Early Rising.

"God bless the man that first invented sleep!"
So Sancho Panza said, and so say I;
And bless him also that he didn't keep
His great discovery to himself, or try
To make it—as the lucky fellow might—
A close monopoly by "patent right!"

Yes—bless the man that first invented sleep,
(I really can't avoid the iteration;)
But blast the man with curses loud and deep,
Whate'er the rascal's name, or age, or station,
Who first invented, and went round advertising
That artificial cut-off early rising!

"Rise with the lark, and with the lark to bed,"
Observes some solemn sentimental owl—
Maxims like these are very cheaply said;
But, ere you make yourself a fool or fowl,
Pray just inquire about their rise—and fall,
And whether larks have any beds at all.

The "time for honest folks to be abed"
Is in the morning, if I reckon right;
And he who cannot keep his precious head
Upon the pillow till it's fairly light,
And so enjoy his forty morning winks,
Is up to knavery; or else he drinks!

Thomson, who sung about the "Seasons," said
It was a glorious thing to rise in season;
But then he said it—lying—in his bed
At ten o'clock A. M.—the very reason
He wrote so charmingly. The simple fact is,
His preaching wasn't sanctioned by his practice.

'Tis doubtless well to be sometimes awake—
Awake to duty, and awake to truth—
But when, alas! a nice review we take
Of our best deeds and days, we find, in sooth,
The hours that leave the slightest cause to weep
Are those we passed in childhood or asleep!

'Tis beautiful to leave the world awhile
For the soft visions of the gentle night;
And free, at last, from mortal care or guile,
To live, as only in the angels' sight,
In sleep's sweet realm so cosily shut in,
Where, at the worst, we only dream of sin!

So let us sleep, and give the Maker praise:
I like the lad, who, when his father thought
To clip his morning nap by hackneyed phrase
Of vagrant worm by early songster caught,
Cried, "Served him right!—it's not at all surprising;
The worm was punished, sir, for early rising!"

Sojourner Truth.

Mrs. F. D. Gage in the Chicagoan.

Mrs. Stowe's remarks on Sojourner's opinions of woman's rights, bring vividly to my mind a scene in Ohio, never to be forgotten by those who witnessed it. In the spring of 1851, a Woman's Rights Convention was called in Akron, Ohio, by the friends of that then wondrously unpopular cause. I attended that Convention. No one of this day can conceive of the state of feeling of the multitude that came together on that occasion.

The leaders of the movement, staggering under the weight of disapprobation already laid upon them, and tremblingly alive to every appearance of evil that might spring up in their midst, were many of them almost thrown into a panic on the first day of the meeting, by seeing a tall, gaunt, black woman, in a gray dress and white turban, surmounted by an uncouth sun-bonnet, march deliberately into the church, walk with the air of a queen up the aisle, and take her seat upon the pulpit steps. A buzz of disapprobation was heard all over the house, and such words as these fell upon listening ears:

"An abolition affair!" "Woman's rights and niggers!" "We told you so!" "Go it, old darkey!"

I chanced upon that occasion to wear my first laurels in public life as President of the meeting. At my request order was restored, and the business of the hour went on. The morning session closed; the afternoon session was held; the evening exercises came and went; old Sojourner, quiet and reticent as the "Lybian Statue," sat crouched against the wall on a corner of the pulpit stairs, her sun-bonnet shading her eyes, her elbow on her knee, and her chin resting on her hard, broad palm.

At intermission, she was busy selling the "Life of Sojourner Truth," a narrative of her own strange and adventurous life.

Again and again, timorous and trembling ones came to me and said with earnestness, "Don't let her speak, Mrs. G. It would ruin us. Every newspaper in the land will have our cause mixed up with abolition and niggers, and we shall be utterly denounced." My only answer was, "We shall see when the time comes."

