Caseville Board seeks renewal & increase

SWARTZENDRUBER

For the first time in more than a dozen years, Caseville Public School is seeking a millage increase

After a lengthy discussion on the proposed 1984-85 budget, the Caseville School Board at the March 19 regular meeting agreed four mills are needed to operate the school next year. Two mills represent a renewal, and an additional two mills are each sought for a period of five years.

Board members were unanimous in support of the increase, says Superintendent James Stahl.

Although supporting the millage increase, Board member Helen Kopack voted against the proposal only because she objected to the five year length of the increase, Stahl says. Kopack felt the five year additional millage represented too long a period of time, he adds.

The current 161/4 mills is actually a reduction from the 1814 assessed in 1976, Stahl says. "We have not had an increase for as long as I can remember," states the Caseville Superintendent. The books were checked as far back as 1971 with no millage increase found, Stahl adds.

The millage question will be determined by voters at the annual election slated for June 11. The seats on the Board of President Kenneth Hill and trustee Helen Kopack will also be up for election at that time. Both incumbents are seeking reelection.

Petitions for the two Board positions are available in the Superintendent's office. The filing deadline for petitions is 4 p.m. on April 9, notes Stahl FUTURE LEADERS? A team of six future minded Caseville Elementary students discussed involvement with a problem-solving competition.

Colleen Ballard, Penny Murdoch, Teri Cassada, Lamont Lenar, Jamie Winkler and Brian Kraus from grades 4-6 explained their participation in the Michigan Future Problem Solving group. The educa-tional experience offers competition between various schools in the state to propose solutions to future problems.

Some of the issues researched by the group were:
"Protection of the Great Lakes," "Prisons in the Year 2001" and "lasers."

Other bands at the district competition which qualified for the state festival include: Bad Axe, Deckerville, Harbor Beach and Reese in Class C and Owen-Gage and Kingston in Class D.

STATE CHAMPIONSI The Laker High School Demonstration Team won first place honors in Michigan Future Farmers of America state competition last Thursday and Friday, as they demonstrated "the brood sow care at farrowing."

The team, whose members are, above from left, Mike Voelker, Barry Maust and Chad Seley, used a life-size model of a sow and baby pigs - complete with curly-cue tails.

Laker FFA Advisor Don Wheeler says this is only the third state championship ever won by his students. Inspector Gordo's Minute Mystery THE CASE OF THE

Foot-footed sleuth

"I suppose the Brandywine case is the only murder ever solved with the help of a chipmunk," said Inspector Gordo.
"Sounds fascinating! Tell me about it!" begged Deedra. "A highway patrolman," began the inspector, "was driving in a sudden thunderstorm on Riverside Drive when he spied an old, blue convertible, top down, parked on a dirt side

"The fact that the convertible was empty, yet the horn was honking in wild spurts, caused the officer to investigate. "The mystery seemed closed when he discovered a chipmunk had caught its hind leg in the horn mechanism. The officer freed the poor creature and as a matter of course noted down the car's license number. "Two weeks later the body of Lea Rosewine was found on the other side of the hill from the spot at which the convertible had been parked. Death, due to strangulation, had occurred about the day the convertible was sighted.

'The police back checked and questioned the car's owner, Doug Oscar, a pipe fitter. He admitted being out by the lake. However, he said he'd left the convertible when he couldn't start it. He denied leaving the car to hide the body.

"Phil Tacom, manager of Diamond Garage, said Oscar telephoned him to get the car. Tacom found the battery absolutely dead and towed the car back to town.

"Tacom and the police agreed Oscar was making his call about the time the convertible was found by the policeman. "Now," concluded Gordo. "I was quite sure Doug was lying -- that he probably was off hiding the body of Miss Rosewine when the patrolman spied the car.' What was the giveaway? •

THREE DIE IN CRASH

Three persons died in a two-car accident last Wednesday afternoon on M-142 between Bad Axe and Harbor Beach. Dead are Flora Johnson, 47, and Kevin L. Johnson, 15, both of Port Hope, and Franklin D. Simons, 62, of Midland.

