Kick Them Out

About the worst specimen of humanity that crawls around over the universe is the smooth tongued shark who makes a practice of selling worthless stocks and bonds to women who have suddenly come into possession of a legacy through the death of a relative, usually the husband.

In most cases these women have never been schooled in the matter of handling money. Always protected from the gruelling thrusts of the world, from its pitfalls and dishonest practices, it is no wonder they fall easily under the influence of the skunk who promises large returns and easy days from their invest ments.

In every city are scores of so-called investment houses where every morning is conducted a school of salesmanship for the purpose of training high powered salesmen to go out and separate the unwary from their money. Country paper are carefully scanned for information that will enable them to call at the home of the widow shortly af ter the demise of her mate. The expression of a little hypocritical sympathy and her confidence is soon gained, and once gained it is comparatively easy to unload shares in some worthless enterprise that promises to bring rich returns. In nine cases out of ten it means the loss of both principal and interest

Many a bereft woman can testify in the midst of her grief to having trusted her entire fortune into the hands of one of these sharks, and instead of comfort and security in her declining days, she was forced to again become a bread winner. Al we can do is to repeat a solemn warning to bewaree of this merciless tribe. Consult your banker if you have money to invest and in every case where this advice is followed it will be found no mistake has beer is just as important as in financial undertakings. For years now the Federal and State governments have been engaged in attempting to adjust and correct all the ills and woes of the world by legislative enactments. As a result we have been iust about "lawed" to death. Senator Curtis at Washington has announced that the primary attention of Congress will be given to tax reduction and he suggests between the lines to his fellow statesmen that they co-operate to the extent of themselves pigeon holing foolish bills instead of compelling Congress ional committees to do it. would be well if the state legislative leaders followed this example. When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions. indicated in the definitions.

DIFFICULTIES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK

HE paper from my home town THE paper from m, ____ accume in today containing an account of a recent educational institute which had been held there under the direction of a distinguished educator from the East.

"Dr. George Hilton," the news item stated, "is beyond question a scholar, a student of present-day conditions, as he views them, a great thinker, a man of keen intellect, and a public speaker and an orator who has few peers."

It was the name and the last clause which caught my eye. I had not heard of Hilton for 20 years. I could imagine him "a student of present-day conditions"; one must be a half-wit not to give some thought and attention to our present generation, but "a public speaker and an orator," was almost inconceivable to me.

Hilton had come to college during my early teaching experience. His family was without education or social standing. I have known poor boys who have struggled through college without help from home and without personal talent, but I have never known one prouder or poorer than

He had no manual or mechanical talent; the simple work at which all indigent undergraduates keep soul and body together he did badly, so that often he was without sufficient to eat and went for days with very little. Toward the close of the first year he had no lodging place, and as spring came on he slept out under the shrubbery or crept into one of the college recitation rooms and stretched himself out upon one of the benches, creeping out again before the janitor arrived in the morning.

In addition to his lack of manual adeptness and financial resources, he was handicapped by a wretched inhibition of speech. He was the worst stammerer I have ever known, and my acquaintance with stammerers is not limited. I never knew him to make a recitation when called on in class. When he attempted it, his jaws would set, his eyes became glassy and he could do nothing for a minute or two. He always tried, but he usually had to give up in despair. It seemed a hopeless barrier between himself and any educational progress. He drifted on in college for two years, sun.

I think, fighting against poverty, ang up an uncertain living in vari ous corners of the campus, never decently dressed and never able without a grotesque physical struggle to utter an intelligible sentence. Then he disappeared and left us wondering what had become of him.

But he was persistent, he was ambitious. With the dullest physical tools he was willing to work without stint to accomplish his purposes. Like Demosthenes he was determined to become an orator. I learned later that he had gone into the ministry. that he had to a large degree overcome his impediment in speech and that he was developing a wide influence. And now here he was, so the paper said, "A public speaker and an orator who has few peers."

A man can do anything if he has persistence and courage.

Oriental Tobacco Legend

In the Orient there is a lengthy pipe tradition. It traces the water pipe back into ancient times. One story of its origin is romantic, if nothing else. It is said that a wealthy prince lost his favorite wife and went to a priest for consolation. The priest made him a bowl much like the present water pipe and told him to go to his wife's grave, pluck weeds he found there, put them in the top of the bowl, apply fire and draw on them through a stem. The process was designed to provide the prince with solace.-Detroit News.

Primitive Bread Making

Perhaps the earliest form of bread if that word may be used, was prepared from acorns and beechnuts. The Roman philosopher, Pliny, speaks of a similar crude process in connection with wheat. The grain was evidently pounded, and the crushed remnants soaked into a cake and dried in the fall, both for wear on the street on

MILLINERY MORE ELABORATE

IN THE progress of fashion the word "knitted" has grown to be a term of genuine style prestige. There are the new long knitted coats, for instance, which must be seen to be appreciated. Even to the most sophisticated eye they are a revelation of all those qualities which bespeak apparel of the handsomest sort. Of such incomparable style and charm are the knitted coat versions as interpreted in the autumn style displays one cannot but help feel that they are a challenge not only to the coats of cloth, but to the more pretentious fur coat as well.