The second day the work waxed warm. Methodist, Baptist, Episcopal, Presbyterian and Universalist ministers came in to hear and discuss the resolutions brought forth. One claiming superior rights and privileges for man because of superior intellect; another, because of the manhood of Christist. If God had desired the equality of woman, [illegible] man could head me—and ar'n't I a woman? I have borne thirteen children, and seen 'em sold into slavery, and when I cried out with a mother's grief, none but Jesus heard—and ar'n't I a woman? Den dey talks 'bout dis ting in de head. What dis dey call it?" "Intellect," whispered some one near. "Dat's it honey. What's dat got to do wid woman's rights or niggers' rights. If my cup won't hold but a pint and yourn holds a quart, would'nt ye be mean not to let me have my little half measure full?" and she pointed her significant finger and sent a keen glance at the minister who had made the argument. The cheering was long and loud. "Den dat little man in black dar, he says woman can't hab as much right as man 'cause Christ wasn't a woman. What did your Christ come from?"

[illegible]

Rolling thunder could not have stilled that crowd as did those deep, wonderful tones, as she stood there with outstretched arms and eye of fire. Raising her voice still louder she repeated;

"What did your Christ come from? From God and a woman. Man had nothing to do with Him." Turning again to another objector, she took up the defense of Mother Eve. I cannot follow her through it all. It was pointed, and witty, and solemn, eliciting at almost every sentence deafening applause; and she ended by asserting "dat if de fust woman God ebber made was strong enough to turn de world upside down all her own lone self, all dese togedder," and she glanced her eye over us, "ought to be able to turn it back, and get it right side up again; and now dey is asking to do it, de men better let 'em." (Long continued cheering.) "Bleeged to you for hearin' on me, and now old Sojourner ha'nt got nothin' more to say."

"Eternal Dish Washing."

Occasionally we find a man that realizes the combination of patience and "executive ability" required to perform successfully the round of a housekeeper's duties, but such usually reach their wisdom through actual practice. Such is the case with Rev. T. K. Beecher, who thus narrates his experience:

The quiet fidelity with which "she" will dish wash her life away for "him," is a marvel of endurance and grace. Just here is the servitude of woman heaviest;—no sooner is her work done than it requires to be done again. Man works by jobs, and ends them and takes his pay. This pay can be translated into anything else desirable. A man works all day, and draws pay for his day's work. This pay allures him, as oats a horse homeward bound. Thus men work by terms and jobs,—and although work is endless as to quantity, yet when cut up thus into terms and jobs, we men go heartily on our journey, and count our mile-stones.

Not so with our mates. "She" mends our socks, and we put our irrepressible toe upon the darned spot, and she darns it again. "She" washes for the family, and the family makes haste to send back the same garments to be washed again. "She" puts the room in order, and we get it ready to be "rid up" again. The same socks, the same washing, the same room every time. She has no successive jobs, no terms, no pay day, no tally-sticks of life. She washes the same dish three hundred and sixty-five times every year. No wonder she breaks it and is glad of it! What a relief to say, "I've broke that dish!"

Not only have we washed dishes, but so we cooked and served and helped eat a meal, (with hated appetite because of cooking) and now we are astounded at the number of thoughts, and steps, and acts, and processes involved in a very plain supper. Only two of us, jolly cronies, caring nothing for style and nicety, only a very plain supper. And we had it, and with it came wisdom.

