----THE SCRATOGA WIND STORM.-The western wind storm reached Saratoga at 3 a. m., Friday, lasted four hours, and was one of the severest known there. School buildings were wrecked, several buildings unroofed, chimneys blown down, trees broken, telephone and other wires broken and crossed. At neighboring places houses were unroofed, barns overturned, and the loss is heavy.

TIMETORS IS PHUBLEY ready. THE CONVICTED ASSASSIN.

The prisoner is not much broken down, thereth he rested provide Wednesday night. He times and trimbled in his core until an early bour, when he fell into a feverish sleep. The jail officials say his apported has decitions and that of iate he has tryed with the fred set he fore him. He endeavors to keep up his spirits but his face has became drawn and haggard since the verdict was rendered. A cruple of reporters called upon him at the prison There. der afternoon. The privilege of a double culis an longer allowed him. He was found to the first cell of the silent corridor. There was a wild expression in his eyes, which bore out the theory of the officials of want of rest and loss of appetite. He came to the grated door and greeted his visitors with something of his old courtesy. In answer to a question, he said: 'I didn't sleep well last night; I had a beadsone It was a long sussion yesterday, and there were great excitement at the close. Beforing to Scoville's attitude since the version be broke our into bissn upy remarks. "Ab, he always had a depressed thew of my case, but I'll come out all right I expected Serville to see me this morning. He will flohis motion for a new trial Saturday, and I sup-pose he is getting ready for that.

A reporter said that John W. Guireau bad given up all tiope "Oh. pshaw!" said Guiteau, "John's opinions are not worth anything. He isn't authority on In further conversation Guiteau said he expected to have two or three first-class lawyers; he didn't agree with Scoville's theory; he admitted that Serville did his best, but he needed experience in this kind of work. "The verifict was a surprise to me," he said. "I expected a disagreement. I am decidedly of the opinion that I shall finally escape. The American people den't want me hung, and i don't expect to be. I expect Merrick will be consulted in regard to a new trial. I understand he has prepared an elaborate brief on the question of jurisdiction. I am in good health, and my spirits are not depressed."

At this point Guiteau slyly slipped a package of manuscript into the hands of one of the reporters, and, hastily resuming, said: "I am just as sanguine now that the Deity will vindicate me as I ever was. I never had any doubt about that. I think the jurors were not the right kind of men to be on that jury. One of the morning papers says [reading] we [the jury all had a drink with each meal, and a cigar afterward,' Now, that class of mendon't represent this great Christian nation, and ret they were the kind of men that brought a verdict of guilty last night. That's all I can say now, gentlemen.' With that the prisoner turned away. The reporter who obtained the manuscript showed it to Gen. Crocker, who said Guiteau had promised not to make any further statements with out his sanction.

SCOVILLE'S INDIGNANT PROTEST

Scoville came in while the warden was listen ing to the latest production of Guiteau, and tum residents of territories, known as more protested vigorously against such statements mons, are inciting the Piute and Navajo In- being issued from the fall, saying they proed him to keep still from the beginning, not only in the press but in court, but I could notcontrol him," said Scovale, "If he does not stor now, I will end the case. I would prefer if you would gentlemen, not to get those things from him. The jury have found him sane. That however does not alter my opinion, but under the circumstances he should discontinue such practices."

Scoville finally consented to the publication of the address, which is, in brief, that the jury had not intelligence chough to see his inspiration theory, and entirely ignored the political and patriotic necessity for the act, which he says all Christian people see, and for this rea son he is entitled to a new trial. His principu point will be to show the non-jurisdiction of this court to try him, because the president died in New Jersey. Some of the best lawyer, in America, he says, say the predominance of authorities are against the jurisdiction of this court. He asks the Washington court in banc to give it their most careful attention, to the end that if the Deity intended to protect president to depart gracefully and peacefulls in New Jersey, that he have the benefit of the Deity's intention. He says he considers this especially providential, in his fancy, and aske the court in bane so to consider it.

He then makes a strong appeal for money to the many people in America that believe it God, and in his own inspiration, and that he i a patriot. He says he wanted to employ s couple of first-class lawyers to do his work before the court in bane. He makes a special appeal to the ladies of America, arguing that his deed saved the nation another war, and that God will gotoven with American people if a hair of his head is harmed. He con-

"Mere physical death is nothing, but I am anxiousto have my character and inspiration vindicated. To that end I need help. My triends need not be ashaned of me. Some people think I am the greatest man of the age and that my name will go into history as patriot, by the side of Washington and Grant.' Scoville subsequently had a long interview with the prisoner, and took him to task for writing for the newspapers. Quitosu on his high horse, asking his lawyer how he dared to interfere in such matters, and threatening him with immediate expulsion from the case if such meddlesome conduct was continued.

The jail guards say Guiteau slapt fairly Friday night and that he was cheerful and hopeful Saturday. No visitors or reporters were allowed to see Guiteau to-day. The prisoner still continues to place his only hope in the court in banc. Counsel for Guiteau to-day claim th have discovered now evidence which will insure a re-opening of the case." All rumors that any of the Guiteau jurors, were tampered with are emphatically denied by the oreman and marshal.

Mosers, Scoville and Reed appeared in the Criminal court Saturday, and inquired of the court as to the form of the bill of exceptions which would be required. The court instruct ed them that it had been the practice of the court to require that the exceptions should be made specifically. In the afternoon the prisoner's counsel filed with the clerk of the Supreme court of the District of Columbia the papersupon which the motion for a new trial vill be based. There were filed an affidavit by the prisoner; an affidavit by P. H. Snyder, declaring that a newspaper was found the the room occupied by the jury; an affidavit by J. W. Guiteau, declaring that certain names on the margin of the newspaper were in the handwriting of certain of the jurors; and an affidavit of Scoville, swearing to the discovery of new i ovidence.

In the bundle flied is a motion for a ing to specify under which count of the indictment a verdict of guilty was rendered; that the trial was illegally continued through two terms of court; that the court was without jurisdiction, and that the jury misbehaved in reading a newspaper. Other stereotyped reasons are assigned, such as mistakes in to 117. charging and injadmitting and excluding evi-