Indeed, some of these knitted coats which now so engross the attention of for the scarf usually forms an emplace-

In the first group neckpieces to match hats are featured and these are made of hat materials, as felt, velours, velvet, silks and ribbons. They take the form of chokers, scarfs, collarettes and neck ruchings, with the velvet choker and silk scarf most popular. The velvet chokers are usually narrow-not more than three inches in width and are fastened snugly up about the neck under short loops and hanging ends. They are finished off with a touch of trimming like that on the hat.

As an accessory to the frock or blouse, various versions of the jabot continue to lead the procession in neckwear. Net and lace, georgette and crepe de chine are the materials best suited to these pieces in which ruffled effects are featured. There is no end to the ways in which jabots are exploited, but collar and jabot pieces sider a fawn-colored caracul wool coat like that pictured appear to have made constructed along modish straightline the strongest impression. #### Plant Breeders Fight Diseases

Some of Ailments of Grain Held in Check by Cultural Methods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many and varied are the methods employed by scientific agriculturists to fight destructive diseases of the small grain crops. Some of the diseases of wheat, oats, barley, and other grains are held in check by cultural methods, some by seed treatment, and some by the use of "specialized fighting strains" of the crop in question. For some time plant breeders have been aware of the fact that some individual plants are stronger or more naturally resistant and immune to diseases than others. From these natural fighters the plant breeders for a long time have been assembling and mobilizing their disease-fighting soldiers and armies and deploying them to the farmer's fields to aid him in controlling his losses.

Highly Resistant Strains. Strains of wheat, oats, barley and rye, as well as many other plants, have been discovered which are highly resistant or immune to a particular disease. From these a generous seed supply has been grown and distributed to the sections of the country where needed. This in itself has been an achievement of considerable note and value to the farmers of the country. Often it is necessary to find a variety or strain which is immune from more than one disease. As disease-resistant strains, in order to meet the needs of farmers, must at the same time be desirable in other characteristics of yield, market value, and adaptation, the problem of finding or developing "fighting strains" capable of resisting the attacks of several diseases is more difficult and intricate. Nevertheless, the plant breeders have come to the rescue of the farmer on such occasions as well.

Plan to Prevent Loss.

This was the case with wheat in the area of southwestern Illinois, where the two diseases flag smut and the rosette disease were causing great losses to the wheat growers. Fortunately among the various selections of wheat being grown by the United States Department of Agriculture in varietal tests at the Arlington experiment farm, one variety known as the Shepherd strain seemed to embody all of the desired characteristics. It was immune to both diseases and showed an average yield over a period of six years of 31 bushels to the acre. About 100 acres were sown in the infected area in southwestern Illinois in the fall of 1923 with seed from the government plats. From the product of this sowing enough seed was available for the sowing of a large area in the fall of 1924. Now many farmers have seed of the Shepherd strain of wheat and are growing it to prevent losses from flag smut and rosette.

Feed Mash to Balance

Up the Scratch Feeds

Correct practice in feeding is the greatest factor that makes for success tant practice that does not have so many followers as it deserves is the feeding of mash to balance up the scratch feeds which are usually grown at home.

Those who feed a mash in winter often quit feeding it as soon as the snow drifts melt away, for they think that when the hen can get out of doors she should be made to rustle for her living. It is a mistake to do away with the mash entirely. Even though it is offered to the hens they will not eat as much of it as they will in the winter, but they will have an opportunity of balancing up their ration. This is essential in order to get a large quantity of eggs.

During Rest Period Cow Should Be Fed Liberally

During the rest period the cow should be fed enough to get in extra good physical condition before she freshens. There is no necessity and surely no economy to feed heavily during the dry period. Two or three pounds a day may well be fed, largely ground oats and bran, with some cornmeal if the cow is thin, and a small proportion of oilmeal. Then give the cow silage and good legume hay, and not make her subsist on poor roughages like fodder and timothy hay. During the dry period is a good time also to keep up the feeding of minerals.

Repair Laying House

This is a good time, to repair the laying house before the fall cleaning and preparation for early pullets. Roofs may need patching. Knot holes should be filled or covered, putty renewed on window sashes, new curtains put in for old ones, and door hinges tightened. Perhaps a coat or two of paint over the entire building would help both the appearance and preservation of the structure.