They were declared dead at the scene near Parisville Road about 4:45 p.m., after the 3:50 p.m. crash, Michigan State Troopers from the Bad Axe Post said. Simons was westbound on M-142 with the Johnsons as passengers when his auto collided with the eastbound vehicle driven by Bryce M. Volmering, 17, of Harbor Beach. He is reported in critical condition t St. Mary's Hospital, Saginaw, with head wounds.

No witnesses saw the accident on the snow-covered roadway, and none of the victims were wearing seat belts, police say. These are the second, third and fourth traffic fatalities in Huron County in 1984.

But Huron County Circuit Judge M. Richard Knoblock ruled such testimony may be allowed by Owendale farmer Roger Haley and others, who are claiming PCB contamination of three concrete silos on the Haley farm.

Haley said he and his wife have PCBs in their bodies now, after 1977 tests showed the expected cancer-causing substance was in their fat tissues. The family quit dairy farning then and filed their lawsuit.

Cross-examination by defense attorneys is scheduled this week, as lawyers for Monsanto, C&B Silo and others expect to question Haley's farming abilities, adding current PCB levels are not health threats to the family.

Nine female jurors are hearing the suit, but only six will decide the case. Judge Knoblock will randomly dismiss three jurors when all arguments have been presented, expected

Good news about a bad habit

recent announcement from the U.S. Department of Agriculture should be greeted as good news, even though some "farmers" may not agree. Per-capita cigarette smoking by Americans declined to a 34-year low in 1983 -- and will probably decline again this year, the USDA says.

Average per-capita consumption was 3494 cigarettes last year-- about 175 packs of 20 each for every adult in the nation. Since an estimated two-thirds of adults don't smoke -that's a whopping total of more than a pack a day for those who do.

But the good news is those figures are down from 1982, by about 7%. In all, per-capita cigarette consumption has dropped 20% in the last 20 years, since the U.S. Surgeon General first linked smoking and several health problems in 1963.

There are many reasons people are smoking less -- or at least why fewer people are smoking than in past years. First, cigarette prices have been steadily rising, while buying power for most of us has been standing still or dropping. Cigarette taxes have been going up, too. Finally, perhaps more and more folks are just realizing the habit isn't good for them.

What's frustrating is that tobacco growers continue to maintain a stranglehold on price supports from our Washington lawmakers. They keep getting help in raising a crop which
-- in actuality -- should be outlawed, in our opi-

But they're powerful lobbyists, and so tobacco growers generally get what they want in government aid. Why can't the rest of our farming community have such clout?!

But, we should be grateful for the good signs, at least. Overall cigarette use dropped about 5% last year, to about 600 billion smokes. What is extremely frustrating is that the one-third of us who consume that incredible amount of cigarettes aren't doing themselves any good at all -- and they're polluting the air for nonsmokers at the same time.

Maybe the on-going "stop smoking" ad campaigns will bring even more reductions in future years. We can only hope so. Besides being a dirty, smelly and messy habit, cigarette smoking isn't good for you. Still, the alure for those wisps of smoke holds millions of folks

And cigarettes aren't even good for you!

As boys, we went to the same church and Sunday School. We boys used to sit with our Dads, 'til we were old enough to behave. Joe sat with his Dad 'til he was old enough to sing bass.

When we grew up, we went to a lot of places together and always got along well. One time, a group of us young fellows were together and we made out that the first one of us who got married was to give the rest of us $1. The next one was to give the rest $1 and so on, until the last one.

Joe got married the third last and so he was to give me and John Steckley each $1. He didn't have the change, so Orpha had a $2 bill. She gave it to us and I gave John a $1 bill and kept the $2 bill.

And I still have it. Joe was Sunday School teacher for many years and loved to sing. He was always there when there was a meeting of any kind. It says in Prov. 18:24. "a man that hath friends must show himself friendly and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother." Joe did that, and had many

Spending spring break, or at least part of it, at a school is not very exciting. Believe me, a college campus over break is about as lively as a turtle disco dancing, and we all know that turtles seldom dance if ever disco

Yep, you could say campus is deserted. Most of the dorms completely shut down during spring break, and the library along with other campus buildings change open hours. So instead of a building being open all day and night, most buildings are open part of the day and closed at night.

