OSBURN & SONS'
DOUBLE :-: STORE
OWOSSO.

WE SELL MORE

Dry Goods, Carpets, and Clothing,

Than any other store in Central Michigan, and at LOWER PRICES!

Than Detroit, Grand Rapids or Saginaw

The great question of the day is, what, when, how and where to buy. Some try the banterer, and only judge by the amount thrown off, whether it was cheap, and are still in doubt whether it was bottom price.

A few would like to have their neighbors pay more than themselves; this is selfish and uncharitable

The Majority

Prefer to trade where the Bottom Prices are marked in Plain Figures. This is the plan of our house. On this plan we invite all to visit our popular store where you will find the Largest Collection of Desirable Dry Goods, Carpets and Clothing, and at the leanest percentage possible. If you have not traded with us ask some of the thousands of customers who have traded with us for years and years.

The semi-annual [illegible] of the Bennington Township S. S. Association, Mr. Conrad Kline President, Miss Laura Curtis Secretary, will be held at the M. E. Church, [illegible] Bennington, next Sunday, [illegible] commencing at [illegible] a. m. The program will consist of Devotional Exercises; Secretary's Report; Reading by Miss Mina Bristow; Recitations by Misses Myrtie Hall, Stella Gillett and Rachel Jobs; Discussion of topic, "How to teach Successfully," opened by Rev. A. S. Fair, and Essay by Miss Carrie Alexander; the various exercises interspersed with music by the Bennington and Pittsburg schools and choirs.

Exercises by the children—Music by the German School; reading by Misses Emma Kline and Emma Merrill; recitations by Misses Emma Creager and May Kline; essay by Frank Hunt.

Byron Gossip.

On account of our protracted drouth, wheat never looked worse in this vicinity at this time of year. Many think that a great portion of it will not come up provided rain should fall in abundance.

Some sneak thieves entered Dr. Webster's cellar last week and carried away about one hundred pounds of honey and some grapes for a winter supply.

Mr. A. D. Hitchcock bade farewell to his many friends in Byron and went to Alma in the employ of the T. A. A. & N. M. R'y. Mr. Hitchcock is a man of genial temper and obliging manners and will be very much missed in our social gatherings.

Scarlet rash prevails in our midst; new cases every day, but no serious results as yet, only thinning out the school.

Professor French has been confined at home the past week on account of his limb recently amputated.

Mr. John Swick of Lockport, N. Y., is visiting relatives in Byron. He will soon pass his eighty-sixth birthday; is still hale and hearty.

MICHIGAN STATE ITEMS.

Flint has granted a franchise for street cars.

In accordance with the new law, the Genesee county clerk has received Democratic and Republican tickets for the Fenton elections, to be filed in his office.

The creditors of the late John Weimeister, the Howell banker who died shortly after the failure of his bank, have petitioned the Judge of Probate to have Alonzo T. Frisbee appointed administrator of his estate.

Since a verdict of over $1300 was obtained against Warden Watkins of the Ionia prison for beating convict Johnson with a lash, which is prohibited by law, other wardens are trembling lest convicts may come back upon them for similar cause. Probably this will end the use of the lash as a prison discipline.

We hear that the boys through the country are getting the bulge on the town clerks in the sparrow bounty business. They are killing ground birds and palming their heads on the clerks for sparrows and succeed in getting the bounty. They rarely have a genuine sparrow head. The clerks should open their eyes a little wider and stop the fraud.—[Stanton Clipper.

A mysterious murder was perpetrated last week near Reading, Hillsdale county. Mr. Frank Brown, 40 years of age, was called to the door about 9 o'clock p. m. when some one shot him dead. The frightened wife ran for neighbors, but is unable to tell much of the occurrence. Tracks leading from the house were found, but no clue to the murderer, and no cause for the deed can be surmised.

Lapeer Democrat: The apple harvest has proven of great value to farmers this fall, prices and demand exceeding that of any previous year. Many orchards in this vicinity have netted their owners sums ranging up in the hundreds, and in view of light yields of other crops the result is most gratifying. Byron G. Stout, of Oakland County, well known here, realized $2,000 clean profit for the entire yield of his orchard this year.

There were about 65 people in the hotel. Many were fortunate to escape with but few garments on. It is an inland mining town.

A few days ago it was pay day at one of the mines, and [illegible] a convention going on, and quite a number were in town blowing themselves, as they call it, so the town was lively for a few days and a goodly number of black eyes are visible from the effects of tanglefoot and doubting other people's word—some were called liars and they did not believe it was so, you know.

Obey the Laws.

CORUNNA, Oct. 19, 1889.

EDITORS PRESS:

There is a question of the most vital importance, not only to our own city and county, but to the entire state and nation, which I desire to ask through the medium of your valued paper, to wit:

Does the law conferring special privileges by licensing the sale of spirituous liquors carry with it an unwritten law which is in fact more potent and powerful than the law itself? And if not, why should not those persons engaged in this business be held to a strict construction of the law, and be compelled to obey and conform themselves to the law which confers the special privilege?

The law provides that they shall close their doors at certain hours of the night; that they shall not keep open on Sunday; that they shall not sell to a person who is an habitual drunkard; or to an infant or minor; that no screen shall be placed before the door or doors, window or windows to obstruct the view of the passer by; and yet, every one of these wholesome provisions is most outrageously violated every day in the week. The business under the law (if the law is obeyed) becomes as legitimate as any other business. But if they set at defiance not only the law but the community, should not every good citizen (who is law-abiding) demand that they shall obey the law with all the restrictions thrown around it by the law maker?

I have no desire to interfere with the right the law has conferred upon the liquor dealers, but as a christian man and a law abiding citizen, believing in equal and exact justice to all, I do appeal to them to become obeyers of the law. Their own interest, it would seem to me, would lead them to do this, for the privileges which they have are only special and if they continue to violate them the result must be to arouse a now but sleeping public's opinion, which when so aroused, will take from them even the few special privileges which the law confers upon them. My motto is—Equal and exact justice under the law, to all men; to the violators of law equal and exact punishment. Let every man obey the law. In furtherance of this and to encourage those engaged in the liquor business in our city, county and state, I herewith append a resolution recently passed by the liquor dealers' association of New York, at Rochester, as follows:

"Resolved, That we appeal to every dealer in our state to rigidly obey all laws, and to so conduct his business as to give the least offense to good order and good morals."