Remedy for Limberneck

Limberneck is a form of ptomaine poisoning caused by chickens eating maggots or too much decayed meat. When this trouble appears, search the place for the cause and remove it if possible. Give each infected bird one teaspoonful of epsom salts in one-half cupful of water or two teaspoonfuls of castor oil. Confine sick birds in a cool place.

County Record for Use of Pure Breds

All Classes of Live Stock Included in List.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) With 592 live stock, owners officially enrolled with the United States Department of Agriculture as pure-bredsire users, Pulaski county, Va., is the premier county of the United States in the extensive use of pure-bred males in live-stock breeding operations, so far as the department's records show. A recent report of the bureau of animal industry of the department notes that Pulaski county contains 843 farms reporting live stock, according to the last census, making pure-bred-sire users about 70 per cent of the total. The figure applies to live stock owners who use such sires for all classes of live stock raised, including cattle, horses, swine, sheep, and poultry. The census reports 970 inclosures, not farms, which would lower the percentage considerably, but would still permit the county to hold its premier position with respect to the wide use of pure-bred sires.

Union county, Ky., is the only secious competitor of Pulaski county. The figures given have added significance when considered in the light of reports which the department receives frequently on the benefits derived from the breeding of improved stock. From a financial point of view the widespread use of pure-bred sires may be expected to bring fully $100,-000 additional returns to the farmers of a good live stock county. This estimate is based on calculations from county agent sources and is believed to be conservative. The bureau of animal industry has consistently "urged the use of good pure-bred sires as a sound and practical method of live stock improvement. Responses from stock owners who have adopted the method have shown general satisfaction with the results.

Silage From Immature Corn Good for Cattle

Immature corn can be made into a good feed for cattle by putting it into a silo, says J. B. Fitch, head of the dairy department of the Kansas State Agricultural college. Many silos were built this year to store the short corn crop. If above ground silos are not available and their purchase cannot be financed, pit silos, trench silos and silos made from flooring or other homemade silos can be used, according to

"When this corn has reached the point where it will not grow any more it should be cut and put into a silo or stacked," he advises. "If it is allowed to stand in the field the leaves will shatter off and the crop deteriorate quite rapidly when exposed to the

"Immature corn is being cut this year with headers, grain binders, and mowing machines. When put into the silo the crop can be handled about the same as any other silage crop with the exception that this material cannot take up as much moisture as it would if mature. The amount of water added there should be watched carefully.

"Silage from immature corn will not be equal in feed value to good corn silage, but the silo is a means of preserving this corn and changing it to a palatable feed without loss."

Soy Beans for Pasture

Soy beans can be pastured by any kind of live stock, but they are more especially adapted to hogs than to cattle. For cattle our advice would be to harvest the beans and make hay. If desirable the beans can be permitted to ripen and be harvested for the seed ise of an active state-wide campaign. and the straw fed to cattle, it having a higher feeding value than corn stover. The soy-bean seed can be ground and fed to cows in the place of cottonseed meal.

Remove brush and weeds from fence corners and ditches.

Quality, not quantity, is the important consideration in dairy farming.

Acid phosphate applied at the rate of 150 pounds per acre just before seeding wil pay big returns.

To adjust production to the demands of the market is the pertinent problem of farm management.

A dozen horseshoes over the door

lage will be bitter and unpalatable.

AVERAGE COW IS NOT GOOD ENOUGH

The average American dairy cow is not good enough, according to Dr. C. W. Larson, chief, United States bureau of dairying. In an address before the National Dairy club at Chicago recently he characterized the greatest need of the dairy industry at this time as not an increase in the number of cows, but 🛣 greater production per cow. The average yearly yield of cows in this country is around 4,000 pounds of milk and 150 pounds of butterfat. Through intensive studies made by the bureau it was found that a cow producing this amount of milk and butterfat in one year furnishes an income of $26 over cost of feed. It was further shown that cows capable of producing 8,000 pounds of milk and 300 pounds of butterfat in a like period returned an income over feed cost of $74. The most practical and least expensive way for the average dairyman to increase the profits from his milking herd is through the cow-testing association and the use of a good purebred sire. An example of the greater profits possible by careful selection of cows, systematic weighing and testing of milk, proper feeding and the use of a good bull, is shown in the Allenton-Kohlsville Cow-Testing association of Wisconsin at the 1924 National Dairy exposition. Ten immature cows in this association, all daughters of the same pure-bred bull, produced an average of 1,483 pounds more milk and 70 pounds more butterfat in one year than did their dams at mature age. The outstanding exhibits of interest to the largest number of dairy farmers at the National Dairy exposition held this year at Indianapolis, October 10 to 17, again are devoted to these lessons. The comprehensive exhibit of the United States bureau of dairying and those of the national breed and state dairy associations and the leading state agricultural colleges will have special application to the good results obtained through cow-testing association work and the pure-bred sire.