Gentlemen, all! We go into a room and see a table ready set. It seems to us one thing—a supper. It is, in fact, from fifty to two hundred separate things, taken down one by one for us to use, and for "her" to wash and put back whence they came. There is a plate of biscuit. In that plate of simplicity we with our own hands and feet brought together a new quick fire for baking, viz. kindling wood, raking out stove, and bed of coal, flour from the bin, shortening from the gravy drip down cellar, salt from one box, sugar from another, soda from the [illegible], and (muriatic) from a bottle, [illegible] were to be put. Among the stones was a very curious one; it seemed of no describable shape, it appeared built for any portion of the building. They tried it at this wall, but it would not fit; they tried it at another, but it could not accommodate; so, vexed and angry, they threw it away. The temple was so many years building that this stone became covered with moss, and grass grew around it. Everybody passing by laughed at the stone; they said Solomon was wise, and doubtless all the other stones were right, but as for that block, they might as well send it back to the quarry, for they were quite sure that it was meant for nothing. Year after year rolled on, and the poor stone was still despised, the builders constantly refused it. The eventful day came when the temple was to be finished and opened, and the multitude was assembled to see the grand sight. The builders said "where is the top stone? Where is the pinnacle?" They little thought where the crowning marble was, until some one said, "Perhaps that stone which the builders refused is meant to be the topstone. They hoisted it to the top of the house, and as it reached the summit they found it well adapted to the place. Loud hosannas made the welkin ring, as the stone which the builders refused thus became the head-stone of the corner. So it was with Christ Jesus. The builders cast him away. He was a plebian; he was a man of a poor extraction; he was a man acquainted with sinners; who walked in poverty and meanness, hence the worldly-wise despised him. But when God shall gather together in one all things that are in Heaven and on earth, then, Christ shall be the glorious consummation of all things.

"Christ reighs in Heaven the top most stone,
And well deserves the praise."

He shall be exalted; He shall be honored; His name shall endure as long as the sun, and all nations shall be blessed in Him; yea, all generations shall call Him blessed.

A Mystery Cleared up.

Ex-Secretary Stanton had an interview with Secretary Fish yesterday.—Sensation Telegram of Associated Press.

I was present at that interview. The subject of it was Warts.

Ex-Secretary Stanton said that when he was a boy he had sixteen on his left hand, one or two on his right thumb, and one on his elbow. He said he used to always hunt for old hollow stumps with rain-water standing in them to soak his warts in.

Secretary Fish said he had millions of warts when he was a boy, and sometimes he split a bean and tied it over a wart, and then took that bean and buried it in the cross-roads at midnight in the dark of the moon.

Ex-Secretary Stanton said he had tried that, but it never worked.

Secretary Fish said he could not remember that it worked—he only remembered trying it a good many times, and in the most unquestioning good faith.

Ex-Secretary Stanton said his usual plan was to run a needle through the wart and then hold the end of the needle in the candle till it warmed that wart to that degree that it would never take an interest in this world's follies and vanities any more forever.

Secretary Fish said he thought likely he was the wartlest boy that ever——

At this important moment ex-Secretary Stanton's carriage was announced, and he arose and took his leave. The next Associated Press dispatch that distressed the people through the columns of every single newspaper in America read as follows:

The subject of the interview between ex-Secretary Stanton and Secretary Fish has not transpired. There are various flying rumors. It is generally believed that it referred to the Alabama question, and was very important.

And yet they were only talking about Warts.

Hereafter, when I see vague, dreadful Associated Press dispatches stating that Jones called on the Secretary of the Interior last night, or Smith had an interview with the Attorney General, or Brown was closeted with the President until a late hour yesterday evening, I shall not be so terrified as I used to be. I shall feel certain that they were only talking about Warts, or something like [illegible]

The Adirondacks—Disappointed Tourists.

The Burlington (Vt.) Press gives a melancholy picture of the great crowd of tourists and invalids who have sought the Adirondack regions this season in response to Mr. Murray's glowing description and advice: "The age for Adirondack," it says, will soon be over. The three thousand now there spend most of their time cursing Mr. Murray for writing such a high-flown book, and their own stupidity for taking it all as gospel truth. They cannot get guides, they cannot get deer, they cannot get fish. They get nothing but their journey for their pains. The few hotels there are in that region are overcrowded; three weeks ago one of them, we heard, had refused more than a hundred applications for accommodation, and another party last week spent four days in their wagon, driving from one house to another, unable to get a lodging anywhere. The most frequented lakes are "black with people," as one who has just returned from there remarked, and there is no shooting at deer, if deer were to be found, for fear of hitting men. But the most painful sights, as described by those who have returned from the woods, are the invalids; numbers just dying of consumption and other diseases, by the delightful picture held out by Mr. Murray's only too well-written work, have gone in search of recovery into the woods to find, some of them, only death. We have already heard of two deaths in the woods; one young woman was there last week, so helpless as to be carried around in a sort of box with handles; while miserable faces and sickness-eaten forms appear everywhere. The Adirondack woods are no place for the sick; it is emphatically a rough country, and only those who can "go it rough" can take pleasure there. Mr. Murray is now in the woods with a party of thirty or forty friends, and gets only left handed compliments from the disappointed health and pleasure seekers, some of whom have actually insulted him in the expression of their indignation.

