What is Overloading a Horse?

"Must an animal be worked until he breaks a blood vessel or drops dead, before the law takes cognizance? Is it is strictly true. The weakest man the horse to be strained or worked to that ever occupied the White House tus. the extreme limit of his strength, before such straining or working becomes a eruelty (that is, before the act of his master becomes 'overloading')? Can an expert, or any number of experts, say what is the limit of strength or endurance of any horse, simply by knowing his weight? It seems to me that these questions can be easily answered Horses, like men, are of different ages, constitutions, temperaments, formation and degrees of strength. One horse, just like one man, may be twice as fast, twice as tough, twice as strong, as another of precisely the same weight; and inasmuch as horses, like men, are liable to a great variety of sicknesses, and suffer, just like men, from previous overworking and heat, want of proper rest, food, water, shelter and care, it follows that the same horse, like the same man, may be able to perform without injury more labor in one day than another.

"Can a thou-and experts prove that all men of a given weight or size are equally competent, on every day of the year, to perform a given labor? Can their testimony establish how much load a man of given weight should carry, and how he should carry it on a given day, without regard to whether the man is old or young, sick or well, strong or weak, tough or tender, already tired or rested, full-fed or starved, or the day hot or cold? And does not precisely the same reason apply to the horse,that what one horse can do one day has no force in showing what another cught to do on another day, unless you show the weather, age, strength, toughness and bodily condition of the two, to be precisely similar? I say, then, that it is just as impossible for any number of experts, knowing only the weight or size of a horse and nothing of his age, health, strength, toughness and bodily condition, to establish what is, or is not, overloading him, as it would be, knowing only the size or weight of a man and nothing of his, age, health, strength, toughness or bodily condition, to establish what is or is not an overload for when a horse is overloaded. First, we are to take his own evidence. If a man stops and says, "I am overloaded, I am willing to pull, comes with a heavy load to a rice of Land and, after one or two efforts, stops and says, as plainly as he care speak it, "I am overloaded, I am overloaded, I am overloaded, I am overloaded, I am how the stop heavy," that is evidence, and there is no court, or jury or man with the heart of a man, who will not recognize it as such. Besides, the signs of overwork are just as visible in the lorse as the man. For originality, grasp of public questions, and sense of prospective in the statement of the condition of national affairs, Gen. Harrison's message compares unfavorably with the first message to Congress by Mr. Hayes twelve vears ago. This is saying a somewhat evere thing about Gen. Harrison, but had more to offer to Congress in the way of information and suggestion, and offered it with a more vigorous individ nality of thought and expression than the present Chief Executive of the United States can exhibit or command.

How to Clean Gloves.

The question of gloves is one that awakens a responsive chord in the heart of every woman, and even rich ones find it necessary once in awhile to have them cleaned. This is a difficult thing to have done satisfactorily, and when vell done by French cleaners costs a good deal. To women of moderate means this expense is almost as much out of reach as the purchase of the endless new ones requisite if one wishes to be neat and dainty always. These will be glad to get Georgia Clyvan's recipe, with which she cleans her own gloves as well as a French cleaner could and yet saves the cost of the performance by doing it herself.

"I go to a chemist's shop," she says, "and ask for a quart of deodorized benzine, one drachm of sulphuric ether, one drachm of chloroform, two drachms of alcohol, and enough lavender water to make it delicately perfumed and pleasant. The clerk mixes that up for me properly, and when I get it home I pour about a cupful of it into the basin and wash the gloves in it. If I have been wearing them a long time and they are very black, I have ready prepared two bowls, in both of which is flannel I rub them smooth, so that all pear, and they become partially dry. A SUBJECT OF MIRTH

A man once thought that we might travel faster than by stage-coach. People laughed at him—but he built the locomotive.

Her work was drudgery. Worse than that, it was injurious. The work of sweeping was wearing; the breathing of the dust was unhealthy. The corn broom wore nice carpets, and did not sweep them either.

and did not sweep them either.

That was thirty years ago.

