He assumed that the revenue of this year would exceed that of last year by $10,000,000, and the total appropriations were $254,780,370, and an increase of about $23,060,000 over last year. Tie calculated that, under the joint resolution as agreed to; there would be $107,500,000 to be paid on the public debt during the current fiscal year, which would be within $29,000,000 of all that can be paid until 1891,

The senate adopted the conference report without division and then adjourned. Aug. 5.—The senate this morning passed the adjournment resolution amended so as to fix the time at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Consideration of the bill to prevent congressmen from acting as counsel for subsidized railways was fixed tor the second Monday in December. The house bill for the relief of certain dishonorably discharged soldiers of the 12th Michigan volunteer infantry was amended and passed. The conference committee on the fortifications bill reported a disagreement, which amounted to the failure of the bill. The clerk of the house was engaged in reading a presidential veto on a pension bill when the president's private secretary arrived. Upon his announcement that the president had approved the deficiency, sundry civil, and river and harbor bills there was a round of applained.

The moment of adjournment having arrived, the chair declared the session closed sine die.

App. 8.—The speaker to-day laid before the house the president's message announcing his approval of the elecmargarine bill, and it was read and referred to the committee on ways and means. Also, a message from the precident transmitting the papers in the Cutting case, and it was referred to the committee on foreign affairs.

Mr. Burnes submitted the conference report upon the descency appropriation bill and it was agreed to.

Mr. Morrhen submitted the conference report on the sunday civil bill. The reading of the report consumed nearly arrhenry and as 5 o'clock was near at hand Mr. Holand as 5 o'clock was near at hand was n man wished its consideration to go over until to-morrow, eaving that the increased appropriations for the salaries of officers were inexplained.

Mr. Randall replied that meet of the officers whose talaries were increased were in the land office. The report was then agreed to—year 126 nays 95—and the house adjourned.

Ave. 4.—Congressman Payson made a striking statement regarding railroad landgrant forfeitures, this morning. Prior to the forty-eighth congress no forfeiture bills were passed. I'ne forty-eighth congress enacted the forfeiture of 810,580 acres of the Oregon Central grant, 18,600,000 acres the village, Sunday, destroying two-of the Texas Pacino grant, and 300,000 thirds of the buildings in it. The present house has passed bills to reclaim 38,450,941 acres more, and the bills favorably reported to the nouse by its public land commuttee would reclaim a further area of 1:067, 14 acres.

Mr. Morrison called up the conference report on the joint-surplus resolution. He thought that the resolution as agreed upon by the conference committee was not so good a measure as that which originally passed the house, yet he thought, under the present condition of the treasury and bonded debt, it would accomplish just as much Mr. Hewitt believed the passage of the resolution would bring the country to a silver basis, by which 25 per cent of all the property of the country would change hands without the consent of the owner.

The report was then adopted—yeas, 120;

The secretary of the treasury therefore will be unhampered by any instructions to pay out the surplus faster than his discretion suggests. The refusal of the president to sign the private bills is not to be in-terpreted as evidence of hostility to them, but he did not have time to examine them before adjournment and did not care to raise a legal question as to the validity of a signature after adjournment. R Whipped Two Dogs and Gave Their Master a Tussle Before It Was Norman Fink, a nunter and trapper, who lives a short distance south of Gouldsboro, had to go on an errand to a neighboring settlement on Monday last writes a Scranton (Pa | correspondent to the New York Sun. It was nearly five miles from Fink's nouse to the settlement, and the quickest wav for him to make the journey was across the fields and through the woods on foot Fink invariably carries his double-barreled gun with him whenever he goes on a jaunt of that kind, and if any crows or other small game get within the range of his gun they generally acknowledge the fact that Fink is not far away by turning up their toes and lying still. All of the crows in that part of the country have got Fink's habits down to so fine a point that they make a bee line for the most elevated piece c woodland whenever they see Fink step from his house with his gun on his shoulder.