The British Colonists looking towards Independence and Annexation.

A London letter says a meeting was lately held in London, consisting of all the most eminent representatives of the British Pacific Colonies, and presided over by one of the most eminent, if not the most eminent of Colonial Governors. At this gathering deep and general dissatisfaction was expressed with the political and moral relations of their important and growing countries with the parent state, and all the influential Colonists present, representing in fact all the important interests of their respective settlements, joined in the expression of a determination to require of Great Britain some reconstruction of her colonial empire which should afford them a guaranty that the interests of the various colonies should receive prompt attention. In the event of this being found impracticable, and the sense of the meeting was decidedly that it would be so found, it was decided by all present that they should use all their influence with their respective settlements to leave the British allegiance and seek in some form the protection of the United States, or at all events to become, in such a manner as may be decided, members of the system of the great Republic. The meeting was not public, but its results are likely to be known at an early day.

—There is great excitement in Southern Michigan over the death of a young man named McKee, who got on board the night train at Hillsdale for Jonesville, and was found the next morning on the track, dead, one leg and arm cut off by the cars and his body otherwise horribly mutilated. His home was in Archibald, O., and he had been living for the past three months with an uncle in Hillsdale. He was of unsteady habits, and when he got on the cars was intoxicated. A stranger was with him who has not since been heard from. The two refused to pay their fare, and the train was stopped for the purpose of putting them off. A man presumed to be McKee was found on the platform of the rear sleeping car by the brakeman, who ordered him to go forward, the man refused to go; he was told to go forward or he would have to leave the train; he refused; the brakeman pulled the bell rope and the engineer whistled down the brakes; the brakeman set his brakes between the two sleeping cars and went to the rear with his lantern and the man was gone. McKee's uncle states that McKee was an important witness in a law suit to be tried in Cleveland, Sept. 1st, and that he was under bonds for his appearance. Whether there was a plot to decoy him away and he was murdered by the stranger and placed upon the track, or whether the brakeman got into a scuffle with him and inadvertantly knocked him off the platform of the car, is a mystery. The brakeman is under arrest for manslaughter. The verdict of the jury was that the man came to his death in consequence of being ejected from the cars, and being run over by one or more trains of cars.

SHE STOOPS, BUT DOESN'T CONQUER.—Mrs. Dr. Walker has not yet subsided. She made another raid on Secretary Boutwell to-day, and was peremptorily informed that there was no office for her in his department. The fair bloomer evidently made up her mind that the Secretary was in earnest for she immediately burst into tears, but even they failed to melt his hard heart. Anger succeeded to tears, and she departed, vowing vengeance upon the Republican party in general, and this Administration in particular, because it failed to recognize her claims. The Doctor says she is in possession of some secrets known only to herself, and that failing to obtain office as a supplicant, she will now expose some things that certain officials would prefer to have hid. What these terrible expositions are the Doctor at this time refuses to say.—Washington Correspondence Boston Journal.

THE NEUTRAL LAND LEAGUE DENOUNCE U. S. SENATORS.—Kansas dispatches state that at a meeting recently held by the Land League on the neutral lands, speeches were made by Hon. Sidney Clarke and others. Resolutions were unanimously passed denouncing James F. Joy and the United States Senate, and asking Ross and Pomeroy to resign their seats. The resolutions also favor cutting loose from the Republican party and forming a new and independent State Central Committee. Pomeroy was [illegible]

MICHIGAN AS A WOOL STATE.—Statistics recently published show that Michigan ranks third in the Union in the number of sheep kept by her farmers. The return is for 1869 and shows for the seven leading wool-producing States as follows:

Ohio	6,730,125	Sheep
New York	4,996,824	"
Michigan	3,348,191	"
Pennsylvania	3,422,862	"
Indiana	2,822,476	"
Illinois	2,736,434	"
Iowa	2,501,379	"

Wisconsin, Missouri, and Vermont follow in the order named, and the entire number of sheep in the country is about 39,000,000. Michigan has nearly as many as the twelve Southern States together.