As for people being on campus, well there just isn't anyone around. It's about the only time of the year that you can walk across campus and not see a soul!

If a college campus is so dead, you're probably wondering why anyone would want to even stay in town. Well, there are some advantages to being the only person in town -- it's peaceful, restful, but then so is a hospital!

No, the few people that do stay near campus either live in town or work in town over their spring break. Of course, there may be a few students who stay to study -haven't encountered any as of yet though.

If it's excitement you're looking for, you probably don't want to visit a college town over break. The place to be is in the sun, and this week I take off for a week in Acapulco -- Adios!

Be sure to have a super week!

The author of this column is a millionaire from Minneapolis whose motto is: "He who gives while he lives . also knows where it goes.' During his colorful career, he has accumulated many interesting ideas about peo ple along with personal wealth -- and he enjoys sharing both his ideas and his money with readers of 'Thanks a Million

Dear Mr. Ross:

I've been a widow for 21 years. My husband passed away when my last baby was seven months old. He left me with 11 children.

Five years ago God gave me one more little boy to raise and love. He is my grandson. His mom didn't want him because of all his problems. To me he is a gift from God. He is deaf and can't speak. He has cerebral palsy on his right side and is diabetic. I give him two insulin shots a day which runs around $60 per month.

He is a very previous little boy. We live on a check of $202 a month. I babysit for two families to make a little extra. My problem is I never have enough money to pay my bills and eat too.

What I'd like Mr. Ross is for one time to buy all the groceries I need for just one month. If you could help us it would be a blessing." -- M.S., Oklahoma.

Dear Mrs. S.: If your 11 children, who are now adults would each help you just a little every month, your life might be a little easier. I think they owe you. Invite them all over some Sunday and discuss your situation, as you have with me. I'm sure they will consider helping you.

In the meantime, the Bestyet Discount Food Store on N. Van Buren in Enid will send me the bill for your month's supply of groceries.

Dear Mr. Ross:

I can easily make a million dollars a year with some great ideas I have in mind. Last year at 17, 1 graduateď from high school with a B-plus average. I'm too smart to waste time at any ordinary job. You can be my one-third partner by investing only $3,000 for me to get started.

Will you send me the money now, before my ideas turn cold? - R.M.P., Illinois. Dear R. Thanks for the generous offer. You won't need a partner if you go to work and start saving for the $3,000 you need. Keep your ideas on the back burner. You'll be surprised how easily they can be warmed up again.

Dear Mr. Ross:

Would you please send me a crucifix I can hang on my my statue of the Blessed Virgin Mary restored? A piece of the statue was accidently chipped out many years ago.

I can't afford either of these. I have respiratory problems and my small disability check goes mostly to buy my life-saving medication.

It warms my heart to read what you have done for others and to know that someone cares. God bless you in your good work and for whatever you can do to help me. I will remember you continually in my prayers. --Mr. R.K., Washington.

Sharp as a knife

A number of years ago, while a member of a bow hunting club up north, I was privileged to accompany an experienced group of woodsmen in their search for a wounded buck. It seemed one of the younger members had solidly hit a nice four-point using the last available light of the day for the feat. Being somewhat knowledgeable of the work an arrow does after striking its quarry, the hunter got a good bearing on the spot he last saw the deer and headed back to town to round up some guys to help him search for the deer. As a new member, I was soon to learn this act was a ritual of the club and was instituted to allow others to share in a successful hunt. With the help of a number of willing members, a deer is rarely lost.

A band of six members, plus myself and the lucky hunter, gathered flashlight and Coleman lanterns and boarded the back of a pickup for transportation to the hunting site. Finding the location of the blind, the lights were generated, and forming a search line we moved into the darkness on the apparent line the deer had taken. An older gentleman was to my immediate right, and although I did now know him personally, I was aware of his prowess in the woods. As suspected, ne was the first to find a drop of blood and calling the others to the spot of the evidence, started to unfold a story of what the deer had done, and prospects of what he would Drop after drop of blood was discovered. One small blotch on a fallen leaf, another dab with a wisk of hair was found on a branch protruding into the trail. Soon the drops became small puddles, and an area of crushed vegetation indicated the deer had laid down for awhile. We moved over a slight rise, descended a drainage ditch partially filled with water and came upon a nice little four-point buck. Two of the guys hauled the deer to high ground while the rest of us took turns shaking the young hunter's hand and pounding him on the back.

