THE MAD MARKSMAN.

That just taken a turn in Lompany with Doctor Noret, through the vastgardens that surrounded his hospital, i and was advancing with him toward the stoop of his own special dwelling. The celebrated physician, whose particular field was insanity, was explaining to me the case of one of his patients, whom we had met in an alley, and who had saluted us with a patron-

Doctor Noirot smiled. "No," said he: "re-assure yourself. you to see.

drew me toward a small pavilion, hid-Mexican fashion. He had his back. against the wall of the pavilion, and, at the moment we entered, raised his right hand, armed with a pistol. Our arrival did not disturb him. He aimed slowly, with a sure hand. I followed the direction of the weapon and saw, about twenty paces distant, at the foot of the opposite wall, a centre of the forehead. It was, as well as I could judge at that distance, the plaster mask of a Greek head, in which I thought I recognised the classic type of Diana, the Huntress.

The pistol was discharged. The head did not move, and not a fragment flew from it. "Look!" said the doctor to me in a low voice. "It's very curious. He never misses his mark. "He never misses?" "No. All the balls are lodged in the same place, in that dark hole, The man had drawn another pistol from his belt. He fired. As before, the mask remained intact. The weapon being loaded with several bullets, in the American fashion, the marks-man successively discharged five more balls. Not one of them cut the forehead of the white face. The doctor laid his hand upon the shoulder of the marksman, who wheeled about. His visage, though enframed by a strong beard, had an expression at once energetic and sad.

"Stop an instant," said the doctor to The man made, with his head, a sign of assent. Then the doctor led me to the other end of the court, and, behind the plaster mask, showed me a plate of blackened iron that protected the wall. In the centre of the plate, a round spot glistened with reflections of lead, produced by the flattening of the

"You see," said he, showing me the exact correspondence of this brilliant spot with the hole that pierced the plaster mask, "you see that all the balls pass through there. You will not find one of them elsewhere."

"It is marvellous," answered I.

But what strange history is associated With this man?"

"Come," said the doctor to me; "I will tell you all about it outside,"
We again crossed the court and the vestibule of the pavilion. And this is what Dr. Noirot told me, while behind us the detonations recommenced with regular intervals between them:-

"This unfortunate man," said my host, "calls himself Guido Ventura. Is he an Italian, a Spaniard or an Ameripan? That's what we don't exactly know. Probably he is an American, for it is the new world particularly that sends us these virtuosos of the revolver and the rifle. It was from there, at all events, that this one came to France. You may have seen him last year at the Alcazar d'Automne. where he gave four or five exhibitions, and would have had all Paris running to see him if a terrible event had not suddenly interrupted the course of his representations. But we must begin at the beginning. There is an exciting story involved, that I certainly am the only person acquainted with, having without aid, during the six months this man has been an inmate here, succeeded in reconstructing the details of it thanks to certain words that an intermittent, delirium snatches from him. Hence I will give it to you as I see it, sure that my vision does not deceive

"Guido Ventura, when he came to Paris, was accompanied by a young woman, named Miss Arabella. Sho was a superb creature, scarcely twenty years of age, with the head of a goddess, and the figure of a statue. Admirers were not lacking, and in less than a week it had become the fashion to go and see the splendid Arabella aid in his exercises the celebrated marksman, Guido Ventura. She stood proudly, her ams folded, her visage impassable, fifteen paces from Guido Ventura, who directed upon her the vain menace of his pistol, the infallible ball of which cut a card-between her fingers, broke the bowl of a pipe two inches from her lips, and crushed the shell of a nut placed upon her head.

"A slight trembling of the marksman's hand, and all would have been over with the superb Arabella. But the hand of Guido - Ventura never trembled. "Evidently Guido Venture loved this creature like an idol. To be convinced of it, it sufficed to notice one of those flashes that shot from his eyes each time when in the foyer of the theatre, where he was awaiting his turn to go tion. upon the stage, some gallant was unusually attentive to the handsome girl. It was because of him, particularly, that the marksman had made his engagement in Paris, and hastened his departure from America. But this man now had taken a notion to follow them, for it was on account of Arabella that he had come to Paris. "That night, when Arabella was preparing to assume her pages' dress for the performance, Guido Ventura saw a paper fall from her corsage. He picked it up, and read it; it was a love letter, proposing to the young girl an elopement and marriage the next day. When he came down into the foyer, the marksman had knitted brows and a quivering lip. He took a pistol and simed at his own image in a mirror, to try his hand. His hand did not tremble.

*Five minutes afterward he was on the stage, commencing his exercises. As he turned, he saw behind him in coulisse the American leaning against it. And such leave a painful impres- and abscess on lungs, and reduced to a walka flat Just at that instant Miss Arabella planted herself in front of him, her arms folded, her nutshell placed upon her head. She smiled. On whom was she smiling? On the man who was there behind him! Guido Ventura saw it clearly from the direction of her glance! Suddenly, her eyes having moved, she ceased to smile, and a shadow passed across her visage. Standing before her, Guido

Odd Marriages.