Eradicate Tuberculosis

in Utah Dairy Section

A noteworthy advance in the nationwide campaign against bovine tuberculosis occurred during June in a new sector. Cache (pronounced Cash) county, Utah, completed a systematic tuperculin test of its 23,000 cattle, which showed less than one-half of 1 per cent infection. This very small extent of the disease, together with the fact that all reactors were removed, won for Cache county a place on the United States Department of Agriculture's list of "modified accredted areas."

It is the first county in Utah to nave that distinction, and department officials consider that the leadership of Cache county will stimulate similar activity in other counties of the region. This will greatly advance the progress of systematic tuberculin testing in the West. Such a view is sup ported by the fact that another county has in the state already applied for a similar intensive test of its cattle. The county commissioners of Summit county voted $500 toward the work which is now in progress.

A survey of the state indicates that the percentage of tuberculous infection in cattle is less than 1 per cent. This low figure and the growing sentiment in favor of the work give prom-

Prevent Mold in Butter

by Sanitary Measures

Moldy butter, which takes a toll of many thousands of dollars from creameries every year, can be absolutely controlled and prevented, says Harold Macy, bacteriologist for the division of dairy husbandry of the University of Minnesota. He points out that molds are living plants and must be present and alive to do any damage. If they are excluded or destroyed, there will be no moldiness of the butter.

Chief of steps to be taken in excluding molds, says Mr. Macy, are pasteurization of all cream, the emptying, cleaning, and sterilizing of the buttermilk tank every few days, and the use of two sets of cans by farmer patrons of the creamery, one set for transporting cream to the creamery and the other for taking buttermilk back to the farms. Sanitary piping and pumps must, of course, be provided and be kept clean and sterilized. Only pure, low acid starters, made from thoroughly pasteurized milk and pure cultures and kept in sterilized containers, should be used. Paraffin tubs and treated parchment are indispensable. And, finally, the butter should be stored in a cool, clean, dry, and well ventilated room.

FOREIGN LEGION IN DRIVE AGAINST MOORS

Bloody Hand-to-Hand Fighting in Morocco-French. Take Many Posts.

Madrid. - Sanguinary hand-to-hand fighting is in progress in the region of Tetuan, in the northern part of Spanish Morocco, an official communique says. The communique reports the Spaniards with the Foreign legion holding the center of the battle front. have advanced about two kilometers in spite of the Riffians' fanatical resistance.

The communique says the Spanish causalties amounted to 70 dead and wounded, while at least 70 Rifflan dead were counted.

In the Alhucemas bay sector, the communique says, there have been only a few skirmishes.

Paris.-Many posts which a few months ago enjoyed a flash of publicity as scenes of hard fighting and dropped out of the news with the announcement, "Suppressed or captured," reappeared in the communique as Marshal Petain's gigantic steam roller moves resistlessly on.

In two days thirteen of these posts have been retaken and more added during the day. Three important developments stand out in the details arising from the offensive against the central sector. The Rifflans are violently counter-attacking in the west against the column which relieved Issoula. Two brigades marching from Skiffa Terroual converged at Reina, two miles north of Anjot and only five miles south of the frontier of the Spanish protectorate.

The rebels, instead of retiring after brief resistance, as during the Tafrant-Taouant offensive, fought vigorously all day against a brigade attempting complete disengagement of Issoual They had to be driven from ridge to ridge before the French could finally storm the heights of Hocine. There the French have succeeded in holding their position despite repeated rebel Occupation of Reina forms the tip of a narrow salient ten miles north of Ouergha. It is like a spearhead aimed at the dividing line between the Giballa tribes and the Riff.

FAVORABLE LABOR CONDITIONS REPORTED

More Positions and Fewer Jobless in Middle West.

Washington. - Favorable industrial conditions were reported by the employment service of the federal Department of Labor in its monthly summary of the situation in various sections of the country.

"An analysis of reports received by the service for August indicates that there is no serious amount of unemployment," said Francis I. Jones, director general. "The demand for laboris slightly increased.

"Increased demands were reported for labor in connection with highway construction. Work on large buildings and municipal improvement programs continue to employ resident tradesmen in most localities, and in some centers a shortage is reported."

Considering conditions in Midwest states, the report says:

Indiana-"There is still unemployment apparent in Indiana, but industries are gradually swinging toward normal and unemployment is decreas-

Michigan-"The surplus of common labor is gradually being decreased. Automobile production has been exceptionally well maintained and building operations continues to be very heavy."

Wisconsin-"Employment is slowly but steadily increasing. The demand for factory labor was light this month, but for common labor for building and construction work there was an increased demand."

COMMANDER RODGERS' OWN STORY OF FLIGHT

Praises Crew of PN-9, No. 1, in Modest Narrative of 9-Day Drift in Pacific.