"Well, don't just stand there," one of the fellows said, "get him gutted out."

The young hunter reached to his belt and produced a large, rather rusty-looking hunting knife. Turning the deer on its back, he prepared to plunge the blade in the deer's

"Hurump!!" the old man who had searched beside me snorted, "I don't know about the rest of you, but I'm not going to stand here and let this young whipper-snapper ruin good venison. Get out of here," he commanded and took a stand straddling the

Out of his back pocket he produced a small folding knife. Laying it on a nearby stump, he then brought out a small leather case and withdrew a rectangular whetstone, a small steel shaft with a wood handle, and a roll of soft leather. The rest of the group crowded in and I pressed forward, sensitive to the fact I was about to see an expert in

He unfolded the knife and p whetstone. Spitting on the stone, he began to work the knife blade against it, first away from him and then towards him. He used even, calculating strokes which looked like he was trying to shave off a thin layer of the stone. After a dozen strokes, he laid the stone down and picked up the steel shaft. Working the blade against the edge of the shaft, he alternated his knife from one side to the other. After checking the edge with the flat side of this thumb, he picked up the roll of leather. It resembled a soft belt and he dropped one end to the ground and stepped on it. Pulling the other end tight, he worked his knife back and forth across the

Finally satisfied with the edge, he stepped back to the deer and inserted the knife at the bast of the rib-cage. Using the first two fingers on his left hand to hold the flesh and skin above the cavity contents, he made a neat surgeon's cut the length of the belly. His blade separated the flesh as easily as a hot knife passed through butter.

The remainder of the gutting job was a marvel to behold. The flashing knife spilled the visca on the ground and with the diaphragm parted, it severed the windpipe and extracted the vital organs. It passed through the stringy tendons that surround the anal area as though they were Jello.

The remainder of the gutting job was a marvel to behold. The flashing knife spilled the visca on the ground and with the diaphragm parted, it severed the windpipe and extracted the vital organs. It passed through the stringy tendons that surround the anal area as though they were jello.

During the process, the old man must have stopped at least six to eight times. At each pause he would check the edge of his blade and touch it to the stone, steel or leather. It soon became apparent, the condition of his knife blade was the major reason for his success in cleaning the deer. And the condition was no accident, but the product of a well planned effort to insure the sharpness of his blade.

Since that night in the woods, I have become very conscious of the knives I carry, and their condition. I still am not able to create the perfect edge, but some of the ideas I have collected make my cutting and filleting chores much easier.

To begin with, a knife is only as good as the quality of steel used in making it. So, if you want a long-lasting, sharp edge on your blade, be prepared to spend a few bucks for your next knife. Look for the terms Sheffield, or carbon steel, both indicate the blade is made of high quality metal that compares with the steel that surgical instruments are made of. Stay away from stainless. It may look pretty, but it takes a poor edge. Most knife catalogs will explain the process and rate the blades.

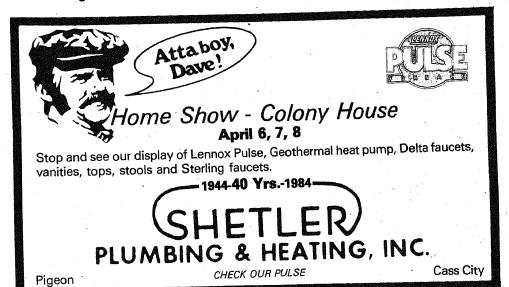

Next, buy yourself a good quality whetstone. I have found the Arkansas Washita Stone to be one of the best and is the favorite of most outdoorsmen I know. The Arkansas oilstone is quarried from deposits of the mineral Novaculite. It comes in different degrees of hardness, and the knowledgeable sportsman has both a fast cutting and hard stone in his honing gear.