At about ten o'clock Fink loaded both parrels of his gun, slung his trusty wesoon over his left shoulder, called his two dogs to his side, and started on his journey. One of the dogs was a large, quiet and obedient fellow, and a pretty fair hunter, while the other was a cur of low degree, whose principal ambition was to bark almost incessantly from darkness to daylight, and to run after and bark at the two or three wagons which usually passed his master's house daily. He was a good-natured cur withal. and he had the faculty of keeping more meat and other tender food from spoiling than the larger and quieter hare hunter. But he would bark on the slightest provocation, and his bark was shrill and loud, and to everyone except

Mr. Fink very unpleasant indeed. Two miles or more of Fink's journey was through a thickly-timbered forest of spruce and hemlock. He had to go about a mile before he reached the woodland. The dogs kept close to him through the open field, but as soon as he entered the forest they scampered cur of low degree was unusually exuberant, and every bird that fluttered up from the underbrush as he skipped about was sufficient cause for him to bark like everything. Fink kept trudging along through the woods and saw the dogs only once or twice during the next half hour. Presently he heard the small cur barking furiously. He whistled to the dog, and the only response he received was from the quiet hare hunter, who bounded out of the bushes in front of Fink to see what his master wanted of him. Fink then stopped and listened, and the incessant noise indicated to him that, the cur had become stationary a few rods to the right, and that he was probably barking at some animal that he had run across by chance. Fink then hastened to the spot where the cur was barking, keeping his gun well in front of him to be ready to shoot whatever the noisy cur had brought to bay. He found the dog at the foot of an ordinary-sized spruce tree, on a point among the ever green branches of which his eyes were fixed. Fink looked into the thick-limbed tree-top from every possible standpoint, but was unable to dis-ble standpoint, but was unable to discover anything. The forest was so dense that only here and there were the rays of the sun to be seen from the ground, and, though Fink could not make out what the dog was barking at, he felt certain that some kind of an animal was among the himbs. The next thing he did was to take the cur by the nape of the neck and try to pull him away, but as soon as he let go the cur sprang back to the tree, and barked as though his heart would break.

Then Fink made a closer inspection, Then Fink made a closer inspection, and on one of the topmost trees he thought he saw the bright eyes of an animal that was keeping very still. He peered through the limbs again, and, being almost fully satisfied that he could see an animal's head, he raised bis gun sho shot at it. The cur was still for a few seconds, and then he began to bark again. By this time the quiet have hound had come up to see what was going on, but, as not much was going on there except the old familiar barking of the cur, he scampered away unconcerned. As Fink was re-loading the empty barrel something came spitting and sissing down through the limbs of the tree into which he had fired in a way that startled him. He jumped back divoluntarily, keeping his eye fixed on the tree menumile, and the next thing he new wire wounded wildcat run down the trunk of the tree and pounce savagely upon the still bark-ing cur. CUNEIFORM INSCRIPTIONS.

The Ast of Reading Them Pounded Upon a Great Deal of Ingenious Guessing.

Toward the end of the last century Prof. Grotefend, a German orientalist of marks were in three columns; so Niebuhr guessed by differences in the general appearane of the signs that they were in three different languages. He also guessed from the looks of the single strokes of the signs that these languages history. It is over thirty years since gold. These years worthers were all written from left to right, as we write English. And he guessed that the right hand column of the three, whose signs were less complicated than the others, was the simplest of the three languages. All these guesses were right. The inscriptions came from Persepolis, which was built by the Achtemenian kings of Persia (who ruled from about 521 to 331 B. C.), and they were found in the upper parts of basereliefs which seemed to represent a king or ruler of some kind. Tychsen and Munter, two other scholars, with this set of Niebuhr's guesses to begin with, had already guessed that a certain character several times repeated in the right-hand inscriptions of two of these triple sets might mean king, that cer-tain others found with this might be the king's name.

This was the point at which Grotefend took up the questioning. He took if for granted that the guesses so far were right—viz. that probably the signs in question were the names and titles of some of the Achemenian Persian kings.
But which kings? Here he happened to think of something; he remembered some inscriptions whose position and arrangement was somewhat analogous to those in hand—inscriptions in Pehlevi, a dialect of old Persian, already deciphered, and known to be of the Sassanian dynasty, a much later one. He translated the beginning of one of these; and he said: "Perhaps my supposed Achæmenid kings arranged the beginning of their inscriptions as my known Sassanid king did his. If so, my Achaemend words in the first two lines are these:

[Somebody,] the great king, the king of kings, Son of King [Somebody,] of the family of Achemenes." he entered the forest they scampered away in search of game. The barking his guessing. "What two Achæmenid ly reappeared. He was a different man. kings were father and son?" he asked He had sold a lot of skins he had cured, but my two names do not begin with beam with happiness. the same sign, and therefore can not > near each other, and were probably, he thought, not unconnected. The two initial lines were similar in these two inscriptions, except for one variation, which was: In one inscription the sign would be the richest man in the state.

> In which was: In one inscription the sign would be the richest man in the state.
> In which was with the name of the fath. for king was with the name of the father mentioned; in the other not; and the son of this non-royal father in one in-scription was the royal father of the royal son in the other. Now this ex-actly suited his guess of Darius and Xerxes; for Xerxes the king was son of Darius the king, whereas Darius the king was son of Hystaspes, who was not menes.

