A Burning Sight.

Horace Greeley, ever his own bottom, has been clamoring through the columns of the New York Tribune about election frauds and the purity of the ballot box in order to fan the Rogues nests up the dirty corner more than half way, and thus kindly remove the hypocrisy of his own features:

> And how stands the record today? In the country more rare, more impure, more bought, through the agency of purse-proud principles, than when we governed the land? Is the ballot-box of public opinion to-day the shrine of a more virtuous people? Is it easier for your patriots to be perpetual in New York for genuine reasons by which this country is at present affected? Can pronounced your views of the capital of the capital, the advocate of protection, and its apologist and supporter; you have lived to see our government in the hands of those who have possessed of bond and by your agency, with a vast national banking combination, its function laundered and sanctioned by State original, its spirit broken, and its usefulness almost destroyed. You point to petty claims frauds in the City of New York, which are trifling in the length and breadth of the and political corruption which you have helped to create; public virtue, political morality and individual rights are subjects of indignity and sale, and every political fraud that our make our institutions accessible to thieves upon the mart. I am ready to go as far as you in the opinion that a despotism is preferable to a system like yours of government by purchase and sale, and I will go as far as you in the assertion that the people of this country have not yet reached the point of political perdition. The Harlem gambler which has ruled with great strictness in the interests of vice, crime and fraud, Stone was admitted in the Court. He was sworn and testified that he was engaging among themselves. They passed through the State to the verge of bankruptcy, and now that the bonds are running for about 20 cents on the dollar, some of them are secretly countering at the repudiation of the State debt. The people, as we love the respectable portion, ourselves, and especially the property holders, will not long submit to the corruption that prevails, and will drive the corrupt rascals and bad management of Robert and his friends. Rather than shoot deserting the extreme Radical because to perceive that they must get start and end will probably each be schedule in the new party. Some will have an ex-secretary, or ex-treasurer, or ex-governor, or ex-judge, or ex-mayor, but he will get no favor at the hands of the leaders of the new movement. These gentlemen propose to organize a party after the fashion of the Walker party of Virginia, and will fill every party to the power, with no moral sincerity, nor a capable judge a plot seeking honesty.

Tending Dividend on the Missouri River.

Reports from the steamer Shawnee which left St. Louis Tuesday for Omaha, was burned on Thursday morning, about forty five miles above Cairo, with a load of 250 passengers and about 80 to 90 crew saved. 50 slaves missed and supposed to be lost. The fire broke out on starboard forward, and was first seen by one of the deck passengers, within a quarter of her being entirely in the room. As soon as the alarm was given confusion reigned. A number of deck passengers instantly seized the only yawl attached to the boat and put off from the boat, and were picked up by the next boat. The pilot headed the boat for the shore, and when within 100 yards of the shore he ran her aground. The steamer was then about 200 yards from the shore. A few seconds sufficed to show that there was no hope of saving the boat. In the meantime every thing was in confusion. Passengers, officers, boatmen, firemen, deck hands, were rushing into the river, some on planks, some on chairs and clinging to lines for safety. About this time one of the mates, pipe in hand, coming to the alarm. At this time those who were not already struggling in the water immediately plunged in to the protection of something to float. Many were seen with bales of cotton, others with mere bedding for life preservers, while the Mississippi, Eight had gathered around them, and above the screams of drowning passengers and crashing of the flames, was heard the awful roaring of the burning furnace. With no boats to be seen, numbers were seen floating on doors, and some were trying them in their hands and of the water; chilled through, with no help in sight and no boats in the bodies then, one by one, they sank to rise no more. Those who did reach the shore were not only exhausted, but many of them were left destitute of clothing. Thompson, Clerk, Cyrus after reaching the shore, with the assistance of Capt. Hall, of the steamer Ben Campbell, by St. Louis, reached the scene about 10 o'clock, and picked up many of the above all the survivors that could be found, 32 in number. Fifteen or 20 are supposed to have reached the shore somewhere below, and probably more will be picked up. They left Cairo with 250 of the officers of the Belle, which carried the greater part of them to St. Louis.

The Principal Evidence in the Kansas case on George W. Candler, a Democratic Member of Congress.

The evidence of David Gould for the defence at the examination of George W. Candler on the charge of committing fraud at the late election in Kansas, is now in type and ready, so to be misintelligible to several important points, if it did not absolutely extend in contradiction to that we are constrained to reproduce it in connection with the events. It ought to have stated, since no other testimony has been published, that the witness is a democrat.