Honolulu.—Commander John Rodgers of the navy seaplane PN-9, No. 1, issued his first official statement of the attempt to span the Pacific in a nonstop flight from San Francisco to the Hawaiian islands. In an extemporary report, dedicated to "the American people.' Commander Rodgers chronicled the experiences and trials gone through by himself and crew of four men since the plane took off from the waters of San Francisco bay, August 31.

By COMMANDER JOHN RODGERS Iln command of navy seaplane PN-9, No. 1.1

For the benefit of the interested pubic, I desire ot make at this time a definite statement of facts in regard to the voyage of the P-N9, No. 1, from San Francisco to Nawiliwili.

The PN-9, No. 1 and No. 3, left San Francisco approximately at the same time on August 31. The PN-9, No. 3, was not sighted by No. 1 after departure. Plane PN-9 No. 1, proceeded as per instructions, sailing on a straight course to Kahului.

The navigation was done entirely by dead reckoning, no attention being paid to radio bearings

The engines worked perfectly. In the morning it became evident that the gasoline supply was running short and it would be doubtful if we could reach Kahului. I therefore decided to land at the Aroostook,

I started to write a message which would give her some clue of our whereabouts but just then the gasoline gave out. Both engines were cut out simultaneously and we started to glide from about 800 feet.

Lieutenant Connell, who had the contacts, made a beautiful landing in the heavy swells, both engines being dead, having no power. Due to total expenditure of gasoline, we could not use radio and were therefore out of communication at twilight. I determined our position to be fifty miles north of the Aroostook's station

We rigged a radio antennae on the plane and received without much difficulty everything that was in the air. We sailed before the wind, endeavoring to work the plane in toward the Hawaiian islands, hoping to make Oahu. We made fifty miles a day.

We knew we could get along with our food, of which we had small emergency rations. We were depending on a small water still for water.

This supplied water, but the still required gasoline as fuel. We managed to get the still going on the sixth day by burning wood from the trailing edges of the lower wings. On the seventh day we made a canteen and a half of water in about five hours

On the eighth day a heavy rain squall passed over us and we caught about two gallons in the fabric which had been cut from the lower wings This enabled us to survive.

All during the trip we realized that an extemporized radio sending set would solve our difficulties in a few hours by giving our position to the search ships. We tried rigging one ip, but were unable to make one which worked a sufficient distance. The receiver, as I have said, functioned perfectly all the time. We knew just what was going on about us.

Crossing the steamer lane from Honolulu to the coast a steamer crossed our bow about five miles ahead, in the early morning. Due probably to the fact that the sun was low and directly in the eyes of observers, we were not seen.

We passed Oahu at about 40 miles distance, the island being clearly visible, the afternoon of the eighth, and headed and close hauled for Kauai. We had reached a point about 15 miles off Nawiliwili and were trying to signal that port when we were sighted by the patrolling submarine, ten miles of Nawiliwili, were taken in tow and towed into the harbor, where the whole island greeted us.

The most exciting part of the whole fourney was getting the plane anchored safe in the harbor of Nawiliwili. Finally we got it well secured in a safe place and went ashore. We were taken care of by the good people of the island, who insisted on treating us as invalids, whereas, as a matter of fact. we were in very good shape and perfectly capable of taking care of ourselves.

We believe the PN-9 is a great plane in the air, capable of maintaining itself on the surface of the water in ordinary weather almost indefinitely.

The morale of the crew was high. As a matter of fact it appears from what we heard after our arrival that we were the least concerned people in the world as to our safety.

I wish to say finally that as Hawailan flight commander I was fully supported by all units of the navy.

COOLIDGE GETS TAX CUT AND BUDGET DATA

Mellon Shows Reduction of $400,000,000 Possible.

Washington.-One of the first tasks undertaken by the President after his return to Washington was to tackle the problem of tax reduction and the national budget. Treasury department figures prepared for Secretary Mellon have been put in approximately final form, both on expected receipts and disbursements for the fiscal years 1926 and 1927 and on the working out of various suggested plans of tax reduction.

These figures are under consideraion by the President and will guide him in the final draft of the sections of his message to congress dealing with the national budget and tax reduction.

The first cabinet meeting for several weeks was held. Secretary Mellon attended and he had an estimate on the sums involved. In addition, he was prepared to discuss the proposals for tax reduction put forward during the congressional recess.

One of the most important developments involved was the condition of the treasury. There is every indication that the balance for the present fiscal year will be larger than expected. As a result the administration's recommendations or suggestions to the ways and means and finance committees may contemplate a tax reduction of at least $400,000,000 and perhaps as much as $500,000,000.

A cut of 50 per cent in surtax rates right down the line, with a maximum of 20 per cent, will be recommended. It will be suggested that the nuisance taxes be largely abolished and that the unprofitable tax on smailer incomes be eliminated.

