Wolverine ★ 1949

Symbolizing to its 16,000 students a way of life, recorded in these pages, is Beaumont Tower, heart of campus life. The Wolverine is dedicated to the seniors of 1949: a spirited class of builders. Let it remain a history of their year at MSC. Let it present undergraduates who made part of the history. Let it become the common bond for those who took leave of texts, professors, major sequences, and friends at MSC in 1949. Seniors, you saw much that was new. You were busy, lazy, apathetic, enthusiastic, depressed, and happy. You preserved the traditions you found here and left many of your own. Here is your story.

All things considered

Most imposing evidence of what was new in '49 were the buildings you'll find on pages sixteen through twenty-seven. Don't look for ivy-covered walls. There weren't any. Classroom sessions of your year begin on page twenty-eight, features on forty-two, activities on fifty-eight. Honoraries, and their heavily-keyed members, appear on page sixty-five. MSC publications cover pages eighty-two to ninety-five. When you've taken a look at the Art section which follows, you'll find Clubs on 105, the Military section on 136. State joined the Big Ten in your year. The reason why is told in picture and story on page 156, the Athletic's section. On 198, the Senior and Faculty division, you'll see a familiar face or two including your own. Living Groups on 312 and Advertisers on 422 complete your '49 Wolverine.

Iowa Dropped In '29

Iowa was dropped from the conference May 25, 1929 for a so-called alumni "slush" athletic fund. The students and townspeople hanged the ousted Iowa athletic director in effigy as he waited on a ride for home with a loaded Michigan Sandy. In a few months the suspension was suddenly lifted and all became serene again.

Chicago Quits

In 1939 the Big Ten dropped a point as the University of Chicago left the league. The formerly powerful Chicago football unit had degenerated into a semi-professional production line and finally production was halted.

The last year of Chicago's conference play found the winless city squad suffering its worst season in history.

MSC is walking into a formidable set of gridiron rivalry but the white heat of competition should serve to temper the cutting edge of the Spartan's sword.

A Message From The Governor

On behalf of the people of Michigan, I congratulate Michigan State College on its admission to the Western Conference. We are proud of this great educational institution, and pleased at the recognition this action gives to its outstanding athletic program and ideal of good sportsmanship. The best of luck give the Spartans some consolation than to destroy the "when and if the conference adds to its membership, Michigan State College is the type of institution it would be pleased to consider."

Last winter MSC abolished its Jenison scholarships which were awarded for the most part to athletes, because it was believed that the Big Nine frowned upon such open financial aid.

Again last spring State's application for membership was on the docket for consideration, but it was not discussed because the representatives of the various colleges had their attention concentrated on other problems including initiation and scholarship.

The addition of a new member to the group is not without precedent. When the conference was first organized more than 50 years ago it consisted of only seven schools. They were Chicago, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Northwestern, Purdue and Wisconsin.

About three years later Indiana and Iowa were added to bring the number of members to nine. Ohio State was admitted in 1912, but Michigan had withdrawn from two earlier after a disagreement leaving the total still nine. The Wolverines made up their differences in 1917 and rejoined and from that time until Chicago withdrew the group was known unofficially as the Big Ten.

Many factors have operated in favor of the Spartans in recent years.

Perhaps the foremost of these has been the magnificent all-around strength of its intercollegiate athletic program. MSC during the last year sponsored teams in

FOOTLIGHTS AND FULLBACKS:

THE biggest thing that happened in '49 was MSC's new status as a member of the Big Ten. Registration headaches were hardly over when the important Michigan game filled the NEW Macklin Field beyond capacity. Much depended on State's showing that day. Remember?

Never had so many done so much in three months. Never had spirit run higher.

An all-college dance, complete with fall trappings, set the social wheels to rolling. About mid-October MSC's nostalgic grads arrived en masse for Homecoming. They stood in cafeteria lines laughing and talking about their year, promising to look up friends present and past. They sat huddled together in the stadium to cheer a second Homecoming Queen and another victory for Alma Mater.

The IFC-Pan Hellenic dance was seasonally "spook and pumpkin" for Halloween. Crossed sabers and military polish installed pretty coed corps-sponsors at ROTC'S Coronation Ball.

You'll remember the big college functions. But Fall Quarter '49 meant more. House parties, coffee sessions, a last minute date now and then, the lost tux stud, the late-minute deadline, a trip to your advisor, the late arrival of a check, and yesterday's State News. While all these occupied your time and effort, the leaves fell and the campus colored to bright reds, seared amber. If you hadn't been aware of State's beauty until then, you probably cut a ten o'clock because kicking up the leaves and breathing a bit of fresh fall air was more inspiring than Econ History. It was a "touch of the ivy" that would stay with you, come war or high prices.

When the Big Ten news broke, the Sunday before final week, you left typewriter, term paper, and Tolstoy, to celebrate. President Hannah's message, the ovation, a record-breaking rally, and Fall quarter was history.

THERE WEREN'T MANY WEEKS IN THE WINTER term of your year but there was enough time to allow Paul Bunyan's beard to grow for the annual "Foresters' Shindig."

AAU held its national meet and the Spartans took first place on their own ground.

The campus, you'll remember, was white as cake icing. Coeds trotted hurriedly from class to class bundled up in powder blue ski suits. They looked impractical and attractive, their faces fresh and red. You got into spirited snowball fights in front of South Campbell. You felt like a twelve year old skipping school. At night, if the moon was full and you were leaving the library for home, campus landmarks were as distinct as turn-of-the-century silhouettes, only crystal bright and blue. You knocked the snow from your boots, undressed, hopped into bed, and looked out of the window until you fell asleep.

Winter at "State" gave you the chance to be an individual star in your own right. Equipment was no trouble if you could bum a pair of skates from your roommate, and the ice when it did come, was free of charge.

If you could forsake the exhilarating activity out-of-doors, the concert and lecture stage presented the best. The Minneapolis Symphony, Licia Albanese, and Vladimir Horowitz brought you to the Auditorium. Jussi Bjoerling brought you to your feet. The eloquent lectures of Max Eastman and Lowell Thomas brought you to your senses. Theta Alpha Phi produced the sell-out play "Dark of the Moon." Burl Ives sang about "Venezuela" and "Aunt Rhody," the real articles of American balladry.

Gene Krupa played his danceable rhythms for two nights of J-Hop festivities, and played them "As You Like It." The extra-late permission was hard to believe. Breakfast "in the wee hours" found Lansing restaurants in a turmoil of tuxedos and formals. It was the big event of Winter '49.

PRING QUARTER BEGAN AS A CLIMATIC HANGOVER from a rough winter. Snow was dirty, disappointing, and melting. Travel was almost amphibious. On your way to south campus you paused on the bridge to watch a swollen Red Cedar engulf the bandshell and canoe shelter. Neither rain, nor sleet, nor snow bothered the impervious ducks.

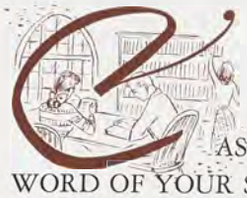
You weren't aware, until you stopped to look, that a young and vital season was here to stay awhile.

Everyone talked about it. Four years you watched Spring brighten up everything on campus including yourself, and every year it was new to you. Profs struggled in vain to keep your thoughts from wandering out of second floor Berkey Hall to the little babushka-and-saddle-shoe freshman bound for the grill. When the lecture was over, you looked down on your notes to find one comprehensible sentence and twenty or more meaningless doodles. There were long periods when you would stretch out beneath the trees to read, rest, eat strawberry ice cream cones, or talk with your girl. You liked to be outside because everything smelled good and clean, because all about you asserted the world a better place than it had ever been. From that day on, you beat a path to the river. The hard-nosed business world didn't exist. You were young.

