Foreword

MEMORY! The basis of knowledge, the mother of imagination, the sine qua non of reason, Cupid's aid-de-camp, the solace of old age. How it charms our weary hours! How it lightens the sad days of care and toil, and heightens the bliss of the brightest.

Then, too, how dearly we prize those trophies and tokens that recall for us the pleasant days of yore. Pennants and ribbons, cards and snapshots, sweaters and be-named sofa pillows, scrap books, and whatnot; these and many more whose associations grow sweeter as the years roll on. And not least among this varied company, the democrat of the list, with some reminder for every one of us, is the good old College Annual. Some day, in what is to us now the far, far distant future, when, before the flickering firelight, "she and I" review life's mementos and once again turn the pages of our old Wolverines, when they have brought many a merry laugh and often the reluctant tear in memory of good times and friends of College days, then, and then only, can our appreciation of our Annuals be complete.

As we, the class of 1916, offer you this book, the seventh of its kind, we bespeak your most charitable judgment; the book, like ourselves, is imperfect. If you find it somewhat to your liking, the credit is in great measure due to the kind co-operation of all those, our fellow-workers in the educational game, who have helped to make it possible. Had we not such a College, such a vigorous, loyal, united body of faculty, students, athletes, and organizations, there could be no such Annuals as those of the past or present. For our part, building on past successful Annuals of this and other colleges (for whose suggestions, thanks), we have sought, in the spirit of changing Nature, to create something at least a little different in matter and arrangement.

THE EDITORS.

President Jonathan Lemoyne Snyder

ELDOM does there come to a man at thirty-six an opportunity such as presented itself to Dr. Snyder, when on February 11, 1896, he was asked to become the president of the Michigan Agricultural College.

Dr. Snyder was born at Slippery Rock, Butler County, Pennsylvania, October 29, 1859. He attended the rural school of his community and later received his secondary work at the Grove City College. After several years of teaching in the rural schools of his home county, he entered Westminster College, at New Wilmington, Pennsylvania, graduating from that institution with the class of '86.

Shortly after graduation from Westminster, he was elected superintendent of schools in Butler County. During his two years' work there he introduced a course of study for the rural schools, and with the help of some others succeeded in establishing the Slippery Rock Normal—now one of the strongest normal schools in the State of Pennsylvania.

In 1889 he was called to the principalship of the fifth ward of the city of Allegheny. He here established a free kindergarten, and supervised the erection of a manual training school in which courses were offered in drawing, cooking, sewing, and wood and lathe work. Never content in idleness, his summers and spare moments were spent in study. He pursued a postgraduate course in psychology and philosophy and received the degree of Ph. D. from his Alma Mater in 1891.

The next year he was married to Miss Clara M. Mifflin of North Washington, Pennsylvania. The summer of 1895 they spent in a pleasant tour of Europe.

In 1896 Dr. Snyder entered upon his duties at M. A. C. As a gardener watches the unfolding of buds into beautiful blossoms, so has President Snyder watched a small school with an enrollment of some three hundred develop into a splendid institution with two thousand students. Up to 1896 growth had been slow, and a great deal of tact and patience was necessary to stimulate it.

PRESIDENT SNYDER AT 22

The first significant step to be taken was the opening of the College to women. With the new course came unforeseen problems and new responsibilities. Storm after storm of indignation swept the campus, as one by one these new problems were faced and solved; but President Snyder stood firm and is deserving of sincere thanks for many of our revered traditions.

As the courses advanced and necessity demanded, new buildings were erected, until today we have a little city of beautiful structures, many of which have been built under President Snyder's watchful eye. A railroad spur has been constructed to the campus, and the trolley line connecting us with the city of Lansing has also been built during these years.

Gradually the standard of the College has been raised from entrance requirements of eighth grade work to full fifteen units of high school preparation. The curriculum has been changed from time to time to meet advanced conditions. Today our graduates are recognized and admitted into the leading universities of the country. The extension department reaches out a helping hand to all classes throughout the state. So in these twenty years we see a growth and change in our institution which is in many ways remarkable.

President Snyder has been allied with many educational movements during these years. He is now a member of the National Council of Education, and in the National Conservation Congress is chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Lands. At one time he was president of the Michigan School-Masters' Club. He also had the honor of being president of the National Association of Agricultural Colleges and Experiment Stations, and was for seven years a member of the Executive Committee of that organization. In 1908 the University of Michigan conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Such has been the life of the man who for twenty years has stood at the head of our Alma Mater, directing her progress and guiding her over the rough places, and, as he at last withdraws from the enviable position he has filled so long, he hands on to his successor a College worthy to stand among the best of its kind in the land. Of him it may truly be said:

"He always stood for what was right,
Honest, inspiring, and true;
He worked for us with will and might,
And guided us safely through
The seas of rough adversity,
Though oft as black as night,
Till at dawn in the harbor safely lay
Triumphant—the Green and White."

The Class of 1915 The Book of Dreams

*The twilight falls, it is the land of dreams,
No beacon light across the shadow gleams.
We strain our eyes to pierce the darkened wall,
We list in silence for the distant call.*

Dramatis Personae { Past
Present
Future

Scene—Forest of Arden. Curtain, which has been lowered for four years, rises, revealing Past alone in the Forest of Arden

Past—Thru struggles, hopes, realizations,
You have safely passed with me,
And now you come to a land of dreams,
Which sways in an unknown sea.

(Enter Present)

Ah, there she stands before you,
Not a being of flesh is she;
But the union of Past and Future
Into bold reality.
Farewell, I shall go and leave you
In Present's real sure embrace.

Present—Yes, 'tis true, she's leaving, she's gone,
And left you me to face.
Past has called me real; 'tis true,
I am before you in the main,
But tomorrow I will be gone,
And yet, be here again.

(Enter Future)

But do you see that misty vision?
Uncertain, unreal, untrue,
'Tis Future and her train of dreams,
Which oftentimes has lured you.

Future—I speak from the land of inexperience;
I move in the "Book of Dreams,"
I live in the vale of the future,
I die never, though oft so it seems.
Ah, no, I am always there somewhere,
And my cares can never be greater.
Yet 'tis I who will guard and watch over
Your dear old Alma Mater.—Exit.

The Students Without a Class

This Year of Grace the personnel of our good ship includes three score and ten men who, active anywhere and everywhere, may be regarded as a marine corps. We have in mind our "Special" students.

Why the "Special"? Well, some men for example want the scientific side of their education only. Some who have studied at other institutions defy regular classification, and some there are who unable to solve the money problem of the regular student come and go as best they may.

The "Special" occupies an unique position. Exempted from wearing the badge of humility in his first year, he has no voice in seeing that it is worn in his second. No distinctive garment may envelope his faithful breast; neither may his features adorn class picture or Wolverine. He is with us, but not exactly one of us. Yet, often a man of wide experience, usually bent on business, he invariably enjoys universal respect and good-will. His standings do him credit, and he boosts his College with heart and soul.

More than this, O discerning reader, what would ye have?

The Class of 1916 The Book of Fulfilment

*As Natives of the land o' heart's desire,
As Sharers of the feasts the gods inspire—
We linger till the light begins to wane,
And shadows travel towards the east again.*

THE STRUGGLES were past and hopes were turned into achievement; "The Book of Fulfilment" had been written. That singular charm of personality had been bestowed upon it by the many eyes that had read the unwritten thoughts between its lines. It was the more highly treasured because it contained also within its covers "The Book of Struggles" and "The Book of Hopes."

The Book of struggles recounts the adventures of a band of youthful Wanderers who had foregathered in a strange land. The customs, manners and language of the inhabitants were unfamiliar; even, at times, hostile to the wanderers. Another band, who had had a year's experience in the land, engaged them in a combat to test their physical strength and endurance, and for the edification and pleasure of the native public. In this combat the youthful Wanderers were defeated and overthrown, and were forced to retire in confusion. However, in the daily combats with a band of native lords known as Faculty, who conducted a test of their mental strength, unprecedented strength is recorded.

It was upon the glamor of these small successes and upon the intricate network of failure and homesickness that The Book of Hope with its splendid self-confidence, its fine and high ideals, was founded. Again, however, the Wanderers were forced to munch the bitter ashes of humiliation in the combat with the newly foregathered band. But, as before, they used the skeleton of failure to strengthen and augment the foundation of the Temple of Unity, Loyalty and High Ideals which they purposed to build. And their continued successes with those native lords, the Faculty, served to keep bright the armor of their spirits.

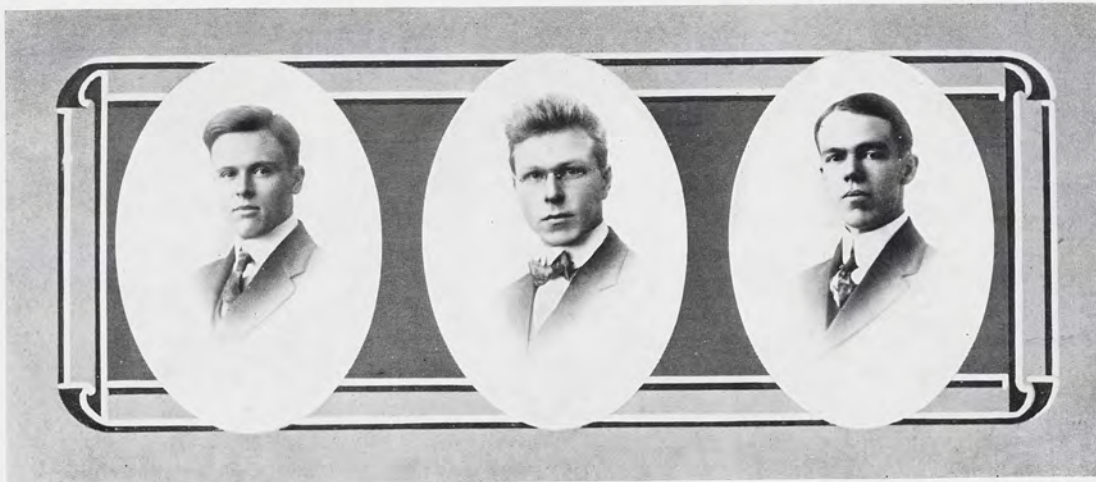

The Book of Fulfilment was the result. In this they stepped forth as natives of the place to which they had foregathered, as citizens of the Temple of Unity, Loyalty and High Ideals. In celebration of their accession to the rights of this splendid citizenship they held a wonderful feast, and it is recorded in the Book of Fulfilment as the most beautiful and unique ever held in the land. Thus they came into their own. Their fame traveled afar into many of the councils of the times, and the honors and responsibilities which accompany work well done fell thickly upon them. Their prowess in athletic contests spread thruout the entire nation.

They had builded better than they knew; their ideals were realized; and the Book of Fulfilment was complete.

