatever the length of the war, Germany was wrecked. We don't talk about how long the war will last, we of France, but over here you are always asking that question, even your officers in the army camps have asked me that, and I tell you, as I have told those officers, 'It's up to you how long the war lasts.' There is one way to make it shorter and that way is to fight it harder. The harder we fight the shorter the war, and that is the only way. It's up to you, you know."

Drivers of automobiles have this spring agreed that the roads were good—that is, they were comparatively good. Owing to the absence of the usual heavy spring rains, the track dried out quickly and there was less of deep mud and consequently at this time there are no bad ruts. But a large part of the good condition of the roads is due to the weather and is not the result of the work done on them. On the hard, dry roads there are plenty of humps, bumps and "thank-you-mams" which indicate indifferent work or no work after the gravel was dumped on the road from the wagons. It seems a shame when one strikes a piece of road with all the material and grade conditions present that a little more work to smooth out the fresh gravel had not been put on at the right time—or that the bumps which were the result of wet weather were not ironed out before the track was so dry that scraping was impossible. People are so interested in traveling by auto these days that the universal question is "how are the roads?" which shows that good roads is an absorbing topic and any community not so interested and not disposed to be a little better than the others in the matter of roads is not living up to present day needs.

If the American army enters Berlin, its historic monuments and art treasures will be safeguarded, its houses and shops protected, and its women treated with respect and courtesy, declared Chauncey M. Depew, at a reception given by the Montauk club of Brooklyn to celebrate his 55th birthday. "The German people will be summoned to form a government by which they will in any form they wish," Mr. Depew said, "but upon lines which will for the present and future remove the threat of a militarism that imperils the peace of the world. Has it ever occurred to you that this tragedy through which we are passing will obliterate all past history? We feel it already. History will date from 1914. The literature to be inspired by the world's greatest date from that time."

SEIZING HOARDED WHEAT.

These men who had refused to dispose of their wheat as requested by the governor, those who had a large quantity on hand, more than they needed, finally had to submit to legal authority and when brought face to face with the strong arm of the law backed by the government, they quite willingly complied, or rather allowed the officers to take the wheat without resistance. Wheat that had been hoarded for several years was about worthless.

"Washtenaw's Character Factory," as the county Y. M. C. A. is called, has begun oration. Lewis C. Reimann, one of X's of the U. of M. football stars of 1914 and 1915, has arrived in Ypsilanti where the Washtenaw county committee of the Y. M. C. A. will have its planning for a permanent county-wide work among boys from twelve years up.

Some city boys are willing to go into the country and work on farms, but they are so "green" that they don't know how to harness a horse, and farmers think that they are no good. We well remember the time when Germans came to this country seeking employment, who were as "green" as that, yet they made good.

MAY CHOOSE ANTHEM

Resolution Before Congress For Purpose Expected to Have Little Opposition.

Washington, D. C.—After nearly a century and a half of delay the United States seems about to acquire a national anthem.

"The Star Spangled Banner" would be adopted as the officially recognized hymn of the republic under a resolution by Representative McFadden of Pennsylvania now pending in the house. Little, if any, opposition is expected.

Army and navy regulations long have designated "The Star Spangled Banner" as the official anthem and provide that officers and men shall stand at attention while it is being played or sung, but the country at large has been left to its own taste in the matter of selecting an appropriate hymn for patriotic occasions. Thus "The Star Spangled Banner" has been widely accepted by the American public as the representative hymn of the nation and patriotic societies for many years have been agitating for its official adoption.

Every land has a national anthem identified inseparably with its life. The sonorous strains of the Marseillaise breathe the indomitable spirit, the achievements and the aspiration of France. While going down in vessels England's sons have sung "God Save the King" or "Rule Britannia," and even the iron hand of Germany in Belgium has been unable to put a silence entirely on the melody of "Barabanconne." The Italians sing Garibaldi's hymn, while the Irish and Scotch have a veritable treasure trove of stirring war songs.

Attempts to find a suitable national air for the United States have not been few. Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of melodies have been written in an effort to meet the demand, yet the inspired lines written by Francis Scott Key, as while a prisoner on board a British frigate, he watched the unsuccessful bombardment of Fort M'Henry, near Baltimore in 1814, are widely regarded as nearer than any other to meeting the appeal.

"America" has a powerful hold on the people of this country, but it is considered by many unsuitable for official recognition because its melody is identical with that of England's "God Save the King." "Yankee Doodle," although sung through all the nation's wars, is thought too light and in the south, at least, is unfortunately believed to carry a note of sectionalism.

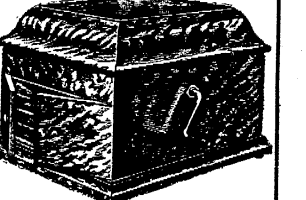

The majestic "Battle Hymn of the Republic," musicians claim, falls short of the standard while "The Star Flag" and others also are said to be unsuitable. "Dixie," although carrying a powerful emotional appeal, is acknowledged to be peculiarly the song of the south.

The music of "The Star Spangled Banner" has been adversely criticised because its wide range makes its singing difficult for the average crowd, yet its appeal has increased through a century to the point where it would be difficult to displace it in the affections of the American people.

There is to be distributed to the several counties of Michigan $773,589.90 which is one half of all the automobile license fees collected by the state this year. The state gets the other half and $39,991.77 which is for non-resident fees, transfers, etc. Jackson county will get $19,625; Lenawee, $17,982; Washtenaw, $18,710.

Michigan potato growers, especially those up-state, held hundreds of carloads of potatoes last fall for higher prices and are sure to experience a heavy loss.
