Radical Roorbacks Come Home Quickly.

General Beauregard denies that he was ever invited to dine with General Hancock and consequently no flags were hauled down; General Sheridan denies that Hancock ever wrote to him that he would obey Tilden's orders in 1877, if he took the oath of office, and Hancock challenges the Radicals to produce such a letter; and finally Judge Black denies that he is the author of the celebrated order No. 40, or knew anything about Hancock's orders until they were published.

Garfield resigned his commission in the army to take a seat in Congress and get caught in Oakes Ames' trap. It was on that occasion that he gave away his blankets and army socks to the poor soldiers he left behind to fight for their bleeding country. The soldiers will vote for the man wine stood the brunt of battle with them in preference to the great Union general who jumped at a "soft snap" and deserted them in front of the enemy .- [Ovid Register.

A SPECIMEN "VOLUNTARY CONTRIBU-TION."-The Chicago Times says : A clerk in one of the departments at Washington who receives $100 per month, found only $80 in his envelope on July 1. There was a note however, stating that as he had failed to respond to the invitation to contribute to the Garfield campaign fund, an assessment had been made on him.

The Republicans will find it necessary to send a few emissaries to Georgia for the purpose of explaining to the colored peo-gle how it was that General Hancock didn't fight for their freedom. At present, the most intelligent of colored voters are impresent with the belief that Hancock was mere conspicuous in that business than Garfield.—Atlanta Constitution.
