America Celebrates National 4-H Week...

By Robert A. Johnson County Extension Director Huron County Huron County 4-H youth members and volunteers will celebrate National 4-H Week, October 3-9, 1993.

"You Can Touch the Future in 4-H" is the theme of Michigan's celebration of 79 years of 4-H youth programs. The theme reinforces the commitment of Michigan's 4-H Youth Programs to provide youths with opportunities and learning experiences that prepare them to become productive and involved citizens.

Huron County will join other Michigan counties in highlighting Michigan 4-H's contributions to positive youth development. In 1993, there are 200 adults volunteers working with 1222 youth in 58 4-H Clubs.

This is the 50th year that National 4-H Week has recognized the contributions of 4-H volunteers and the success of the youths they work with.

The first National 4-H Week celebration took place April 5-11, 1942, as National 4-H Mobilization Week. In 1962, the celebration moved to the first week in October. Today, the week seeks to highlight and garner support for the many programs and benefits provided by county 4-H youth programs in all 50 states and U.S. territories.

Four-H is the MSU Extension System's nonformal educational program for young people. The program brings together volunteer leaders; state land-grant universities; federal, state and local governments; and the U.S. Department of Agriculture to develop and deliver educational programming for young people. Four-H youth programs are Michigan 4-H Youth Programs, a division of Michigan State University Extension Children, Youth and Family Programs, involves 33,000 adult and teen volunteers in providing educational programs to more than 247,000 young people annually.

October 3 - October 9 4-H Proves Prevention Is Cheaper

As these statistics show, juvenile intervention is an expensive proposition for Michigan residents. Prevention can be a much more cost-efficient and effective way of providing positive alternatives for our young people.

Michigan 4-H Youth Programs is one youth development organization that focused on prevention. More than 247,000 young people are involved each year in Michigan 4-H, and the annual state cost per child is approximately $14. Nationally, more than 5.6 million young people are engaged in 4-H youth development activities that help prevent them from contributing to the increasing cost for juvenile intervention programs.

During National 4-H Week, Oct. 3-9, Michigan 4-H Youth Programs, the youth development component of Michigan State University Extension Children, Youth and Family Programs, is celebrating 79 years of positive youth development. This year's theme, "You Can Touch the Future in 4-H." focuses on helping young people understand and develop communications skills that help them appreciate the strengths found in the similarities and differences among all individuals, develop positive friendships and learn skills that help them better share this world with others.

Helping to develop these and other skills that young people need to become productive members of their communities is the goal of Michigan 4-H

Four-H youth development involves volunteers in providing positive, hands-on educational activities with and for young people ages 5 to 19. The common thread through all activities is to help young people develop positive decision-making, communication, learning and leadership skills.
