Wickel Plate

This metal, allied to cobalt and to iron, has been known for nearly two centuries, but it was not discovered to be a distinct deposit until 1751, when Cronstedt gave the metal a thorough in vatigation.

Now-a-days this nickel plating has grown into such common use that its care and polish become necessary. The girls rammed their handkerchiefs in following "prescription" may prove of

When nearly iry, remove the whiting with a clean dry cloth, and you will see a brilliancy equal to new plating. When the plate is destroyed by oxidation, or rust striking through the coating, of course whiting is not capable of replacing the metal; nothing can be done in that ease, except to call in the aid of the nickel plater, and give a new surface to the article; but that is not of necessity an expensive process, and every year will increase turn, but kept going straightforward. facilities for procuring such renewals of Some one called to the crowd standing beauty. Dealers in nickel plated goods may find it advantageous to keep the mixture we have described, for sale to their customers. In small bottles tightly corked, to prevent evaporation of the alcohol, the polish might be kept for years, without detriment.

Caught a Husband.

In some parts of France marriageable girls are accustomed to pluck, as they return from midnight mass on Christmas eve, a sprig of apple-tree, which they put in a vial full of water. The vial is hung in their botchamber, in front of the window; if one bud blooms before Easter, the mistress is sure to be the servants of a chateau near Alencon

Ursule. Taking advantage of the dark night she, too, plucked a sprig of appletree, sure that nobody, saw her. She was mistaken. A fellow-servant saw her, and made servants hall ring with peals which we guarantee has of laughter at poor Ursule's expense. Still they kept the secret among themselves. They all agreed to play a trick on poor Ursule. Easter eve one of the journeymen gardeners removed the old sprig of apple-tree from the vial in Ursule's bedchamber, and put in its place a sprig covered with blossoms. When Ursule went into her bedchamber she could not believe her eyes. She returned to the servants' hall, her face being radiant with delight as she showed her ble antique candle-stick, to carry in the trophy. The laughter, jeers, and hoot-sleep-walking scene in "Lady Macings of her comrades revealed the trick put on her. She stood dumbs confounded, trembling scarcely able to restrain her tears. Just at this moment the mistress entered the servants' hall. An | elderly servant explained the scene to her. The mistress said: "Ursule, the apple-tree sprig may be trusted; believe it; you will be married before Chiristmas next; you are a virtuous girl; I am sure you will make a virtuous wife; all you want to get a husband is money; the money wanted I will give you." As she spoke, the mistress twined a 1,000-franc bank note around the sprig, and returned it to Ursule. A fortnight afterward they journeyman gardener who had put the trick on her asked her in marriage, but she refused him (at which he was greatly icered) and married another.