A Card.

Members of the Citizens' Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Oakland, Genesee and Shiawassee counties, Mich., having business with the Company, will please call on N. Baldwin, Esq., at his office in rear of M. L. Stewart & Co's Bank, Owosso, who will always be found ready to represent their interest and that of the Company. Thanking the insuring public in and about Owosso for their liberal patronage of the Company, we solicit the aid and patronage of owners of dwelling house risks, church societies and school districts. We can save all a little. The profits of our Company are divided among the members, stock company profits among the few stock holders. JNO. M. B[illegible], Sec.

Copemish.

Copemish is the [illegible] of Beech City which has [illegible] been given to the town which is [illegible] Ann Arbor and Lake Michigan crosses the Manistee & North Eastern R. R., and from which point the grade is being built to connect with the Frankfort & South Eastern.

It is situated on Bear Creek, Cleon township, Manistee county, and is in the midst of a dense growth of hard wood. The town has been platted by H. W. Ashley, General Manager of the former road and Buckley & Douglas of the M. & N. E. The lots are on the market and as a consequence buildings are going up in every direction, notably among which is a large hotel, the Copemish, which will shortly be completed.

Europe Through American Eyes.

The letters of the workingmen who comprised the American expedition to Europe and the Paris exposition, sent there by The Evening News, are now appearing every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday in that paper. They are not particularly elegant in diction, but, what is better, they are clear, and give the reader a good idea of how the customs and methods of European workingmen and women appear to American eyes. These letters are being published by twenty or more other newspapers of wide circulation, and it would seem that no one interested in economic subjects could afford to miss reading them.

Big Heads vs. Pin Heads.

A pair of Swartz Creek lovers lately hit upon a happy idea whereby the young man on his arrival may know if his lady love is at home. On reaching the house he carefully slides his hand along the gate post until he encounters a pin she has stuck therein. If the young lady is at home the pin head will point toward the house, if away the head will point in the opposite direction. The idea is said to have met with favor by all the young folks up that way who are thinking of snuggling up evenings for the winter, and it is laughable at night to see the young fellows in front of the houses of their charmers running their fingers down the gate post to find the pin. Sunday night is the busiest one of the week.—Flint Democrat.

The common belief is that when wheat has once sprouted in the ground and long continued dry weather follows and it fails to come up, it has rotted and the germ is killed. Supervisor Seeley has some wheat out and to test the theory dug down a few days ago and took out a dozen kernels with sprouts from one eighth to one-quarter of an inch in length. These kernels he carried in his pocket for several days until thoroughly dried. He then planted them in a flower pot and gave them plenty of water, and they shot up immediately and the sprouts are now several inches in length. In consequence he is in doubt on the malting theory.—Flint Democrat.

If township clerks fail to call for and get the books sent by the Secretary of State to the county clerk for the township clerk, justice of the peace or other township officials, they will lose the value of the books from their own pockets. The new law requires that such officers must account to their successors for these books and if the town clerk has failed to deliver them that officer must pass over the value of the books. The clerk must get the books of the county clerk within 30 days after receiving the notice from the Secretary of State.

Prohibitionists of South Dakota are holding a mass meeting at Huron. The [illegible] is to organize a State enforcement league, to be incorporated under the State laws with a capital of $50,000 or $[illegible]. The object of the organization is to provide means for the enforcement of prohibition in the State.

In the Episcopal convention at New York, the committee on canons presented a report that they deemed it inexpedient to establish a missionary episcopate for the colored people, and requested to be discharged from further consideration of the question. Discussion of the report was postponed. A number of liturgical revisions were adopted.

Near Gibson, Neb., Tuesday evening two passenger trains on the B. & M. Road dashed together, the two engines, a chair car, and a combination car being completely wrecked. One passenger was killed, and two or three others are in a dying condition. In all, over fifty persons were wounded, but the exact number has not yet been ascertained.

Owing to disarrangement of the machinery, a car on the Mount Auburn Inclined Plane Road, at Cincinnati, dashed down the hill on Tuesday and was totally wrecked by striking the "bumpers" at the bottom. Of the nine passengers on board, two were killed instantly, another died in a few minutes, and five others were fatally injured. One man miraculously escaped.

In an address before the Boys and Girls' National Home Association at Washington, Mr. Alexander Hogeland, president of the association, made the startling statement that there were 69,000 boy tramps in the United States. He advocated the establishment of a registration system by which boy tramps might be found and sent to farmers who were willing to employ them.

Wesley Elkins, an eleven-year old boy, [illegible] stature and weighing but seventy-five pounds, confesses to having brutally murdered his father and mother near Edgewood, in Clayton County, Iowa. The boy wanted to run away from home, but had been brought back by his parents and he thought he would kill them. There was no evidence against the lad except his own written confession.

The marriage of the Princess Sophia of Germany to the duke of Sparta, crown prince of Greece, next Sunday will call together a larger number of members of the royal family than has ever before gathered at any capital of Europe, no less than ninety-nine personages connected with the families of the thrones of Europe having promised to be present, and most of them are relatives of the bride and groom to be.

A disastrous explosion occurred Saturday in a coal mine at Bryant's [illegible] in the Choctaw nation. A miner's lamp came in contact with a keg of powder. The explosion of the powder caused an explosion of coal dust, which set the mine on fire. Sixteen men were in the mine, the shaft of which is 500 feet deep. All of the men were taken out injured. Four were horribly burned and at last accounts were not expected to recover.

J. B. Rea of Miles City, Mont., a member of the Montana Legislature, paints a terrible picture of suffering from the great drought. He says in Western Montana the grass is literally withered away for want of rain. Many thousands of head of cattle have starved to death for want of grass and famished for water. "Ranchmen," said he, "in that part of the State are paying as high as $20 and $25 a ton for hay, and in a week or two it will be impossible to get it at any price. Water is being hauled in some cases as far as twenty miles, and several ranchmen have made preparations to go farther West."

We hope that each Sunday School in the county will send at least two delegates to this Convention, and that the clergy generally will give it their patronage. Attend the evening lectures sure, and give thoughtful attention to these important themes. Notice the subject, "Normal Methods," Wednesday, a. m. We want the subject in its various phases thoroughly canvassed. Come prepared to take part in this discussion; indeed, that suggested by the several topics. Under "Condition of our county work" we hope to hear from every township ... of its work, needs, etc. If any superintendent has neglected to send in a report, please do so at once to the county secretary.