The key to the cuneiform inscriptions was found, although Grotefend himself, in consequence of not knowing enough about other oriental languages, never got much beyond this first step.

"Cuneiform" describes the way in which the single strokes are made in this method of writing, just as we call a style of writing back-handed or a style of type full faced. It does not refer to the language, were even to the fer to the language, nor even to the alphabet, but (so to speak) to the penmanship. Each stroke of each letter in a "cuneiform" inscription is a cuneiform or wedge-shaped stroke. Instead of this word, these strokes have been termed nail-shaped, arrow-headed, swallow-tailed, all of which terms, describe the same charactertistic.

You can easily make a pen for cuneiform writing. Take a four-square-ended stick of wood, say eight inches long and three-quarters of an inch through—a four-square desk-ruler will do—and user a corner of one end for writing; this is your pen. Instead of paper, take some softish, well-worked—brick-clay—and spread it on a board into a tablet or flat spread it on a board into a tablet or flat plate say a foot square and an inch or two thick. Hold your pen at a low ing cur. The wildcat was furious with rage, and he scratched and bit the cur before the latter had a chance to run for his life. Instead of barking, the cur now yelped and howled as though his hide was being torn off.

Before Fink could make up his mind what to do, the hair and blood flew from the head and the nose of the dog, while the witdcat kept spitting and sissing and scratching. In a short time the cur got loose from the cat and stuck his bloody nose into the dead leaves and rooted around as though he was suffering intensely. Then the cat tackled two thick. Hold your pen at a low alope, nearly horizontal, with a corner of one end pointing downward over the clay, and make strokes in the clay say an inch long, with a dab, a slight lift, and a draw; hitting a light blow into the clay, and drawing the pen toward the right, and you will make "cuneiform" strokes. There seems to be reason to suppose that instead of this method by a dab and a draw the strokes were (probably afterward) made by a direct stamp, like a type. In stone the strokes had, of course, to be cut.—Overland.

Last Honors to Samuel J. Tilden.

NEW 10RK, Aug. 8.—1 ne body of the late Samuel J. Tilden was taken from Yonkers, N. Y., and buried yesterday in the cemetery at New Leba-non, N. Y. At 8:30 a.m. the doors of Greystone were thrown open and the public was allowed to gaze upon the form of the dead man. A great many people availed themselves of the op-portunity. The body lay in state in the drawing-room of the mansion, which was draped with black, the somberness being simply relieved with flowers. President Cleveland and Secretaries Endicott and Whitney arrived at the house at 9:30 a.m. and joined the throng of people which passed around the casket. A few minutes later services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. William J. Tucker of Andover, Mass., who read the funeral prayer of the Presbyterian church and made a brief address on the privaté life of Mr. Tilden. The choir of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church of New York sang 'Abide with Me" and "Beyond the Smiling and the Weeping," and Miss Antonia Henne Sang One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

President Cleveland and Secretary Whitney sat at the head of the casket during these services. The pall-bearers were Secretary, Manning, John B. Trevor, Charles A. Dana, Charles Simmons, Daniel Magone, Smith M. Weed, John Bigelow, S. J. Randall, Andrew H. Green, George S. Miller, William Allen Butler Allen Butler, and A. J. Vanderpole. Among others present were Secretary Endicott, William S. Bissell, Congressman Spriggs, ex-Senator Barnum, Gov.

Hill, and Mayor Grace. Immediately after the close of the services the body was taken to New Lebanon by train. It was accompanied by Mr. Tilden's relatives and many of the distinguished people at Graystone. The president did not go to New Leba-Mr. E. M. Hopkins, Chairman of the non, but returned at once to Washington. On the arrival of the funeral train at New Lebanon the body was taken to the Congregational church of the village, where at least five thousand people were allowed to look for the last time at Mr. Tilden's face. The out formal services save a brief prayer offered by the Rev. Mr. Burril, pastor

> Sioux City, Iowa, Ang. 5.-The assassination of the Rev. G. C. Haddock, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of this city. Tuesday night, was one of the most cold-blooded murders ever committed in this state. The reverend man was waylaid at the corner of 4th and Water steets by three or four men, one of whom shot him through the neck, severing the jugular vien. Mr. Haddock fell in the gutter of the street and expired in a few minutes. All of his assailants fled and quickly disappeared. No arrests for the cowardly crime have yet been modified in the state.

