A SPRING CLEANING.

For a whole week Number two Bredgar Vilas, Camberwell New Road, had been turned supside down and inside out," as poor Mr. Clayton declared, wall there was no rest for the sole of one's foot," and each morning as he ton Church with his son; he vowed that never again would be undergo the agonies of "a spring clean." But the afternoon of the last day at length arrived, and Mrs. Clayton and Winifred, her daughter, with their one servant, were busy as bees putting the finishing touches to the household arrangements, though it must be said that Winnie, who had just finished her you. last term at boarding-school, and who was not yet fairly domesticated, was a more. Trying them on came next, in the natural course of affairs. It was an amusing process. They were woefully out of style, most of them buttoned behind, none of them reached below the tops of her shoes; but it was very absorbing, and she heard her mother calling to her up the stairs to come down to tea. She was arrayed at that moment in a white spotted muslin, which she remembered to have worn for the first time on her fourteenth birthday.

It had a sash which tied in an imposwas several inches shorter than-supposing there had been anybody to observe—would have been strictly desir-

Winnie giggled. A sudden idea had struck her. She pulled out her hairpins hastily, braided her hair in a long tail, and tied it with a blue ribbon; she had discovered a string of coral beads in her drawer—she had worn it at the age of six—and put it on; and then she giggled again delightedly, and went downstairs. Her little plan was, to a certain extent, highly successful. Her father looked at her with exactly the degree of bewilderment she had anticipated; her mother set down the teapot and gazed at her in just the astonished, half-remonstrating way she had known she would do; her brother George emitted the explosive chuckle she had expected. But there her tri-into his mouth, and advanced as mujestically as her limited skirts would "My friend, Tom Bradley. You've heard me speak of him, Winnie. My sister," said George from behind his napkin. Mr. Bradley turned his blue eyes up-

It had twisted its chair away from him as far as possible; it was bending low over its plate; it was evidently

The young man smiled paternally. "Do you go to school?" he began, in the patronizing tone young men assume toward small girls.

Winnie murmured something inaudibly;-George gave a violent snicker, and covered it hastily with a cough. Tom Bradley, being a kind-hearted fellow, and unwilling to see anybody uncomfortable, talked industriously to his timid neighbor, in the hope of relieving her embarassment, though she was certainly the most diffident child he had ever seen. But he observed-

And the conversation, with this small start drifted on gayly. It struck her, as they talked on, that Mr. Bradley, for a married man, was-well-not well-behaved. He kept his eyes fixed on her in an admiring way; the tone of his remarks —half bantering, wholly complimenta-ry—was highly improper under the circumstances. He had edged nearer and nearer to her, until there was no appreciable space between them.

Winnie felt that something must be done. She went to the piano hastily, and played a few meaningless notes with desporate speed.

Mr. Bradley followed promptly, and leaned over her with an air of profound enjoyment. "Does Mrs. Bradley play?" said Winnie, frigidly. "Mrs. Bradley?" her companion repeated, smiling inquiringly, and leaning rather lower.

"Your wife!" said Winnie, severe-""Oh, but I haven't one!" said the young man cheerfully.

Winnie looked up at him quickly, and immediately looked down again. "I haven't one," Mr. Bradley re-peated softly; "but I've been thinking for the last twenty minutes that 1'd

But when she got up to her room that night, at wrather late hour, and sank on the edge of the bed, staring with unseeing eyes at the white muslin, lying where she had left it in a heap on the floor, the thought did run vaguely through her mind that perhaps she had nelped, or hindered, her mother for the last time.

The Lightning Ticket Seller.

Barnum used to earry round with him his famous "Lightning Changer," an individual whose mechanism was a side-show in itself. The man sold the fifty-cent admission tickets. He would receive the coin, make change and deliver the tickets to half a dozen persons at a time. The rapidity of his hands was so great that their movements could not be analyzed. It seemed to the dazed observer as if he did nothing but make a continual "scooping" movement of the money into the wagon behind him; but with all his swiftness he never made an error in change. The struggling, fighting crowds would Mr. Bradley barely an hour and a half swarm about him, thrusting in their halves and fending off the press about them. HALL'S was the first preparation perfectly adapted to core diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the heir and scale.

HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparal. leled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The infuriated white miners organized themselves into a company, armed with shotguns and revolvers. They marched to that portion of the town occapied by the Chinese. After firing a voicey into the air, they reloaded and ordered the Celestials to quit the piace. The Chinese did not stend aron the order. Chinese did not stand upon the order of their going, but went at once. They fled like stampeding sheep to the hills, closely pursued by the miners, who fired several volters at the fugitives, wounding many and killing seven outwounding many and killing seven outright. The Chinese quarters were, then set on fire, and thirty nine houses owned by the company were destroyed with their contents. It is believed that several who were feeble and helpless per-ished in the firmes in Chinatown. Not one of the 400 Chinamen who were here yesterday how remains. All are in the hills heading for Green River, fourteen miles west. Sheriff Young, with a posse of deputies, arrived from Green River in a special train, but too late to prevent the mob from accomplishing its plans. All is quiet now. The Union Pacific officials have appealed to Governor Warren for protection. The Chinese have now been driven out of Rawlins, Carbon, Laramie, and other points in Wyoming.

A BAD SITUATION.