Men laughed at him too. Women laughed also. What is the result? To-day our Catpet Sweepers are used in every part of the world. We make nearly a thousand a day. Old sweepers have been discarded, and our modern sweepers have taken their places.

Still there are people who do not use them. People also exist who never as we alocomotive. Peoplealso exist who neversaw a locomotive; But they are behind the times.

HOW HE GOT OUT OF IT.

"By Jove, Stair's a lucky chap!" "Why, old man? Going to be married. eh—is he?"

No-by all that's lucky - he has got out of it. d Such was the prologue. This was the piece.

He had drifted into it. She was very pretty and undeniably well-dressed, danged to perfection, and possessed perfect ease and grace of movement which marks the highest London fashion and gives it the stamp peculiarly its own.

So they met night after night, daneing valse after valse together. They sat in flowery alcoves and on twilit staircases, and talked in a manner befitting the occasion; soft murmurs, half sentences, whispers very close to the shell-like ear. All this was no doubt very pleasant. So the season went on and this reprehensible young man had got no further—nay, was beginning to ask himself; had she a heart to be stirred at all? Had he himself, and if so, why did her charming company never cause it one single extra pulsation? Yet he found undoubted pleasoure in her society. The dances she gave him made the whole evening to

He was never weary of contemplating the sway of her graceful figure, the poise of her pretty head, with its clustering curls so artistically arranged; and her voice was so sweet, though-it was true that her conversation never wandered from the veriest commonplaces of society talk. Yet she discoursed on these in a manner which was seduction itself. Beyond taking her at the end of dances to her mother he had made no particular acquaintwith the Lady Vi (as her friends called her-a mode which we will also adopt.) But one evening she said: Will You take my mother down to supper tonight? Her usual cavalier has deserted early-and-gone home.

damaging a confession. The one invariable compliment she expected was: "Two sisters surely! Impossible! This young lady your daughter? I must be allowed to contradict you."

In truth she was surprisingly young looking for a lady certainly twenty years older. At a little distance you might conceivably mistake one for the other, especially against the light. The art of dress was employed with that perfection which conceals itself. Lady vi was no doubt fully aware of all the resources of modern civilization, and she made skillful use of them all. Her manner was even softer than her daughter's; her voice had, a penetration which impressed the coldest listener. Beneath that delightful and artistic exterior a keen- and subtle intellect was constantly at work. Nor was she wont to waste its refinement on trashy books or the like. Herstudies were the world in which she lived. The men, the women who inhabit our sphere supplied her with those objects of scientific investigation and interest which other people are said to find in the follies of the microscope and other toys. It is also well known that, whatever, subject a keen intellect chooses for its special study, the greatest proficiency may be looked for in even a short time, and this lady had not studied for nothing; she ought indeed to have graduated in honors. So he found himself, as it were, impaled beneath a lens of searching and pitiless strength. His writhing and contortions and awkward attempts at extrication only amused his professor and served no purpose whatever. To turn him inside out was his tormentor's evident intention, and the victim driven to extremity, was forced to summon all his resources in self-defense and this

He plied her on that evening with every attention he could devise. After supper was over he never left her side or danced again. He attended her to her carriage, shawled her With the utmost solicitude, paid no heed to Ma-bel's reproachful looks, nor found a word for her. In short, be transferred himself bodily to Lady Vi, and became from that evening her devoted and ab-have Mabel fairly settled in life, and be able, as she said, to devote herself to Sir Hercules, who could do without her less and less, as she was in the constant habit of affirming. And yet there were people ill-natured enough to declare that his wife turned the key upon her gouty and irascible warrior before leaving him for the engagement of the evening. But then, as we all know to which a virtuous ear should never incline. So Lady Vi firmly resolved to bring the young man to book, while he. unconscious of his doom, continued to frisk and play like a lamb in the meadow while the butcher is advancing unawares.