The Class of 1917 The Book of Hope

*Uncertainty and fear, great veils of weight,
Lie on our spirits as we near the gate—
Hope rends aside the veil and there we see
The wonder of a year that is to be.*

By the side of the Red Cedar on our campus wide and spreading,
At his desk, so tall and august—in the warm September morning—
Prexy sat and questioned Freshmen. All the room was full of Freshmen;
Freshmen timid, Freshmen hopeful of the race that was before them,
Two weeks later all about them saw they glaring yellow posters,
And an awful threatening challenge from the war-like tribe of Sixteen.
Met they then these awful Sophomores in a combat called the Rush—
And the Class of Seventeen felled the enemy before them—
Felled the proud and lofty Sophomores.
Then with smiles of eagerness went they into all athletics,
Hopeful, cheerful, ever-winning; till the Class of Seventeen
Took her place among the classes.

Next September in his office Prexy sat and questioned Freshmen.
But he shook his head and murmured, "They can never equal last year's—
The illustrious Class of Seventeen."
Once again there came a day when the campus shown with posters—
Just and righteous challenge to the Freshmen from the tribe of Seventeen.
And they called them as their leader Big Chief Wright, who led his hoping warriors

To another victory in a combat called the Rush.
On the last night of October, hoping to allay the warfare
Of the tribes of Seventeen and Eighteen,
Gave these Sophs a barbecue to the four tribes of the campus.
Never was there such a feast, never were there heard such speeches,
Never so much merry-making as this Class of Seventeen
Gave to friends and foes alike.
And the hatchet then was buried, and the peace-pipe took its place.
To a merry-making, big and splendid, came the Sophomores one and all,
Not to dance the awful war dance, nor a wierd and mystic measure,
But to tread a peaceful measure, in the spring of Nineteen Fifteen.
Now they sit in solemn council, planning for the future's victories.
Now they sit in hopeful silence for the joys that they expect.
Peaceful, hopeful, just and loyal, is the tribe of Seventeen—
In this land of Michigan, on our Alma Mater's Campus.

LOUISE HALLADAY.

The Class of 1918 The Book of Struggles

*We stand with longing eyes inside the gate,
And ope with eager hands the Book of Fate —
One line leaps up to startle and dismay,
"A struggle lies beyond you in the way."*

OPENED one day the covers of a big, big book, a very old book whose leaves were yellowed with age, and falling to pieces from decay. On its title page I found this legend: "The Book of Struggles, being an Exhaustive Treatise on the Difficulties which have Opposed the Purposes of Man since the Beginning of Time." With exceeding great care I began to turn the fragile pages. Fascinated by the tales they bore of human suffering and endurance, I followed on and on, and came finally to these words:

"Verily, these examples have I quoted, and great is the lesson to be learned therefrom. But behold thou now, an even mightier struggle than all of these. All the world be called to witness the struggles of the Freshman in College! Lo! He struggles unbelievably, and men comprehend not the magnitude of the difficulties by which he is confronted, nor the agonies of the soul—trying fire through which he is compelled to pass! See him suddenly removed from the midst of his accustomed fellows and surroundings, and transplanted into a new and strange world. At first he is bewildered and has many difficulties in adjusting himself to his new situation. Numerous unanswerable questions assail him from every side, and he is sore perplexed. Even his most treasured and well-beloved theories may be torn ruthlessly from him, and the most necessary of his material garments be torn asunder into many pieces. He fights against overwhelming odds—odds which would cause any but the stoutest heart to beat very irregularly in nameless agitation, and a less intrepid soul to cower in fear and trembling, and seek relief in ignoble flight; but he is not overwhelmed. With superfreshman strength he meets them, grapples with them, is, at times, very near for long and anxious periods of suspense to inglorious defeat, but—a supremest effort!—and lo! he overthrows them and passes on, valiant and undaunted. Or, perhaps, if a seemingly unkind fate decides against him, he is defeated, once, twice, three times, but still he struggles on, not with averted face and bitterness in his heart, but gallantly, nobly, with the light of high hope in his eyes, and in his soul unfaltering courage. Thus gradually and with untold difficulties and disturbances of soul, he becomes finally a part of his College. Her hopes and ideals become his, and what she stands for he adopts as his own standard of living."

Book the Third

Played not for gain, but sport; who plays for more than he can lose with pleasure, stakes his heart.

— T. Herbert

The Prospect

The time is now at hand when M. A. C. may enjoy a new era in athletic activities. Till now, by the lack of a gymnasium, we have been seriously handicapped; substitutes for a "gym", like substitutes in general, have but poorly served the purpose. True, we are rated along with the best in football, but preparation for football can all be made out-of-doors.

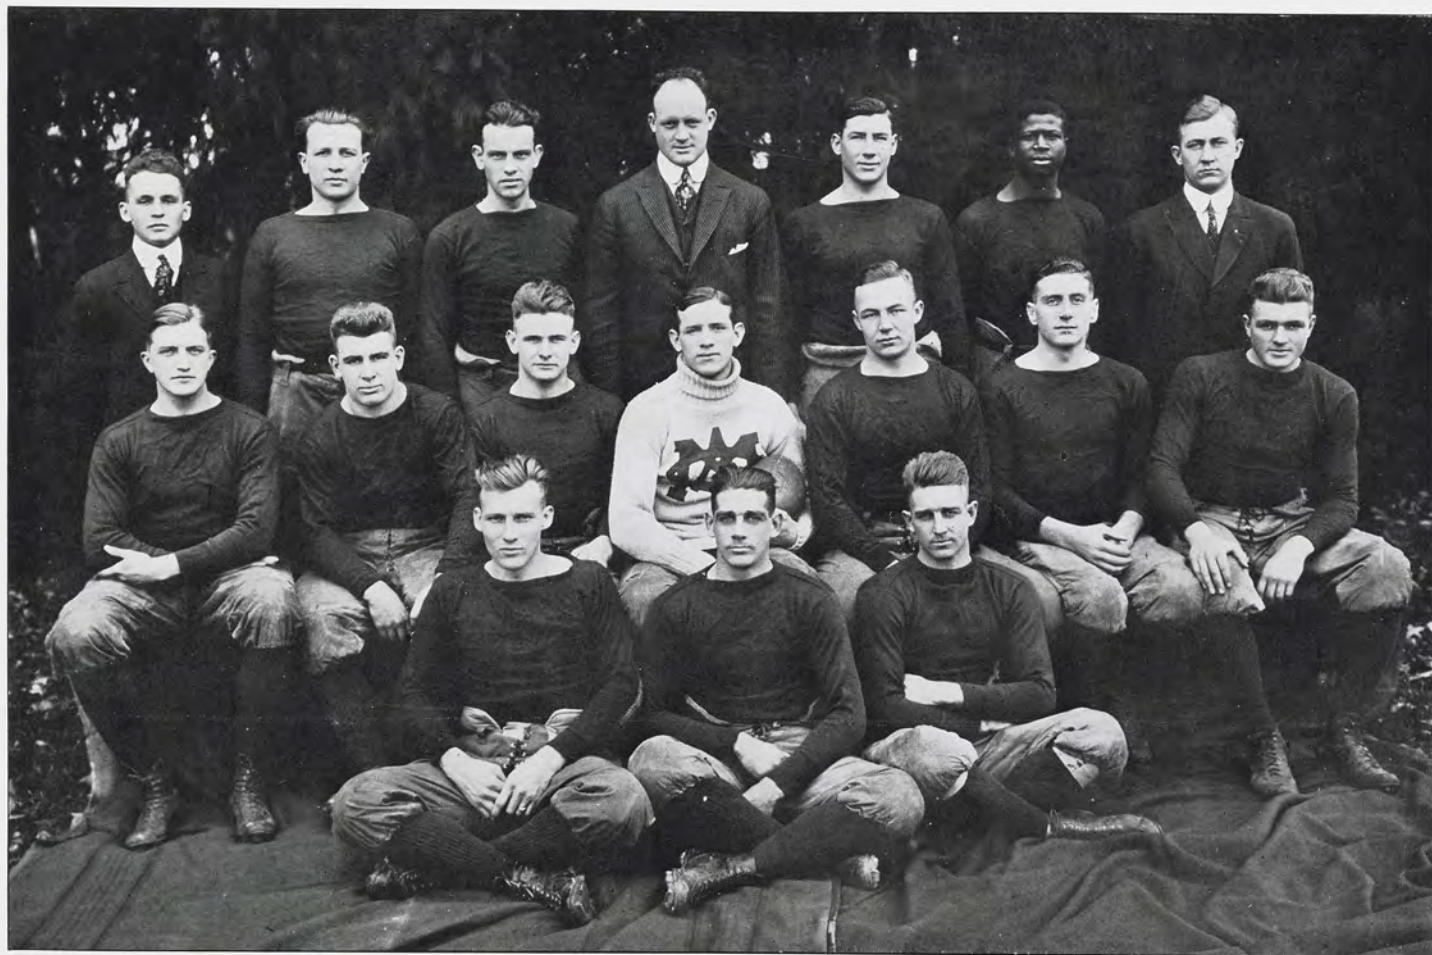

With a new "gym" and its many advantages our basketball team should gain greatly in prominence and have unbroken success to boast of. And track athletics, now considered a minor sport, ought to be raised to the same plane as in the larger universities. In short, with the prospects of a new gymnasium, an abundance of the best material in all lines, and excellent coaching, M. A. C. should enjoy a rapid growth in athletics.

Football, 1914

Rah! Carp! Rah! Julian! Rah! Rah! Carp! Julian! So with the close of the 1914 Foot Ball Season ends the gridiron career of one of the greatest fullbacks that ever donned football togs.

The team's record was marred by two defeats, yet these were almost wiped out by the victory at the end of the season in which we triumphed over Penn State, whose eleven had previously held the Champion Crimson of Harvard to a tie.

Our opening game was played on College Field with Olivet as opponents. This game was won 37-7, and served to show the team its weak spots. The next tilt was with Alma, and, with Blacklock in the game and a few shifts in the lineup, the team began to show real form, and emerged from this fray with a 60-0 victory.

Then came the great clash in which were pitted against each other, Michigan bound to avenge last year's defeat, and M. A. C. determined to carry out her slogan, "Beat Michigan." All that can be said is that neither accomplished its purpose. Michigan won, but not until after she had been outplayed by our warriors in the first half and nearly beaten, saved only by the referee's whistle which stopped the play that undoubtedly would have meant victory.

The next Saturday, the team, sore from the effects of the previous battle, and perhaps a trifle over-confident, was defeated by the Cornhuskers.

On October 31 Akron was humbled by a score of 75-0. The following Saturday, after a hard battle, Mount Union was beaten 21-14.

Then came the Penn State game. We did "Send the Band to Penn," and we sent, too, one of the best teams that Penn State ever faced. Everybody remembers our visit to the State Journal Office and the report of an M. A. C. 6-3 victory. The team used the forward pass to some extent, but the most of the gains were made by line smashes and end runs.

We owe our success in football not only to the individuals on the team, but to the ability of our coach, J. F. Macklin, and the assistance of G. E. Gauthier and C. W. Gifford.

