ATTEND THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE THIS SUNDAY AND EVERY SUNDAY

We indulge in self-pity, lamenting our woes,
Plus the ones that have never occurred;
And forget the good fortune which everyone knows
The Almighty so often conferred.
Now the place of our worship will help us recall
That our gratitude should be restored;
So we don't need a special occasion at all
To acknowledge the love of the Lord.
Though we all have experienced trouble and strife,
Yet our lessons in faith will convey:
For the blessings we've had, every day of our life
Should be known as our Thanksgiving Day.

"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving...be thankful unto him, and bless his name."
—Psalm 100:4

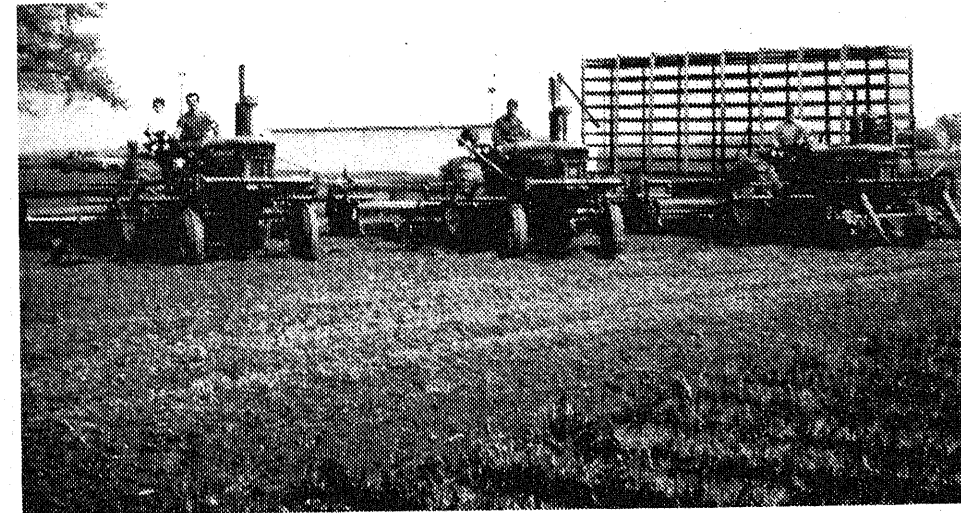

Praise God, from whom all blessings flow!
Praise Him, all creatures here below!

MARSP members give thanks at meal

A traditional Thanksgiving dinner was shared by 112 members of the Huron County Chapter of the Michigan Association of Retired School Personnel during their Nov. 11 meeting at Bad Axe First Presbyterian Church.

President Betty Zulauf presided over a business meeting that confirmed Grace Dunlap as acting treasurer in place of Alexandria MacRae, who is ill.

Afternoon speaker was Dorothy Hoover, who described details of House Bill 4558 and gave a synopsis of MARSP history. Members received a handout listing mailing addresses of state senators and representatives.

Next Huron County MARSP meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, April 20, at 11 a.m., at the Huron Area Skill Center, when nomination of officers will take place.

Bay Port celebrates Advent

60 SECONDS Total thankfulness

READ 1 PETER 13:9
Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits. Psalm 103:2

Hymns may often serve as our prayers. Hymnists frequently express the deepest longings of our hearts in language so telling that many of us would never have been able to say so well what is in our hearts. But when the hymn writer prays, "Forgive us, Lord, for shallow thankfulness," he may be touching a raw nerve in many of us.

'Cornerstone' plans church concert

"Cornerstone," a group of high school musicians sponsored by Bluewater Youth For Christ, plans its second public concert of the year this Sunday, Nov. 29 at 7 p.m. at the Michigan Avenue Mennonite Church. The public is welcome to attend.

Thanks for reading The Progress-Advance.

Lois Furness

On this Thanksgiving Day, may we bless the Lord and be mindful of ALL His benefits toward us — those that sustain our bodies and souls, both temporal and spiritual blessings. LORD, we can never thank You enough for all Your benefits to us. Accept our prayer and praise; for Jesus' sake. AMEN.

You're reading The Progress-Advance and we appreciate it.

Thanks A Million

BY PERCY ROSS

You may write to Percy Ross in care of The Progress-Advance, P.O. Box 35000, Minneapolis, MN 55435. Please include your telephone number with your letter.