Also, schools that have not done so take up a collection for the county and state work, and send in.

Bring Bibles and Gospel Hymns, note books and pencils.

The good people of Laingsburg extend a hearty invitation to the S. S. workers of the county, and ... any and all who may come to the Convention.

Let us work for, pray for and ... a profitable meeting.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Borax water for washing the hands may be made by simply dissolving the borax in warm water in a bottle, as much as the water will take up. A spoonful of the solution in a pint of water is about the right proportion for washing the hands. It is best used just before retiring, and will tend to keep the hands soft and smooth.—Good Housekeeping.

We thank General Harrison for advising ... to listen to men of ... rather than men of maxims. We turn with relief from the maxims of Republican politicians to the conclusions of practical manufacturers.

These men are trying to reduce their prices in order to extend their sales in this country and abroad.

Farmers and brethren, think on these things.

We hear a good deal about the importance of increasing our exports to South America. Now agricultural implements we make so much better than any other people do that we already export a good deal of them to Europe, South America, and Australia, but, of course, as Messrs. Buford and Farquhar say, from their own experience, the competition with manufacturers who get cheap materials is pretty sharp. In the year 1888 we exported to the Argentine Republic $877,519 worth of agricultural implements. Our exports of agricultural implements to other countries south of us were as follows: Mexico, $25,365; Brazil, $20,454; Uraguay, $66,788; Chili, $65,891, and to European countries as follows: France, $255,731; Germany, $198,609; Great Britain and Ireland, $404,243; British possessions in Africa, $161,442; British possessions in Australia, $239,439; Russia, $93,914.

About the most sensible thing we could do to benefit our farmers, who have to sell wheat in competition with the peasants of Russia and India, and for the benefit of our export trade would be to take the duties off the raw materials of agricultural implements, and so enable the manufacturers to reduce their prices.

Fauntleroy on Cigarettes.

"My child," said old Lord Fauntleroy to little Lord Fauntleroy, as the latter dragged himself in, looking pale and weak and wan, "it grieves me deeply that you have formed the pernicious habit of smoking cigarettes."

"I haven't, grandpa, truly, I haven't."

"Then why do you carry them in your pocket?" asked the aged man, as he inserted two fingers into one pocket of his little lordship's trousers and drew forth a whole package.

"O grandpa, I never knew they were there! ... had little Jimmie Jones must have put them in my pocket ..."

A hundred men might have felt the vibration of the pin attached to a piece of sheepskin but it took an Edison to instantly realize that the vibrations might be made to indent a soft substance and be susceptible of reproducing the exact sounds of the human voice that caused the different vibrations. The phonograph was regarded as a toy at first, but it sold for a million dollars recently."

The Dog and the Lamb.

A certain lady, says the Boston Courier, had once a valuable St. Bernard of excellent pedigree, carefully trained, and in all respects of well-nigh ideal excellence save for one fault: He would kill lambs. He was beaten, he was imprisoned, the body of the latest lamb which had fallen a victim to his fury was fastened around his neck as a badge of shame, but all to no avail. His mistress concluded that it was impossible to break him of his fault and that she must sell him.

While matters were in this state a friendly farmer who had some occasion got into his head the fact that the dog's mistress was fond of pets sent her a snowy cosset, all gay with ribbons and looking as innocent as innocence itself. The lady was in despair. She expected that her dog would fall upon the lamb and tear it limb from limb; but having in the past had much experience with pets she said to herself that if this catastrophe was to happen she did not propose to have it postponed until she became deeply attached to the new-comer, and so deliberately led the lamb up to the dog, said to him that it was his lamb and directed him to watch it. The dog looked at her rather wistfully, evidently requesting permission to tear the pretty innocent, but she sternly shook her head and departing left the pair together on the lawn.

She is willing to admit now that the trial proved successful, that she had no idea that it would, and that she expected to find the lawn strewn with the dismembered fragments of the lamb. When a few hours later she returned, however, the dog was found to have taken the lamb into his especial favor and under his especial protection. He lay down with it, he followed it about, and seemed to have become uncommonly fond of it in a way not at all allied to carnivorous instincts. In short the lamb and the dog became the closest of friends and as long as they two did live they continued to dwell together in peace and affection.

And the remarkable part of the ... is that from that day the dog no more molested any lambs whatsoever. It was a plain case of similia similibus curantur. The dog was at once and forever cured of his vice and the fond mistress ... story to admiring friends ... with ... of pride and ...

A PILLAR OF SALT.

[illegible]

Well, we'll tell you. There is the Carpet Sweeper. It has been on the market twenty years. Millions have been sold. We make nearly a thousand every day. Yet there are thousands who don't use them. Some have had old styles and abandoned them—no one ever discarded a new style sweeper. Some never tried them. They are looking backward—for the cannibals used brooms to sweep clay huts with five hundred years ago.

What becomes of those women?

They work harder than they need to. They grow old before they ought to. They don't derive the pleasure from life there is in it. They wear their carpets, breathe dust and become slaves to the drudgery of housekeeping.

Wouldn't you rather be salt?

We'll mail you some pretty circulars, and tell you of a handsome sweeper for a Christmas present, if you'll drop us a postal card.

"Quite a little party are going up also to-morrow, I understand; ladies and gentlemen—some from here, and some from Sinclair."

"Yes; but they will ride more than half the way, and that makes the difference. I thought you would like to go along with them."

"But I had no invitation. Did you?"

"Isn't that a good reason why we should tramp by ourselves?"

"Yes; but Maud Ashley is to be one of the party. I've seen the time when you would have moved heaven and earth that you might be one of the party."

"Well!"

"Why was it that you and Maud broke off with each other? At one time I would have wagered my life that you would have made a match of it."

"There was another who had more gold and more influence than I," he said, in a bitter tone. "God knows I loved that woman as I never shall another."

"Then I would have married her in spite of——"

"Hush! Here she comes!"

A small gay coterie passed by where they were sitting. They were laughing and chatting, and Maud Ashley seemed the gayest of the little group. If she saw Chester Thurlow she gave no sign that she did so. No look of recognition came athwart her beautiful face.