The examination is in the questions Nichols, South, W. A. Gray, Mr. Gardner, Charles Crawford, was adjourned from day to day until David Gould, except that Brady was further than Gould was the object of the examination.

David Gould, of lawful age, being duly sworn, testified as follows: I am a manufacturing of engines and locomotives. I have been connected with that business under my control, but have had one interest in it. I have been engaged in that business about seven years. I have had no connection with Candler, or any other circumstances. I have seen Candler in Kansas, and have had conversation with him. I have been in Kansas seven the same to-day used the town of Lawrence, which is about 4 miles from Lawrence, and the same distance from Topeka. I have been in Kansas about 2 years. On Exchange Street, in the dwelling occupied by Mrs. Washington Scott & assistant Mrs. Deakin Military Entertainment, in the night of storm last, passed through a chamber in which was asleep the brothers of the Holmes, and Mrs. Deakin. The mother, the late of the young sisters poured into the chamber and the family having no occupant of the room, the upstairs was lost, discovered until the kitchen and occupants of the stairway attended the occupants of the people in the house, and the fire was extinguished, and the fallen pipe, and the furniture saved, if considerably smoked and damaged. From appearance it is evident that the pipe had been of no small duty, and the wonder is that the house was not fired long ago. The damage is estimated at $100, and is fully covered by insurance.

Since 25 years ago—and perhaps since—Daniel Webster wrote, translated a poem to the Western States and Territories, which he had never visited. The proud states man felt inclined to turn some talented young man to account in them, and in looking over New-England for such a recognition, his attention was attracted to young Possession, and he extended to him an invitation to travel with him. The young man gladly accepted the invitation, for he was fond of flowing, and felt that it would be as sweet as well as an advantage to accompany in his journeyings such a man as Daniel Webster, who, as a lawyer and as a statesman, on the floor of the U. S. Senate or before a jury, is not already ranked its height. Young Possession did accompany him, and never had cause to regret it. Many a time and often the young man told us how much he enjoyed the journey, and what advantages he derived from it—for Mr. Webster treated him with great kindness, and gave him much good advice which he treasured up in his memory. Webster told him how best he had studied, and how he decided to run in his making on powers when he came to mount the premises of law. He had never had a set occasion to get discouraged and pass from his hand—until he had read it over half-a-dozen times. And he further remarked that while many young men were filling away their time—he was becoming the mighty lawyer, Noy, and Webster. He also acquired from him to a how to and as an orator, and how to speak in such a manner as to make his words—his figures and illustrations which have already passed into memory. And now, the youngster—these terse sayings were made from the spur of the moment. By so running over in the mind the set of previous study—and observation—he came to the best illustrations of thought, have been studied and retained them when the occasion for it was in my hands. The words—Webster to life by recent Hadley's power, often spoken and fit—appropriated, were strung together with a bead of the American poet, in Niagara Falls, and heard the Pilgrim fathers' hymn of the Constitution.—Portland Argus.

Of the Right to a Portion.—We make a follow of the other day with a set of teachers which he was hardly competent to educate with water up hard. Upon asking me what he was going to do with his money hereafter, he told his father replied: 'I am going to hell down, or as near as I can get consistently for any other place.' It takes all the money I can get to pay for horses and and what use will Sis can eat, and I want to get an education somehow, as fast when I grow up. I can buy a house for my mother.' We asked him how many bottles he expected to sell in order to purchase such a house as he would like, when his father fellow dont need to answer me, for anywhere; I know it is mighty small concern; but it is honest, and it's the best I can do. By saying that I get a good state supply before, I'll do something, too, as if I don't. I intend to MAKE it the other day that the smartest men were poor boys once, and what other people have done I can do, reckon. Anyhow I mean to try for it.

The Trip to the Pacific.—A gentleman who has just made a journey via Pacific Railroad, to Sacramento, has not experienced the slightest inconvenience from the journey which is anticipated, and has abandoned the idea of remaining to the Golden State. He writes from Sacramento as follows:

—I think the trip across but little short of an unmitigated nuisance. I saw neither dust, nor appearance in sage brush, alkali deserts, salt lakes, plains, nor barren desolation. Neither did I see much inducement in search of money, save those business and ex-mining. living, if the currency is gold and silver.

