full-history could be known, it would doubtless be very interesting. It is situated on the east side of the Severn river and about one-halfmile from that body of water; but it is washed on the east by a still larger arm of the bay. It is thus on a peninsula known as Greenberry's point, on the southern end of which is the lighthouse which guides the mariner into the Annapolis harbor. This peninsula is now divided into several farms, and some fifty acres or more belong to the general government, on which is an old fort; but the Palmer tract is known as Greenberry's proper. How early it was settled I am not informed, but for some generations past, two slabs of hard blue stone have been lying on the surface of the ground, each bearing an inscription to the memory of a departed of the ground, each bearing an inscription to the memory of a departed of the ground, each bearing an inscription to the memory of a departed of the ground of the first proprietor, who departed this life in 1807 and 23. the full-history could be known, it would scription to the memory of a departed one. One is to the first proprietor, who departed this life in 1697, aged 73; the other to his wife who died in 1698, aged 50, if I remember correctly. It has been supposed that a vault existed under ground somewhere not far distant from these slabs; but although historical parties have spent a great deal of time and money in searching for the Greenberry family vault for the past twenty-two years, their afforts have always been finitees. But Mr. Palmer, the new comer, seems to be a lucky man, and last fisturday while ploughing and working the garden accidentally made the discovery of the vault. A brick was struck in some way that seemed to be firm, and it was seen discovered that it was the top of a wait. Mr. Palmer had heard about the selection that had been made for the vality with legan to excavate at come, and noon depart legan to excavate at legan to the appriculation of the dead. In addition to these labors of an immediate ly necessary character, other scientific work is frequently carried on at Government expense, which aims at the discovery of truth for its own sake, apart from its direct applications. For examples, the transit of Venus and solar additions may be named. ar eclipse expeditions may be named, as well as the work carried on by the Bureau of Ethnology. In the latter organization, by Government aid, valuable data are saved which would otherwise be lost to science; and this is as it skould be. Too often, in our busy, b every-day life, we forget that there can be no applied science unless there is some pure science to apply; and that i the larger problems of science, includ-ing much of material value to mankind, are too vast to be grappled by unaided individuals or even by private corporations. They can be solved only by the combined efforts of many trained exposed and reach away up toward the combined efforts of many trained exposed and reach away up toward the combined efforts of many trained exposed and reach away up toward the dangerously injured by the sl.pp.ng of a gr.p weighing over three hundred pounds, which fractured his skull. of affairs which can only be brought about by governmental assistance.

Since every modern government is necessarily in account to the correction of the cor ernment is necessarily in competition money, be eareful how you invest it. with other governments, either in the way of increasing its resources or perfecting its means of defense, it follows that aid to science is one of the factors essential to success; and that that nation which fails in far-sighted intelligence will lag behind in material affairs also. Science, both pure and applied, has become a necessity, upon which the welfare and very life of nations must depend. No nation can fairly expect to receive all the benefits of science will egiving nothing in return. Even Mile giving nothing in return. Even the narrowest utilitarian must see what vast results sprang from the niggardly public grant which rendered possible the first line of the Morse telegraph.—

English Ballet Girls.

Mr. Hollingshead, I see, has contributed his views of the ballet to a cotemporary. According to him, a ballet girl ought to be pretty, and it is all the better for the manager if mashers come to look at her, while, if they wait for her outside the stage door, it is no business of his. That a ballet girl ought to be fairly good-looking is un-questionable, for her mission is to exhibit the poetry of motion and to post-ure in tableaux. Mothers are not ad-mitted behind the scenes, for there is no room for them, and clearly the manager cannot see all his ballet girls home. It therefore depends very much on the girl herself what she does out of the theater. But the same may be said of the girls in telegraph offices and in shops. I do not know how a ballet girl is exposed to more temptation when dancing on a stage with the footlights between her and the spectators than a shop-girl behind a counter.

There are, no doubt, girls who go into the ballet as a means to an end. But health this is the exception. Ballet girls, generally speaking, are relations of persons connected with the theatrical profession. The theater is their world. and they are accustomed to its ways.
At rehearsals they hang together, and in their every-day garments they look very much the reverse of houris. Their chief pleasure consists in eating sweet stuff and cakes, on which food they like to lunch. Their language to each other, and when in the room, where they all dress, is not refined, but father the reverse, and it probably would surprise a girl not to the manner bord and audidenly thrust among them; this however, is the worst that can be said against them, and when they leave the theater they do not loiter, because they have but one thought—to catch the 'bus.—

Losson Truth.