DEAR MR. ROSS: You probably won't read my letter because you don't want to hear what I have to say. I have leukemia and diabetes with no hope of ever feeling "good" again. At best, I just make it through each day. With a family to raise and an unemployed husband, it's like trying to do the impossible. I owe $60,000 in medical bills, plus medicine that costs me $350 a month just to stay alive. For what?

When I read in the paper the things you give money for — it makes me sick. Never have I read of you helping someone like me — who lives in sickness and poverty.

Mr. Ross, the Lord does not like those who brag about themselves and all the good they've done. He wants to know of you helping someone that can really use the money to pay off real debts, such as hospital and medicine bills.

I pray someday that you, too, have all the same illnesses, no money and that no one cares enough to help you. — Mrs. A.J., Portland, Ore.

DEAR MRS. J.: There's a good portion of my mail I never share with my readers. This column is not intended to exploit the poor.

What personal gain is there in reading of extreme poverty and illness? Do you really want me to share the burden of tragedy? I think not.

I'm publishing your letter only to acknowledge I'm well aware of the desperation in many peoples' lives, as well as in your own. In sharing it with my readers, they too are aware of it, but it doesn't change your situation any. Awareness alone won't do it.

— you need compassion. And that's what this column is founded in — compassion. It's intended to create a feeling. A feeling of loving and helping your neighbor — whoever that may be.

So, it won't pay your $60,000 doctor bill, but the money I'm sending you will buy your medication for the next six months. It's not a "cure-all" solution to your problems, but rather a helping hand to shoulder some of the burden.

DEAR READERS: The following letter from a reader in Fort Myers, Fla. definitely merits the space in this column. It borders on being a 20th Century parable.

Naturally, I'm a little partial because it exemplifies my personal philosophy. I hope the message finds its way into your hearts, as it did mine.

DEAR MR. ROSS: The person who called your work a "flash in the pan" and "drop in the bucket" should have known my Mrs. Sipp.

When I was a young social worker, just taking on a case load in a new city, Mrs. Sipp was my first client. She was a tall, skinny black lady wearing a white sailor cap pulled down so far over her face, it seemed to cover her upper lip. I asked the interview by asking what was wrong.

She reluctantly explained: "We have no money. Our bed broke down last night. My daughter is pregnant and she isn't married. They're letting my brother out of the crazy house and sending him to my house. My upper plate broke. My husband lost his job and he doesn't know if he's madder about that, or my brother, or our daughter."

I was overwhelmed, as you must be sometimes. Mr. Ross. Then I had an idea I'd never been taught in all my training.

"Mrs. Sipp," I asked her, "what bothers you the very most?" She replied, "My broken plate. If I had it fixed, I could eat. If I could eat, I could think. Then I'd find a way around all the other stuff." That same day I found a kind dentist who fixed Mrs. Sipp's plate at no charge.

A week later I went to her HUD apartment. Her brother sat outside in a swing under a big shade tree. He didn't look too crazy; just a sweet old man. Mrs. Sipp invited me in to meet her four-day old granddaughter, a beautiful, healthy baby.

I learned they'd gone to Goodwill, who gave them a good bed and her husband a job driving a truck. Mrs. Sipp smiled at me and, as a closing note, revealed her intact uppers!

All I can say to you, Mr. Ross, is "All happiness to you with your wonderful 'flashes' and 'drops'!"

A different hunt

BY DUANE GUENTHER

Duck hunters are a breed of their own. Steeped in historic tradition, the methodology used by hunters becomes almost ritualistic. Techniques are developed, tested, nurtured and then passed from generation to generation.

Geography has much to do with the type of duck hunting employed. In the Northeast, sea ducks are hunted from powerfully-built skiffs and sneak boxes, many still using sail power to propel them to and from the hunting grounds. In the southern portions of the Mississippi watershed duck hunting is as simple as tossing out a half dozen Dekes and then hunkering down in the shadow of a Pin Oak to wait for spiraling Mallards to come crashing into your decoys.

Hunters from the northern part of the Midwest build elaborate shore blinds and entice both divers and puddle ducks within range by using long, tantalizing sets of decoys. But, one region probably has more styles of duck hunting than all the others—the Great Lakes.