Baseball, 1914

Our team started the season of nineteen fourteen with a rush, winning the first five games. Of course no team could be expected to keep this pace throughout the season, and ours proved no exception. However, a glance at the figures will show that the team's work was as a whole good. We owe much credit to Ralph Dodge, whose victories of last spring include one over Michigan and another over Ohio State. Blake Miller and Weeder also proved to be good mound artists. Bibbins, the crafty backstop, as in the past, was always there with the headwork to pull the team out of bad holes and to keep the slab men under control. Griggs, the star first-sacker, was out of the game during the early part of the season, but was ably replaced by Frimodig. Fuller held down the keystone sack and played a very consistent game, while Fick at short and E. Chilton at third completed the infield. The four outfielders, who kept the M. A. C. garden clear, were Dodge and Hood at right, Mogge in center, L. Chilton in left field.

Nineteen hundred fifteen finds eight of last year's regulars back, and plenty of promising new material. Notwithstanding the loss of Dodge's work at the bat and on the mound, the indications are good for an excellent season.

The basketball team of 1915 was perhaps not so successful in its percentages of games won as others of some previous seasons. Nevertheless, while at times there seemed to be a lack of team-work, on other occasions brilliant victories were won from such teams as those of Notre Dame and the Detroit Y. M. C. A. Our men suffered much from injuries, and also were forced to play the last half of the season without their captain.

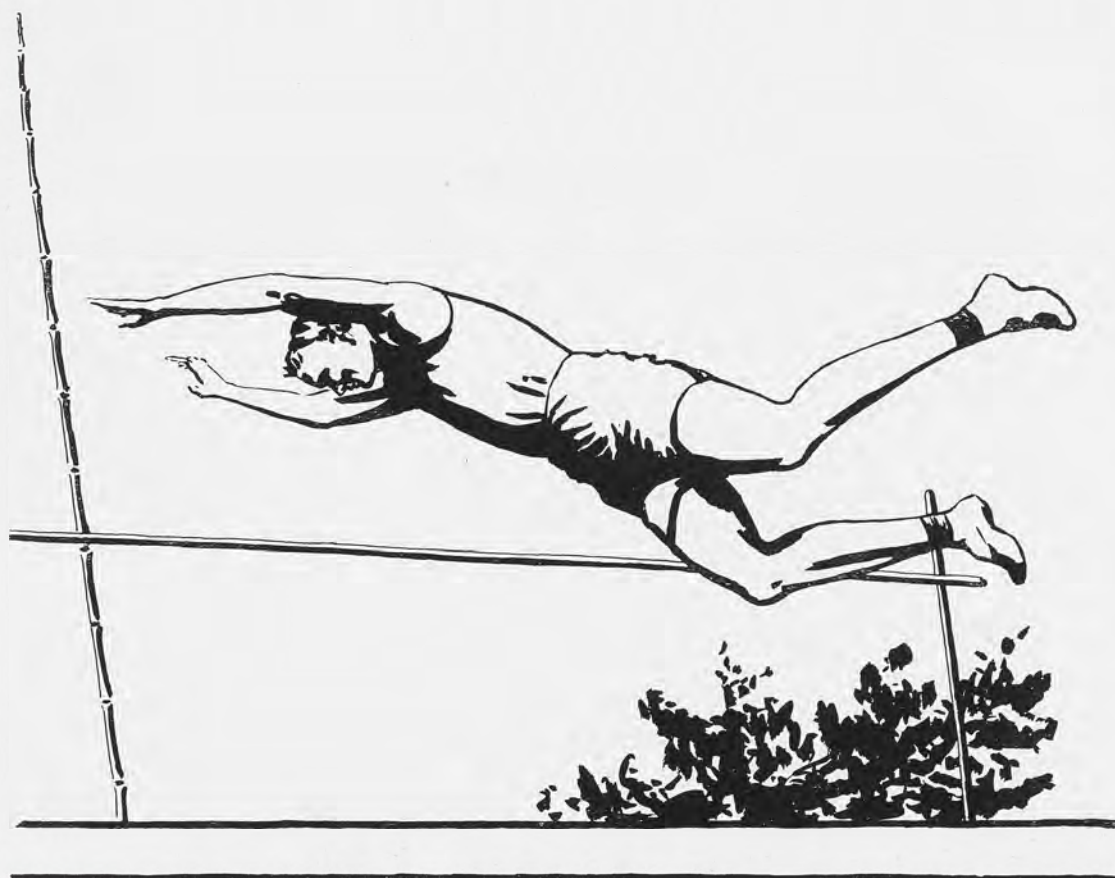

Although, by his graduation, we lose a capable man in Ricker, the presence of other promising material gives us high hopes for a strong team in 1916, with Frimodig for captain.

Track

Last year's track season was a decidedly successful one. Assistant Coach Cortright developed a team which, although it brought out no individual stars, was well balanced. This was shown by the ease with which we defeated Western Reserve University in a dual meet, and Olivet and Alma in the triangular meet. The only defeat of the season came in the meet with the Michigan Freshmen, which contained men of varsity calibre. Three men also took part in the Western Conference meet at Chicago on June 6th.

Judging from the excellent material at hand, the present season should be even more successful. All of the meets are with larger institutions, including the Penn relay games.

In the spring of 1914 three tennis tournaments were held, two with Olivet and one with Ypsilanti. The season was uniformly satisfactory. The boys won two-thirds of their matches, thereby earning monograms.

Tennis promises to play a more important part in College athletics this season. The tennis courts, instead of being kept by up the societies as in the past, have been taken over by the Athletic Department, and many improvements are being made.

Moskowitz, who was elected captain for 1915, has shown himself to be one of the ablest tennis players that has been seen here for many seasons, and, with prospects for a four-man team, we are sure to see tennis grow. Also, with two experienced players, Miss Taft and Miss Judson, the chances are good for a strong girls' tennis team at M. A. C. this spring.

Class Football

Did some one say we had abolished class football? We have never witnessed better class football games nor seen more evenly matched teams than those which represented their respective classes last fall.

The Juniors, by winning both of their games, hold the class championship.

Class Baseball

The final clash between the Seniors and Freshmen, in which the seniors won three to two, proved conclusively that they were undisputed champions in baseball. There was a decided shakeup in results as between those of last year and these, last year's champions now taking the cellar position.

Class baseball continues to be a very popular sport among the students.

Class Basketball

The Juniors, after winning the class football championship, felt that it would be only fitting and proper to be basketball champions as well; and dame Fortune amply rewarded their efforts, although they were driven to their limit by the Seniors. Notwithstanding the team was handicapped by sickness and injuries, only one of the six games was lost.

M. A. C.'s Songs and Yells

All hail, then, for M. A. C.;
To Alma Mater we'll loyal be.
We've got the steam, boys;
We've got the team, boys;
And we're with them to the end.

Then fight, team, for M. A. C.,
The Green and White shall be ever clean;
And we will crown you victor of this game,
Our College, old M. A. C.

The Green and the White

Up, up, with the colors,
We'll raise them on high,
We'll fight for our college,
For her we will die;
Let's rouse the dead echoes,
Unfurl to the light
The colors we honor—
The Green and the White.

We'll stand all together,
And honor will bring
To our Alma Mater,
Whose praises we sing;
Let's rush to the fray, then,
Our foes put to flight,
For the colors we honor—
The Green and the White.

Alma Mater

Close beside the winding Cedar's
Sloping banks of green,
Spreads thy campus, Alma Mater,
Fairest ever seen.

Backward through the hazy distance
Troop the days of yore,
Scenes and faces float before us,
Cherished more and more.

Chorus.
Swell the chorus! Let it echo
Over hill and vale;
Hail to thee, our loving mother,
M. A. C., all hail!

College Hall and Wells and Williams,
Abbot and the rest,
Halcyon days were those spent with you—
Days of all the best.

First of all thy race, fond mother,
Thus we greet thee now,
While with loving hands the laurel
Twine we o'er thy brow.

Fold us fondly to your bosom,
Alma Mater dear,
Sing we now thy endless praises,
Sounding cheer on cheer

Saber Knot

IN THE fall of 1913, the commandant of the Michigan Agricultural College corps of cadets organized a few of the officers of the regiment into a drill team, aiming at a more thorough knowledge of the use of the saber and the details of close order drill among those who were the instructors of the recruits and younger men. The movement was so successful that the organization was enlarged this year to include all the officers of the regiment, and to take the place of the old Officers' Association. The result has been a much more efficient corps, and the permanency of the Saber Knot is assured.

A fancy drill team made up of the pick of the officers received instruction in the Knights Templar movements and saber exercises from Prof. Wylie B. Wendt. An elaborate public exhibition was given at the spring term Military Ball. Parties were also given during the fall and winter terms. The officers of the drill team were: Captain, P. S. Armstrong; 1st Lieutenant, T. W. Churchill; 2nd Lieutenant, R. M. Roland; 1st Sergeant, B. F. Beach.

The officers of the organization were as follows:

President, Col. P. S. Armstrong
Vice-President, Lieut. Col. T. W. Churchill
Secretary, Capt. G. K. Fisher
Treasurer, Major D. A. Stroh

Rifle Team

THE Michigan Aggie Rifle Team finished in second place in the Intercollegiate Indoor Rifle League. Having won the championship last season and come out close second this year in Class A, M. A. C. stands well to the front in rifle circles. Washington State College won first place with the highest percent in the total aggregate. Both M. A. C. and Washington won ten and lost one of the eleven matches.

Class A	Aggregate	Percent	Won	Lost
Washington State College . . .	10849	98.62	10	1

M. A. C. placed seven men in the highest twenty-five of the league, Washington had but five in this same group. M. R. Freeman was third and R. D. Kean was sixth. Kean lead the league in number of perfect scores, having two to his credit.

The following is the record of each man on our team as averaged in the eleven matches.

The College Band

THE present year has been a very auspicious one for the band. The trip to Penn. State with the football team was the most successful ever taken by the organization, both in regard to interest for the members and as to the impression created away from college. Another very notable trip of a week's duration is slated for the present year, when the band will attend the Knights Templar Conclave at Calumet in June. This will be the first time any student organization from M. A. C. has been sent to the Upper Peninsula.

The Student Council

The Student Council has become a potent factor in the guidance of our College affairs. We find the faculty and the students uniting in recognizing the Council as the representative of the student body in its relations with the faculty. Because of the respect and influence that the Council has gained, it has been able during the past year to take decided and definite action in the control of campus activities and the maintenance of the College traditions. Although often criticized, sometimes severely, its members feel that its duties have been performed in a manner that meets the approval of a majority of the student body.

Because of the greater power and importance now given this representative body, the selection of its members has become a matter that vitally concerns every student of the institution. A strong Council is indicative of a strong student body; a strong student body means a "Greater M. A. C."

The members for the past year have been:

P. S. Armstrong, '15
W. B. Miller, '16

H. P. Henry, '15
L. D. Fisher, '16

K. H. Miller, '15

Intersociety Union

The Intersociety Union is composed of two representatives from each of the men's literary societies of the Michigan Agricultural College. Its function is the adjustment of intersociety affairs and the bringing of the several literary organizations of the campus into closer touch with each other and the college affairs that mutually affect them. The Union has charge of the intersociety relays and baseball schedule, the championship winners receiving a handsome silver loving cup. A Society Night was inaugurated at the Bijou during the early part of the spring term. With the growth of the institution the strength of this organization is bound to be felt, and every effort should be made to maintain it as an important part of society work. The present members are as follows, in order of their length of service:

Alpha Psi

Since the organization and development of the Veterinary Department at the Michigan Agricultural College, there has been felt the need of a stimulus for higher scholarship and some means whereby the students and faculty could get better acquainted.