The Good Old Mothers.

God bless all the good old mothers. I never see an old lady sitting in the armchair at her ease but I think what storms have pelted into the cheery face without souring it. It may be that a man can so through more exertion than a woman, but at least it remains true that he cannot without losing his laughter has cood cheer, his gentleness, and the love and trust in maskind or God. Tet how rarely do you find a frail old mother whose spirit has been worn mother whose spirit has been worn threadbars and unloyely by what she has endured. A swell old mother is common; a swell old lather is not so common. As thy day so thy strength of love, thy riches of an inexhaustible benevolence and hope and faith. This is more apt to be woman's history than a man's.—Boston Home Journal.

The Burglary Affair.

Last Friday night, Mr. Geo. J. Begole caused the arrest of Charlie Matthews, 7 years old, for stealing money from his house, and on Saturday Charlie was sentenced by Justice Van Dusen to the Detroit House of Correction for ninety days. As there are so many wild stories afloat, making the matter in some points worse than it really was, we give below a full account from one who knows all the circumstances:

Mr. G. J. Begole, who resides on Elm street, in this city, has, from time to time, missed sums of money from his house, amounting in all to $11,00, and it has been a great mystery to him and and poor. The militia gathered at Joliet, Ill., comprises five companies and a battery. A band of four hundred striking quarrymen marched from Lemont Saturday morning, and were met on the Lockport road by the Streeter militia, backed by the Joliet company. When the soldiers made a charge, the strikers threw away their clubs and started in all directions, but seventy of them were captured and lodged in the armory at Joliet. Work progressed in all the quarries Saturday, under military protection. The sheriff released all but four of the strikers captured by the militia. Adjusant General Vance regards the rioting as at an end. Early Thursday morning, as a passenger train from Louisville stopped for water at Hagrodsburg, Indiana, a maked man, armed only with a green hickory club, entered the baggage car. Instantly he fractured the skull of the express messenger, George K. Davis, and followed the set by shooting him in the head with a revolver snatched from his hand. We still continue to learn of the vast amount of good Dr. Hess is doing for suffering humanity. It would seem that none need suffer if they at once go to him for help. We have heard and seen the effects of his grand way of treating some of the rebel families. At some his class of patients, which by the way, risk to her safety she visited the home are the most difficult class to treat, for nearly all that he treats are those who for years have been siling and been treated by different ones with poisonous members of the Congregational Society drugs until nearly killed outright, and of this city, of which she has always finally given up to die, Such is the been a devoted and active member. class of patients with which he has to deal and after learning of his great and miraculous skill and success with them we can but give him great credit and conscientiously recommend him to all; and as a proof of his entire success we mention the case of Mrs. Cubit, who had long been suffering from stomach and most complete history of Owosso and bowel difficulty, which terminated in many county matters her books condropsy. She had been treated by a taining clippings from every newspaper great many different ones all of whom never benefited her and at last regarded her care incurable. But as a last re-Gould has continued to occupy the sort she went to Dr. Hess while on one handsome family residence on Oliver of his visits here, and in the short space of two weeks she came to him regarding herself cured, but by his advice she continued treatment for a while and in due course of time she had regained health,

We have been favored with another piece of sheet-music, says the New York World. This is "A Cry of Love, an Idylle by Le Marquis de Leuville.' It is not dedicated to anybody in particular, and we accept it as a peace-of-fering to the World. The refrain is, "O, kiss me once and let me die." Under the circumstances we give our reluctant consent.

Science destroys some of the most cherished popular delusions. Catgut is derived from sheep; German silver was not invented in Germany, and it contains no silver; Cleopatra's needle was not erected by her, nor in her honor; Pompey's pillar has no historical connection with that personage; sealing wax does not contain a particle of wax; the tuberose is not a rose, but a polyanth; the strawberry is not a berry; Turkish baths did not originate in Turkey, and are not baths at all; whalebone is not bone, and contains not any of its properties.