It fell out in this way: He was to call for the ladies one ifternoon in order to escort them to the park. But he was shown into the shaded and charming room which belonged to Lady Vi, with its screens and said. draperies, its palms and pots, and fantastic ornaments. Mabel was not there, however, and her ladyship presently entered alone. He must excuse Mabel, she said, who had a headache and could not go; could not, in fact, leave her room; so she would have a quiet chat. He began to feel nervous, and his heart under his white waist-coat, gave a sudden jump. They sipped their tea-Lady Vi slowly, as he thought, and with cruel deliberation. Presently the enemy would, he well-knew, open fire. His courage began to rise, at a brave man's will, with Of course he offered his arm directly the sense of danger. He resolved to with the utmost courtesy, though it be no craven, and to fight it out with all the desperate valor of despair.

"My dear child has not been looking very well of late-do you think?" began the attacking forces in a gentle, murmurous voice, like a dove on an

"Indeed, Lady Vi in my poor opinion your daughter never looked more brilliant---

"No, indeed," interrupted the fair speaker with much vivacity. "These constant headaches from which the poor child suffers are becoming, I assure, a serious cause of anxiety. I think of consulting Sir Agnew Darke about her. But medical treatment is often powerless in such cases. But what is a mother to do?" And Lady

Vi heaved a deep sigh. "Advice, I know, is often neeless." said this artless young man, "in cases of organic diseases; but you can not possibly feel any such apprehen-

Lady Vi's heavier guns now advanced and began to open on the position. "I see I must speak plainly, my dear friend. Young ladies must be silent, but mothers must act freely on their behalf. Your attentions have been so marked that I fear my darling child's happiness is in danger of being compromised. She is suffering in silence, and without a word from you either to explain or justify your heartiessnessyes, and, I will say it-your unprincipled conduct."

Here a lace handerchief came out and was used with effect.

"Speak you must, indeed," murmured her ladyship, softly, but with great decision from behind it, for I must see my beloved Mabel the premature victim of her unhappy and misplaced affection for a heartless man. Tears choked her utterance; sols shook the pretty hands which held the handkerchief, now being used as a flag of distress unutterable. Even our young man was for one brief moment lisconcerted. But he felt it was now or never, and with bold determination dropped on his knees. He seized the disengaged hand and kissed it fervent-

"Now I will speak judged!" he cried "Larry Vi. you behold in this attitude" (and he ganced at his knees) "the most devoted of your slaves. It is quite anossible you for one moment can have nistaken inv attentions. It is you whom I have ventured to approach through your daughter. Speak, dear lady, and make me the happiest, as I am I feel the most audicious of men.'

"Good heavens!" screamed her ladyship, "Do you know what you are saving? A declaration to nie? What will Sir Hercules say?" "Sir Hercules!" said the ardent swain in a modest voice. "May I ask who is Sir Hercules, and what has he or any other man to do with my affairs, I should like to know?"

"Simply this," returned her lady-

"Married!" he murmured in the faintest accours. "Good gracious! Lady free, I needn't say, to receive my addresses or I should never-never have This sounded very well, and was said presumed. Michigan doesn't have very good luck in getting appointments from the admilifistration. It was generally believed that Judge Stanley Matthews' successor would be elected from this State, but it was all a mistake. Michigan is evidently not on the President's map. Saginaw Courier, Rep. :

Detroit Evening News: South Carolina has sized up the postmaster general to a "t." He appointed an objectionable of that state. The people objected, Wanamaker persisted. Then the people filed notice at Wanamaker's shop in Philadelphia that they'd trade no more there if the postmaster was continued. prices He was removed at once. The whole H process shows how clever the Carolinians were in their, judgment of Wanamaker, but it shows too, all too-plainly, what a disgrace it is to have a great government department managed in the nterest of a Philadelphia notion shop.

The recent farmers' conventions in St. Louis, which resulted in the organization of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial union and their federation with the Knights of Labor, will it is said, result through committee work in bringing stronger influence to bear on congress in favor of general river improvements than have ever yet been felt. This action will be exerted through the legislative committee of the federated organization, and the improvement of rivers generally, beginning with the Mississippi, will be strongly and persistently advocated.