The first step to better these conditions was in the organization of the Iota Chapter of the Alpha Psi Veterinary Fraternity.

We have eight charter members from the Junior and Senior classes as well as four members of the faculty from other chapters. While our enrollment will be small for some time to come, we hope that the Iota chapter will be of material benefit to the Veterinary Division.

Alpha Zeta Fraternity

KEDZIE CHAPTER.

Alpha Zeta is a national honorary agricultural fraternity whose aims are the betterment of the science, and help for its members in their endeavors along their chosen line of work. The local chapter takes in twelve men from each class, eligibility being determined after the beginning of the Junior year upon the following considerations: scholarship, character, aggressiveness along chosen lines of college work and fraternal spirit. The candidate must be in the upper two-fifths of the class with neither a condition nor a failure against him; a regularly enrolled student in the agricultural or forestry courses.

M. A. C. Varsity Club

*"Statue-like standeth he forth, quick, elate,
Sculptured from living flesh, and closely planned
As any marble from the sculptor's hand,
The College Athlete."*

During the past year the upper-classmen, holding the coveted monogram, formed this honorary club with the purpose of not only making M. A. C.'s athletics greater and better, but also of putting before each individual student and alumnus of this Institution a goal of reward for his efforts. It is believed that it will make the life of the college athlete broader and more useful.

It is our purpose to have in the near future, an athletic house in which all varsity men may make their home. In this way we hope not only to create a stronger bond of brotherhood within our ranks, but we also aim to raise the moral and scholastic standard of each individual connected with athletics at M. A. C.

Omicron Nu

Alpha Chapter of Omicron Nu was established at the Michigan Agricultural College in 1912. It was the first honor society in Home Economics. The need of such an organization was apparent, for since that time six chapters have been granted charters and applications for other charters are under consideration.

The Alpha Chapter at the present time, has twenty-five members. This number is made up from the instructors, seniors and juniors of the Home Economics Department.

The purpose of the Omicron Nu is to promote the standard of efficiency and to stimulate greater interest in Home Economics and related subjects.

Papers on current topics of interest to the student of Home Economics are read and discussed at the literary meetings of the chapter.

Scabbard and Blade

The current month marks the first anniversary of the forming of Company K, Scabbard and Blade, at this college. The organization has successfully weathered the first and hardest year of its existence, and from now forward its mission will be to further the spirit of military drill at this institution. Some work along this line has already been started, notably the establishment of an inter-company competition in the local regiment, for which both individual and company prizes were offered. This proved very popular, and was the means of arousing much more interest and enthusiasm among the student body as a whole than was displayed formerly.

The members are selected from those commissioned officers in the college regiment who not only show particular aptitude and interest in the military work, but who also possess those manly qualities which make them popular with their fellow students and which go far toward developing traits of character useful in either civil or military life. This year's members feel that they have successfully fulfilled the mission of Scabbard and Blade, and that the quality of drill has been notably improved since this company was established.

The Sem. Bot.

The name, Sem. Bot., is an abbreviation adopted early for the name Botanical Seminar. The local organization, founded in 1913, is patterned after a similar organization in the University of Nebraska which was founded in 1886 by seven students enthusiastic for science in general and Botany in particular. The success of the original organization has led to the establishment of similar organizations under various names in many institutions.

The society is not an open one, in that only those who are electing Botany beyond what is required by the Course and who have made good grades in the subject and have shown enthusiasm for it are eligible for membership. In the near future, the membership will be still further restricted by requiring those who have been picked out as fulfilling the conditions just mentioned to undergo the further ordeal of a very strict examination.

The programs are entirely scientific in nature and it is the intention to have public meetings from time to time at which some well known botanist from outside may be invited to give an address.

In no sense is the organization to be considered as comparable to the fraternities in other institutions or to the literary societies or honorary societies at M. A. C., although in one respect, that of scholarship requirement for admission, the Sem. Bot. may be compared to Alpha Zeta, as an organization toward which those who are interested in botany may look with eagerness and which may, to this extent, stimulate better work.

Tau Beta Pi Fraternity

Alpha Chapter of Michigan.

The Chapter of Tau Beta Pi at M. A. C. was established in 1892. It was the first chapter of the fraternity in the State and also the first honorary fraternity at the Michigan Agricultural College. At the present time, there is a membership of over six thousand, with a chapter in nearly every important school of engineering in the country.

The Alpha Chapter of Michigan, at the present time, has twenty active members, the largest enrollment in the history of the college. These men are chosen from those who stand in the first quarter of their class at the beginning of the senior year and those of the junior class who stand in the first eighth at the beginning of the winter term. It is becoming more and more the idea, in looking for new members, to select not only good engineering students but those who possess good moral character, a congenial nature, and are able to grasp the idea of fraternalism.

The spirit of brotherhood has manifested itself in the meetings of the fraternity this year, which are held bi-monthly in the rooms in the Engineering Hall. At these meetings, a good program is rendered on some current engineering topic and a "feed" is always provided. Every member of Tau Beta Pi is working for the best interests of the college and hopes that every other engineering student will feel the same way toward the betterment of our college and the Engineering Department.

The Delphic Literary Society

The year just past has been one of success and prosperity for the Delphic Society. The literary work was highly beneficial during the fall term, but unfortunately, suffered a slight relapse during the winter term because of the long series of games in which the M. A. C. Basketball team was engaged. The social life of the Delphics also came up to the usual high standard. The annual picnic, which had a large attendance, was held at Pine Lake during the spring term of 1914. Club G became the scene of an enjoyable banquet during commencement week, given in honor of our seniors and the alumni who had returned for the occasion, followed by an informal dancing party at Pine Lake pavilion.

Forensic Literary Society

The college year of 1915 has gone and the Forensic Society is another year older. We have undergone a period of reconstruction more marked than at any previous time and the result has been good. We feel that progress is certain under our newer and broader policy. A society of college men should be bigger than any faction, broader than any clique. It should be an institution for the formation of friendships, and the development of a broad and tolerant spirit. Realizing this, we feel that in the future, the Forensics will stand more than ever for resourcefulness, fellowship and democracy.

Ionian Society

Founded 1909.

Incorporated 1914.

The organization of our society was based upon the characteristics of the Ionic style of architecture, a combination of the strength of the Doric and the beauty and grace of the Corinthian. We aim to make the college life of each of our members give a maximum of value for every unit of effort expended. We hold a high standard in literary endeavor and scholastic attainment and present a social phase that emphasizes the worth of fellowship and the desirability of culture.

Sororian Literary Society

Loyalty has always been the watchword of the Sororians. We feel that this standard of loyalty to our College, our Alumni and to ourselves has been creditably maintained during the year of 1914-1915.

In literary work, the programs have been very instructive and successful, while the social side, including open meetings and parties, has not been neglected but has brought us closer together and strengthened the ties of sisterhood of which we will think more and more in the years to come.

The Themian Literary Society

The Themian Literary Society dates its origin from January 8, 1898. In the beginning, meetings were held in the chapel, then in the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity rooms and in 1900 they were given their present home.

Founded with only eleven charter members, the organization has grown with the college. The constitutional object is "To promote the literary and social culture of its members" but the word Themian stands for justice and friendship for all.

The Trimoirra Literary Society

Reviewing the events that have taken place during the past year, the Trimoirra Literary Society can sincerely report that the most successful year since its establishment in 1913 is about to terminate.

Altho the membership is limited to the students in the Mechanic Arts courses, it is not the purpose of the Society to confine itself to programs purely technical but rather to participate in such programs as will tend to make its members capable in every respect.

In conclusion, the Trimoirra Society is endeavoring both in an educational and social way, to do its duty toward making more generally known the motto "M. A. C. did it."

The Cosmopolitan Club

One purpose of the Cosmopolitan Club at M. A. C. and at other colleges is to satisfy the same social need among the foreign students that the various societies and fraternities satisfy among native students. It has, however, a higher and nobler aim and reason for its existence, and this is expressed in the motto, "Corda Fratres," or worldwide brotherhood. Worldwide peace among the nations is the result hoped from this movement. The creed of the true Cosmopolitan is this: "Above all nations is humanity."

The Married Students' Association

At the beginning of the college year of 1913-14, it was found that there were more married students than usual in the Institution and many of these students believed that it would be to the advantage of all to have a sort of "get-together" for the purpose of becoming acquainted. Consequently these students met in a very informal way during the fall term. After a few of these meetings, it was decided that it would be well to have a formal organization and during the winter term "The Married Students' Association" was organized and a constitution and by-laws were adopted.

The purpose of the organization is to improve the opportunities of the members for an enjoyable time during their college life. By virtue of the natural status of a married student these opportunities would be more or less limited were it not for such an organization.

At the present time meetings are held three times each term. A short literary program is given followed by a social hour. The Association has more than met the expectations of its founders and a bigger and broader usefulness is looked forward to.

In this, as in other societies, membership is by invitation.

The New York Club

This year has been the most successful in the history of the New York Club. The Club has always in the past been greatly handicapped because of the lack of suitable rooms for meetings but through the kindness of the Forensics and Delphics, we have been able to meet in congenial rooms this year.

The fall term banquet was held in Club B and all of the Co-eds and several of the faculty members were able to attend, something which has never happened in the past. Because of a new faculty ruling, we were unable to have a winter term party, so a sleigh ride party was substituted. The year's social events were ended by a picnic at Pine Lake in the spring.

The Christmas special carried thirty-four fellows and saved the party about a hundred and fifty dollars in carfares.

At this beginning of a period of greater activities at M. A. C., the New York Club stands ready to do its share.

Y. M. C. A.

M. A. C. is a college of science and athletics. In such a college it is the invariable tendency of the student body to neglect their religious responsibilities and it is the purpose of the Y. M. C. A. to keep the standards of religious activities high, in opposition to this tendency.

When the student first reaches M. A. C. he is shown to a room and boarding place. A handbook helps him to quickly adjust himself to the college life. Then comes the "Hello" meeting and Y. W.-Y. M. C. A. reception at which he meets students of all classes.

Devotional meetings twice a week and Bible and mission study classes help to build up his spiritual life while here and fit him to take an active part in religious matters after leaving college. Deputation bands to neighboring towns also give the student a chance to come in contact with different conditions and teach him to meet them on the spur of the moment.

The past year has been a very successful one and much time at the latter part of the year was given to preparation for the coming of Dad Elliott in the spring.

LAKE GENEVA CONFERENCE

JUNE 1914

The Students' Citizenship League

The Students' Citizenship League, which has been in existence for four years, has had for its ultimate purpose better citizenship. The standing we have among the student organizations has been gained thru our purely democratic spirit. The Friday night Literary meetings are held in our room in the People's Church, and are often followed by a hotly contested game of basketball or indoor baseball in the basement. Every Sunday we meet for the study of social problems and the Bible. The social life of the League has been broadened by the addition of three open meetings and the Annual Banquet, while our literary programs have tended even more strongly than before toward our ideal of American citizenship.