Here, hunters can choose from layout shooting, sneak shooting, pass shooting, pothole shooting, jump shooting, or big blind shooting. Each has its own type of gear and unwritten set of rules. Having been born near Saginaw Bay, and coming from a duck hunting family, I am a good example of the "passed down" syndrome. My brothers were pothole hunters, and I grew up loving punt boats, wrap-around blinds, retrievers, Wildfowler decoys, Winchester Model 12's, Hodgman waders, and, of course, Black Ducks and Mallards. From time to time, I get the chance to hunt from different rigs, and such was the case during the first week of the 1987 waterfowl season.

My brother, Charlie, and I met our hosts, Al and Tom, at Dick's Live Bait, a hunting and fishing headquarters at the end of Geiger Road, just north of Sebewaing. Al is a native of the area and Tom a friend from Houston, TX. Al, like myself, was born and raised in a duck hunting family, but unlike me, his tenure was in the deep water blinds of Saginaw Bay. Therefore, I looked forward to the hunt as it promised to be a different diet from my usual duck hunting fare.

After a quick cup of coffee, we headed for the cut where Al's boat was docked.

Pigeon folks visit

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hamilton, Anthony and Andrea of Cottekill, N.Y. surprised their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Hamilton and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Guster on Saturday to spend the week, including the Thanksgiving holiday.

Mrs. Frank Deming and son Tom attended the final session of Family Support Bowling at Sebewaing Lanes on Sunday. Tom earned a third place trophy for his sporting efforts.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Snyder returned home Saturday after spending the week in Pontiac.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rathke wee in Sterling Heights on Thursday to spend the day with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rathke, Pamela and Kristine.

Mr. and Mrs. Carmen Strieter of Bay City were Tuesday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Collison.

Saturday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Diener were friends Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Weidmeyer and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Weidmeyer of Ann Arbor.

Having been born near Saginaw Bay, and coming from a good duck hunting family, I am a good example of the "passed down" syndrome.

Transporting guns and gear into the sturdy-looking 16-foot craft took a matter of minutes, and the 40-horse attached to the stern made short work of the trip to the blind.

Charlie and I, and a small mountain of gear were deposited in the shooting platform of the blind and we began to sort through the essentials while Tom and Al tossed out 50-odd decoys of the diving variety and topped them off with a small bunch of Mallards, and another of Canada Geese.

Back in the blind, the boat was cradled in a rope sling and hoisted free of the water, guns were encased, shells arranged in convenient little shelves facing each hunter, and hot coffee poured from thermoses nestled snugly nearby.

Dawn found the sky full of criss-crossing ducks. The large expanse of water, plus the use of binoculars, kept all 4 of us busy eyeing different flocks at the same time.

Within minutes the first small group buzzed our decoys. When I say buzzed, that's just what I mean. About 15 jet-powered Bluebills, with little intention of setting down, screamed out of the West and set their flaps just long enough to get our adrenalin pumping, and then highballed over the decoys and screamed out of range.

When I heard the command, "Let's take 'em," I rose to meet the hind ends of some fast-departing divers. The guns barked, a couple of cripples veered towards the water, and the shooting box was filled with exclamations and excuses. Al hopped into the lowered boat and managed to chase both cripples down. He returned to the blind with the dead Bluebills and a big smile plastered across his face.

"Well, how'd you like that kind of shooting?" Al questioned, still smiling from ear to ear. I didn't have time to answer. I was too busy digging into my box for more shells...

'Miracle Baby' Becky Bruce brings joy, tears to family

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Progress-Advance published a news article on April 1 about Becky Bruce, prior to a benefit planned for her family. Since that time, many readers have asked about "Baby Becky's" condition. This story is an "update" on Becky, who is now 15 months old.

Fifteen months ago on Aug. 15, 1986, Becky Bruce was born 3½ months prematurely to Mike and Pam Bruce of Elkton.

Since then Becky, who weighed only 1 lb. 4 oz. at birth, has had an uphill battle against many of the illnesses associated with prematurity, such as detached retinas, a disease of the bowel that required surgery to remove half of the damaged organ, damaged lungs, and simply failure to thrive. Survival for Becky and her parents has been a day-to-day struggle, but against all odds, Becky continues to make progress.