Dancing at the Mardi Gras was often something of a problem. Either you couldn't see out of your costume, or move your arm, or sit down. There were plenty of laughs and the big attendance proved most of you thought it well worth the effort.

A regular year of school was just about wrapped up in class books and machine scored tests. There was a feeling that ran high in every living group at "State," during the closing days of Spring quarter. It was time for celebration, time for Water Carnival! For weeks every sort of float was conceived and feverishly worked on. You watched nearly two score of them towed down the river beneath the spotlights. They were aesthetically pleasing, earthy, humorous, the best and near-best. One thing certain, they were the result of many hands, many minds. They were an expression of joy that the "lonely, long travail" was ended. Spring quarter left amid the glitter of paint and pageantry, in a celebration which was exclusively part of "State's" traditions.

MSC



CASUAL WAS THE WATCHWORD OF YOUR SUMMER AT "STATE." Classrooms went out-of-doors. It was just what the Landscape Architecture department had been waiting for, and just what the surveying students had been praying for.

The broad sweeping lawn in front of Wells Hall was Coney Island come to Michigan. Sun decks of women's dorms and sorority houses were given a work-out in sun tan oil and smoked glasses, as everyone pooh-poohed the harmful effects of ultra-violet rays and nursed their burns. Students gathered in the grill for their morning cup of bracer and planned big exoduses to "the quarry." Joe and Joan College looked dejectedly at last year's worn swimming suit and went searching for a new one downtown.

Tennis courts near Dem Hall were busy from morning through the long twilights. Jennison's swimming pool resounded with wild shouts of laughter and games of water polo. It was often dangerously full.

You gave your room maximum ventilation on the warmer nights. Buddies from down the hall came around too often to pass the time in nocturnal sessions which covered everything from Aristotle's universals to the Tiger's pennant potentialities. You probably did a lot of just plain walking about campus to keep from falling asleep.

Organizations did only enough to keep body and charter together. The State News was published every other day, while the gentlemen of the fourth estate took a much-deserved breather from rigorous deadlines. The Spartan funny men were completely out of laughs for a few months. Student Council kept a skeleton staff to take care of whatever might arise in student government. It was a summer of Sabbaths.

Of course, you probably noticed that competition was a little tougher for grades than usual. Despite a certain weariness that fell upon you occasionally, your classmates were likely to be a little older and more serious about their goals. The utility of the summer quarter was still the vital factor, no matter how many swimming parties and tennis games were arranged. Summer went to bed in late August with a yawn. '49, a year of accomplishment and good fun, was over.

STATE
FRESH

AIN CAME, THE SNOW FELL, THE LEAVES WITHERED IN 1949, but the traditions of Michigan State stayed on. You could assign the tug-of-war and the pep rally to a given season, but together they made a full school year of work and play.

When the senior women marched en masse to the Auditorium for the annual lantern parade and presentation to underclassmen, it didn't matter what the time of year. To the senior coed who passed the lantern and the girl who received it, the ceremony symbolized all seasons, all four years of an idyllic college career.

Sports enthusiasm knew no limitations of weather. Michigan State had its share of brainchildren in the realm of athletics. Such a one was "Canoe Baseball," encouraged doubtless by the convenient Red Cedar. The sport has spread to other campuses, but its Cooperstown, its Hall of Fame remained in East Lansing.

Greased pig races, and flag-pole contests were more fun than the campus had seen in many years. They demanded a certain amount of athletic prowess and most of all, unbridled enthusiasm.

More sentimental was the serenade. An entire code of etiquette had grown up about this tradition. Planned weeks in advance, the singing had the appearance of a casual and pleasant surprise. The coed appeared at her window, or if the hour permitted, stood at the door with Bob. Before the love song was four measures old, the dorm or sorority observed blackout regulations and became as silent as a hospital zone. The serenaders were careful not to interrupt another group. Tradition required they leave quietly in order when the job was done. During the year, the girls reciprocated and serenaded male living groups with Christmas carols. If you were walking about campus at the time, it was a wonderful and nostalgic sound.

Fall, spring, summer, winter, Michigan State was a great place to get your book-larnin'.

All Things Considered . . .

EW was the Watchword of Our Year

"Bacty Beat," the row of late Victorian buildings that formed MSC's original campus, still stood in the quiet confidence of age in 1949. These Gothic grand-daddies thought their upstart offspring would have to prove themselves. College life and landscape was a matter of change and improvisation. Since 1855, they had seen contemporaries come and go, known changes in their own personalities, and undergone repairs with patience in the knowledge they weren't as young as they used to be.

Now, secure as revered landmarks, they were proud of clean-limbed Berkey Hall along Grand River and Electrical Engineering, an intelligent youngster who set up shop beside Old Man Cedar. A new power plant on south campus was supplying Michigan State with a well-planned, balanced diet of volts and amps. They would make a name in the college world. They came from a good home. They were brought up right.

MACKLIN STADIUM

An enlarged stadium was new in '49, a striking indication of Michigan State's new position as a member of the Big Ten. Seating 51,000, Macklin Stadium greeted the University of Michigan's Rose Bowl champs at full capacity. Traditional hot dog venders, enthusiastic crowds, and bouncing cheerleaders remained the same but Michigan State was Big Ten, actually and physically.

PHYSICS BUILDING

Michigan State's new physics building is a triumph of simplicity in architecture, and without much question one of the most beautiful in the country. An added touch of elegance is the adroit, clean-cut sculptures of Carl Schmitz. The interior was planned to be as flexible as possible, and the laboratory system incorporates the newest features in equipment.