The modified is directly traceanie, to the prosecutions of saloon-keepers recently inaugurated here, in which the Rev. Mr. Haddock was a leader. The affair has caused a deep feeling of indignation in the community, and all law-abiding citizens denounce the destardly dring in unmessured farms. An overflow meeting was held at the court house to-night, at which speeches were made and resolutions adopted condemning the crime and demanding or on the public works for the sum of $600, and in the event of fall and additions of the page in the position of the page in the enter of against it, the crime being laid directing and and the page and provided the page and the page and provided the page and page and provided the page and page and provided the page and page an hard la- closed doors, and it is thought that

An Overcrowded Profession.

"What proportion of the young men who register as students are eventually admitted to the bar?" was asked a wellfirst party of the season to reach the be impossible to give figures," he anproportion is a very small one. The great trouble for many years past has been that boys are brought up to look upon a trade as a degradation. If they show any considerable amount of smartness at school, fond and doting parents insist upon it that they must study a profession. Now, in most cases they are doing their children a grievous wrong, especially when it is necessary for them to earn a living at an early age. A boy graduating from the high school in the senior class most always wants to be a lawyer; it is, he thinks, the most gentlemanly of the professions and the easiest to learn. Some friends will probably get him in a position in a lawyer's office, where he will earn $3 or $4 a week with the privilege of studying. If he has any talent for it and his parents have any money he is all right, but if either of these conditions are wanting his whole life runs a chance of being spoiled. By the time he has studied for two or three years he often finds out that he can not live on the paltry salary he is drawing, and even should he pass his examination and become a full-Harper's Weekly says a financial re- fledged lawyer, unless he has some

"I have known at least a dozen young men who commenced to study law when they were about 16 years old, and, who, by the time they arrive at the age of 19, found that they had wasted a valuable portion of their lives and had really nothing to show for it. Nothing was left but to fight out life's battle on an other plane. One young man I knew became an attorney and then committed suicide. A few are fortunate enough to get places with men who will take an interest in and really help them, but these cases are as one to five hundred. -

Prominent People Who Drop Dead and What it Means, Mr. W.H. Vanderbilt while talking with President Garrett suddenly dropped dead. Vice President Hendricks took a severe cold, and in a day's time was no more. General McClellan after a drive in a cold wind sank in his chair and breathed his last. These are a fewof the most prominent cases of sudden death, thousands of which are occurring constantly. Doctors usually shake their heads and say "Heart disease" or "appoplexy." Not one case in ten is so caused. We go back of all this and find the cause, which is invariably—Bheums—tism. This disease has usually been conwhole system, and banishes all Rheumatic sidered painful but not dangerous, whereas it is one of the most dangerous of all afflictions. It is caused by morbid humors in the blood, and if it flies to the heart the sufferer dies instantly. Suppose, for example, a person takes cold which be-comes painful in the shoulder, limbs or ous to try and drive rheumatism. It is a blood disease and can only be fought in the blood while its dangerous nature the blood while its dangerous nature makes it an exceedingly serious subject. Unquestionably the most efficient means for driving these morbid humors, acids and rheums from the body now known to the world is Hibbard's Rheumatic. Syrup. It is an original discovery which sims directly for the blood and is taken into the circulation within ten minutes from the time it is used. It dissolves the poisonous acids, counteracts the deadly humors ous acids, counteracts the deadly humors and expels all rheams from the circulation. Mr. George W. Kennedy, secretary of the Electric Light Co., of Jackson, Mich., of the Electric Light Co., of Jackson, Mich., after going through a severe experience which greatly afflicted him, and endangered his life was ompletely restored by the use of this remedy and in speaking of it he said, "Unlike an external application is seems to remove the disease by purifying the blood and I can cordially recommend it to all."

This is a serious subject which may well comean every reader. Muscular them.

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & CMICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines hast and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitakes travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points hast, Rertheset and Boutheast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Bouthwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Balle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois, Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Blums, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Les, Minnespolis and St. Paul, in Minnesots; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations. THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly beliasted road-bed; smooth tracks of southneous stable rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholetered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Official in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurally eaten, "good Digestion waiting on Appetite, and Health on both." Between Chicago and Kanses City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, where connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and British Provinces. Over this routs, Fast Express Trains are run to the watering places, summer resorts, picturesque localities, and hunting and fishing grounds of lows and Minneapta. It is also the most desirable routs to the rich wheat fields and pastoral lands of interior Dakots.

Still another DIRECT LINE, via Seneca and Kankakee, has been opened between Newport News, Richmond, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, and Lafayetts and Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul and intermediate points.