SIGNS OF PROGRESS: Even though Becky only weighs a little over 11 pounds and is nearly 24 inches long at the age of 15 months, not much bigger than a newborn baby, she has some of the features of a "normal" full-term 15 month old. (Parents of preemies call any baby that is full-term "normal", whether or not that baby has continuing problems.) She smiles at familiar faces, has five teeth, and she makes her displeasure known at things she doesn't like. Yet her development lags so that she can't roll over or sit up.

"She's such a happy baby, always smiling. She's not a difficult baby, personality-wise," says Pam. "Maybe because of all the poking and prodding that's had to be done to her, she really appreciates a gentle touch or to be simply left alone."

VORACIOUS APPETITE: Becky expends so many calories just trying to breathe, even with the help of nasal prongs which provide oxygen, that not many calories are used to gain weight. She eats one-and-a-half jars of baby food every four hours along with bottles of formula. "She eats like a pig, but she doesn't gain weight, maybe only a few ounces at a time," says her mother.

ON THE ROAD: Since Becky is susceptible to numerous infections and respiratory problems, emergency trips to the hospital are frequent. Pam estimates that young Becky has spent nearly half her life in either Children's Hospital in Detroit or St. Mary's Hospital in Saginaw.

Pam says that she makes a trip to Saginaw almost every week, sometimes two or three times a week. Nearly every regular appointment made at a doctor's office for a check-up has had to be canceled due to hospitalization. "Last week we actually made it to a regularly scheduled appointment and then came home," laughs Pam. "That's unusual for us."

SMALL THINGS: Parents of full-term infants and toddlers expect their children to walk and talk at certain times of life, and worry when those milestones don't occur. But when their toddler does begin to walk and talk, the accomplishment is soon taken for granted. Not so with baby Becky. "Any little normal thing that Becky does makes us ecstatic. I don't take anything for granted with Becky. When her first tooth came in, we nearly had a celebration!"

RESTRICTIONS: Pam says that Becky must be attended every minute of the day and must wear a monitor whenever she sleeps, because she still suffers from sleep apnea, a disorder in which she will stop breathing for short periods. Even to take a shower, Pam must have someone in the room to watch Becky since Pam may not hear the monitor's warning over the sound of the shower. "My family has been fantastic. If I need something, I call and they'll bring it. Of course, you can't just pick up your oxygen tank and run to the store for a loaf of bread or a gallon of milk." When Pam gets to the point when she feels totally overwhelmed, she relies on relatives to take over Becky's care so that she can have a few hours to herself.

DOCTORS GUARDED: Doctors refuse to give Mike and Pam a prognosis for Becky's future, simply because since so few babies of Becky's birth weight survive, they just don't know what to expect. Ultrasounds and CAT scans have shown no brain damage, and doctors won't know for sure about the extent of Becky's visual impairment until Becky herself can tell them what she can or cannot see. Becky's medical problems have slowed her physical development so that she is only in the fifth percentile of children her age. That means that 95% of children Becky's age are larger than she.

BECKY'S MOTHER, Pam Bruce of Elkton, enjoys a special closeness with her 15-month old, and doesn't take any of the "little things" for granted.

So Becky's parents live with uncertainty every day, but have never given up hope. "You don't know what's going to happen, but you live one day at a time. People ask me how I handle the stress and tension, and I tell them I don't have any choice. I couldn't live with myself if I gave up, or didn't give it my all. How can I do any less?"

AGENCY HELP: Becky's medical bills are paid by Crippled Children's program of Michigan, and because of her legal blindness, she may be eligible for Social Security benefits. A benefit held last April for Becky raised a sizeable sum which was deposited into an account in Becky's and her aunt Linda Smith's name. This money is used to pay bills that aren't covered by Crippled Children's, such as routine shots and radiologist bills. And in the future, Project Find administered by the Huron Intermediate School District, will arrange for any physical or visual therapy that Becky may need.

A MIRACLE: Although she's had a slow start in life and faces an uncertain future, Becky has smiles as sweet as any baby. Her birth and life have caused a lot of tension and heartache in the Bruce family, but it has also brought a lot of joy and a new appreciation for the miracle of life. "No matter what happens, we'll always love her. She's such an angel. Even parents of 'normal' children don't know what the future holds for their children. We just take things as they come and hope for the best."