Glee and Mandolin Club

The phenomenal growth of the Glee Club, both in size and popularity with the student body, has proved to those most interested that this organization has come to stay.

In the college year, 1912, the Glee Club was organized and in the winter term a concert was given. Plans were immediately made for a tour during the spring vacation of the next year and these plans materialized very successfully. Last year the Mandolin Club was organized and the Glee Club merged into one organization. The entire spring vacation was given over to a trip last year which took in the largest cities of Michigan. This year the personnel is essentially the same as last year and the trip also required the entire spring vacation. The cities visited were Charlotte, Kalamazoo, Niles, Benton Harbor, Holland, Grand Haven, Muskegon, Belding and Portland. The usual concerts were given at home and in Lansing. Enthusiastic audiences greeted the Club in every town visited.

The chorus, which is composed of 120 members, met as usual this year for one hour on every Monday evening. The time was devoted to the studying of "The First Walpurgis Night," by F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, and the "Golden Legend" set to music by Arthur Sullivan. "The First Walpurgis Night" was rendered in the mid-winter term concert to an exceptionally large audience in the Armory. The "Golden Legend" was given in connection with the May Festival.

This year the chorus, under the direction of Mr. Fred Killeen, worked as a unit, with the vim and earnestness that was so splendidly shown at both concerts.

ENGINEERING SOCIETY

Presidents F. H. Prescott, E. F. Holser and A. N. Hall have piloted the Engineering Society to the end of a successful year. Subjects and speakers have held the attention of the men and have acquainted them with things that they did not have the time to take up in the class room. The annual winter term banquet was a bonanza of educating speeches, and all voted it a good time. The Engineering Society is becoming a necessity to every engineer, and he misses something important who does not belong.

Farmer's Club

The close of the Winter Term found the Farmers' Club in a prosperous condition. The membership was unusually large and the regular attendance was good. Inasmuch as the Club was on such a firm financial basis, it was deemed advisable to reaffiliate with the State Organization.

The Annual Banquet was held in Club D with one hundred twenty-five in attendance. An excellent program was furnished by Dr. Giltner, Rep. H. T. Ross, Hon. A. B. Cook, Hon. J. N. McBride and Prof. Ryder.

 Secretary-Treasurer, W. W. Barron
 Reporter, J. A. Bennett

The M. A. C. Horticultural Club was organized in the fall of 1902 and is thus the oldest technical club on the campus. The main idea of the Club has been to bring the Junior and Senior students and others who are interested along horticultural lines in closer touch with their instructors and with practical horticulturists within the state. The Club has grown gradually until now the club room which a few years ago was of ample size is entirely inadequate and meetings are held every Wednesday evening for one hour in the Horticultural Laboratory class room.

The Club has always had the interest and loyal support of the Michigan State Horticultural Society. This Society has offered members of the Club prizes in contests for identifying and judging varieties of fruits and, more recently, in five minute speaking contests. The prizes for identifying were won by Mr. Riker, Mr. Bloom and Mr. Armstrong. Mr. D. A. Stroh, Mr. Cochran and Mr. Bemis were winners in the speaking contest.

It is doubtful if the Club has ever enjoyed so many excellent speakers as during the winter term of the present year. Special efforts have been made to bring eminently successful practical growers to address the meetings and the efforts along this line have been very successful.

The Club has for the past seven years always held a fruit and flower show during the first part of the winter term. Formerly the laboratory room in the Horticultural Building was sufficient but the show has grown gradually until in the last few years, the large pavilion in the Agricultural Building has been all too small. At this show, every Junior and Senior student has a particular duty to perform and the show is entirely in their hands. It is enjoyed by a large number of the students and the residents of East Lansing and Lansing.

The M. A. . Foresters

Among the technical organizations of the Michigan Agricultural College, one of the most active is the Forestry Club, made up of men pursuing the forestry course, who are especially interested in the many practical questions constantly presented in this line. The first Forestry Exhibit given during the winter term was an unqualified success and the annual campfire continues to be one of the big social events of the college year. In addition, the club has brought to M. A. C. several prominent speakers along forestry lines and has popularized the forestry course in no small degree.

The M. A. C. Association

The organization of this Association was consummated at the Triennial Reunion held in June, 1913, being but a little more than the enlargement of the old Alumni Association. According to the constitution of this Association, any student who has attended M. A. C. and has received 20 credits or the equivalent thereof is eligible to membership. This provision greatly increases the compass over that of the old Association and the reason for the change is patent, for at once it is seen that a much larger number can now be called upon to exert their influence for a "Greater M. A. C." because of their real knowledge of the conditions at the College and a natural desire to boost.

As rapidly as possible branch associations are being organized wherever there are enough M. A. C. people in an area of good railroad communications to make this feasible. Our motto is "Better ten good live branches of twenty members each, than one loosely bound organization of 900 members." The affairs of the general Association are managed by an Executive Board, each local branch being entitled to one representative on this Board. At present, we have organizations in the following places: Detroit, Lansing, Grand Rapids, Northeast Michigan (Bay City and Saginaw), Jackson, Flint, Pontiac, Grand Traverse, Chicago, Washington (D. C.), Western New York, Southern California, Northern California, Minneapolis and St. Paul, Seattle, New England, Lafayette (Indiana), Cleveland.

The M. A. C. Record, formerly published by the College, is the official organ of this Association, and the College, recognizing the value of the united support of alumni and former students, has appointed a permanent alumni secretary whose duty it is to edit this weekly organ and keep in touch with the former students and organize branch associations. The powers of the M. A. C. Association depend largely on the way the M. A. C. Record is supported, for it is thru this that the members may keep informed as to alumni sentiment, the growth of their Alma Mater and the doings of their brother members.

It is the duty of every student who leaves M. A. C. to get in touch with the local organization which he finds in his home community and, if none exists, he should get busy and "start something." The possibilities for good that may come out of a thoroly and properly organized and managed M. A. C. Association are numberless. With the added support of each graduating class, this Association is bound to be reckoned with wherever the Michigan Agricultural College is considered.

C. S. LANGDON, '11 Alumni Secretary.

The Barbecue

An abundance of spirit and enthusiasm for college activities is one of the predominating characteristics of the campus. This interest is also made manifest in the various undertakings of the several classes. The Annual Barbecue is no exception to this rule and one need only be present at one of these celebrations to be thoroughly convinced of the truth of this statement.

The evening of October 29th will be remembered as the occasion on which the Class of 1917 acted as host to the Freshmen and to the other classes. This pleasing affair marked the end of hostilities between these two classes and during the evening President Wright of the Sophomore class turned the symbol of warfare over to President Dobson for safe-keeping during the year.

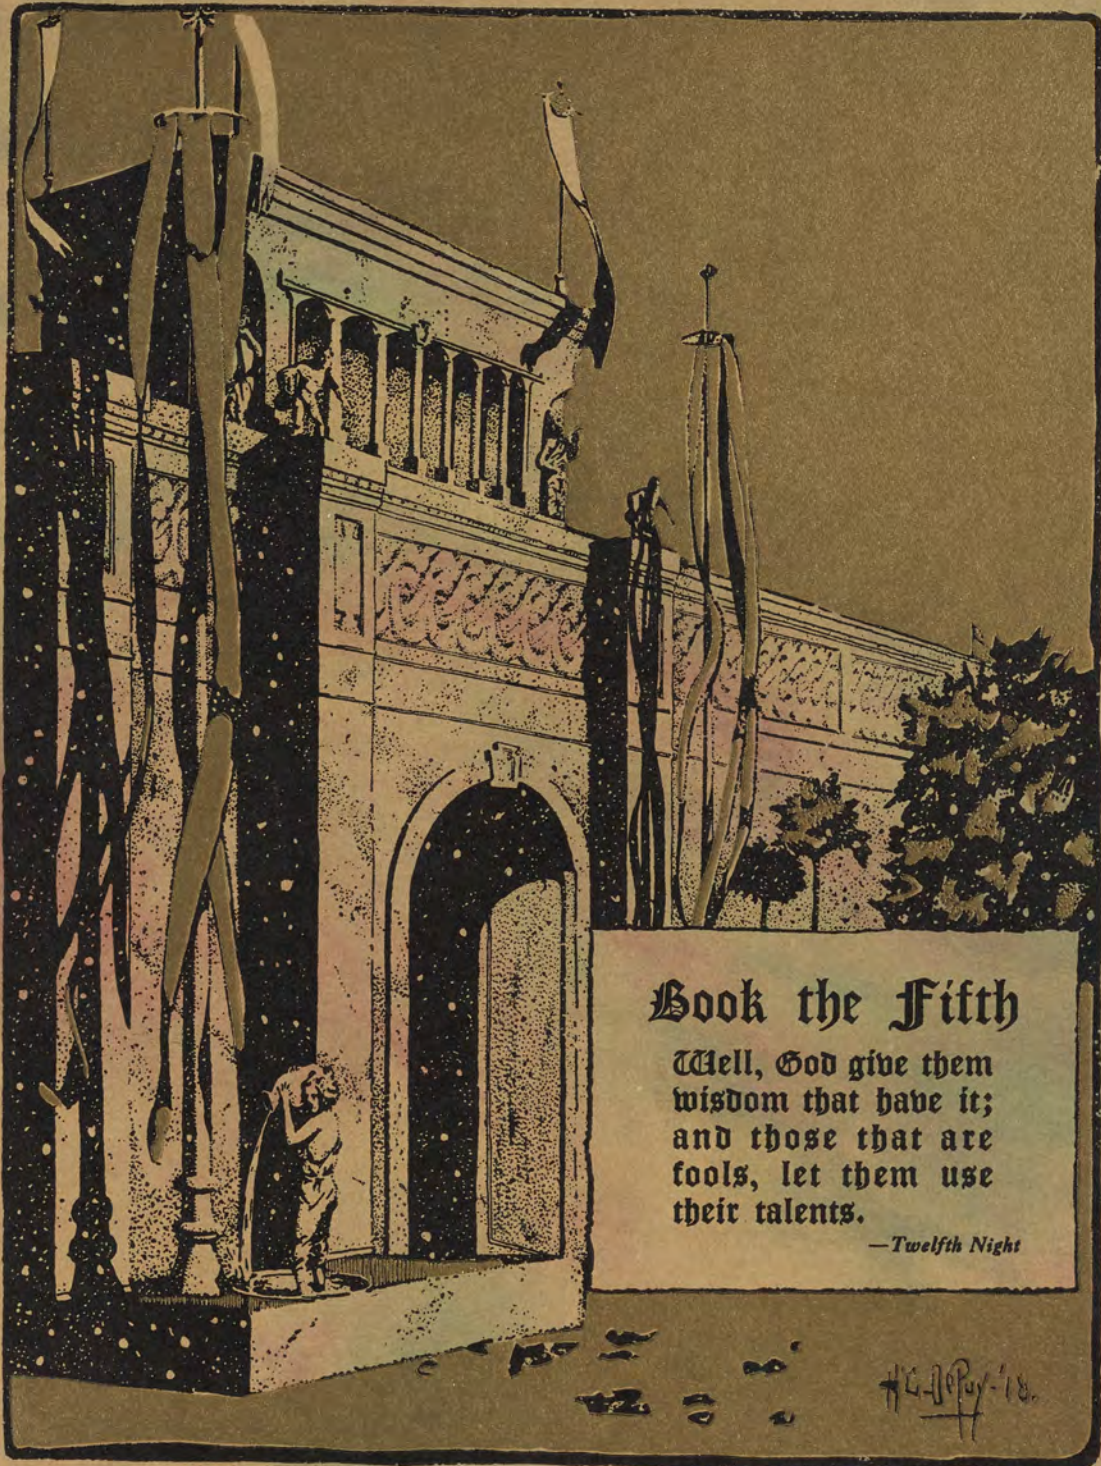

The program, with A. J. Patch as master of ceremonies, was in keeping with the purpose of the occasion. Mr. C. S. Dunford, Sergeant P. J. Cross, Coach Macklin, and Mr. Crotty were the speakers and together offered a pleasing program for the approval of the assembly. The band was on hand to furnish its inspiration to the affair.