At Johnstown, Pa.. Tuesday night as the performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was drawing to a close in the Main Street opera-house the fire-bell was rung, causing a frantic scramble for the exit, There were 500 or 600 men, women, and children in the hall, and to gain the street it was necessary to pass down a narrow, walled-up staircase and through a very narrow door. The people from the streets rushed into the doer from the outside and many were rushed before they could be forced. out. It was necessary to turn the hose on the crowd at the door before the rescuers could get at the dead and wounded. Twelve persons were found crushed to death and nearly 100 wound-

One of the members of the committee sent from Sloux City to the droughtstricken district of South Dakota says: These poor people have got to be taken care of this winter, and Sioux City will do its share for their assistance. A MAMMOTH WHEEL.

The Largest of Its Kind Ever Made in the World.

The greatest wheel of its kind in the world, a very wonder in mechanism, stands in the umin shop of the Dickson Manufacturing company in Scranton. Pa. . It was built for the Calumet and Hecla Mining company of Lake Superior, Mich., for the purpose of lifting and discharging the "tailings," a waste from the copper mines, into the lake, and its diameter is 54 feet, while /a foot deep.

It is armed on its outer edge with 132 tooth, 4.71 inches pitch and 18 inches face. The gear segments, eighteen in number, are made of gun iron, days and nights to cut the teeth alone, and the finish is as smooth as glass.

MADE FAMOUS BY A SONG. Fortune Came Also to the Author "Nancy Lee."

There is a man living quietly in Lon-

England to-day, yet he is not very widely known by name. It is Frederick E. Weatherly, and he is the author of "Nancy Lee." a song that has been sung in every quarter of the globo and has brought to the author an amount pupil, whom he was coaching for the armual commencement. The pupil failed to keep his appointment, and while waiting for him the piece came suddenly to his mind and it was writen then and there. One of the strange hings about the song was that it was in the heydey of its popularity about It was sung on deck just before the printed in all the English newspapers, copies of it are now sold not only in Freat Britain, but through Australia, Canada, and, in fact, wherever the English language is spoken. Mr. Westherly is the author of other songs that are not so well known. He has been writing songs ever since he was an under-graduate, twenty-five years ago. His arst song was "When We Are Old and Grav." Both his parents had strong poetic tastes, but he owes most to an old gentleman whó lived for many years in his father's house. The old fellow was thought to be slightly insane, but he had a perfect knowledge of five or six languages, and had been a fellow-traveler with Sir Walter Scott and a friend of Thackeray, and it was probably a case of genius to madness nearly allied. He used to relate old stories and legends and even improvise verses himself.

"I searcely know myself," was the reply. "They come at the most unexpected moments. Many people who read or sing my songs, particularly the love songs, think I am a young man madly love-smitten. It is nothing of the kind. AI am an old married man and have a family of children. My sea songs were written far from the sea and niv rural sougs miles from the country. Many suggestions for love songs have occurred to me while reading Aristotle. I can not write unless I an happy. My most melancholy dirges were composed when I was in Many of these facts are of such a naure that not to know all about them will soon be deemed a sign of ignorsince. The people should know that the surface of standing water is level, whether it be in the form of a pond, a lake, a canal, a sea, or an occan, - and that it makes no difference at all how many people, in consequence of false teachings, believe it to be curved; that in no surveyors' operations in the construction of railroads, tunnels, or canals is any "allowance" made for the curvature" of the earth's surface, although the books tell us that it is necessary; that the view from a balloon in the air is that of a flat earth and not of a globe; that the river Paraguay in 800 miles does not fall a foot—that for the last 500 miles the Amazon falls but 10 feet 6 inches-and that the Nile in 1.000 miles falls but a foot.

Sailors can see the light at Cape Hatteras forty miles out at sea, whereas on the globe theory it ought to be more than 900 feet below the level line of l sight; strain your eyes as you please. you can never see a ship coming "up. for at the farthest distance that you can by any means see a ship it is on a level with the eye; the horizon always rises on and on just as you risk on; if the mariner were to take a "klobe" with
