The "horse for all work" is inter	nded to b	e capable of being trained for the saddle, and for the harness, and he able to go on the road or in draught, as he may chance to be broken. It may be that the "horse for all work" shall, after a few years training, make a useful, spirited, handsome family roadster, or he may be brought up to be a good draught horse, true to pull any load that is put behind him. Hence, the committee will note that he is not to be judged by the speed he may make for a single mile. It will also be noted that he must have size, action and spirit, as well as constitution, if he is worthy of a premium as a breeding animal.