The next morning gave promise of a beautiful day to follow. Thurlow and Hartley were astir early.

It was a long, hard tramp to the head of the Black ravine and the clamber to the summit of the great cliffs which overhang it. By starting in good time they would have the advantage of the cool of the day. An early breakfast had been ordered the night before, and as soon as it was dispatched, and a goodly lunch bestowed in their knapsacks, they started off before many of the guests had showed themselves out of their rooms.

Half of their upward tramp was over when they came to a spot where a rude path branched off to the [illegible] from the rough wagon road they had been pursuing. High above them they could see the deep [illegible] in the mountain which went by the name of the Black ravine. A hard, long tramp was before them yet, but they felt as though it would be boys' play, for they were used to this sort of climbing.

A sparkling brook came out from under a rock, and here they quenched their thirst and rested for a short time. The sound of wagon wheels and the ring of happy voices down the road told them that the party was approaching. This was a signal for them to go on, for they did not wish to mingle or to be in the way of those that had said plainly enough that their company was not wanted.

Thurlow knew that Hugh Tilden would be there, and that if he could help it he would not be five minutes away from the side of Maud. He knew something of him of old, and felt that the girl was giving herself to a man with whom she could never be happy. People would have said that this was jealousy on his part, but it was not wholly so. If they were married, in due time it would be shown that they were not fitted for each other.

Upward they clambered, following a rude path which had been cut alongside one edge of the ravine. The sun beat down upon them, and there was hardly a breath of air. But this they did not mind, and in due time they reached the head of the ravine and rested in the shadow of the great rocks [illegible]

[illegible] and seated. We [illegible]

[illegible] Thurlow said. "[illegible] We have as good right here as they, and if Miss M[illegible] to meet [illegible] direction. It [illegible] stay here, and [illegible] in the presence [illegible] she would be at [illegible] afford [illegible] if she [illegible]."

Thurlow made no [illegible] ed off in the direction [illegible]. He could not bear the thought of being slighted by the one who in the past had been so dear to him.

In the shade made by the gnarled and stunted trees they partook of the lunch they had brought, dividing their time between the wild scenery about them and watching the movements of the party on the brow of the cliff.

In this way the time passed until Thurlow, looking at his watch, observed that it was nearly time for them to be starting homeward.

"Will you wait until they are gone?" said Hartley. "I think they are about starting. Their moving about looks like it."

Hardly had these words left his lips when a cry of mortal terror fell upon their ears.

They sprung to their feet and gazed out toward the party on the cliffs.

One of their number was missing.

Horror-stricken they gazed for an instant into each other's face, and then, with the utmost speed they could command, they flew in the direction of the spot.

"What has happened?" they cried to the awe-struck group, each of whom had ventured as near to the edge of the cliff as they dared, and were looking down into the fearful abyss below.

"Maud Ashley has fallen over!" was the answer from pale lips.

Thurlow uttered a cry which came from the inmost recesses of his heart. Then, with a powerful effort he mastered himself, and sprung to the path leading down to the edge of the ravine.

"She has gone to the bottom," said Hugh Tilden, as he carefully made his way after him. "She has fallen upon a shelf in the rocks, and we can hear her crying for help."

Thurlow turned for an instant and gave him a look which should have crushed him into the earth, and then sped on his downward way, followed close by Hartley, who almost thrust Tilden from the path as he passed him.

In a few moments he was opposite the spot where Maud was clinging for her life to the narrow shelf of rock on which she had fallen and which had saved her from instant death.

"Have courage, Maud, I will be with you in a moment. Here, Hartley, lend me your hand until I cross this slippery rock."

The latter did as requested, and then with a bound Thurlow gained the shelf, and grasped Maud by the shoulder. For a moment it seemed that they would both lose their balance, and go plunging down to the fearful depths below, but they held their footing and braced themselves up against the rock behind them.

"Are you much hurt, Miss Ashley?" he said.

"No, thanks to this bed of moss," she answered. "But why Miss Ashley? Why don't you call me Maud, as of old?"

"Have I the right to do so?"

"Yes, you always had."

"Maud, will you be my wife?"

"Yes [illegible] if we leave this place alive."

"And Hugh Tilden?"

"Do not mention his name to me. He has no claim upon me. I am yours, and yours forever, if you will take me."

"Thank God, my darling! Now let us [illegible] escape from this spot as soon as possible. If we are careful we can do it without harm to either."

Hartley and Tilden were looking on. They could not hear what passed between the two, but the former was satisfied that all had been made right at last.

"Take the wraps the ladies have and your coats, and tie them together, making as stout a rope as you can, and fasten [illegible] end to me," called out Thurlow.

This was soon done. The end was fastened about Maud and Thurlow steadied her out as far as possible. Then, with a spring, she caught the outstretched hand of Hartley and was safe. A minute more and Thurlow stood by her side, and then a shout of joy went up from the throats of all at their deliverance.

There was joy in Bethlehem that night. The Maplewood was thronged until it seemed that all the town was there. Joy was in the hearts of all but one—Hugh Tilden. The [illegible] tramp had an ending for him that he in no way expected.—Boston Companion.

Mr. Blair's equipage [illegible]. He seldom drives, generally preferring to travel afoot, and [illegible] a rate that leaves most middle-aged men breathless. When [illegible], however, for a distant point [illegible] ble by rail, he harnesses up a sorry-looking nag in a ramshackle vehicle that saw its best days a quarter of a century ago. Mr. Blair's son, on the contrary, who is the sole heir to his enormous wealth, lives in magnificence, and drives steeds of great value and beauty.

"Why is it, Mr. Blair," a friend once made bold to ask the old gentleman, "that your son rides in such splendid state while you jog along in this wretched style?"

"Ah, that's easily answered," was the sententious reply; "my father wasn't rich."

All his life Mr. Blair has subsisted on the plainest diet, and it is to this temperance in all things that he attributes his longevity. He drinks very sparingly of liquors, according to his own testimony before the Pacific Railway Commission two years ago, when he well evidenced his closely calculating economy.

"Do you smoke, Mr. Blair?" was one of the questions put to him.

"No, sir," was the prompt response.

"Do you drink?" was next asked.

"Only when I am invited," answered Truthful John.