In his last word about America, in the Nineteenth Century, Mathew Arnold ridicules Sir Lepel Griffin's account of us; says he never before saw a people thoroughly suited to their institutions. He thinks we have solved both the political and the social problem. He be-lieves that English society can only be reformed by abolishing the aristocracy, and describes himself in conclusion, as bound to America by the memory of great, untiring, and most attaching kindness. So the smartest man in England has a good word for the people he expects to lecture to next year.

The May Century.

On account of its immensely large editions-the May number reaching 250,000—the Century changes its date of issue to the 1st day of each month.

'For special reasons, in the May number more space than usual is devoted to the War Series, and sixteen pages are added to the regular number, 160, in order that other subjects of public importance should not be slighted. A large space is given to an anecdotal paper on General Grant as a soldier, by Adam Badeau The frontispiece of the number is a striking portrait of General McClellan, engraved from a photograb taken especially for this purpose. Gen. McClelland contributes a graphic account of "The Peninsular Campaign," and makes special reference to his official and personal relations with Secretary Stanton and President Lincoln. Of peculiar in-Virginia. General Johnston describes in detail the battles of Bull Run and the first day at Seven Pines. The rescue of "Greeley at Cape Sabine" by Ensign Charles H. Harlow, of the rescue ship, Thetis; a humorously illustrated paper on the New Orleans Exposition; an article on "Typical Dors"; a paper on the poet Whittier, serials, short stories poems, bric-a-brac etc., all go to make up a remarkably interesting number of this very popular magazine. The Chicago Girl's Consideration,

Away off by himself in some humble corner of the globe sits ther man who first said the Chicago girl had big feet, looking at the immense mountain his original mole-hill of a lie has grown inthat, but for the plentiful supply of rice, hungry folks would find it hard to appears the inner wolf. All these are fair girls of the Garden City is curious.

A young lady of Chicago was about to be visited by a school-mate friend from St. Louis. "Mah," she said, "you know how sensitive Julia is, like all St. Louis girls?" "You refer to their large feet, Eleanor?" quietly said her mother. "Yes. And you know they look so enormous alongside of ours that I thought I'd order up a case of 25s from St. Louis, and give them around among the girls Julia will meet here." "It would be a delicate kindness on your part, Eleanor," replied the mother, and the noble-hearted Chicago girl did so. When the St. Louis girl strived at her friend's in Chicago she exclaimed: "Why, dear, your girls have just as big feet as we have!" and immediately telegraphed the fact home. This is how it originated.—Pitteburg Chronicle.

leled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises. The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote comtries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short-time of HALL'S HAIR REXEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to pesh forward a new and vigorous growth. The committee in charge of the construction of the base and pedestal for the reception of this great work are in want of funds for its completion and have prepared a miniature statuette, an exact counterpart of the original, six inches in height, the figure being made of bronze, the pedestal of nickle silver, which they are now delivering to subscribers throughout the United States for the small sum of $1 each. Aside from its being a lasting souvenir of this colossal statue, it will ornament our homes and bear testimony that we have contributed to the completion of one of the grandest works of modern times. All remittances should be addressed to Richard Butler, Secretary American Committee of the Statue of Liberty, No. 38 Mercer street, New York. The committee are also prepared to furnish a model, in same metals, twelve inches in height, at $5 each, delivered. We feel assured our people will be only too eager to testify their grateful sense of the friendliness of this magnanimous offer on the part of the French people, and to reciprocate the kindly and liberal sentiments in which it originated, by thus aiding in an active prosecution of the labors that may be required to give the statue an appropriate base and pedestal. Now is the time to do it. Whoever wishes to have the honor and pleasure of contributing to that should be welcomed and encouraged, must act promptly, for the money will be raised as sure as the sun rises. Every subscriber sending $1 will be supplied with a miniature counterpart of this great and imperishable statue of LIBERTY ENLIGHTENING THE WORLD.

Dear Sirs:

We have the pleasure to advise shipment, as per memo. below, of the teas kindly ordered through our agents, Messrs. A. Schilling & Co., which go forward on through Bill of Lading to their care. You will find the tea to answer your expectations in every respect, and to be as you desired, the best possible value for the money. With your usual enterprise, we trust you will have no difficulty in demonstrating to the trade the peculiar merits of your brand, and that the teas which we export in Perfection Tea cans, and which have been cured by the Perfection Process, are superior in every way to other Japan teas, whether pan or basket-fired.

Respectfully yours,