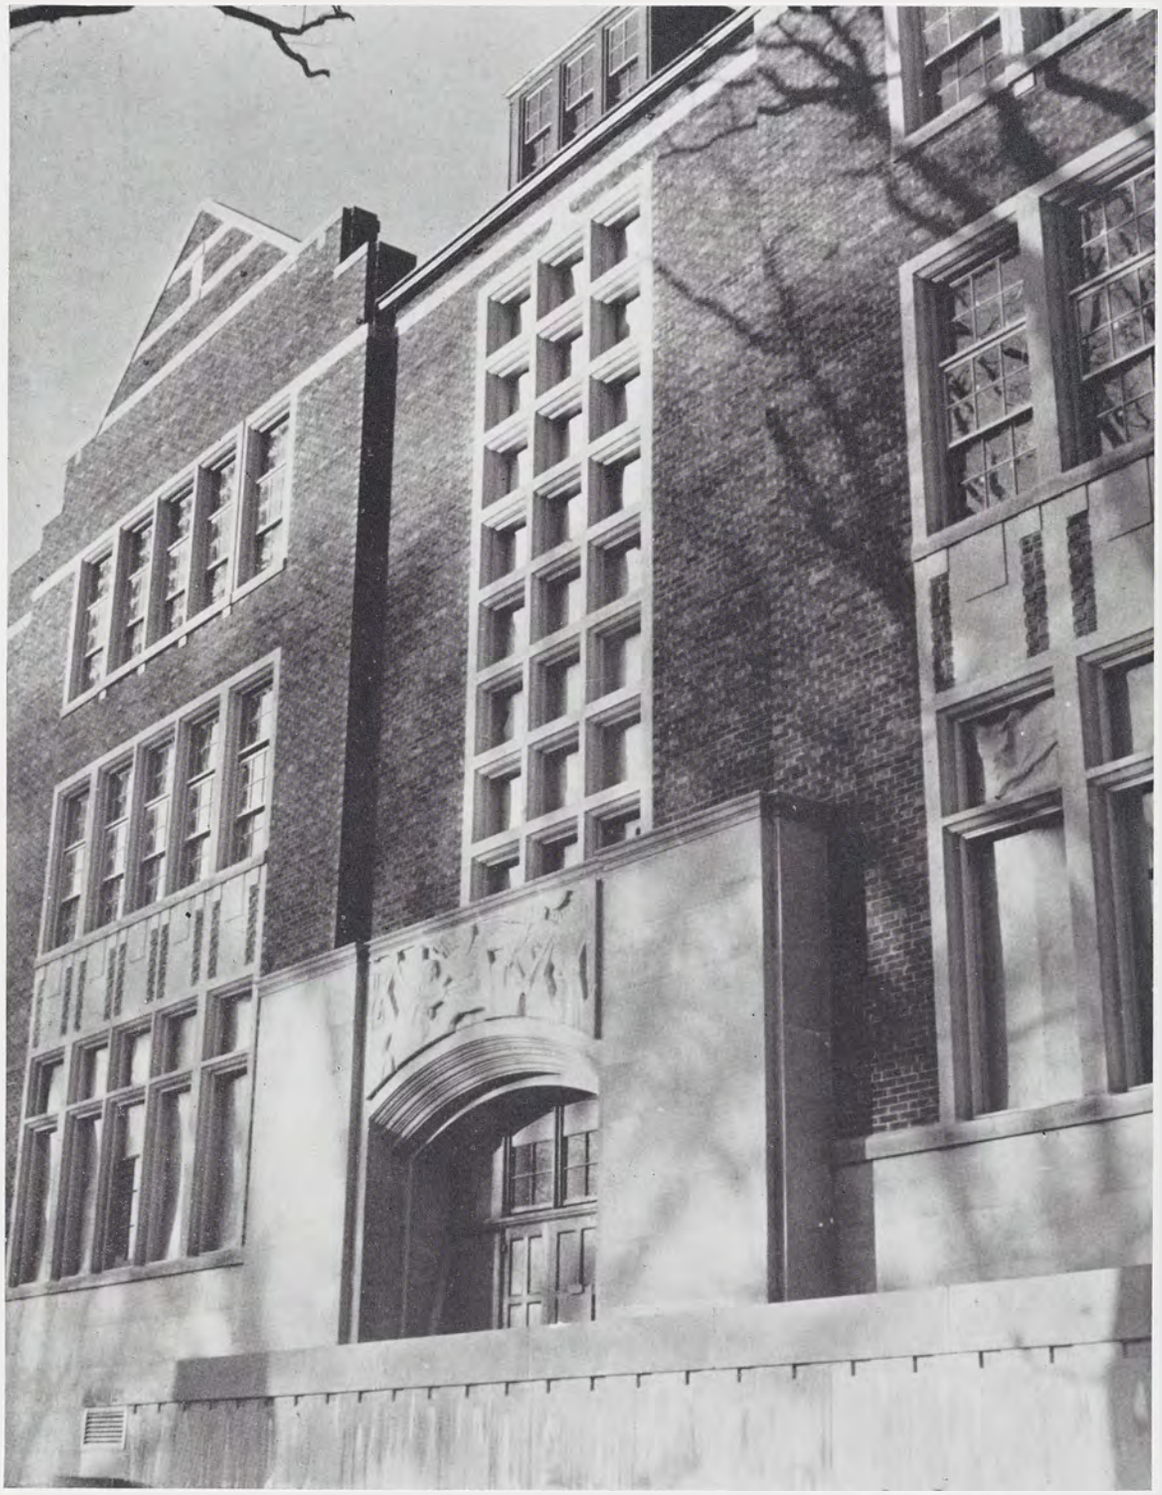
NATURAL SCIENCE

A visitor to Michigan State's campus in 1949 could approach the new Natural Science building and see what looked like one complete classroom unit, then find there were two identical wings he hadn't noticed.

Largest of the classroom structures, it stands four stories high and stretches seven hundred feet in length. It houses the departments of botany, entymology, zoology, geography, and geology.

HOME MANAGEMENT APARTMENTS

Designed to keep household work to a minimum, the new home management building contains the last word in equipment and furnishings. Efficiency is the keynote in the ultra-modern apartments where each home ec major gives six weeks of her collegiate life to the dusting, scrubbing, and cooking of enforced domesticity.



UNION BUILDING

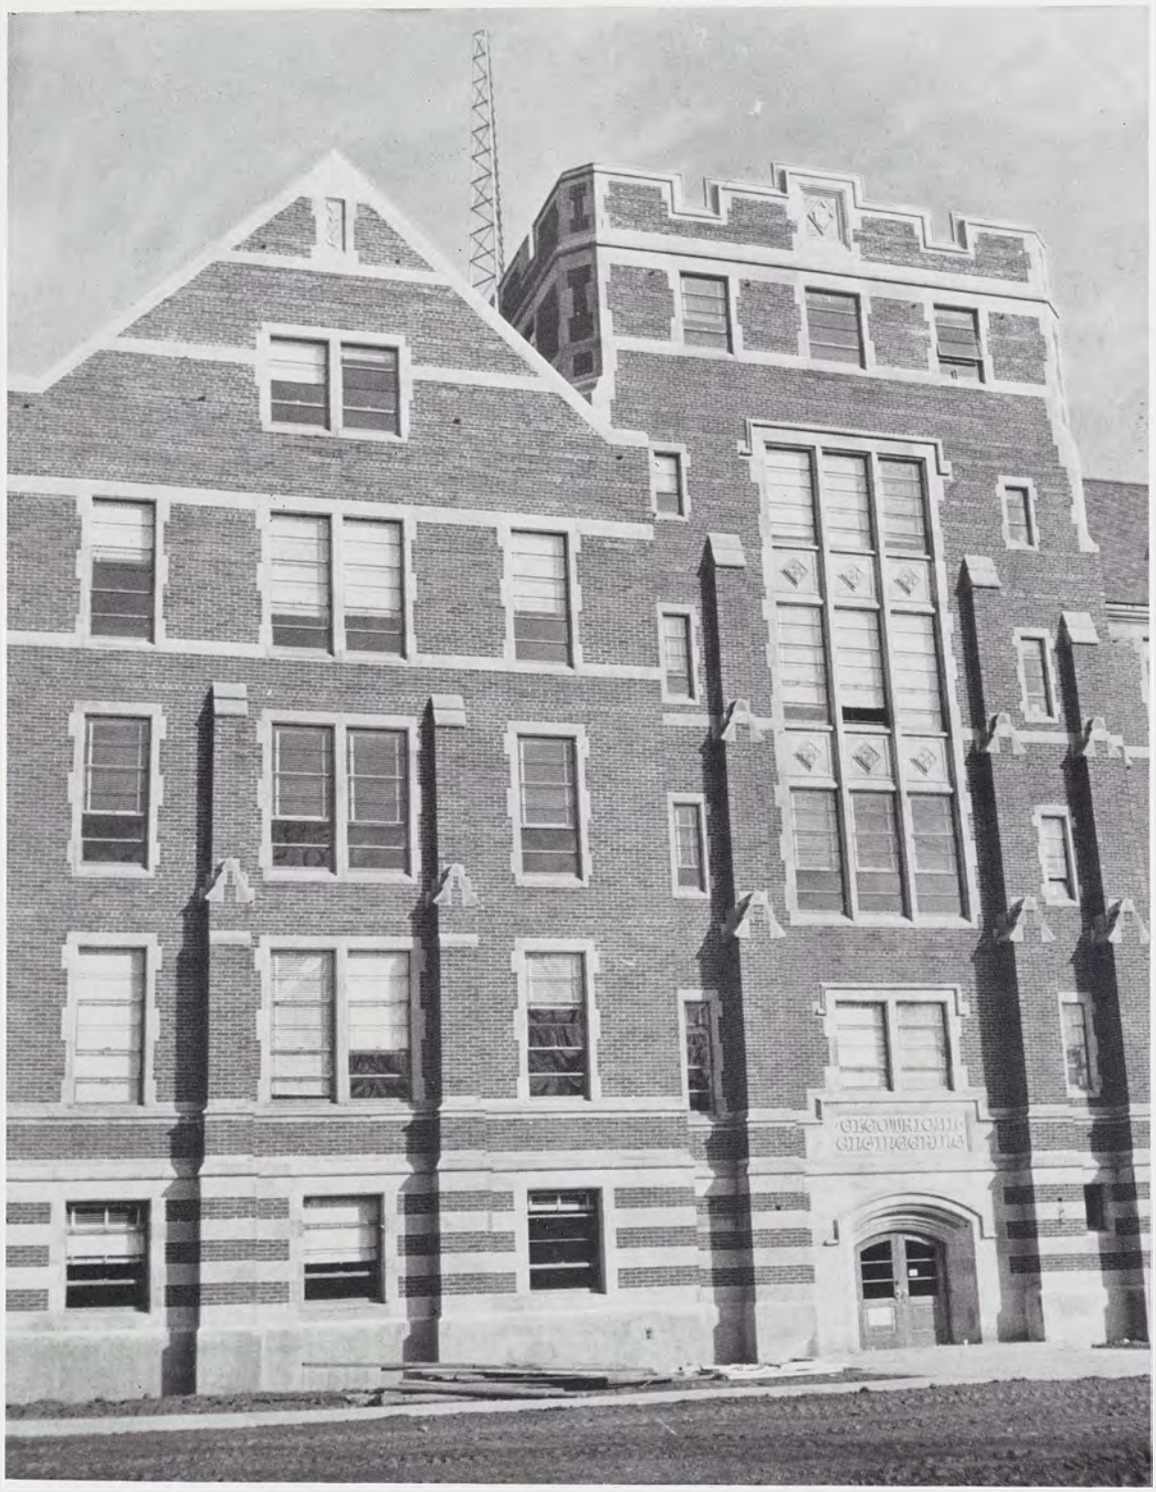
The Union building surprised the Spartan every day of '49, with its three million dollars worth of expansion. News writers ran out of words to describe elegant organization rooms, glassed-in offices, bowling alleys, and the $15,000 dark room on publication row. And coffee hounds couldn't stop commenting on their smoke-resistant, leather-lined grill.