Though little given to liquor of any sort, Blair is a merciless foe of prohibition, and denounces its supporters roundly.

His habits of industry are marvelous. Every morning at 5:30 he may be found at his desk—unless, indeed, he is flying away toward Nebraska or Iowa or Kansas, where are located his chief railway concerns. It is nothing to him to pack his shabby gripsack and set out for the West at a moment's notice, traveling day and night until he reaches his destination. He rarely retires before 10 or 11 o'clock, and his entire day is devoted to business. Visitors are always kindly received, and if they have come to ask alms he listens patiently to their tale, and gives as his judgment, tempered with charity, dictates.

At one time Mr. Blair was President of nearly twenty railroads and improvement companies in the West, among them the Fremont, Elk Horn and Missouri Valley, the Missouri Valley and Blair Railway and Bridge Company, the Iowa Falls Contracting Company and the Sioux City and Pacific Land and Town Lot Company.

A hard worker all his life, Blair boasts that he never attended a horse race or a base-ball game, and has only once been at a theater, that being over half a century ago. He has dabbled little in politics, though he is an ardent Republican and contributes heavily to the campaign-funds. In 1866 he was induced to run for Governor of New Jersey and the $60,000 that the campaign cost him he will never cease to regret. No sooner was his defeat made known than he fiercely declared that he must have that money back by hook or crook. In less than two months he had gone into a [illegible] and cleared nearly $60,000. Blair then announced himself satisfied, but vowed he would never again run for office. He, however, succumbed so far as to become a member of the Town Committee, which position he has held for some years. Not one of his fellow-committeemen display half the rigid economy in managing the town's affairs that characterizes his conduct [illegible]

Trying to Steal the Montana Legislature

The Republicans of Montana appear to have adopted the methods employed in 1876 to give the electoral vote of Louisiana to Hayes and Wheeler, in order to obtain a majority in the Montana legislature. The Republican canvassing board of Silver Bow county threw out the vote of a precinct which gave 168 Democratic majority, which, unless the action shall be reversed by the supreme court of the territory, to which an appeal has been taken, will give the Republicans the entire legislative delegation of the county and a majority of five on a joint ballot. The objections to the returns are purely technical. A Helena dispatch says that while excitement is high over the Republican attempt to capture the Legislature there has been no outbreak of any sort, and the Democrats are confident the courts will sustain their view that the county canvassing board had no right to throw out any duly certified returns. Leading Republican lawyers concur in this opinion and the more reputable Republicans condemn the resort of the party managers to such high-handed proceeding. Ex-Gov. Patt Carpenter says, "the Republicans have no case and the masses of the party will not sustain them in this outrageous proceeding."

The only fear the Democrats have is that President Harrison may be induced by his son and Quay and others to remove Judge DeWolfe, the Democratic justice and put some partisan justice in his place who will make a decision to order for the Republican bosses. It is boasted that this will be done. Next Monday the [illegible] will decide the question.

The Minority in Congress.

The Republican party with a bare majority in the house of Representatives takes a very different view of the rights of a minority from what it held when the Democrats had a majority. In the last three Congresses the Republican minority in the House repeatedly prevented even the consideration of a bill to reduce the taxes. It resisted at every step, measures for the good of the country which had been approved of by the people in the general election, for no other apparent reason than that the adoption of such measures might benefit the Democratic party. And it filibustered or broke a quorum whenever such proceedings were necessary to give effect to its caucus decrees.

But now that the situation is reversed the Republican leaders propose to so change the rules of the House as to give them absolute control of legislation. That this is their deliberate purpose is frankly admitted by the Hon. Tom Reed of Maine, the leading Republican candidate for Speaker. Of course the Republican organs denounce as "revolutionary" the Democratic purpose to resist any such autocratic exercise of power. As a matter of fact the Democrats have no intention of acting as mere obstructionists. But they do not forget that the minority has duties as well as rights. They do not intend to consent to any change in the rules that will deprive them of their right to debate fully every measure brought before the House that will prevent them from defeating by all constitutional and parliamentary means, legislation which they regard as dangerous or hurtful to the country.

Upon the Republican theory the Democratic representatives might as well stay at home or have their dissenting votes registered by an automatic machine against any party measures which the majority may bring forward. The unscrupulous Republican leaders are likely to discover that in this country the minority has some rights which even the majority is bound to respect.—[Lansing Journal.

The town of Norwich, Ct., hitherto the impregnable stronghold of Republicanism, has gone Democratic. Nowhere has the bulldozing of mill hands been more efficaciously or more audaciously carried on than in Norwich. On the recent election this became impossible owing to the new law (a modification of the Australian system) in force. The Norwich [illegible] five [illegible] and he voted [illegible].

WEDNESDAY [illegible]

[illegible]

... among the [illegible] palace of the rajah, and [illegible] the houses of his favorites, [illegible] a large [illegible]. Imphall may thus be described as a city of villages or rather suburban residences around the palace. Straight, wide roads lined with trees, frequently intersecting each other at right angles afford the means of communication, but neither shop, [illegible] nor wheeled conveyance exists in the city. Industry and skill [illegible] in the distant rural homes."

The people of the capital are the promoted favorites of the ruler, who have had assigned to them plots of ground near the palace, and live by pressing upon the persecuted agriculturists of the state.

The capital of Manipur is a royal residence dedicated to luxury and amusement. All are happy. The streets are crowded with smiling, healthy faces, of which few bear the marks of toil or labor. There are no schools in the state and court favor and promotion are secured by success in polo. Coinage is unknown and the men are not allowed to trade. Imports and exports, except in certain articles that yield a royal revenue, are practically prohibited.

The women from the distant villages repair on a certain day to the capital or to other recognized centers. Each carries on her head a neatly made square basket in which has been placed the surplus stock of the homestead, the labors of her industrial skill or of her husband's agricultural knowledge. On reaching the market-place the contents of these baskets are exposed and bartered, when each returns again to her family, carrying off the proceeds.

Market days the long straight road from Bishenpur to Imphall is crowded by groups of women hurrying to and fro. Each wears an elegantly striped dress in bright colors made of silk and cotton. The stripes run along the length and the top and bottom are neatly embroidered. A long piece of cloth is cleverly [illegible] across the breasts and just under the armpits instead of around the waist, and is firmly tucked up so that the top embroidered edge falls [illegible], adding an additional load to the garment, while the bottom edge reaches [illegible] the knees. The legs and [illegible] posed. The women [illegible] in the whole state.