There was roast ox and cider in sufficient quantities for all and everyone voted the Sophomores very efficient and sufficient providers.

J-Hop

The J-Hop of the Class of 1916 was not inferior in a single particular to those similar occasions of other years and even the most antagonistic of persons must admit that there were a dozen features of this year's J-Hop which outshone any of the past.

The Masonic Temple could scarcely be more beautiful than when decorated for this distinctive "cotton party". The sunny South was cleverly represented with real magnolias and cotton. The stage was a grove of magnolias in bloom and, with Stone's Orchestra furnishing the music from this nook, one could hardly realize that the date was February 26th, 1915, and that the place was Lansing, Michigan.

The fortunate Juniors and their friends left the College at 4:30 and after arriving, were received by the patrons and class officers. The elaborate banquet followed in the delightfully decorated dining hall. President H. H. Miller acted as toastmaster and Miss Rosenquist, Mr. Patch, Miss MacDonald and Mr. Fuller responded ably to their respective toasts.

Next, the grand march and then dancing among the beautiful scenes of Dixie for those brief moments until 2:30 when we all must away.

Yes, a perfect afternoon, a perfect evening and a perfect night made a perfect day indeed.

The following statement from the report of the Class Treasurer will be of interest to those who wish to know the cost of this year's Hop. The cost is not too great, economics teaches, if there is a proportionate return; that there is an abundant return, no one can doubt—what one day beside has taught more?

Cap Night

Another college year completed; this is the significance of the annual Cap Night festivities. The student body assembled for the last time to celebrate the successful ending of a year's work and to formally undertake the responsibilities of the year to come.

Each student scurried about in the dark to join his classmate and be in line for the big procession which circled about the campus and wound up around the big fire in Sleepy Hollow. Colored lights and Roman candles were busy everywhere.

The customary program was headed by D. E. Phillips as Master of Ceremonies. President Burt of the Class of 1914, President Cathcart of 1915, President Miller of 1916 and Prof. F. S. Kedzie were the speakers of the evening.

The departing Seniors filed around the bonfire and cast their books into the flames, indicating that their work at M. A. C. was completed. To the Freshmen and Preps, who joyfully burned their little class caps, the occasion meant the conclusion of one lap in their college course.

"Get Together"

The "Get-Together" movement was started late in the winter term of 1914. Certain members of the Faculty felt that a movement should be started to work against the natural segregation of the student body and Faculty which occurs with the rapid growth of any school.

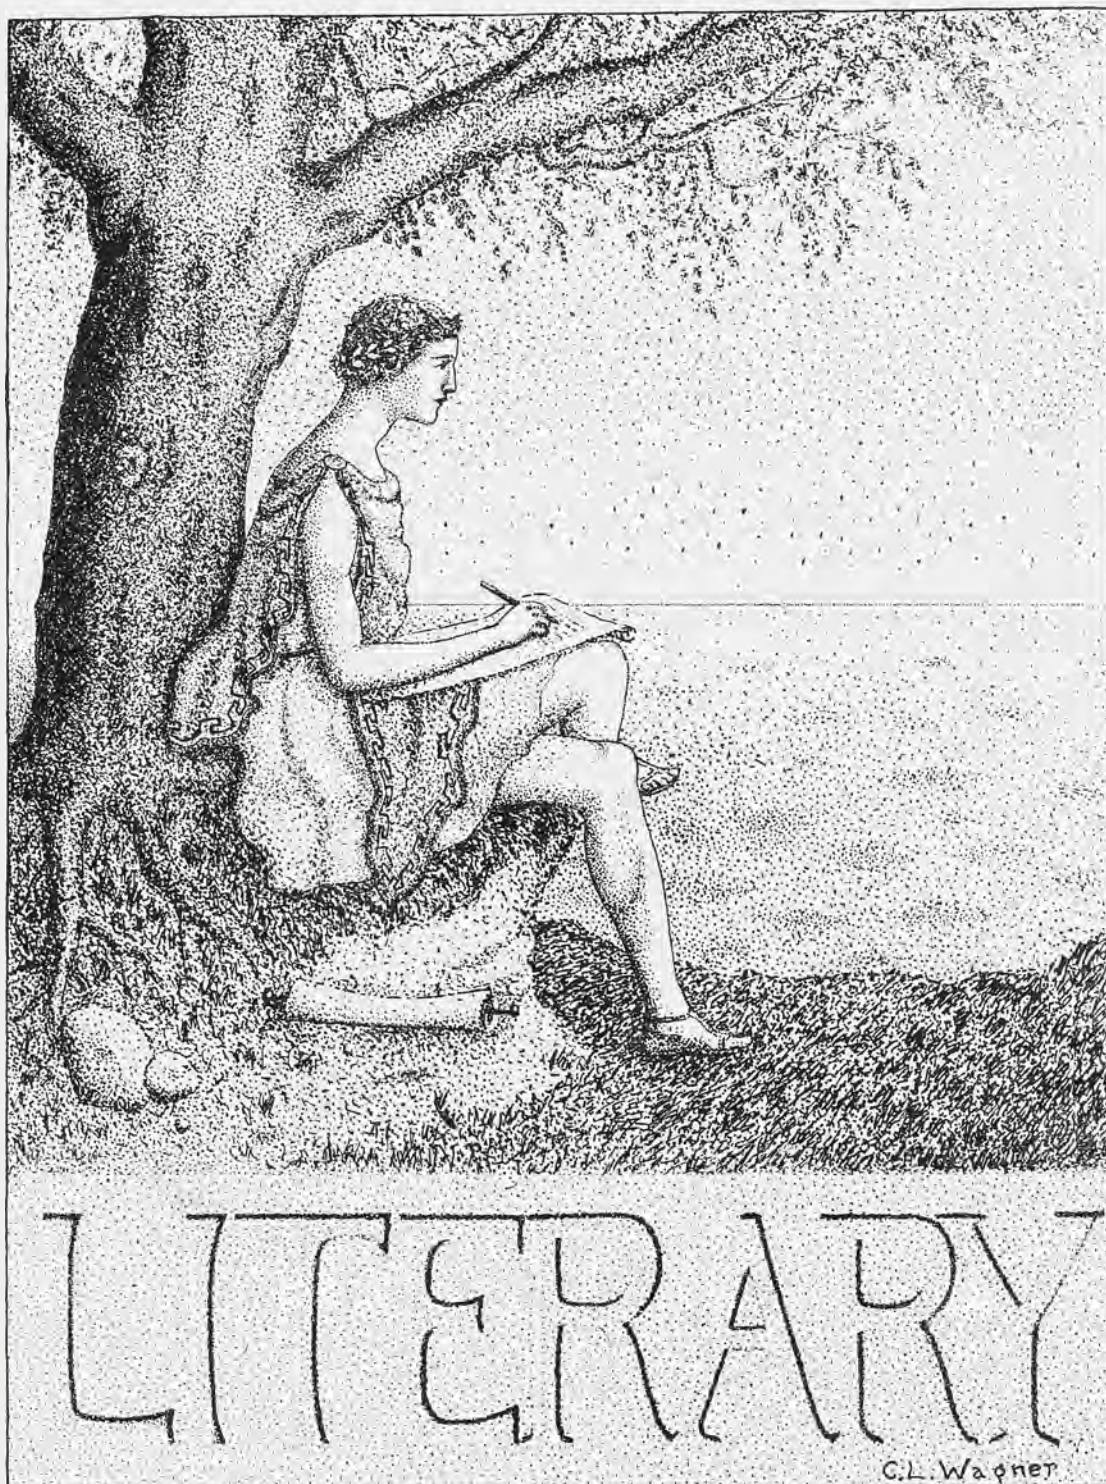

The following committee was appointed by President Snyder: Prof. Huston, Lieut. DeLancey, Mrs. Peppard, Prof. Sanford and Prof. Clark (ex officio). It was the duty of this committee to plan a series of parties at which a sufficient variety of entertainment would be provided to satisfy the tastes of all of the student body and faculty.

Up to date, four parties have been given, two during the spring term of 1914 and one each in the fall and winter terms of the present school year.

The student body has responded very well. The Armory has been crowded on each occasion and there seems to be a general desire on the part of everyone to become better acquainted.

The College band and orchestra, under the direction of Prof. Clark, have furnished a large part of the entertainment. Other members of the Faculty and student body have been very generous with their talent and have added greatly to the success of the movement.

The Holcad

The Michigan Agricultural College has a weekly newspaper, published during the college year by the students. During its six years it has grown wonderfully, in style, size, circulation, importance and financial standing. It has adopted the slogan, "Devoted to the Interests of a Greater M. A. C.", and its progressive policies have placed it on a high plane in comparison with other college weeklies of the country.

Liberal Arts Union

The Liberal Arts Union consists of a committee of five members: three from the faculty and two from the student body. The student members of this committee are elected at the annual student election, the junior member holding office for two years. It is the work of this committee to plan and conduct a lecture course on topics that are of interest to the students from a general educational standpoint. The money for this purpose is derived from a fund consisting of one-sixth of the athletic blanket tax, which, by ruling of the State Board of Agriculture, shall be spent in the interests of the liberal arts. All students paying the blanket tax are admitted to these lectures.

During the year just passed, we have enjoyed lectures on various topics and all given by individuals of more than national reputation. The speakers and the subjects touched upon are:

- Oct. 20.—Dean W. T. Sumner of Chicago, on "Some Aspects of Social and Civic Progress."
Nov. 17—Hon. Herbert W. Bigelow of Cincinnati, on "Old Institutions and New Ideals."
Dec. 8—Mary Antin of New York, on "The Responsibility of American Citizenship."
Jan. 19—Hon. James A. McDonald of Toronto, on "North America's Greatest Achievement."
Feb. 16—Pres. A. W. Harris, of Northwestern University, on "The Value of Useless Culture."
April 20—Hudson Maxim of Maxim Park, New Jersey, on "Implements of Warfare."
May 11—Roland G. Usher of St. Louis, Mo., on "The Big Push, or the War in Europe."

Two to One for M. A. C.