U. S. REPORTS YIELD OF CORN IS REDUCED

Forecast Indicates Crop of 2,885,000,000 Bu.-Wheat, Oats Show Gain.

Washington.-The indicated corn yield has been reduced by 65,000.000 bushels in the last month as a result of drought and continued heat, according to the government report, made here, which placed the probable crop at 2,885,000,000 bushels. The estimate was 2,950,000,000 the previous month and 2,437,000,000 in the same month of 1924.

The crip is extremely spotted, with the reduction of 42,000,000 bushels in South Dakota and 9,000,000 bushels each in Minnesota and Illinois. In Illinois the total of 378,982,000 was a surprise in view of recent pessimistic reports. The lowa crop was virtually unchanged while the Ohio estimate was raised 9,600,000 bushels, indicating a record yield for that state. Nebraska's estimate was increased 13,500,000 bushels and that of Kansas, 7,000,000.

Gains of 21,000,000 bushels in spring wheat, 75,000,000 bushels in oats, and 8,000,000 bushels in barley were reported, with the gain for the five leading grains 37,000,000 bushels over August, raising the total to 5,321,000,-000. This is an increase of 473,000,000 bushels as compared with 1924.

Based on the prices prevailing for September delivery of wheat, oats, rye, and barley at Chicago and December delivery on corn, the five leading grains have a valuation of $4,330, 000,000 as of September 1.

The winter wheat crop is 416,000,000 bushels and the total of all wheat, 700,000,000 bushels compared with 873,000,000 bushels harvested last year, which is also the five-year average. Late oats are yielding much better than was expected, and the estimated crop is now 1,462,000,000 bushels, an increase of 75,000,000 bushels This crop figure has been exceeded only four times in the country's history. The harvest last year was 1.542.000,000.

CHAPTER II—Continued

"Great Scott! I hope not," cried Hugh in alarm. "Phyllis gave me complete instructions about the brutes hefore she toddled off. I make a noise like an ant's egg, and drop them in the sink every morning. No. old lad of the village, it is something of vast import: a stain upon the escutcheon of your force. Last night-let us whisper it in Gath-I dined and further supped not wisely but too well. In fact 1 deeply regret to admit that I became a trifle blotto-not to say tanked. Of course it wouldn't have happened if Phyllis had been propping up the jolly old home, don't you know: but she's away in the country with the nightingales and slugs and things. Well, as I say, in the young hours of the morning I thought I'd totter along home. I'd been with some birds, male birds, Tumkins"-he stared sternly at Sir Bryan, while Mc-Iver stiffened into rigid horror at such an incredible nickname-"and when I left it was about 2 a. m. Well, I wandered along through Leicester square, and stopped just outside Scott's to let one of those watering carts water my head for me. While I was lying in the road, steaming at the brow, a motor car went past, and it stopped in Piccadilly circus."

McIver's air of irritation vanished suddenly, and a quick glance passed between him and Sir Bryan.

"Nothing much you observe in that, Tumkins," he burbled on, quite unconscious of the sudden attention of his hearers. "But wait, old lad-I haven't got to the motto yet. From this car there stepped large numbers of men: at least, so it seemed to me, and you must remember I'd recently had a shampoo. And just as I got abreast of them they lifted out another warrior, who appeared to me to be unconscious. They put him on the pavement and got back into the car again just as I tottered alongside.

What ho! souls.' I m what is this and that, so to speak?' "'Binged, old bean, badly binged," said the driver of the car. leaving him there to cool.'

"And with that the car drove off. There was I, Tumkins, in a partially binged condition alone in Piccadilly circus with a bird in a completely binged condition.

"'How now,' I said to myself. Shall I go and induce yon water merchant to return'-as a matter of fact I was beginning to feel I could do with another whack myself--- 'or shall I leave you here—as your pals observed-to cool?'

"I bent over him as I pondered this knotty point, and as I did so, Tumkins, I became aware of a strange

Hugh paused dramatically and selected another cigarette, while Sir Bryan flashed a quick glance of warning at McIver, who was obviously bursting with suppressed excitement.

'A peculiar and sickly odor, Tumkins," resumed the speaker with maddening deliberation. "A strange and elusive perfume. For a long while it eluded me-that smell: I just couldn't place it. And then suddenly I got it: right in the middle, old boy-plumb in the center of the windpipe. It was chloroform: the bird wasn't drunk-he was doned." Completely exhausted Hugh lay back in his chair, and once again Sir Bryan flashed a warning glance at his exasperated subordinate. "Would you be able to recognize any of the men in the car if you saw them again?" he asked quietly. "I should know the driver," answered Hugh after profound thought. "And the bird beside him. But not the others.' "What did you do then?" asked Sir

Brvan. "Well, I brought the brain to bear," answered Hugh, "and decided there was nothing to do. He was doped, and I was bottled-so by a unanimous pasting vote of one-I toddled off home. And silence settled on the room, broken only by the low-voiced conversation between McIver and his chief in the window. After a while a strangled snore from the chair announced that Drummond was ceasing to take an intelligent interest in things mundane.