How Gloves Are Made.

[illegible] in which the [illegible] were incised, holding tightly together the leather parts of the glove, while the needle of the sewer followed easily these incised stitches. It was an easy work, not at all injurious to body or [illegible], and an industrious and quick girl could, without any exertion, sew two pairs of gloves a day, for which she received from 2 1-2 pence to 3 pence each, equal to about 5 pence to 6 pence a day. Very poor wages. But the money was earned in a comfortable way.

Let us now compare what progress these girls made in the golden era of machinery. The poor sewers are never in a position to acquire the requisite sum to be owners of these machines. The district to which I refer is a poor, mountainous part, the men mostly miners of an imperial silver mine, with daily wages of 16 pence. The requisite machines are owned by middlemen, called factors to whom the glove manufacturers from all parts of Austria send their unfinished gloves for sewing. These factors are proprietors of a certain number of machines from twenty upward to a hundred which are fitted up in workrooms, most of them very indifferently suited for the purpose. The poor girls from the neighboring district have often to walk a distance of eight miles to find work in such workrooms. They leave their miserable cottages at 4 a. m. to begin their day's work at 6 a. m. After a hard labor of twelve hours on a most complicated machine and after having passed another two hours on the way home, their whole earning consists of 7 pence. Including the hours she loses on the road, she works ninety-six hours a week for 3 shillings 6 pence, her body continually bent over a most complicated machine, her eyes watching leather thread and needle incessantly, her foot moving continually, amid the rattle of many machines, in a most sickly atmosphere. This is how cheap gloves are made.

Experiments in Electricity.

"I see," he quietly observed, as he hung in the door of a Griswold street restaurant, "those eastern electrical experts don't agree as to how much electricity is required to kill a man." "No," dryly responded the caterer. "I think I could solve the question." "Do you?" "I do. I have been figuring on it. You are probably aware that there is a certain amount of electricity in food?" "Yes." "Especially in pancakes, scrambled eggs, bacon and coffee. I am willing to experiment." "How?" "I'll sit down and eat until the shock amounts to 1,500 volts. If it kills me, all right. If not, I'll try it again." "I know of an easier way than that," said the caterer as he limbered up his right leg. "The shock from this boot is exactly 1,500 volts. Get yourself into position." "Sir, you are a greedy, grasping monopolist and no friend of science, and I scorn your experiment!" —Detroit Free Press

He held a seductive looking piece of jewelry in his hand as he kept calling—"only 25 cents and did you ever see anything so cheap?" "Yes," roared one of the crowd—"Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup is the cheapest and best remedy known for children."

Prevention is better than cure, and Laxador is the best preventive of disease known. It is used, approved and recommended by myriads of people throughout the land. It only costs 25 cents.

Next to Rider Haggard's hot pot a jack pot is one of the warmest things known to man.—Washington Capital.

The Best medical writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrah must be non irritating, easy of application, and one that will reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrah during the past obliges us to admit that only one remedy has met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. The more distressing symptoms yield to it.

Mr. Cox at this time was fully aware of his condition; he could barely speak above his breath and was extremely feeble. He smiled just perceptibly and drew me down that I might hear him the better.

"'Have you any choice, doctor, as to the kind of vegetable you wish me to be?'

"I suggested that a turnip was about as lifeless a vegetable as I knew of and as little liable to nervous excitement.

"'Very well,' replied Mr. Cox 'a turnip it shall be.'

One Pair of Gloves for Two.

The Pittsburg Dispatch's Washington letter says: Gen. Joe Hooker, a member of congress from the Seventh Missouri district, was one of the heroes of the late war against the union. He carries an empty sleeve as a relic of his experiences on the field. Maj. Powell, the chief of the geological survey, was in the union army, and he also carries an empty sleeve. Gen. Hooker's lost arm was on his right side and Maj. Powell's on the left. Their remaining hands are of the same proportions and they have a mutual agreement under which they purchase gloves in common. Maj. Powell using all of the "rights" and Gen. Hooker the "lefts." No difficulty ever occurs between them about the selection of the gloves, for they pay little attention to the frequent changes in modes and fashions.

Dr. Elmslie & Co.,

NORTH WASHINGTON AVENUE,

Corner of Genesee Avenue, East Saginaw, Michigan. Dr. Elmslie & Co. are a company of regular Graduated Physicians, who have devoted many years to the study of CHRONIC, NERVOUS AND SPECIAL DISEASES. The physician in charge of this office is a graduate of one of the leading Colleges of the United States, and is registered in both hemispheres as an M. D. This enables them to treat all private troubles with excellent results. All sufferers applying to them will receive their honest opinion of their complaint. No experimenting; no Mercury used. They will guarantee a positive cure in every case they undertake, or forfeit $500. Their reason for doing so is this—where there is no organic disease, and nothing but an inorganic trouble, or in other words, a conglomeration of symptoms producing certain results, there is no reason why it cannot be removed if the proper remedies are applied, therefore they guarantee. They wish it distinctly understood that they do not claim to perform impossibilities, or to have miraculous powers, they only claim to be skillful and successful physicians, thoroughly informed in their specialty, CHRONIC AND SPECIAL DISEASES OF MEN AND WOMEN. People residing at a distance can, by explaining their trouble in detail, be treated at their homes. The course of treatment will not in any way interfere with their business. Absolute secrecy in all cases. Charges moderate. Address: DR ELMSLIE & Co., Michigan Central Railroad Block Box 54, East Saginaw, Michigan. Office hours, 10 to 12 a. m., 2 to 4 and 7 to 8 p. m. week days only. Rooms 1, 2 and 9.

"Drive her away," said the rich man. [illegible]

[illegible] revealed [illegible] that he had refused a cup of cold water to an angel [illegible] possessed his soul.

Almost instantly, also, a terrible curse fell upon him which nothing could assuage. In vain he drank wines, sherbets, draughts of all pleasing kinds. Nothing could slake his thirst. The sweet water of the spring was salter to him than the sea. He who never in his life had known an ungratified desire, now experienced the torture of an ever-unsatisfied longing; but through this misery he began to understand what he had done. He repented his cruelty to the poor. Alms were given daily at his gate. Charity was the business of his life. The fountain was no longer guarded, and near it hung ever a cup ready for any one who chose to use it. But the curse—if curse it were—was never lifted.