UNION BOOK STORE

Books for basics, upper schools, that terrifying econ class, or just a nickel eraser, all are available within the walls of the Union Book store. Decorated in bright contemporary colors and divided into units to facilitate rapid service, the book store is the latest answer to a Spartan's curricular needs.

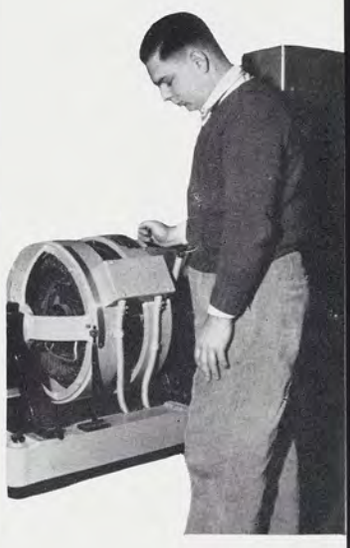
AGRICULTURAL ENGINEERING BUILDING

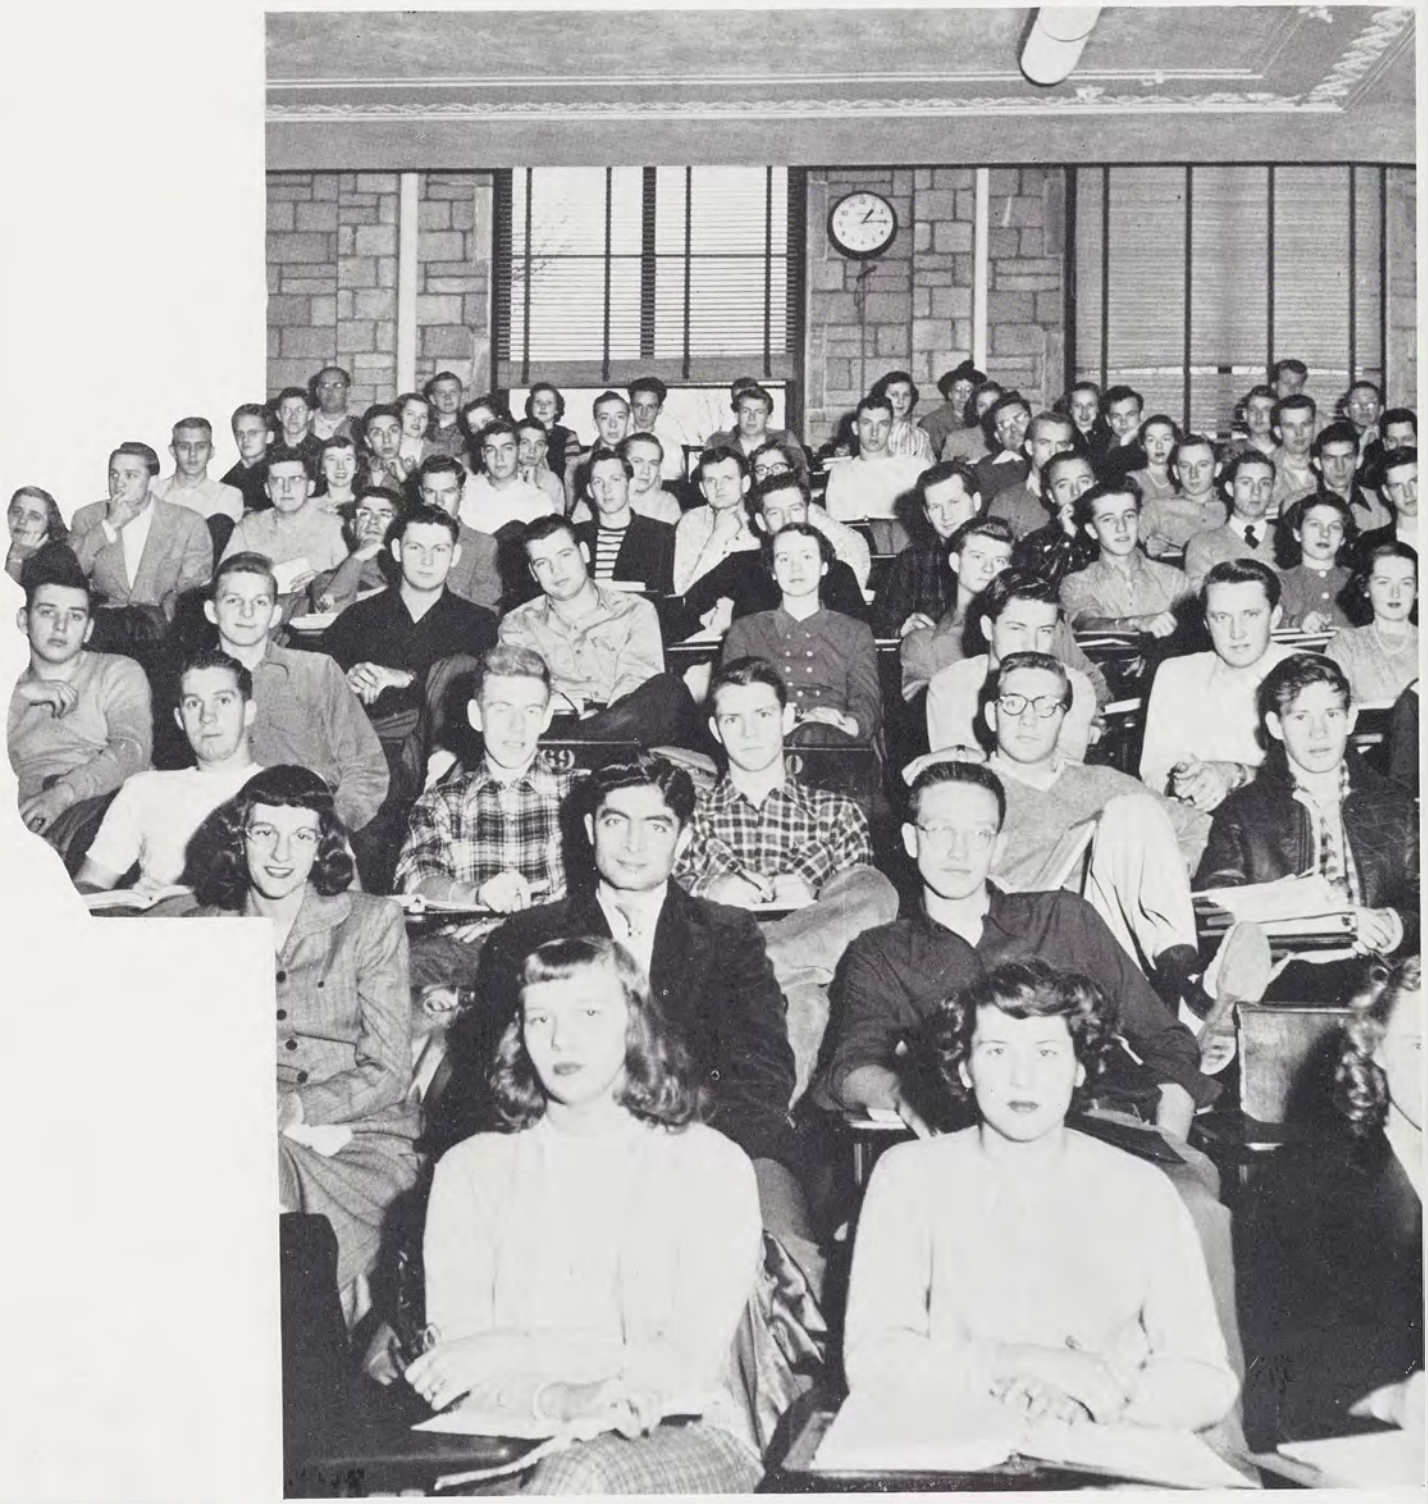
The new Ag Engineering building was worthy of America's first agricultural college. It was striking proof of the brotherhood of beauty and practicability. Large garage-type doors opened onto a concrete stage in the main lecture hall. Tractors and threshers could be driven right in for first-hand inspection.



ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING BUILDING

Built at a cost of $1,218,000 and serving 1319 engineering students, the spanking new Electrical Engineering building was part of the $25,000,000 expansion program at Michigan State. The original figure did not include $36,000 in new equipment and approximately $70,000 in separate appropriations for lab equipment.

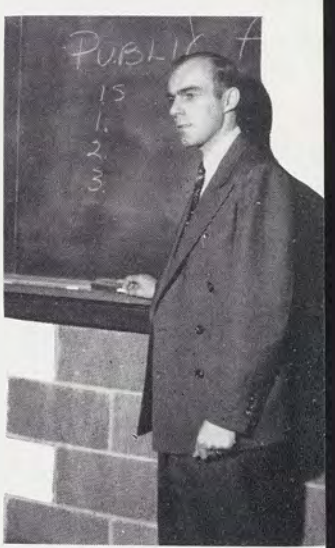




Take one all-knowing student. Fold neatly into sitting position and place in wooden chair. Add equal parts of lecture notes and machine scored tests. Dash in a pinch of the State News sports pages. Season with several cuts. Add midnight oil in liberal doses and a frantic search for the text book a day before finals. Simmer for ten weeks.

BERKEY HALL

In terms of student turnover on an hourly basis, Berkey Hall headed the list of popular classroom buildings voted most likely to succeed. And why not? With its elevator to transport fatigued students to higher altitudes occupied by the second and third floors, Mother Berkey did everything for her offspring except take their class notes and light their cigarets.



All Things Considered . . .

IT'S THE DEGREE THAT COUNTS

To study or not to study . . . tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow creeps up the midterm from day to day until you're hopelessly cramming . . . out, out brief sojourn, life's but a paradox, a combination of classes and grill hours, but a Spartan's life could be a tragedy of errors except for the restraining hands of advisor and professor.

Academic subjects keep State's 16,000 students on a continuous pilgrimage from civilization to south campus and back in their search for knowledge. Modern buildings and up-to-date scientific equipment are available; sound instruction from many who have been practitioners in their fields, and advice from trained counselors are given to all students. Friendly conversation and aid from classmates awaits old and new Spartans. Basic college provides them with a broad educational background; the upper schools give them intensive training in specialized fields. It's the State way.

REGISTRATION

Sparty blinked at the sunshine the afternoon of registration and walked back from the auditorium licking his wounds. The trial schedule he held before him was a blurb of erasures and ink blots, but its message was clear. He could eat lunch at ten in the morning or two-thirty in the afternoon. He'd been given the usual clues, but if all the systems devised for getting a convenient schedule at registration were laid end to end in the Sahara Desert, it would be a good thing.

Station WKAR with its early morning Dawn Salute program serenades Sparty during his first "awake" moments of the day. Strains of Ellington's "Mood Indigo" and any version of "Powder Your Face With Sunshine" provide fitting accompaniment to the after breakfast cigarette and inspiration for an eight o'clock session of conversational Spanish.

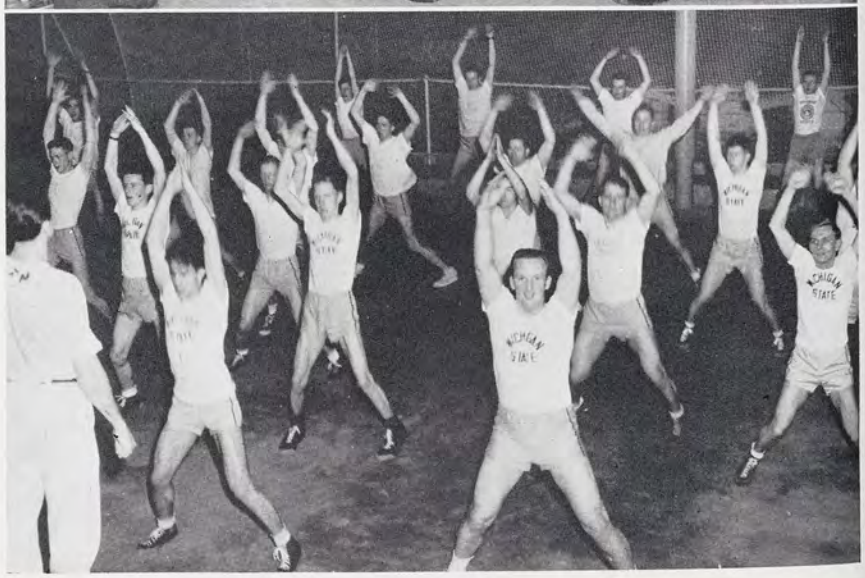
Potential ace photographers examine a speed graphic in preparation for shooting scoring plays at a Michigan State basketball game. It's no rare sight to view Sparty perched on a tree branch or atop the roof of the old weather station poised for an unusual shot of life below.



