Apart from all considerations of constitotional principle, the failure of the Senate to act upon the Executive nominations now before it is productive of a and extensive inconvenience, amounting, as a correspondent of the Herald expresses it, "to delay of justice in a number of judicial districts." The plain reason why the Senate does not act upon these nominations is that the Republican members will not consent to so into executive session until the present Clark and Sergeant-at-Arms are turned out, and the candidates of Mr. Mahone of Virginia, elected in their place. The Democratic Senators are ready for an executive session at any time, but the Republicans refuse. They do not pretend that the Senate is not organised, and has not the officers neces-sary for the performance of its duty. It is completely organized already; but the Republicans with to change this organi-sation. To this purpose they adhere without regard to the public inconveni-ence and the delay of justice occasioned thereby; while on the other hand, the Democrata take advantage of the rules of the Senate, which do not allow any abutting off of debate, to prevent the Republicase from executing their purpose of first turning out the two officers and putting in Mahone's men.