"He's an extraordinary fellow, Mc-Iver," said Sir Bryan, glancing at the sleeper with a smile. "I've known him ever since we were boys at school. And he's not quite such a fool as he makes himself out. You remember that extraordinary case over the man Peterson a year or so ago. Well, it was he who did the whole thing. His complete disability to be cunning utterly defeated that master-crook, who was always looking for subtlety that wasn't there. And of course his strength is absolutely phenomenal."

"I know, sir," said McIver doubtfully, "but would he consent to take on such a job-and do exactly as he was told?"

They were both looking out of the window, while in the room behind them the heavy breathing of the sleeper rose and fell monotonously. And when the whole audience is asleen it ceases to be necessary to talk in Which was why Sir undertones. Bryan and the inspector during the next ten minutes discussed certain matters of import which they would not have discussed through megaphones at the Savoy. They concerned Hugh and other things, and the other things particularly were of interest. And they continued discussing these other things until, with a dreadful noise like a racing motor back-firing, the sleeper sat up in his chair and stretched himself.

"Tumkins," he cried. "I have committed sacrilege. I have slept in the Holy of Holies. Have you decided on my fate? Am I to be shot at work, old man?"

Sir Bryan left the window and sat down at his desk. For a moment or Is that the notion?" two he rubbed his chin thoughtfully with his left hand, as if trying to make up his mind. "Would you like to do a job of

Hugh started as if he had been stung by a wasp, and Sir Bryan smiled.

"Not real work," he said reassuringly. "But by mere luck last night you saw something which Inspector McIver would have given a good deal to see. Or to be more accurate, you saw some men whom McIver.particularly wants to meet."

"Those blokes in the car you mean?" cried Hugh brightly.

"Those blokes in the car," agreed the other. "Incidentally, I may say there was a good deal more in that little episode than you think: and after consultation with McIver I have decided to tell you a certain amount about it, because you can help us, Hugh. You see you're one up on McIver: you have at any rate seen those men and he hasn't. Moreover, you say you could recognize two of them again."

"Good heavens! Tumkins," murmured Hugh aghast, "don't say you want me to tramp the streets of London looking for them."

Sir Bryan smiled. "We'll spare you that," he answered. "But I'd like you to pay attention to what I'm going to tell you. Last night a very peculiar thing happened to McIver. He and some of his men in the normal course of duty surrounded a certain house in which were some people we wanted to lay our steals on and cannot be arrested.

Who better, I thought, than old | hands on. To be more accurate there was one man there whom we wanted. He'd been shadowed ever since he'd landed in England that morning, shadowed the whole way from docks to the house. And sure enough when McIver and his men surrounded the house, there was our friend and all his pals in one of the downstairs rooms. It was then that this peculiar thing happened. I gather from McIver that he heard the noise of an owl hooting, also a faint scuffle and a the spray into all crevices. Kerosene curse. And after that he heard nothing more. He was chloroformed from behind, and went straight out of the picture."

"Great Scott!" murmured Hugh, staring incredulously at McIver. What an amazing thing!"

"Me!" Hugh sat up abruptly. "Why me?"

"One of the men inside the room was an interesting fellow known as Flash Jim. He is a burglar of no mean repute, though he is quite ready to tackle any sort of job which carries money with it. And when McIver, having recovered himself in the morning, ran Flash Jim to ground in one of his haunts he was quite under the impression that the men who had doped him and the other officers were pals of Flash Jim. But after he'd talked to him he changed his mind. All Flash Jim could tell him was that on the previous night he and some friends had been discussing business at this house. He didn't attempt to deny that. He went on to say that suddenly the room had been filled with a number of masked men, and that he'd had a clip over the back of the head which knocked him out. After that presumably he was given a whiff of chloroform to keep him quiet, and the next thing he remembers is being kicked back into activity by the policeman at-" Sir Bryan paused a moment to emphasize the point-"at

"Good Lord!" said Hugh dazedly. "Then that bird I saw last night sleeping it off on the pavement was Flash Piccadilly circus."

"Precisely," answered Sir Bryan. "But what is far more to the point, old man, is that the two birds you think you would be able to recognize and who were in the car, are two of the masked men who first of all laid out McIver and subsequently surrounded Flash Jim and his pals in-

"But what did they want to do that for?" asked Hugh in bewilderment.

