WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1881. LOST AND FOUND.

Low Prices! Lost, lost in the river of death, A maiden with golden hair; She was borne away on a summer day, O, who can tell me where? Away from the light of our aching sight,

From sob, and tear and prayer; Lost, lost, lost, lost, O, who can tell me where? Eighteen years had the maiden lived, Shall we see her nevermore?

O. look for her long, the waves are strong, They may dash her on the shore; Once clasped to my heart we would neve Till this troublous life is o'er;

Lost, lost, lost, lost, Shall we find her nevermore? Ye will know her quick by her long bright When she floateth up to sight; Her brow is as fair as a snow flike pure, And her eyes have a tender light.

On the fairest flower of our garden bower

Fell soonest the cold, cold blight;

Lost, lost, lost, lost To my aching earthly sight. Found, found, by the angels found Cast up on the other side; Forgive me Lord, but it seemed strange, And the river looked so wide, That I feared the child in the billows wild Would sink for I saw no guide; But found, found, by the angels found, She is walking by thy side,
O, lost and found.

And forever crowned,

Redeemed and sanctified