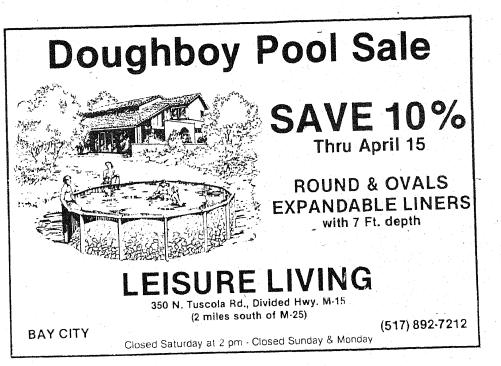

In preparation for sharpening his knife, a light oil should be spread on your stone. While many think this makes the blade slide more smoothly, the real reason for its use is to carry off the small bits of metal ground from the blade. Using the stone dry will se these minute pieces of steel to clog the pores of the stone and cut down on its abrasive action.

The knife should be placed with a 35° angle between the blade and the stone. Make a cutting stroke away from you, pulling the blade down and across the stone. Reverse the blade and duplicate the stroke in the opposite direction. It is important to alternate the blade every time so each side of the blade receives the same attention. Check the blade often with your thumb. When it feels sharp and free of burrs, stop. Many people ruin a good edge by sharpening

The next step is to construct a sanding block using a short piece of 2x2, around which you staple a sheet of #400 grit wet/dry emery paper. Use this device as a strap and alternately stroke the blade across this surface, away from the cutting edge. A few strokes will hone the edge to a degree that allows you to shave hair off your arm. When this occurs your blade is ready for use.

While there are many devices on the market that are supposed to save time, be careful when buying them. Most experts will tell you there are no shortcuts to a sharp blade. The combination of the two tools I explained, plus a little elbow grease will give you the edge you need in all you outdoor cutting situations.

LOW BACK, LEG AND GROIN PAIN

Disabling lower back, hip, thigh and leg pain are very common. Sacroiliac misalignments and subluxations of the lumbar vertebrae are the most common cause of this type of pain. Pain is felt in the areas receiving their nerve supply from the irritated nerves. Chiropractic adjustments can be the most effective method of correcting the cause of this type of pain.

that we have to make an evaluation. Joe has made progress in his work but, to me I feel that after two years we are just getting by. We have let our feelings and sympathy for his family over shadow his job and his performance of it. We have raised his salary in access of what I feel is reasonable for his performace. He's had two years in this position with part time help for the most of the past two years, plus two more part time helpers from the summer help. By his own admission he doesn't have enough time to get all the work done and keep the books up to date. I feel that if we let things go on as they are, we are going to prolong the agony of what is an inc Joe as Village Superintendent and I recommend that his employment be terminated effective April 1, 1984.

Clerk he will remain in that position. This is my recommendation to the council. The ball is in your lap.

Bay Port chili supper coming April 25

Plans were finalized for the second annual chili supper sponsored by the Community of Bay Port at the organization's regular meeting last Tuesday, Mar.

The chili dinner is slated for Saturday, April 25 from 4-7 p.m. at the Bay Port United Methodist Church. The meal will consist of chili, homemade breads. beverage and dessert, according to Henry Engelhard, publicity director for the Ticket prices for the allyou-can-eat fundraiser feature rates for adults, children in kindergarten through sixth grade and no charge for preschoolers.

The group is requesting donations of food and supplies to help defray expenses, Engelhard says. Last year, most of the hamburger was donated as well as all the bread, milk and other items, he adds.

Funds raised from the event are designated for betterment of the community of Bay Port. Some possible expenditures discussed at the meeting included cleaning up the Bay Port beach and a donation to the Meals on Wheels program.

Something To Think About

MENTION THE UNMENTIONABLE

There has been a recent trend, particularly among psychologists, in discussing and writing about death. Rather than being seen as a morbid development, the admission of death is actually considered rather healthy,

On the personal level, one can remove death from the list of unmentionable topcis by talking openly and frankly about funeral plans and making a Will. including your family and loved ones in such a discussion will ultimately do more to prevent pain and anguish than any discomfort saved by leaving them

Naturally, if you are married you should consult with your spouse. The same applies if you are a single adult living with a friend. You might be startled to find out that he or she often thought about the subject but was afraid to mention it to you for fear of being thought insensitive.