"That is just what we want to find out," replied Sir Bryan. "As far as we can see at the moment they are not criminals in the accepted sense of the word. They flogged two of the men who were there last night, and there are no two men in England who more richly deserved it. They kidnaped two others, one of whom was the man we particularly wanted. Then to wind up, they planted Flash Jim as I've told you, let the others go, and brought McIver and all his men back to McIver's house, where they left them to cool on the pavement. And what I want to know is this. If we give you warning would you care to go with McIver the next time he has any job on, where he thinks it is likely this gang may turn up? We have a pretty shrewd idea as to the type of thing they specialize in."

Hugh passed his hand dazedly over his forehead

"Sort of mother's help you mean," and McIver frowned horribly. "While the bird biffs McIver, I biff the bird.

"That is the notion," agreed Sir Bryan. "Of course you'll have to do exactly what McIver tells you, and the whole thing is most unusual. But in view of the special features of the case .. What is it, Miss Forbes?" He glanced up at his secretary, who was standing in the doorway, with a slight

"He insists on seeing you at once, Sir Bryan."

She came forward with a card, which Sir Bryan took.

"Charles Latter." The frown deepened. "What the deuce does he want?

The answer was supplied by the gentleman himself, who appeared at that moment in the doorway. He was evidently in a state of great agitation and Sir Bryan rose.

"I am engaged at the moment. Mr. Latter." he said coldly.

"My business won't take you a minute, Sir Bryan," he cried. "But what I want to know is this. Is this country civilized or is it not? Look at what I received by the afternoon

if "Bulldog" Drummond isgoing to mix up in the case things certainly will be interesting. And who's Charles Latter?

ERADICATE MITES TO SAVE POULTRY

There are few poultry producers who do not know of the ravages caused by the common chicken mite. It is very common in all parts of the country and while it is more prevalent in mid-summer it is well to eradicate it from the chicken houses before the young chickens arrive in the spring.

The removal of all interior fixtures and a thorough disinfection with a strong dip applied with a force pump is recommended by the Kansas experiment station. They state:

All rubbish should be removed and burned. Care must be taken to get emulsion, crude petroleum, and wood preservatives may be used for spraying, followed by whitewash. Whitewash aids mechanically by helping to fill up many crevices. Spraying should be repeated after a week in order to get any mites that may escape. Roosts should be painted frequently with wood preservative or crude petroleum. A treatment of the roosts, nests, boxes, etc., each spring with undiluted crude carbolic acid or sheep dip is usually sufficient to reduce the action of the mites to a minimum. The fact should be kept in mind that mites are bloodsucking parasites and do not remain on the birds as do lice. Mites are more harmful to poultry than lice and in treatment it is necessary to treat the house and not the bird, as is the case of lice.

The construction of roosts and nesting places so as to reduce hiding places to a minimum is an excellent control measure.

If new birds are brought to the farm, or birds to new quarters, they should be isolated for a few days in a pen separate from the permanent quarters so that all of the mites will leave them, thus preventing the infestation of new quarters. If birds are moved in the daytime mites will not be carried on them.

Poultrymen Use Greens

in Greater Quantities New Jersey poultrymen are finding that for greatest success plans should be made to supply poultry with an abundance of greens. They find that vegetation usually becomes tough and coarse in the summer and free range conditions do not provide the proper type of green food for poultry.

To offset this the principal crops sown in yards or on range are oats. rape and alfalfa. An alfalfa sod makes an ideal range because of the new growth constantly coming out. Rape also makes a new growth as the old is eaten off. It produces dark yellow yolks, however, and must be avoided if light yolks are desired. Oats make a very good crop for a few weeks. They should be planted in small quantities, because if not consumed while young they soon become too large and coarse.

In addition to range crops, cabbage, kale and swiss chard are often grown in a side field and fed to the birds. Kale has proved particluarly well suited for summer feeding as it continually sends out new shoots after being cut. Cabbage makes a fine feed for late summer and fall. Regardless of the kind of succulent feed used, successful poultrymen aim to provide six to eight pounds daily per 100 birds. When fed the first thing in the morning or the last thing at night, the green feed does not interfere with consumption of other feeds, and egg production is improved by its use.

A Leghorn cockerel may become a rooster, but never a roaster.

Painting the roosts and nests with a good preservative or creosote is insurance against mites

It is a good rule never to let a sick chicken die on the premises. It should be killed before it reaches that stage.

If you are expecting to get the best results from your poultry flock, feed a balanced ration and do not over-

The ancient buncombe about hens getting too fat to lay is still widely credited when, as a matter of fact, no hen except a fat hen can lav.

A full feed early in the day tends to make the hens listless, while a small feed encourages them to take the exercise which they need in order to keep in the best of health. * * *

A hoe with 15 or 18-inch blade is very satisfactory for scraping the dropping boards, and if used regularly once a week or oftener, will assist materially in maintaining the health of the flock.

A good scratch grain ration consists of equal parts of cracked corn and whole wheat. Feed a little of the grain in the morning to make the flock exercise and give all they will clean up at night in fifteen or twenty min-