—The Hornellsville N. Y. Tribune draws the following doleful parallel: "Fairman of the Elmira Advertiser, has got a new suit of clothes, and every newspaper between sunrise and sundown has made an item of it. More than a year ago we got a new suit of clothes of E. T. Young, and no one ever mentioned it, until a day or two since, Mr. Young himself introduced the subject by inquiring if it wasn't about time those clothes were paid for! Sadly we contemplated the difference between Fairman's case and our own, and reluctantly we arrived at the conclusion that 'such is life!'"

A funny joke was perpetrated on a constable in Manchester recently. He had a fellow in charge under arrest on suspicion of being one of the burglars perambulating the country. Pending examination the prisoner was locked up in a room in the hotel for the night, but for further security the officer took his clothes into his own room. Somehow the prisoner managed to escape, minus his clothes. The next morning in the midst of the consternation, the constable received word from a Mr. Rose that a stranger had made his appearance at his house the night before, naked, acting very strangely, and refusing to give any account of himself, and that he had detained the fellow for further developments. The delighted officer started, hand cuffs in hand, for the residence of Mr. Rose, and on arriving there was met by a nurse, who presented him a fine baby which had made its advent only a few hours previously. The Jackson Citizen gives the following case of premonition and sudden death:

It will be recollected that in the early part of June we published an account of the sudden death of Mrs. Rhea, in the township of Tompkins. This old lady died on the 26th of May, after an illness of a few minutes. About a week after Mrs. George W. Barnes, a daughter of the deceased, visited her mother's house, and while there the clock, which had not been wound up for several days struck one. In a few days she made another visit to the house, when the clock again struck one, though it had not been running for three weeks. The repeated striking of the clock the lady interpreted to be the premonition of death, and upon her return home, which was a few rods from her mother's late residence, she related the circumstance to her husband, and stated that she thought another death in the family would soon occur. On the 24th of July, just two months from the date of her mother's demise, and at the same hour in the day, Mrs. Barnes was taken suddenly ill, and in a few moments expired.

Conservative Victory in Vermont.

The election in Tennessee, on the 5th inst., resulted in the success of Senter, the Conservative candidate, by 20,000 majority. For several days previous to the election, the Radical party saw that such a fearful rout was expected, that in the event of defeat, it was the intention of the Radical leaders to assemble a legislature of its own at Nashville, to organize a separate State government, and to call upon Gen. Cooper of the Militia, for its assistance. Gen. Cooper and the Federal officeholders, and the Republican municipal authorities of Nashville were committed to the conspiracy, and although the scheme was enlightened to Horace Maynard, it is said to be sanctioned by Boutwell and the other Radical leaders at Washington. In the face of this fact, which a Nashville, Gen. Cooper was to be backed up by the Great Army of the Republic. The design of the plot was to create a conflict which would call for the intervention of Congress, then, of course, "Brownlow will make it all right." Meanwhile, it is expected that the administration will protect Blaine and his party until Congress meets. A new plan, and so well concerted that a Conservative victory could do no possible damage to the dominant party. Whatever the plot includes, the harvest is ripe for reaping. The State Journal, like Blaine organ in Nashville, suspended the day after the election.

The Tennessee Legislature will have a decided Conservative majority, and in the West Tennessee the entire Democratic legislative ticket is elected.

Assisting the Administration.