Debating offers opportunities for self-development that should command the interest of a larger proportion of our student body. It seems evident to the men composing the teams this year that, if M. A. C. hopes to win consistently from such schools as Purdue and Iowa State, we must offer our debaters more than one chance in the year for such contests.

The improvement this year in debating as an intercollegiate activity at M. A. C. is largely due to the efficient training given the teams by Mr. C. B. Mitchell and Mr. C. C. Armstrong.

Dear Stay-at-Homes:

I'm being rushed away from you at the rate of forty miles an hour with the dear "wicked city" growing dimmer in the distance every minute. Oh, Family! Why will you send me away? I'd so much rather convalesce at home with you. I'm homesick already and I'm not half way there.

The porter, who I find is really human under his obsequious exterior, is going to mail this at the next stop. If it is flavored with brine blame yourselves. I positively refuse to be cheerful on paper when in reality I am flooding the car with great salt tears. And now I'm going to investigate my berth and find what it is like.

Goodnight, Family,
Georgia.

Family:

It is only five o'clock but I am going to abjectly apologize before the day is an hour older or I won't be able to eat breakfast with a clear conscience.

Why didn't somebody tell me what I was coming to? Never again will I grumble so at being packed off bag and baggage. Imagine at being sent to Eden on a twentieth century express! Why, people, I am better already. Listen, Mother, and Nan, and all of you. When I got here just at dusk last night I was firmly convinced that nothing but iron bars could hold me—. I was cross as two sticks and wouldn't eat supper and decided I was going to lie awake all night just to be contrary. And then the forgs and crickets and especially the breeze formed a conspiracy and sang me to sleep before I had time even to think of sheep jumping over a broken fence. Then this morning the birds and the sun woke me in the most perfectly perfect place that ever was made.

So I'm getting the "cold gray stone" off me heart before I try to swallow a mouthful of the delicious ham I smell frying this minute. And now that it's off I am going to stop. I'm so hungry I can't possibly write a single 'nother word!

Your famished and repentant
G_____.

Familias carina:

Take notice, dad—your attempts were not in vain. I still retain a fragment of my Latin tho I don't doubt that the above construction is wrong somehow. And tho I can't recite your beloved Ilaid

I do remember Lauriger Horatius—and the other night I sang it in my best style just to show a noisy bull dog that he wasn't alone in being glad to be alive. I don't know why I sang that but it some way seemed to just suit—then the queerest thing happened—out on the lake a big deep voice took it up and we sang it thru together. It was quite exciting.

After that we sang several other old college songs that Dad taught me and then the owner of the voice rowed up and introduced himself. He is a Mr. Gordon, and lives in a quaint rustic cottage I passed one day when I was walking. Mrs. Gordon is an invalid, but she heard that a stranger is here and thot I might be lonely. Mr. G. was bringing a note from her when he heard my vocal gymnastics.

The long and short of the story is that I accepted an invitation to call and went over yesterday morning. The twins, John and Johanna, made me a bit homesick for our own, and promise an inexhaustible fund of excitement. Mrs. Gordon assured me that they would wear me out if I was not careful but I declared such a thing impossible. Alas! I see the fallacy of my belief. The cherubs have been on my trail ever since and I cannot detach myself.

They raided the place yesterday afternoon and have been here a large part of today. They have scrubbed the front steps with my hair brush, played horse with my best sash and just now I found John vivisectioning a toad with my paper knife. I have thot at times in my past ignorance that James and Janet were imbued with the spirit of the evil one, but I shall feel certain from now on that they are fit companions for the angels.

In regard to the indefatigable imps that are at present burying the above mentioned toad in my writing paper box—I recall with relief a bit of information gleaned from snatches of conversation. It seems that the Gordon family is not complete. Its especial idol, a much-talked-of Peter, comes from Princeton some time this week. The children are evidently devoted to him and talk continually of excursions they will make when he arrives. I was disappointed at first for I wanted to see much of them and felt that if the belated Peter would stay where he was I would be much happier. At present writing, however, I am not sure but that he may prove a Heaven-sent relief.

I see it devolves upon your long-suffering Georgia to rescue Johanna from a picket fence where she is impaled by the belt of her rompers. If she weren't shrieking so uproariously I should leave her there—at least she's out of harm's way.

Your exasperated

G. _____

P. S.—I have three perfectly good freckles on the bridge of my nose and a stone bruise on my finger. G.

Family o' mine in general;

Father o' mine in particular:

I'm just aching for an adventure and I am going hunting for it in a canoe—when I get the canoe. That is the whyfore of this epistle. I want you to have John's sent right away. It hasn't done anybody any good since he finished school and I may as well have it.

I saw the notorious Peter today. He was out with the children and they were having a most hilarious time. For a minute I thot they were going to stop but they didn't. I am glad for I feel certain I shall dislike the prodigy. At a distance he is rather nice, however—big and sturdy and quite intelligent appearing. If he keeps John and Johanna out of my way part of the time I shall be thankful. I suppose I will make his further acquaintance tonight as I am going over to the Gordon's for supper. The twins informed me that they were coming for me so I must prepare for the onslaught. I hear them now and judge from the sound that the renowned Peter is with them.

Farewell,

Georgia.

P. S.—Don't forget the canoe. The lake is enchanting and I long for the feel of the paddle in my hand. Somehow the boat (I call it Billy Bound) is so clumsy and incongruous in the little nooks and pockets of the lake that I hate to use it. G.

Dear people:

The canoe came yesterday and last night the whole Gordon family came over to help me celebrate. Mr. G. paddled me around the lake in the moonlight for over an hour and it certainly seemed good to be out. I had to listen, as usual, to more about Peter, but the night had put me in such an angelic mood that I really didn't mind. It seems that he (Peter) came from Scotland several years ago and that Mr. Gordon was on the same boat on the way over. He took a great fancy to Peter and in the end the lucky fellow went home to the Gordon's and has been with them ever since. I guess the fact that he is Scotch accounts for the br-r-r in his voice. Queer I never thot of it before.

On the whole I enjoy the Gordons immensely. I want so much to have them know you and you to know them. They live not far from the city and Mrs. G. does all her shopping there so we shall not lose track of them.

I've gained five pounds and can walk as many miles without tiring myself. If that isn't according to the doctor's orders I don't know what is.

Yours as always,

Georgia.

Dear, dear people:

Those home letters came this morning and all at once I felt as tho you were all very far away. To make you seem a little nearer I got out my paper edition of the whole of you and set you up in a nice sociable circle on the porch table. Then I decided to have tea with you and went in to get the things. I wasn't more than a minute but a naughty gust of wind came along and blew you all helter skelter, and mother and baby fell in a mud puddle. Maybe it was silly but I was blue enough before and that was the last bale of straw. I ran up the hill back of the house and lay down and cried and cried.

Have you ever been so homesick and utterly miserable that you forgot what it was you wanted? Well, when there wasn't a tear left to shed I just lay there feeling as tho the world might end right there just to be obliging. And then I felt a touch on my shoulder and looked up—and there was Peter. About all that I remember now is that his eyes were very big and brown and full of sympathy. The next minute I was on my way back to the paper edition as fast as I could run.

I don't believe I even spoke. Well, I shan't worry for it's hardly necessary.

Mother and babe have had a bath and are drying in the sun a little the worse for wear but still smiley.

Do write often. I find I am not immune and homesickness has me in its grip today. I am counting the days until I can see you again.

Your woefully homesick

Georgia.

You poor distracted people:

I know I am horrid and ought to be shaken. Two whole weeks without a letter—and that last one of such a deep indigo hue! I don't know how it happened but it just did. No, Mumsie, I am not sick; and, Dad, I didn't upset the canoe or drown, neither have the twins demolished me. On the contrary, I have spent every minute in getting so scandalously healthy that I am ashamed of myself.

This morning I looked in the mirror long and hard and didn't know whether to laugh or cry. I am all a bright even pink except for a hundred or two brown splotches and six fat mosquito bites which adorn my physiognomy. My eyes are nothing but slits and my hair—well it's getting longer and kinkier every day and when it rains I look for all the world like a wooly dog.

As to what has kept me busy—Peter mostly. Did I swear to detest him? I believe I did—nevertheless—

"When I walk I always walk with Peter," etc. No one else cares to go with me on my wild cross-country tramps. When it comes to bathing no one else swims out far and Mr. Gordon will not let me go alone. Even when I go out in the canoe Peter accompanies me for it seems that it is safer so.

There is one consolation: I feel free to scold him when I wish. It isn't altogether my fault that he is so omnipresent, and when at times I wish him at the bottom of the sea I usually express myself in no uncertain terms. On such occasions he goes home in a crestfallen state to return in the most jubilant of moods next morning. Usually to reduce his exuberance I make him sit quite still on the porch steps while I read Browning. He never objects nor contradicts my views but I can see quite plainly that he detests the performance. Such patience I never dreamed of.

Perhaps it shows a terrible amount of conceit, in fact I know it does, but I am going to confide this secret to the "bussum" of my Family—Peter likes me most tremendously—I am sure of it and feel quite proud of my conquest.

Forgive my negligence, Family mine. It shall never happen again. Consider (this is a careful and conservative estimate) that I have walked twenty odd miles, paddled at least as far and have added seven pounds to my avoirdupois since my last epistle. Then ask yourselves seriously, "Shall we not in the light of these facts be lenient in our judgment?"

I await the decision of the supreme court of my affections.

Anxiously,

G.

My dearest and only family:

Will I be able to come home next week? Will I! Oh, you dear foolish people—don't you know I can hardly wait to see you all from my shiny-headed angle of a father to my roly-poly lump of a sister Jean? I've had a queer lump in my throat that won't be swallowed ever since I got your letter and my trunk is half packed already—only the paper edition of you is still smiling at me from the wall. Just the minute that check gets here I buy my ticket and start for home and the Family.

But everything can't wait until I see you. Here is a tale that must be told at once. Family, I've had a truly live adventure, the kind that (according to story books) makes your hair stand on end and your face blanch, if your hair isn't too curly and your skin so freckled that neither is possible. Now hold your breath, all of you, and I'll begin.

"Once upon a time"—it was really yesterday morning but that sounds more like a story—our heroine (that's me) started out all alone to explore the mountain. She had her breakfast on a flat rock away off from everywhere with nobody but chirrupy birds and frisky red squirrels for company. Oh, yes—there was a fat brown toad very like the one whose days were cut short by my paper knife. After breakfast the Heroine wandered as she listed until she was lost—as lost as anything could be. She tried and tried to find herself all the long hot day, and then finally she lay down on the moss and leaves, just as she had one other day weeks before, and cried and cried till there wasn't a single tear left. And just then she felt a touch on her shoulder and looked up—and there was Peter, come to take her home.

Well, it was a very meek and quiet heroine that found her way back at dark, and on the way down the mountain she privately decided never to take another journey without Peter to take care of her. So, Family, this morning I saw the Gordons and we decided everything, and—Peter is coming home with me!

Now, Mumsie, don't you say one word till I have finished. You mustn't object to Peter, for he isn't just an ordinary dog, he's a thoroughbred Scotch Collie with a mile-long pedigree and is, in addition to that, remarkably well trained. Will Gordon had him at Princeton all the time he was in college and taught him himself. He wouldn't let him go now if he could take him in his work.