The rich man, young when the angel visited him, grew middle-aged, elderly, old, still tortured by this awful thirst, despite his prayers and repentance. He had given away his substance; he had himself broken bread to the most miserable beggars who came to his door.

And at 80 years of age, bowed with infirmity and weary of his life, he sat one day beside the fountain weeping. And lo! along the road he saw approaching a beggar-woman, hooded in black, wearing sordid rags, and walking over the stones in her bare feet. Slowly she came on and paused beside the fountain.

"May I drink?" she asked.

"There are none to forbid thee," said the old man trembling. "Drink, poor woman. Once an angel was forbidden here, but that time has passed. Drink and pray for one athirst. Here is the cup."

The woman bent over the fountain and filled the cup; but instead of putting it to her own lips she presented it to those of the old man.

"Drink, then," she cried, "and thirst no more!"

The old man took the cup and emptied it. Oh, blessed draught! With it the torture of years departed, and as he drank it he praised heaven. And lifting his eyes once more he saw the beggar's hood drop to the ground and her rags fall to pieces. For a moment she stood revealed in all her beauty of [illegible] and golden hair and [illegible], and she stretched her hand toward him, as in blessing, and then, rising on purple pinions, vanished in the skies. A strain of music lingered, a perfume filled the air, and those who came there soon after found the old [illegible]

WASHINGTON NEWS.

[illegible] for the armored [illegible] not to [illegible] accept [illegible]

[illegible] the President [illegible] and [illegible]

The Secretary of State is informed that [illegible] presented at the [illegible] Mr. F. W. [illegible] Siamese legation at London. Mr. C. Calderon, the consul general of Colombia at New York, has been appointed by his government a delegate to the International American Congress.

Orders have been issued by the navy department to [illegible] of the Pensacola to take [illegible] and party to Africa to observe the eclipse of the sun in December. The vessel will sail shortly [illegible] from New York and go [illegible] the west coast of Africa. [illegible] and his associates will [illegible] make the observations.

Enlargement of the Chicago postoffice [illegible] the employment of a large number of additional clerks and of [illegible] new carriers and twenty-two horses are among the recommendations of the Chicago postoffice commission which have been approved by Postmaster General Wanamaker. [illegible]

It is said that among the recommendations to be made by Secretary Tracy in his annual report is one that a plan recommended by the board of officers upon navy yard sites, to largely increase and improve the Brooklyn navy yard, be carried into effect. The principal features of this plan are the construction of a [illegible] water basin, in which the new vessels of the navy may lie without [illegible] their bottoms, and thus always be ready for service, and the construction of several additional dry docks. [illegible] are also to be largely extended. The total estimated expense of the additions is $[illegible], the outlay to be made at the rate of, say $[illegible] a year.

THE [illegible]

In a few days the bureaus of construction and [illegible] engineering will have completed their calculation upon the official report of the trial of the Charleston, and when that is done the navy department will accept the vessel. The contractors, the Union Iron Works company of San Francisco, will suffer a penalty of $30,000 for lack of horse power, the contract calling for 7,000 and but 6,700 being indicated, and there will be deducted from the payment the estimated cost of a possible extra propeller and other apparatus, which cannot be accurately determined until a sea voyage has demonstrated the necessity for it.

A NEW DIRECTOR OF THE MINT.

The President has signed the commission of Edward O. Leech of the District of Columbia, to be director of the mint. This is a deserved tribute to a popular official who has gone through grade from that of first clerk at $1,200 per annum up to the position of head of the bureau at $4,500 per annum. For several years he has been computer of bullion at a salary of $2,500 per annum, and his duties have required him to traverse the continent thirteen times. The new director of the mint controls ten large distributing points, four of them being the location of United States mints and the remainder are assay offices.

SURGEON GENERAL HAMILTON'S REPORT.

The annual report of Supervising Surgeon-General Hamilton of the marine hospital service for the year ended June 30, 1889, says that during the year nearly fifty thousand seamen have been treated by the officers of the service at the different hospitals and relief stations throughout the United States, a number exceeding by more than a thousand the work of any previous year since the establishment of the service nearly a century ago. A great deal of space in the report is devoted to the subject of yellow fever, and many interesting papers are printed from officers of the service who were in charge of the various stations in the south during the epidemic of last winter.

A ST. JOE MAN'S TENDER CONSCIENCE.

Secretary Windom has received an unsigned note from St. Joseph, Mo., containing $645 in multilated United States notes. The note reads as follows:

"DEAR SIR: Six hundred and fifty dollars is considerable money for me and only a drop in the bucket for Uncle Sam, but I want the money to go where it belongs. Money is a blessing to a man when it is got honestly but a curse when got dishonestly. I am trying to right a wrong as near as can be. About February, 1887, Secretary Manning received $5,000 (conscience money) by New York draft, written on the draft that it was to be put into the United States treasury, but as that never appeared in print it is believed that Manning appropriated it to his own use."

The records of the department show that on March 28, 1887, the sum of $4,999 was received in an anonymous letter postmarked St. Joseph, Mo., and deposited in the treasury to the credit of conscience.

POSTAL SAVINGS BANKS.

Friends of the postal savings bank system are prepared to make another effort when Congress assembles to secure legislation authorizing the introduction of the system in this country. This system, though of comparatively recent origin, has been carried to great perfection in Europe, and has within a few years extended to the four quarters of the globe. It was adopted in England twenty-five years ago and owes its development there mainly to the earnest advocacy of Henry Fawcett, the honored postmaster General of Great Britain, who inaugurated so many improvements in the postal service that have proved of universal advantage. It is now in operation in France, Belgium, Austria, Italy, and the Netherlands, and the Postmaster General of Germany is seeking to introduce it into the empire. It has been successfully established in Canada, Australia, and other colonies, and is now being considered by the government of Japan.

IOWA [illegible]

At the [illegible] of the Grand encampment [illegible] the Iowa case came up [illegible] Grand Master [illegible] H. Hopkins of [illegible] the committee [illegible] brought in a report which recommended the adoption of a resolution which began by reciting [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] the secretary [illegible] with a recommendation [illegible] question [illegible] section [illegible] revised statutes, but that [illegible] revenue [illegible] The secretary [illegible] this recommendation and authorized the collector [illegible] prescribed [illegible] revenue [illegible] delivery of the goods [illegible] district of New York.