The Republican press has rejected Democratic journals of the sincerity of assisting the present administration for many reasons, by taking bright lies on its own hands. The Cincinnati Commercial, a Republican paper that labored hard for Grant's election in a way:

Some of the extreme party organs have taken to assisting the free issuance of its bold, blunt, manly utterances of General Grant. It would be much better for the new Grant and the Republican party if some of these struggling, overzealous friends of the President would take checkpoints of the President would take a low advantage of the fact, and tell him in his first that he has done nothing that Mandie since he entered the White House. These Republican organs know it, but look to manage to spoil their mind, for fear of giving offense to some powerful Republican. They know that the President has been acting from special advice, and a gentle application of his error would be likely to have a powerful effect upon him. Whatever the opinions and acts of the General, who are acting very much as unprofessional gentlemen and overplease to with a pet grandchild, to whom they are afraid to say "no," for fear of cold and quiet this child. For this whole course tacit telling applied to President Grant, we repeat, will be advantageous to him and his party."

Governor and Privy Council Elected.

The First Citizen of last week gives the following cheering prospects of this result:

Hon. J. L. Williams of Oceana, accompanied by a party of Democrats, arrived in this City on Thursday morning, over the prolonged line of the Flint & Pere Marquette to this City. The party have made a splendid survey of the line, and find the route do Pointing a very desirable one. They will return to Oceana county to continue with this County to connect into near the old Depot of the F. & P. M. Road, the other running to Muskegon Valley's passenger and South & Canpeer's mill. For the benefit of those of the road through to connection a Board of Trade meeting was held at the Williams Hotel Thursday evening, at which the engineers this route confident hope that Oakland will be built this fall. The Muskegon Central Road has made a proposition to track and equip the road whenever the road bed shall be completed. This proposition will probably be accepted by the Company. Before the road, we think, there is probably no doubt that the Company will accomplish the proclamation mentioned.

Owosso and Big Rapids Railroad.

The Big Rapids Pioneer, of Aug. 5, says:

A meeting of the Directors of the above named company was held at Owosso on Friday of last week, to make the final arrangements for the commencement of the construction of the road. Sufficient subscriptions have been obtained to warrant the undertaking, and along the proposed route will render aid to the road in the shape of bonds. The line is thus rendered sure, and the road can be built with no trouble to any portion of the route. The Directors were in earnest in the matter, and have taken the right hold of the enterprise with the energy that will insure success. Mr. Ferry, the President, was also present, and made an address to the meeting, which was quite encouraging.

THE

Owosso Press,

A Moment of Horror.

We are indebted to the Mobile Register for the following:

For twenty-three years old Jake Willard has cultivated the soil of Baldwin county and drawn therefrom support for self and wife. He is childless. Not long ago Jake left the house in search of a missing cow. His route led him through an old worn out patch of clay land, of about six acres in extent, in the centre of which was a well, twenty-five or thirty feet, deep that at some time probably furnished the inmates of a dilapidated house near by with water. In passing by the spot an ill wind lifted Jake's "tile" from his head, and maliciously wafted it to the edge of the well, and it tumbled in.

Now Jake had always practised the virtue of economy, and he immediately set about recovering the lost hat. He ran to the well and finding it was dry at the bottom, he uncoiled the rope which he had brought for the purpose of capturing the truant cow, and after several attempts to catch the hat with a noose, he concluded to save time by going down into the well himself. To accomplish this, he made fast one end of the rope to a sapling hard by, and was quickly on his way down into the well.

It is a fact, of which Jake was no less oblivious than the reader hereof, that Ned Wells was in the the dilapidated building [illegible], and that an old blind horse with a bell on his neck, who had been turned out to die, was lazily grazing within a short distance of the well.

The devil himself, or some other wicked spirit, put it into Ned's cranium to have a little fun; so he quietly slipped up to the horse and, unbuckling the bell strap, approached with slow measured "ting-a-ling" the edge of the well.

"——dang that old blind horse!" said Jake, "he's comin' this way, sure, and hain't got no more sense than to fall in here. Whoa, Ball!"

But the continued approach of the "ting-a-ling" said just as plainly as words, that Ball wouldn't whoa. Besides, Jake was at the bottom resting before trying to "shin" it up the rope.