You know you've always said James and Janet should have a dog sometime. Well, they are going to have Peter now. It's too late to say "no!" He is mine and I'm going to keep him.

We'll be home on the 8:16 next Wednesday.

With love,

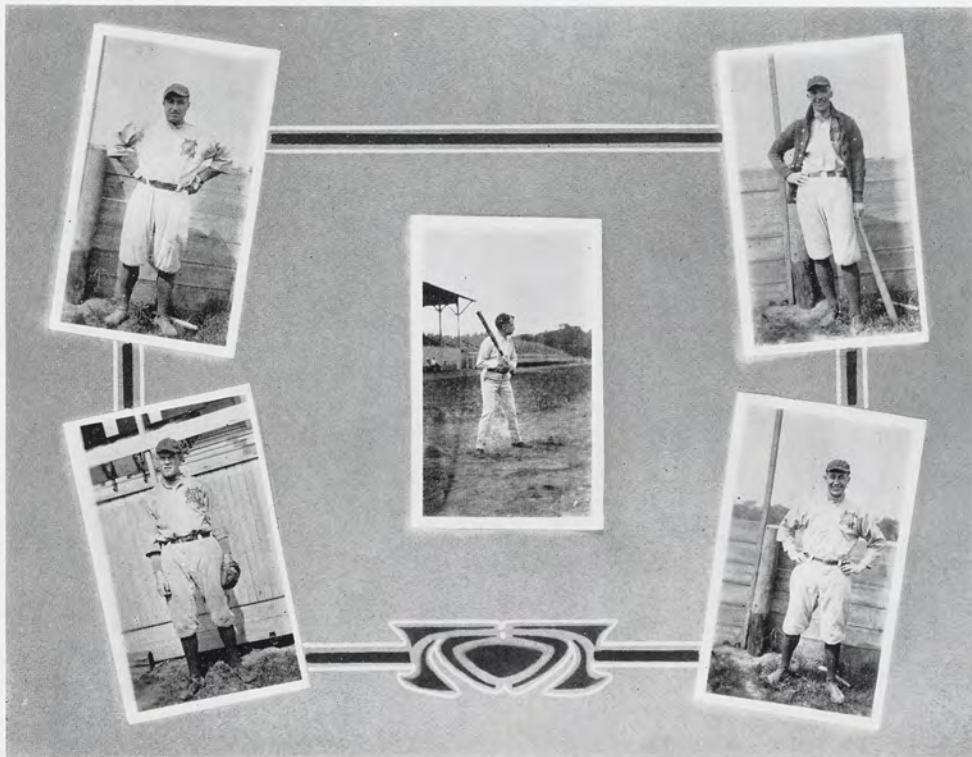

Georgia.

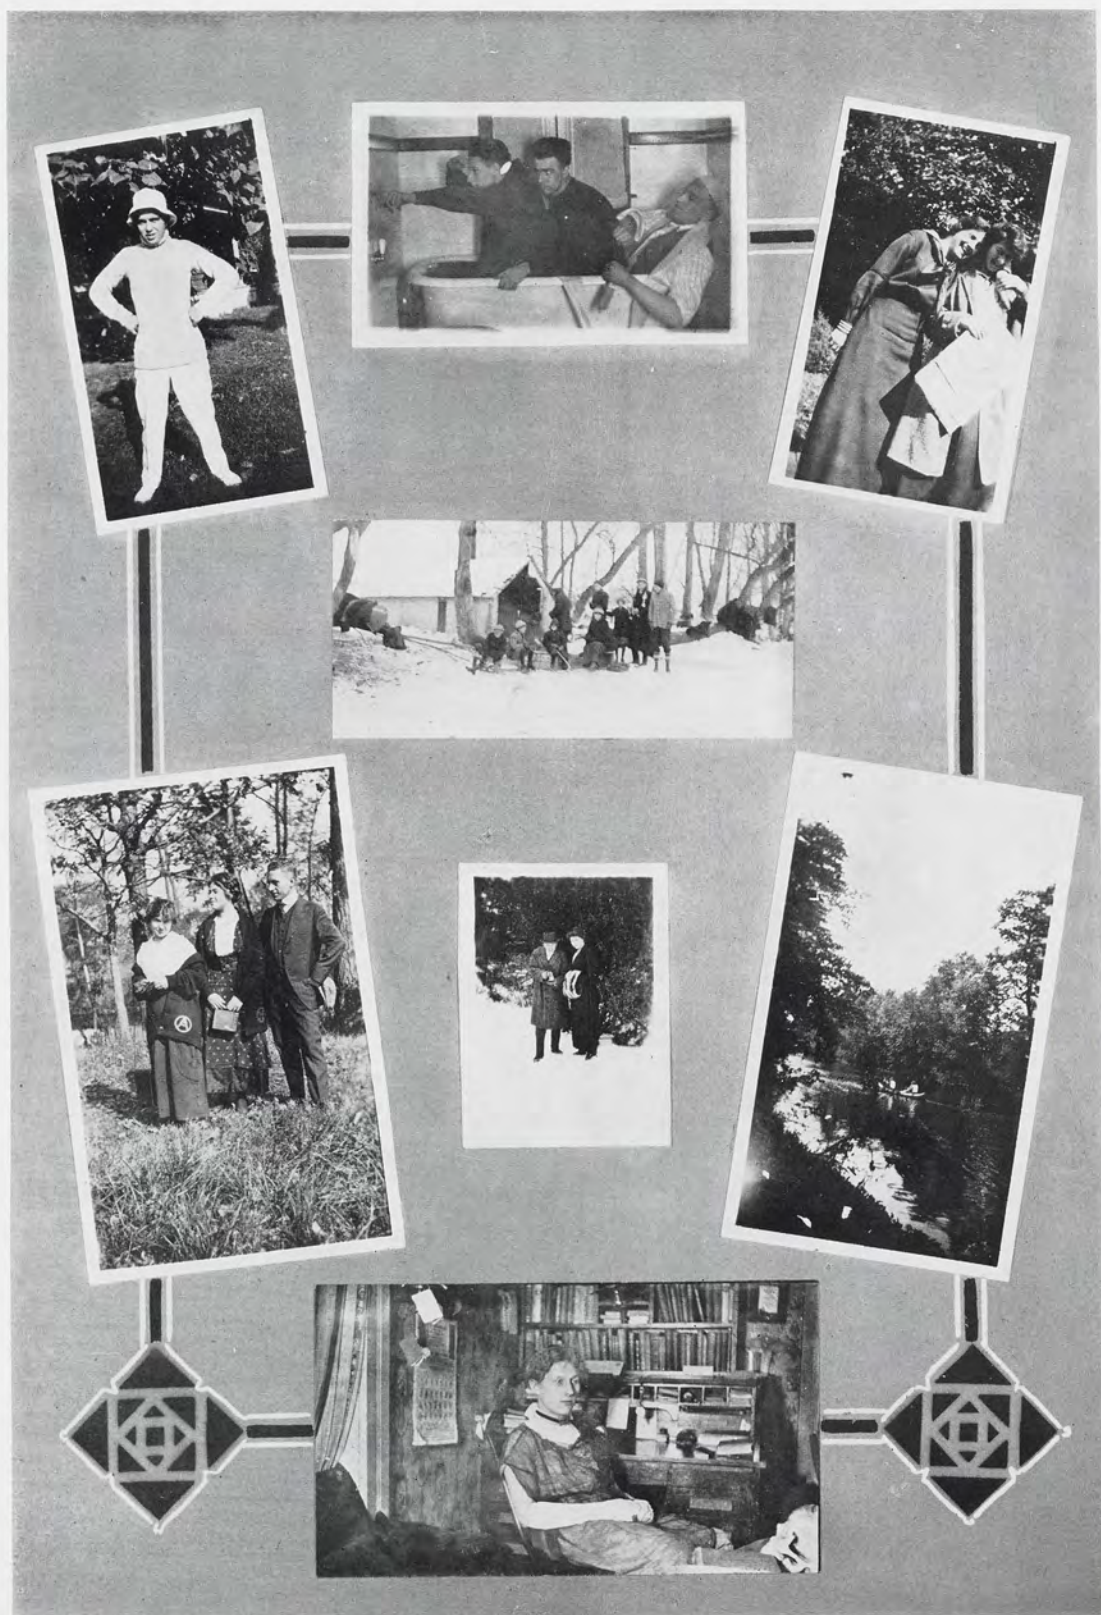

A book I took and sat me down to read,
My friends trooped in, each with a case to plead.
But I, engrossed, read on, no voice I heard,
Or answered any plea with any word—
And they went out and left me all alone,
I hardly realized that they had gone.

At last I tossed the thrilling book aside,
And said, "This kind of stuff I can't abide."
The room seemed strangely empty, dull and drear—
The sounds I listened for I could not hear.
Life, which I'd searched inside the book to find,
Had come, and gone, while I was deaf and blind.

"Marry me, my dear girl, and you will have seen the end of troubles."

"Which end, sir?"

Why does a man laugh up his sleeve?
That is where the humerus bone is situated.

An inquirer wanted to know why some women are called Amazons. Perhaps it is because they are so uncommonly wide at the mouth.

The late Bishop Meade was lamenting the lack of education among girls. "Our girls are uneducated," he said, "but our boys will never find it out."

Uncle Hiram went to Chicago, and glancing up saw a sign which read, "Michigan Bean Elevator."

"Now," said he, "I always thot that the Michigan Agricultural College was in Lansing."

Prof. King says that the University of Michigan is a learned place because most persons take some learning with them when they go there, and as few bring any away with them, it accumulates.

The gentle hum of life is heard,
The murmur of the life afield—
Of bee and beetle, coo of bird,
No jarring note, no spoken word—

The wood grows cool, and dark, and deep
All sound is dead—no breezes stir.

Daughter—"Father, you shouldn't have kicked George out last night. You nearly broke the poor fellow's heart."

Father—"I didn't come anywhere near his heart."

Generally speaking women are—

They sure are.

Are what?

Generally speaking.

Why not be content to remain as nature intended you? Never heard of a tiger lily fussing around with a freckle cure.

Boss—"No, we have all the men we need."

Laborer—"Seems like you could take one more, the little bit I'd do."

COLUMBUS OHIO

We found in a newspaper, an account of two murderers who escaped from prison and hid themselves in the big gun at Dover. They should, when found, have been discharged at once.

An author, ridiculing the idea of ghosts, asks how a dead man can get into a locked room. Probably with a skeleton key.

The Beaten Path

The beaten path led thru a narrow vale—
The vale was dim with dusk, thick-hung with vines—
And many travelers struggled on the trail,
Or lagged, or begged, or prayed the lord for signs.
But one there was who pushed the tangle back,
And struck out boldly in the dense-grown way—
Nor feared the jungle or its shadow black—
But cleared away the dark, let in the day.
The beaten path glows with a strange new light,
The mists and vines no longer shroud the vale,
The broad day broke the gloomy power of night,
And peace, and truth, and love, and life prevail,
Some call the worker Genius, some say Luck,
Some call him God, still others claim 'twas Pluck.