An old army game: "At the count of one, hands on hips; two, arms extended; three, raise right leg; four, raise left leg." In order to help Sparty keep in trim during the hard days ahead, calisthenic drills are a regular feature at Jenison field house.

The windblown face behind the big tuba is Sparty, who would as soon create his own music as support the disc jockeys. Here, a class in band fills the music auditorium with brass, percussion, and Sousa. Michigan State produces top-notch entertainment in every field of music.

Sparty's feminine counterpart learns basic electricity formulas and terminology in household physics labs. Although electric companies overlook Spartan women for employment in their repair departments, these classes do turn out skilled home ec majors ready to tackle ailing toasters and irons with poise and efficiency.

Gathered with his fellows for an endless lab session in electrical engineering, Sparty finds part of his day devoted to the mathematical and physical abstraction, plus a mountain of practical work. Alternators, synchronous motors, and rotary converters become as common words to the E E major as coke dates, senior proms, and late permission are to the rest of the campus.

"East side, west side, . . . " all around the women's gym, feminine phys ed majors and svelt coeds tap their way to "health through joy." Athletic activity is flavored with courses in tap, ballet, folk and country dancing, social and modern. Dance instruction is well rounded at Michigan State.

Recitations, Of Flunking's Desperate Dissipations.

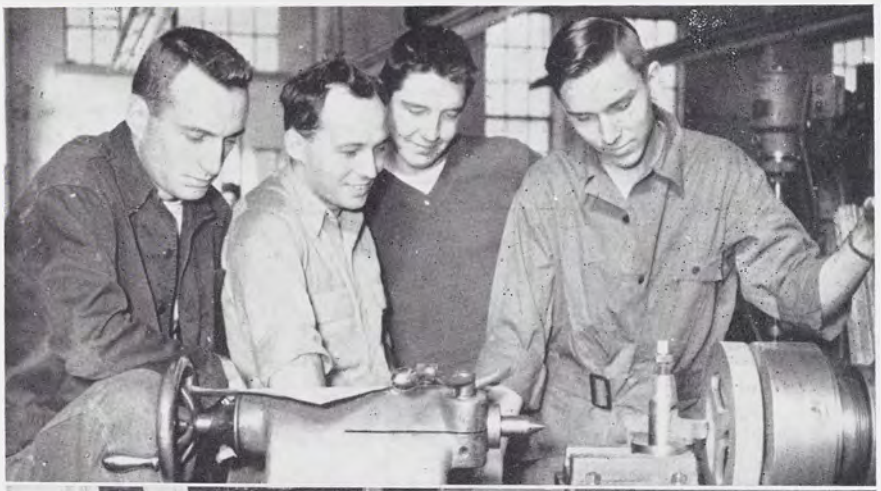
Here is a group of hard working Spartans in one of Michigan State's toughest schools, veterinary medicine. Throughout its history, the department's graduate school has given to America veterinarians of the highest type. No small wonder, since the vet medicine building contains the most modern techniques and has long been recognized as a leader by the A.V.M.A.

Following the tracks of the Dorothy Thompsons and William Allen Whites, Sparty hits a serious stride as he pounds out a story on a local three alarm fire. What the slide rule is to an engineer, the apron to a home ec major, the typewriter is to the journalist.

East Lansing's answer to General Motors is State's outstanding mechanical engineering department. In a machine shop lab, Sparty gets a basic knowledge of construction and operation of modern machine tools. He listens to lectures and carries out lab instructions always with an eager eye on the career of R. E. Olds.

When Sparty's Passed His Last Exam, And Smoked His

Getting a pointer or two on production techniques, engineering students examine a steel lathe in operation. Seeing how it's done supplements theoretical classroom knowledge. Because practical experience is so vital a part of the engineering curricula, lab hours dominate the schedule of a busy Spartan.



Drumlins, outwash aprons, kames, and eskers become standard words in Sparty's vocabulary when he's a geology major. Study of minerals, rocks, ores, and oil reservoirs holds top position in his academic life. He knows for sure what goes on down under when he clutches his degree after four years of work on the subterranean.

Testing neuro-muscular reactions in the psych building, three Spartans check graphs, charts, and levels of stimulation with electrical aid. Beyond the academics of Freud, Ebing, and Watson, Michigan State's psychology department guides students to reasonable adjustments to the problems of life.

The potential Picasso or Cezanne at Michigan State must know the complicated language of art, the history of art movements, the texture of oils, and the best mediums for his individual talents. Addition of an art gallery in the student Union gives Sparty the opportunity to display what he has made of excellent facilities and thoughtful encouragement.

Last Cigar, And Lost His Notes on the Way to Class, An C

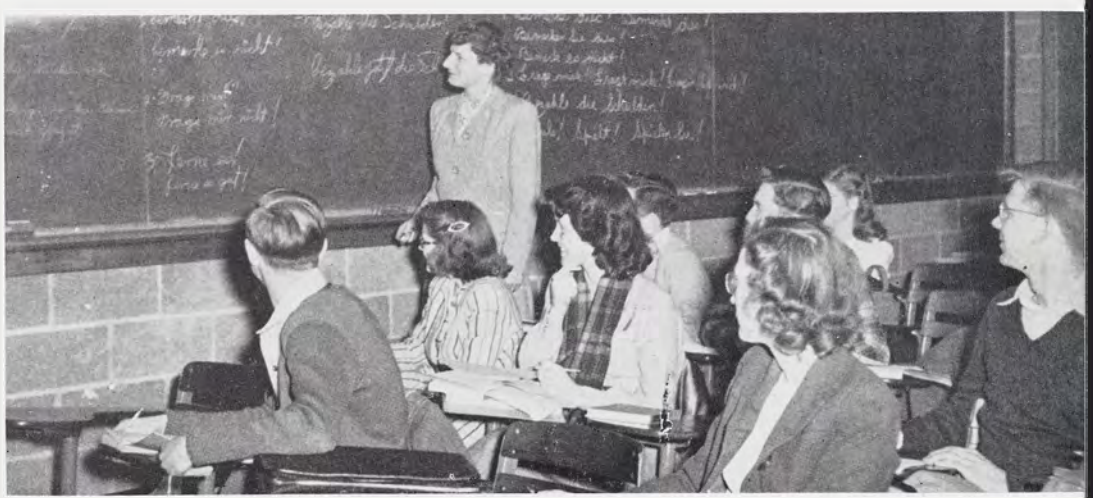
When Sparty leaves Michigan State to make his first million and builds a home, he can thank the department of landscape architecture for many improvements in living. In old and new communities alike, the ideals of maximum sunlight, greater lawn space, attractive shrubbery, and planned landscapes are part of the department's success.

"Woodsman, spare that tree!" Sparty can be sure Michigan State foresters will do just that. Their "tap roots" are firmly imbedded in conservation and reforestation. The forester's work is not confined to chaperoning the great northern wilds, but includes city park administration, merchandising of forest products, and forest economics.

