As yet we had seen no Chairman and officer could be dispensed with, when some member said thal a chairman was by for just such special occasions, assumed the chair and directed the business of the evening. Three judges were hen selected to decide the question. They sat in the corner, listened to oratorical attempts and looked wise.

Figg, who affirmed that imprisonment for life is the only proper way to deal with the murderer. His address was very earnest and scholarly and was listened to with marked attention.

Mr. D. Snyder supported the hanging theory in a strong, logical argument.

Mr. M. Dailey followed with a sentimental speech full of misty generalities and unproved assertions, interspersed with flowing rhetoric such as "From the stormy Atlantic to the wide Pacific, and the flower-strewed gulf to the great

Adjournment soon took place, over coats were put on, lanterns lighted, and the people went to their respective WOLVERINE.

The work of constructing the New York, Ontario and Western Tunnel through the Pallsades, from Weehawken to New Durham, is being pushed forward night and day. Five shafts have been sunk, and the tunnel is being excavated both ways from the shafts through the solid rock. It is twenty-seven feet high and about thirty feet wide. Railroad tracks run from each shaft, and the load ed cars are raised and lowered with wire cables. A locomotive draws the loaded cars to the edge of the bill and Vitality of Serpents. In almost every country a curious belief exists, in some form or other, that a serpent will not die before sundown. however mutilated it may be. Perhaps the great tens ity if nervous vitality common to ell the lower or so-called cold-blooded animals -as evinced by their vigorous et ntortions after desapitation, and even muscular quiverings of the dissevered portions when cut into pieces-may account for this. A huge Python molurus has been known to anatch a torch out of a coolie's hands and shake it to pieces after its body was cut in two and the anterior half transfixed with a sword. And everywhere poisonous snakes abound it will be found that some particular tribe of Indians or religious sects or other people are reputed to have the power, by means of inoculation or otherwise, to prepare their bodies so as to render them proof against the effects of the venom, and are thus enabled to handle dangerous serpents with impunity. But alas! when we come to investigate these (on the face) by no means impossible or very improbable tales, we soon meet with a tissue of nonsense which throws one back in disappointment and disgust. Thus, Mme. La Rarca, in her book on Mexico, says that injections of the rattleanake's venom into the veins is practiced there, the result being that the inoculated one is not conly protected from the bite of all venomous animals. but has the power of inflicting a fatal bite himself! I think Pliny attributes some such process with the scorpion's poison to his African "psylli," or serpent charmers, instead of the far more

Chicago policemen are very kindhearted and sympathetic fellows.
