GENERAL NEWS. At Denver, Col., an unknown welldressed man entered the office of President Moffat, of the Denver and Rio Grande Railway, and informed him that he had heard of a plot to rob the First National Bank, of which Mr. Moffat is also President. The latter told his visitor he was busy, but would see him a few hours later at the bank. The meeting took place in the President's prints. few hours later at the bank. The meeting took place in the President's private office, the stranger showing a revolver and telling Moffat that he must have $21,000 or he would kill him and then blow up the institution with a bottle of nitro-glycerine, which he pulled from his pooket. Thus menaced, Mr. Moffat filled out a check and had it cashed; and the unknown taking the money heated.