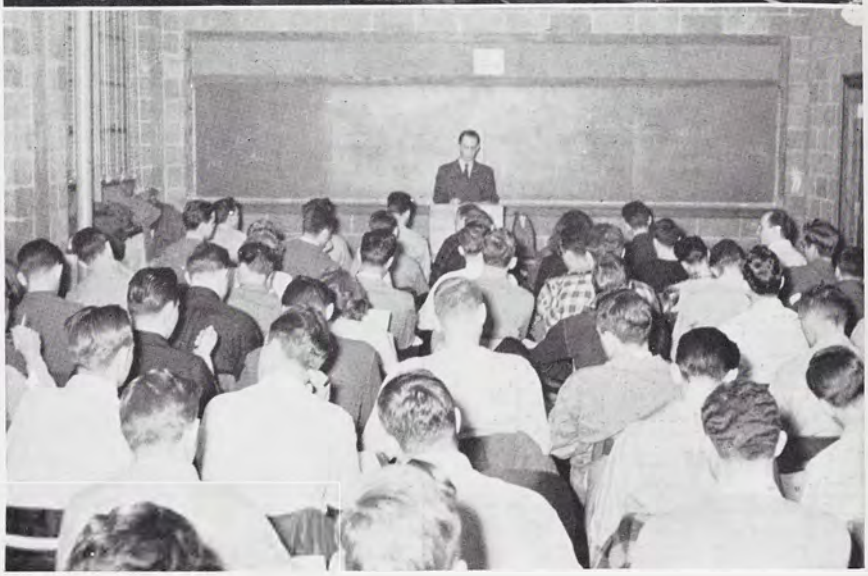
Each year a greater number of men learn to wield a mean skillet. Here in the home ec cooking labs, Spartans add just a pinch of vanilla and fold in the white of an egg. The male student, if he isn't majoring in hotel administration, will at least be more than a dish washer in the wife's kitchen.

An Can't Tell Where They Are, Then Professors of English Are

No "dumkopfs" are these attentive foreign language students watching the declention of a German verb in Berkey hall. Michigan State offers everything from "English as a Foreign Language" to Arabic. Interest groups like the French club supplement textbook learning and give Sparty the chance to master conversation and idiom.



Typical of State's growing classroom facilities, an empty lecture hall displays improvements in full window space, fluorescent lighting, acoustically treated ceiling, and large seating capacity. Only the early-bird Spartan who comes to class at five minutes before the hour is likely to find it empty.



Here's the same lecture room at 8:10 p.m. Like "swing shifts" during the war, night classes bring Sparty back from dinner for a session with advanced calculus or economic geography. Clearly, a busy student's work is from sun to sun. All day Sparty passes from building to building and takes notes on into the night. There are 16,000 just like him.

Loud in Their Wail, For Their Idols are Smashed and Wi

Pre-game basketball practice for a feminine five in the girls gymnasium. Number twelve stands poised to receive and try for a basket while the instructor looks for an improved "dog shot." The powder conferences give Joan Sparty exercise and a working knowledge of the game.

Five Spartans in a first year zoology lab examine specimens and learn some of the fundamentals. Though much of the course concerns wildlife, zoology majors are required to take advanced courses in genetics of both human and animal. There is apparently much more to the city zoo than monkeys and a 10c bag of peanuts.

The butter-and-egg men of State's dairy school use microscopes and scientific methods. One of the oldest departments in the college, dairy sends the very best into the field. Have they learned well? Sparty would say "yes" as he walks back across campus enjoying a double dip strawberry ice cream cone from the dairy building.

Wi Certainly Fail, But Classroom Life is the Backbone of College, In Giving Sparty Some Hard-Won Knowledge.

The flowers that bloom, and even the cacti that don't, are given loving and experimental care by many hands. In the greenhouse floriculture students with green thumbs rotate bulbs, change soils, clip leaves, string ivy, and do just about anything possible in the good earth, including the production of an African violet that buds.

ALL THINGS COME TO THOSE WHO WAIT

. . . until the last minute, and even to those who attended every session of every class on the preceding pages. Comes the final, goes the late permission. If your friend forgets to say "hello" on his way to the library, it's probably the rough econ history final that's on his mind.

When Sparty's alone in his quiet room and had about all he can take of Shakespeare 341b, he may pause to figure the odds for a "B" or a "C," considering the number of cuts, and the "D plus" term paper. Then it's downstairs for a quick coke and conversation with Joe, who just staggered back from an accounting quiz.

The next morning in a deadly lecture room, Sparty marks up a mimeographed sheet with a yellow corner, writes his name neatly at the top, turns in the paper, grabs a quick cigarette, and considers a plan to beat the rest of the family to the mail box the day grades arrive from Michigan State.

Fun Counted, Too, in this Business of College Life

Michigan State without her dances with top flight orchestras, lecture concert series with the Ballet Russe, Greek sings, homecoming festivities, and queens would be like the Sunday newspaper without the funnies and rotogravure sections.

Saturday night mixers, the assorted costumes at the Mardi Gras, visiting alumni, and tug-of-war battles between frosh and sophomores broke the monotony of Sparty's academic reading, writing, and thinking.

Truly, color of the college picture centers around the work Sparty didn't HAVE to do. The diploma would read the same that day in June if he didn't pound his head off on water carnival floats or devote hours to song practice for the spring sing.

It's the "extras" at State that make Sparty's collegiate life complete. He took full advantage of them. His college days in 1949 were liveley and crammed to capacity. These feature pages highlight them.

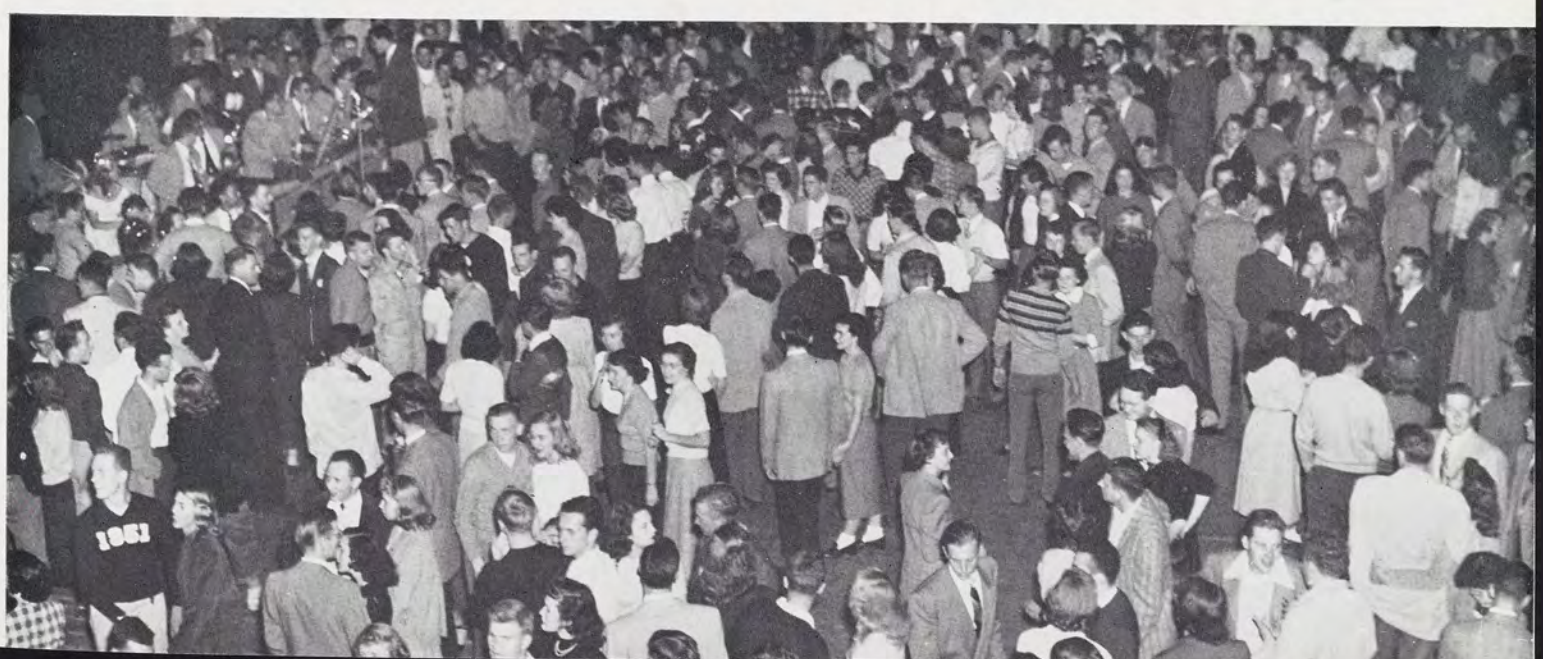
It's the "extras" at State that make Sparty's collegiate life complete. He took full advantage of them. His college days in 1949 were lively and crammed to capacity. These feature pages highlight them.