BABY BECKY wears glasses to assist her vision, which has been damaged by her prematurity. Doctors don't know yet how much Becky is able to see.

Quilting . . .

A Tradition From Our Past Continues Today in Pigeon

By AMY HEIDEN

Longstanding traditions have a way of nearly dying out and then being resurrected. One such tradition enjoying a resurgence of popularity is quilting.

In the past 20 years or so, quilting has become popular again among craft fanciers. And justly so. Handmade quilts are not only beautiful and unique, but are proving to be hot-selling items at craft fairs. Quilt shows too, like the one conducted at the Pigeon District Library during the summer Farmers' Festival, are very well-attended.

SURVIVAL: Quilting has a very long history throughout the world. The oldest known quilt in existence is a Sicilian quilt of linen made toward the end of the 14th Century. From the very beginning, quilting was done as a matter of survival and economy. In early America, the early settlers used quilted material as bed curtains to keep out the worst of the winter cold in their unheated bedrooms. A fire in the room was simply not enough. The settlers found that two layers of fabric were stronger and warmer than just one. Scraps of fabric need not be thrown out, but could be pieced together to make a new cloth.

CREATIVE OUTLET: Quilting also provided one of the few creative outlets available for the early American family. It produced one of the few flamboyant elements in what was a very drab lifestyle. Women gathered together for "quilting bees", where they exchanged gossip, recipes, and patterns for quilts. They exchanged scraps of cloth to provide more variety and color in their own quilts. Sometimes the women were forced to quilt alone at home; and in such cases, the quilting frame was considered a permanent fixture in the home.

POPULAR IN PIGEON: Quilting has always been a way for women to socialize and this is true in the Pigeon area also. Proof of this is the large quilting class held Monday mornings at the Pigeon District Library led by Ann Marie Claubesch.

The class currently has 15 members, with a waiting list of 12. Although Claubesch admits to being a beginner herself, she is learning along with her class, using a Farm Journal Craft Book. "Three of us went to Bay City to attend a quilting class and we considered getting a teacher to come here, but we got brave and decided to do it ourselves," says Claubesch. "There are sewing circles at St. John's Lutheran and Pigeon River Mennonite Churches, but we thought that women who don't belong to those churches would like to learn to quilt. But I will say I never expected this much interest in a class."

EXPRESSION: Donna Orr, a member of the class, says that she got interested in quilting after attending a craft show and being impressed with the "fantastic work", but since she had no experience, a class was perfect for her. By contrast, Hilda Gremel of Sebawaing had plenty of experience sewing and had even taught sewing, but liked the additional challenge that quilting offered. SOCIALIZING: All the members agreed that quilting is a fun way to socialize with friends and to be creative. "It's a way of expressing yourself artistically, a form of creative adult education regardless of your age," says one class member. Indeed, the social aspect of quilting is also mentioned when talking to the ladies who quilt for the Schuerer Hospital Auxiliary.

QUILTING FOR A CAUSE: The hospital's auxiliary has raised over $1200 this past year quilting for customers who bring in treasured old quilts to be repaired, or making new quilts for customers who have neither the time nor the skills to make their own. These funds have gone to purchase needed equipment for the hospital.

A regular member of this group is Mrs. Lillian Leipprandt, a long-time member. "I used to wonder how my mother could sit all day and quilt, and now I understand why. It's a beautiful experience to create a quilt. And of course, it's good therapy for us to get together," says Mrs. Leipprandt.

The news has been so bad lately about Wall Street and everything, that you don't know if you should watch the 6 o'clock news and not be able to eat, or watch the 11 o'clock news and not be able to get to sleep!

On Saturday night (Halloween), we had between 85 and 90 trick or treaters at our door. Every one of them, from the tiny tots to what appeared to be Junior High School children, were so polite.

There was no crowding, and each one without fail said "thank you." They are a credit to their parents and to their school. Signed, Genevieve Holcomb, Elkton.

If there is anyone who wants old newspapers, please call SOUND-OFF and leave your number.

The Junior Class of Laker High School is having a bottle drive this Saturday, Nov. 28, starting at 10 a.m. To Elkton, Pigeon and Bay Port Area, please support your Laker Junior Class. Thank you.