CHEYENNE, Wy. T., Sept. 4.—News Chevenne, Wy.—T., Sept. 4.—News from Hock Springs, received this morning, indicates a worse state of affairs than reported fast night. Every Chinaman—over five hundred in number—has been driven out of town. Fifteen dead Chinamen have thus far been discovered, and as many more dead bodies are probably in the ruins. Fifty houses belonging to the railroad company and fifty more owned by Chinamen are yet in the hills west of town, without men were burned. The Chinamen are ulators will take advantage of the row yet in the hills west of town, without food, and afraid to go to Green River.

Wurtele, of the Western division of the Union Pacific railroad. No more disturbance is anticipated. Food will be sent to the starving Chinamen in the hills by the authorities.

Cheyenne, Wy. T., Sept. 5.—Yesterday's news from Rock Springs. Wy. T., shows that affairs have been quieted down; but that the white coal miners have determined to keep out the Chinamen. Most of the Chinamen who have drawn out are still in the neighboring hills, while quite a number have been River for refuge. U. S. DEPT. OF AGRICULTURE, Washington, D. C., March 10, 1853. C. E. ANDREWS & CO.-Gentlem will received by express from Thos. Dydon and J. P. Harkins & Co., Grand Ave., Milwankee, and Harper Bros., Chicago, Ill., samples of Andrews' Pearl and Royal Baking Powders. The cans were in good condition when received, and the seals unbroken. I find upon analysis that Andrews' Pearl Baking Powder contains about four and a half (42) per cent more cream tartar than the Royal Baking Powder, and a proportionately larger percentage of carbonic acid gas, and I find it to be free from alum, and any injurious substances. The late Secretary Frelinghuysen had a conviction that if he ever went to sea he would be drowned. So he never went to sea. He was nominated and confirmed as Minister to England by President Grant. His commission was made out. He went on to Washington to receive his instructions from Secretary Fish. At the last his dread of the ocean overcame him. He refused to leave the United States, and he handed back his commission.

Grant's Cigar Stumps.

General Grant, when President, used to walk out every evening for a smoke. Just at dusk he would come out of the north gate of the White House alone, with a cigar in his mouth, his head bent down just a little, and his left hand behind him holding a cane. That was his favorite attitude, and the striking figure was familiar to everybody. The hackmen on the streets would take off their hats as he went by and he always returned their salutes. He would walk down past the Treasury Department, down Fifteenth to the avenue; thence past Willard's, past the National Theater, and up Thirteenth toward New York avenue. All the newsboys, bootblacks, and street arabs generally, knew him and would follow him in his walk, waiting for him to throw his ci-gar stumps away. There was always a scramble after his stumps, either because they were better than those or-dinarily found or because he had smok-ed them, and there was some dignity attached to smoking after him. The urchin who got the stump would put it between his lips and stand with his back up against the door post of the National "peanut gallery," with his thumbs in the armholes of his vest, and puff-away with a dignity that was the envy of all his admiring associates. One day the General turned to two lit-tle urchins who had been following him for several squares, watching his cigar very eagerly, and asked them what he could do for them. "Pleash, mishter," one of them replied, anatching his ragged cap off and holding it with both hands in front of him, while his companion got close behind; "pleesh, mishter, we only wants a smoke what the President hash had."

The General smiled good-humoredly. and taking an expensive cigar from his pocket—the only one he had left—he cut it in two and gave each of them half. Hancock's Courtesy to Gordon.

Gen. Gordon related an incident of his experience in New York which appeared to have touched him very deeply. He was complimented in the first place by being invited to act as aid up-on Gen. Hancock's staff. When he called to report for duty he was handed an order which directed staff officers to take their positions in the line according to their rank. Gen. Gordon was embarrassed when he read this. He had held one of the highest offices in the confederate army, but under the existing order of things he had no rank. So he solved the vexed question of his position by going modestly to the end of the line below every one of the regular army officers down to the humblest. But he was not permitted to remain there. An aid from Gen. Hancock came galloping up and directed Gen. Gordon as the ranking officer to take his position at the head of the staff next to Gen. Hancock himself. This recognition of his old grade deeply touched Gen. Gordon, not that he cared anything for the position itself. He is too much a man of the world to be moved about trifles, but the spirit of courtesy and friendliness that dictated the offer stirred his chivalrous nature to its fullest depths... Again at the tomb Gen. Gordon feil back, deciding to yield the place to some of Gen. Hancock's regular military associates. But even then he was foiled by the watchful courtesy of Gen. Hancock. Word came quickly to Gen. Gordon that he was out of position, and he was directed to move up above Gen. Roger Jones and hold his place to the close of the ceremony. -- N. Y. World.

The Lancet says that the pain of neuralgia headache experienced by women is generally located in one or more branches of the second cervical nerve, very commonly those terminating in the scalp at the occiput. The nerves of the scalp are irritated by the hair being drawn tightly back, and put on the strain, not as a whole, in which case the strain would be spread over a large area of the surface, but by small bundles of hair, which are pulled back and held in place by hairpins. Relief. is often consciously experienced as a result of removing the hairpins, but this has only a temporary and partial effect. The injury done is lasting in All of the old California mining Its consequences. The present style of dressing hair should be discontinued. as it probably, in part, accounts for the extreme prevalence of neuralgio headache.