[illegible] MATTERS.

General Bussey, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, has received a report of the work done by the Pension Office during the month of September, which shows that a larger number of pension cases was settled during the past month than during either of the two previous months. General Bussey called attention to the fact that the number of cases of pensions granted was largely in excess of the reissues, a condition of things, he said, which was not true some time ago. James E. Smith, of New York, the chief of the certificate division in the Pension office, has been removed. Smith was the man who got a re-rating for himself under Commissioner Tanner's ruling, and secured some $6,000 back pay. Secretary Noble has decided that the rerating by which Senator Manderson was given an increased pension and $4,000 back pay by Tanner was illegal. Upon Commissioner Tanner's retirement Senator Manderson wrote Secretary Noble asking that his case be reconsidered by the department, in order that it might be determined whether there was a right on the part of the commission to rerate a pensioner without application having been filed. As a result Senator Manderson has returned his certificate, the Secretary having finally decided that the procedure was not regular.

THE KNIGHTS TEMPLARS' PARADE.

The Knights Templars parade Tuesday occupied over three hours in its journey to the grand stand. At its conclusion the grand encampment met, and after an address of welcome from Grand Marshal Barker and District Commander Douglass, went into secret session to hear the address of Grand Master Roome. The address, which is very long, devotes most of its attention to the controversy between the grand masters and the Iowa Knights Templars, who were in 1888 declared in rebellion because they refused to adopt and use the ritual established by the grand encampment in 1886. The grand master lays the facts of the controversy, including correspondence, fully before the encampment, saying he entertains no ill feeling for the Iowa fraternity, who are noted for the enthusiasm in the cause and devotion to duty. The Iowa knights who attended the grand encampment at its meeting were excluded from participation and required to withdraw before the addresses were delivered. They were not permitted to take part in the parade.

The grand recorder's report shows the number of knights in the United States to be 77,000, an increase of over 6,000 in the past three years. The number of persons knighted during the past five years was 16,877; suspended, 3,[illegible]; expelled, 58; admitted, 2,828; deceased, 2,901.

A HOMESTEAD DECISION.

Land Commissioner Groff has rendered a decision in the case of May Barr, formerly Wasson, a resident of the Mitchell, Dakota, land district. In July, 1885, Mrs. Barr, then a resident of the state of Iowa, went to Dakota on a visit to a friend, and while there was informed that a certain eighty acres adjoining a tract then recently entered by Michael Barr was subject to homestead entry. She accordingly entered it, purchased a small house and had it moved on her claim, broke one acre and made other improvements. At that time, she says in her testimony, she had no intention of marrying Mr. Barr, but later they married, "when they moved the houses up close together on the line and sodded them up all around on the outside, making one house. They were then papered, [illegible] Mr. Barr put his bed, stove and table in his, and she put a bed [illegible] in hers, that there is no means of communication between the two [illegible] parts of the house except [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] husband [illegible]

[illegible] William [illegible]

[illegible] the Kaiser's [illegible] Prince Henry [illegible] to illustrate [illegible] his devotion to his profession [illegible] his physical powers. Once [illegible] of which he was then a [illegible] Lieutenant was lying in [illegible] Kiel the order was given [illegible] hands to bathe. The water was chilly, and the officer remarked to the Prince that the water must be a [illegible] too cold to be pleasant. He suggested therefore that the order should be rescinded. Without a word, Prince Henry, who was on the bridge, sprang [illegible] into the sea, swam to Jacob's ladder astern, climbed on board again, and mounting, dripping, to the bridge, said to the officer: "Do you say so now?" There was no reply, and the Prince, instead of going below to change, remained on the bridge in his wet clothes until his watch was relieved. Another story illustrates the Prince's activity. One day at Wilhelmshaven he put a thaler between his teeth and dashed up the rigging of his ship crying: "He who catches me shall have the thaler." Although he was pursued by the whole of the ship's company not on duty, he was not caught, and at last, swinging himself by the rope to the deck, he turned to the nearest of his pursuers and said laughingly, "If you are thirsty as I am you must want it, so here's your money."

Gossip reminds us of a high building. Only one story out of a dozen rests on a foundation.

Epoch.

[illegible] in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health to the use of the Great Alterative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidneys, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at Parkill & Son's Druggists.

Fearful and Wonderful

The Bible says, "man is fearfully and wonderfully made." But physiologists all concede that the most wonderful portion of man is the nervous system. In it are located the seats of life and mind, and the control of all the bodily organs. When the nerves are destroyed, the part is paralyzed. The flesh, blood and bones are as nothing to it. Derangements of the brain or nerves are the causes of headache, fits, dizziness, fluttering of the heart, sexual weakness, sleeplessness, neuralgia, cold hands and feet. A free trial bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine—the latest and most successful cure for all these diseases, may be had at M. L. Bagg's drug store.

A fast young fellow, about to marry, speaking of his intended, said to a friend of his: "In short, she has everything in her favor—fortune, wealth and money."

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing, with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. 23 1y

There is scarcely a city, town or village in the upper (Mich.) peninsula where there is not an unusual large amount of typhoid fever, and in many places the disease is epidemic. At Ironwood there have been as high as six deaths in one day, while at Negaunee there are over one hundred and fifty cases and many deaths daily. The efforts of the local physicians aided by the state board of health to check the disease have been unavailing.

It is reported from Montana that a combination of a remarkable character had been formed looking to the election of Martin Maginnis and Wilbur F. Sanders, one a Democrat and the other a Republican, as United States Senators. These two men are the leading candidates of their respective parties, and their friends have put their heads together to make their election certain and at the same time end the quarrel over members of the Legislature.

Gov. Mellette has forwarded the Constitutions of North and South Dakota and the official election returns to President Harrison. They were delayed to enable the Governor to prepare copies of the schedule and the reports of the joint commission disposing of the territorial property. All the matter in the Constitutions, schedules, and Commissioners' report has been carefully indexed and arranged for the special convenience of the President, whose proclamation is expected to follow a few days after the official documents arrive in Washington.