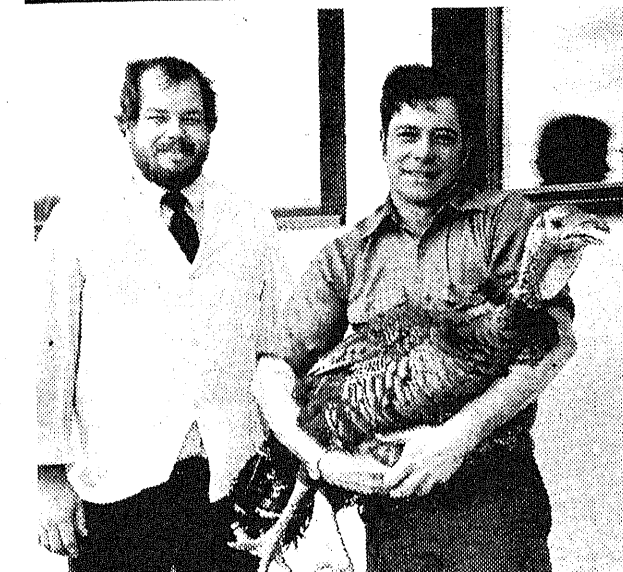

I just recently found out about a little trick you played on my father and little brother, slamming on your brakes purposely after passing them. My brother nearly went through the windshield of the semi-truck my father was driving and you got out of your car and laughed. Listen, buddy, if I ever see you again it will be too soon. Why don't you grow up? Signed, N.

I would like to have a Tupperware party and don't know the name of any dealers in the area. Are there any? Please reply to SOUND-OFF.

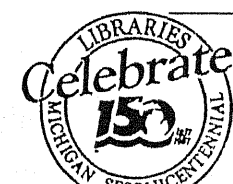

Do you know where your teenager is? I drove by a home Sunday morning and could not believe the mess I saw in that yard. TP? No. Trashed? Maybe. I actually stopped to look — TP, magazines, writing on sidewalks and windows is what I saw. And not a little, a lot. I don't know the family who lives there, but I don't know anyone who would like that or deserve it in their yard. Ask your teenager where they were on Saturday night. A hint: maybe they were on Pinnebog Road.

Happy Birthday, S.P., on Nov. 18. Love, You Know Who.

GIFTS YOU SHOULD GIVE

The very best gifts don't fit in a box, appear under a tree or come in a catalog. They come from the heart, like sponsoring a child in the Special Olympics or giving a dream to someone who has only dreams left.

Sometimes the things you think about the least are the things that matter most, like love, peace, hope and charity.

Wishes can come true. Make-A-Wish Foundation is for the thousands of children under age 18 who have life-threatening illnesses. The foundation needs your unique talent, service or donation. Contact: Make-A-Wish Foundation of America, 4601 N. 16th Street, Suite 205A, Phoenix, Ariz. 856016 or call 602-234-0960.

Or you can help mentally retarded children and adults unlock their potential and gain confidence in themselves through your support of the Special Olympics. Contact Eunice Kennedy Shriver, chairman, Special Olympics International, 1350 New York Ave., N.W. Suite 500, Washington D.C. 20005 or call 202-628-3630.

And your local library always has room for one more book. The novel you couldn't put down, the classic that changed your life. If you'd like to pass along your favorite books to others or donate money so that they can be purchased, contact the Pigeon District Library.

PRESCHOOL STORY HOUR

"Winter" will be the theme for the Dec. 1 Preschool Story Hour with the stories "The Snowy Day," "Cross Country Cat" and "Round Robin." Exercises, fingerplays, songs and a game will also be part of the activities.

Children are invited to participate in "Show and Tell," with each child bringing one toy to share. Children from age three to five are invited to attend either the 9 or 10:30 a.m. session. A registration fee is required per year.

SPECIAL TRIBUTE

James A. Barcia, state senator, presented a State of Michigan Special Tribute to former librarian Roberta J. Richmond, on July 26. She was honored on the occasion of her retirement with an Open House at the Pigeon District Library. The document now hangs in the Adult Fiction Room of the library. The document was signed by Governor James Blanchard, State Senator James Barcia and State Representative Dick Allen.
