

Georgia Laura White was born in Nashville, Michigan. She attended Cornell University, eventually becoming a research fellow, before receiving her Ph.D. in 1901. She spent her career in education and became the dean of home economics at Michigan Agricultural College in 1913, serving until 1918.