Rev. D. R. L. well, of the Ash Greve Methodist carried in this caty, says the Albany Extress, read a paper before a lecture-room of the Hulson Avenue different ways that people present themselves for marriage, the sad tessults of some marriages, and the amusing incidents that occur. Mr. Lowe is said: "All that pertains to the work." of the ministry is of interest and profitable to us as we exchange our thoughts in conference. Every minister has various experiences in starting people In married life. Sometimes these experiences are pleasant, sometimes sad and amusing, and oftentimes very an-where a colored man had become enamored of an Irish girl, and they finally presented themselves for marriage. After the ceremony had been performed they left, apparently happy. On the day following the man returned and wanted the marriage undone, but all I could do was to simply refer them to a lawyer. Another case that is amusing, and yet sad, is where I once married a young couple, and when I had pronounced them man and wife the young man paid me $1, and explained that ho was unable to pay more, as he had just lost what little money he had possessed. A short time afterward his wife died, and this young man came to borrow $2 from me, promising to return it in a day or two, but instead of returning it he went to za neighboring minister and was married on my money. I was once called to a house to perform the rite of marriage, having the certificate, all made out, with me. At the house the friends were all waiting. The table was spread with a bounteous supper. When it was time for the ceremony the bride came forward, not leaning on the arm of the groom, but, on the contrary, she was supporting him. He was so much under the influence of liquor as to be unable to walk. At my request he was scated, and I had a talk with the intended bride and learned that she was the daughter of rich and respectable parents: Her father was to shower a dowry of $10,000 on her at the time of her marriage, and she insisted on marrying this poor drunken wretch who did not own a dollar. I flatly refused and left the house, taking the certificate with me, as I did not deem it right to marry a man who did not know what he was about.

"These are some of the few cases that have come to my notice. Oftentimes I am compelled to turn couples away that present themselves for various reasons. The fees of ministers vary for performing the ceremony. Sometimes they receive as high as $20 and more, and range from that as low as $1 and nothing. Oftentimes some ask to have the fce trusted, which is always done. Some frequently agree to pay more, and others never pay at

In Afghanistan, when two families are negotiating a marriage an omen is consulted in the following manner: Several slips of paper are cut up, and on the half of them is written "To be," and on the other half "Not to be." These pieces of paper are placed under a praying-carpet and the anxious father devoutly raises his hands in prayer Almighty in the matter of his son's or daughter's marriage. Then, putting his hand under the carpet, he draws out a paper. If on it should be written "To be," he thinks the marriage is ordained of God; if "Not to be," no overturn or negotiation will be list- about it, for they fully guarantee it. ened to. Sometimes, however, the interests of state, or the value of the dowry, or the termination of a longstanding blood fend will induce the pious Caicftain to put aside the omen as having been influenced by the powers of darkness.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AVER'S SARSAPARILLA-in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

t. Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running theors formed; discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND's direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPA-RILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

for Bheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases. " We have Mr. LELAND's permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of Aven's Sansaparilla to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York. t/ Mr. LELAND's extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

Of boarding-houses there is no end, the prices largely depending upon the situations and the cars of people living in them. A young man sharing his room with some friend may be able to get fair accommodations for $4 per week, and, if the sole occupant, for $5. There are many small rooms on the upper thoors of boarding-houses in excellent locations which are rented to single men,

The table d'hote system has grown to great dimensions in this city during the past ten years. There was a time when dinners at fixed prices were only to be had at the hotels, but now they are to be found on the principal avenues and side streets, with prices varying from 40 cents to $1.50. Some of these establishments give their regular customers dinners and breakfasts for $6 per week. If it were not that the establishments employed cooks, both economical and skillful, it would be indeed a mystery how they could set before their guests two meals a day for less than $1, and particularly so when both dinner and breakfast are bountiful and palatable. It is estimated that no less than 5,000 men daily dine in these places during the winter season. He selected a hole into which I had seen a very large crab disappear, and I anticipated fun. The ape's tail had gone its full length into the had before his face indicated that the crab had made the connection. Suddenly he gave a start and a yell. He bent his body nearly double, and slapped his hands on his knees and wagged his head, with his teeth closed tight and his lips drawn down, while on his face was a look of agony and despair doubly intensified. He made several attempts to withdraw his tail, but fell back each time and howled as the crab drew it taut. Tears actually ran down sight of the great buildings throughout | the ludierous face of the suffering ape, and when he clapped both hands to his forehead and swayed his body to and fro, like a little old man tortured by self and yelled with laughter.