It costs 26 per cent. more to gold to live in California than it does in greenbacks in the States. Put that in your pipe and smoke it.

Drinks are two bits, large beer (large glasses) same price, or four to twenty-five cents. I am tolerated drink. Starting board five cents. I am dazzled on allowance, my head to grow—as usual. Every ten dollars a day I don't smoke is a days much.

Cheering news in their own shade is sometimes true in the observing line. But the pre-eminently good one about the meeting of the New York Firemen's Club. While on the train a dozen eggs was obtained from the porter, and placed in a cloth and paper sealing water over them, and immediately turned it off. This process is repeated three times, by which means the albumen is fixed or coagulated, the pores of the shell closed, and the egg will work, cleaned in its own covering. The eggs thus prepared are then packed in salt, with the upper downward, and they are said to keep perfectly fresh for many months.

How the Two was Bust.—As a little girl, Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton scored continually over the laws affecting women. So persistent was she in this that she had that her father's law suits delighted to tease her by quoting the law for all the laws which been most heavily against women. Once, when she was very capricious over some new point which she had raised, her father, with youth announced to her that if she were his wife he would take them all and whip them out of her. Singer was she at this that she determined to cut out all "the women's laws" from the statute books, and, having finished those belonging to her father were already gone in existence. Following like a budding Joan of Arc, she pounded for the sacrifice, but before the leading spouse could be applied, she was discovered and the heroine punished.—Putnam's Magazine.

Milch Cows.—Milch cows should be fed light and morning regularly now, and keened nights and in wet weather. They should not be allowed to descend too much on the pastures; there is no reason why a good feed of corn meal should be stopped now, as it tends to keep the flesh and keep up a good supply of milk.—Ploughman.

Sensible Death.—The Rangoon Gazette tells a story of a Governor of Pegu, who lately met with his death in the following manner: He had heeded a small fish, and wishing to free his hands for the adjacent of this tactics, placed it below on his neck. Accidentally it slipped down his back, and the dweller, defying all the fisherman's efforts to draw it out, at last succeeded in his house to spontaneous existence, but on his way he stopped and died. After his death it was found that there were several fish in the body. Spare, Wash-hands should be fed only served to fatten them more freely in the throat.

To Manage a Husband.—Most husbands however can be driven a long distance on to-day, a course your wife may desire, by a little tact. The animal he is about to run shoken and timid, and he will run with the other, keeping your hand low. This latching puppet will soon be driven by a light whip of occasionally lays his long foot down. Sometimes a long enough switch will bound two or three times which will make him run a mile, and completely throw him off his guard. The moment you have fixed him in the direction you wish he is to travel, apply the spur and he will not fail to go forward.

An advertisement of seriously announcing a new lamp, with its modest support. Oh, give me back the candle and a big, old-fashioned candlestick, with a snuffer on the above. Oh, could you mean to say that you have invented—to be afterwards follow of by the soap? Price of You haven't got such a thing as one that won't bust you?

Gen. Banks learned the printing trade, when a young man, in the office of the Boston Traveler. Mrs. Banks, when a girl, also worked in the same office. They left the office to start a weekly paper in Waltham, Massachusetts, which was carried on successfully by them for a year, and all of one year prior.

Mr. Wm. Weeks, of Andover—often plays Mr.—was once out at Newbury, he read an unusually long Confession of Faith. Rev. Dr. Cornard, of Medford, exclaimed, "Ah! you believe too firmly as much now as you will when you come out at Judgment." Mr. O. was the 51, and Mr. W. 25.

The New York Independent calls Peter Cartwright, "one of the famous Patriarchs of the Great Peter the Hermit; Peter the Fisherman, and Peter the Carpenter," but strangely omits Safe Peter, who is well known to all the newspapers in the world than all the others.

Madame Do Staël-Holstein once asked Napoleon who among the women of France he considered the greatest. She, madame, who has borne the most children,' the great Dumbini replied.

'O dear' blubbered an urchin, whose mother was trying the application of birch, 'perhaps you'll only be strike a fortune, but gollel I'm sure one red makes an setter.'

How did you manage to get your wife's consent without opposing?' the French lawyer? inquired a gentleman of Mrs. Shuler, 'Oh, we had an 'interrogator with us,' complacently replied the old fool.

Prince Napoleon, in his admiration of the Spanish ballet, will like Queen Victoria, and, 'this last instinct of the ruling revolutions is to adopt what is good in them.'