"Great Jerusalem!" said he, "the old cuss will be a-top of me before I can say Jack Robinson. Whoa,——dang you, whoa!"

Just then Ned drew up to the edge of the well, and with his foot kicked a little dirt into it.

"Oh! Lord!" exclaimed Jake, falling upon his knees at the bottom. "I'm gone now, whoa! Now I lay me down to sleep——whoa, now. Oh, Lord have mercy on me!"

Ned could hold in no longer, and fearful Jake might suffer from his fright, he revealed himself.

Probably Ned didn't make tracks with his heels from that well. Maybe Jack wasn't up to the top of it in short order; and you might think he didn't try every night for two weeks to get a shot at Ned with his rifle. Maybe not. I dont know. But I do know that if Jake finds out who sent you this, it'll be the last squib you'll get.

Hands and Feet.

I went into a shop the other day to buy what the drapers call "gents' hose." A smiling young lady was behind the counter, and when I had made an appeal to her to show me some socks, I was somewhat doubtful what course of action I ought to pursue in order to demonstrate to her the length of my foot. As I am not a burlesque writer, it was clear that I could not lay my boot on the counter and say 'with all my sole,' nor could I paraphrase Dibdin's Jack Tar, when he spoke of the dancer who "so daintily handled her feet." The little woman however, speedily removed my first perplexity; though only to plunge me into another.

"Will you," said she, "please to double up your fist and lay it on the counter?"

I replied that I did not want gloves, but socks.

"And I want to take your measure," she said.

"But," I urged, "it is the measure of my foot that you require."

"Yes," she replied, "and I can get it equally as well from your hand. Once round your clenched fist, at the knuckles, is the length of your foot."

And she took the measure of my fist, and I took the socks on the faith of the damsel's representation; one, in due course, I found that she was quite right, and fitted me to a nicety.[Curiosities of Shopping.

A Useful Dog.—A Breton peasant, on his way to Paris, stopped at a barber's shop in Rambouillet. While the barber was strapping his razor the peasant noticed a dog sitting near his chair and staring at him fixedly. "What is the matter with that dog," said the peasant, "that he stares so at me?" The barber answered with an unconcerned air: "That dog is always there. You see him when I cut off a piece of a car—" "Well?" "Well, he eats it."

The Clothes of an Image.—The image of the Virgin in the Church of Atocha, near Madrid, has a richer wardrobe than that possessed by any queen, and jewels of immense value. It has a crown of diamonds presented by Isabel II., necklaces, bracelets, and other ornaments in great variety. Its gorgeous mantles, so covered with embroidery in gold and pearls that the velvet is scarcely visible, fill the safes along the sides of the sacristy, and as the wedding costume worn by any member of the royal family is the perquisite of the statue, its wealth has always been increasing.

Singular Origin of Fires.

The Salem Register says that a lady in that city lost about a dozen yards of velvet, which took fire from the rays of the sun passing through a globe in which an ornament was floating in the water. But for the timely discovery of the fire the house might have been burned.

We remember a case of that kind which occurred years ago. A globe containing a pair of gold fish was left on a table in the parlor near a front window, and while the family were at breakfast smoke was smelt, and all hands started to see what the matter was. On going into the parlor, where there had been no fire, they found it densely filled with smoke, and a large hole burnt through the carpet and floor, the fire bursting into a flame when the door was opened. The cause was apparent—the unclouded sun had cast his rays through the globe of water, giving it the effect of a burning lens, or sun-glass. In a few minutes more the house would have been all ablaze. The unconscious little fishes, however, were as cool as a cucumber all the time.[Lawrence Eagle.

At last he fell seriously ill, and was more crabbed and opinionated than ever! It soon became evident that he was near his end; but no one liked to tell him of his condition. A pious old neighbor finally took upon himself the solemn task.

"Neighbor Ross," said he, "there is something that I feel it my duty to tell you."

"You tell me anything!" snapped Ross in great scorn.

"But I must tell you, that you are dying."

"Mind your own business; I guess I know what I'm about," growled the old man with his dying breath.