Cries of "O K, let's have the fight locomotive" ring out over a crowd of milling, yelling Spartans, when tireless cheerleaders take over at a Michigan State pep rally. Books and term papers forgotten, all attention focuses on school spirit and winning the next day's football battle. Short, informal talks by team members and coaching staff help make rallies part of memorable college days at State.

All-college mixers blast a resounding starting gun for State's social life. Stag or with a date, they present the first opportunity of the college year to dance with the cute blond freshman or meet the campus wheel with the key chain crammed with tokens from his previous extra-curricular victories.



Keys were jangling loudly, school spirit was running high at the Activities Carnival. The crowds who pushed their way underneath the new stadium to take in the displays of the various campus organizations made one thing clear; College Joes and Josies are alive with an interest in what's going on around the campus.

The patrons of the Olds Hotel got a refreshing break when the University of Hawaii football squad pulled guitars and ukuleles from their traveling bags and played an impromptu concert in the lobby. With some difficulty, the team wrested attention away from the hula girl by breaking into a few fast bars of the war chant.

Those bewhiskered, plaid shirted men with bluejeaned dates hanging on their arms aren't woodsmen. No, by the great blue ox, they're college students on their way to that most rustic of all campus functions, the Forester's Shindig.

Growth at Michigan State was not limited to physical additions and improvements on campus. No mere concession to the cultural snob, the lecture-concert series was dedicated to the proposition that every student had esthetic drives worth satisfying.

The annual Little International finds the entire college geared for fun. Pictured here are cattle shown at the ag-sponsored show. Activities also include the deans' milking contest, sorority girls' pig chase, and a broom polo contest. First prize in the milking competition was awarded to Dean Anthony, head of the Agriculture School.

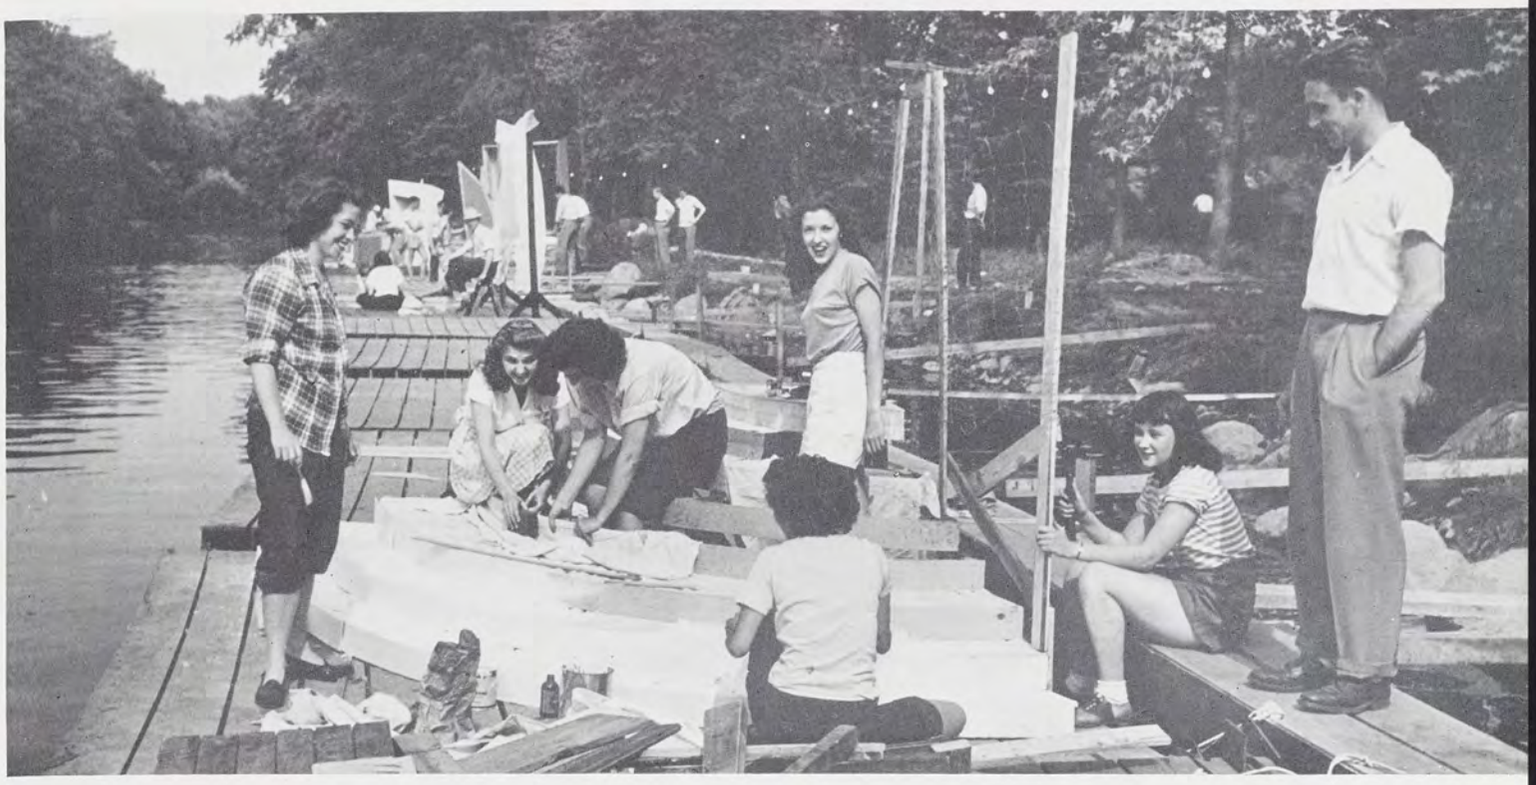
Tallyho! Opportunity to display skilled horsemanship was provided at Block and Bridle's first annual horse show. Competition in jumping, gaited, and hunter classes was open to all students. While the campus didn't take on the complete atmosphere of a dude ranch, the competing riders did eat, sleep, and reek horses for a couple of weeks.

A warm spring night and a few thousand students sitting on the slope in front of the band shell made the situation conducive to another sorority sing. That stage full of white formals didn't detract from the evening, especially when the girls in them sang a plaintive sweetheart song.

When sixteen fraternity men take the stage for the annual sing, they make a calm, professional appearance. Their confidence and quality skips easily through rounded thirds and fifths. The tradition is a result of scheduling rehearsals, selecting four voices best suited to the parts, and judging the finest of choral pieces.

As the women's gym rocked from the cacophony of Stan Kenton's "Artistry Jump," the Varsity club dance got underway on a high note. All who attended thought the letter men had done themselves proud in planning their drag.

"The members of the class of . . . . do hereby challenge . . . . to a tug of war over the Red Cedar . . . ." Announcing the test of strength usually involved an equal exchange of good natured insults between rivals.



A hurried and intense air hangs over the banks of the Cedar a week before Water Carnival. Under the continual din of resounding hammers and creaking boards, creativity runs wild. Back at the dorm, the builders of better mouse traps dream of trophies.

This is not a disc-jockey's nightmare or even a return of long-gone vaudeville. Even if the two gentlemen astride the oversized record might think they're on their way to Broadway, they are really only drifting down the Red Cedar on a prize winning Water Carnival float.

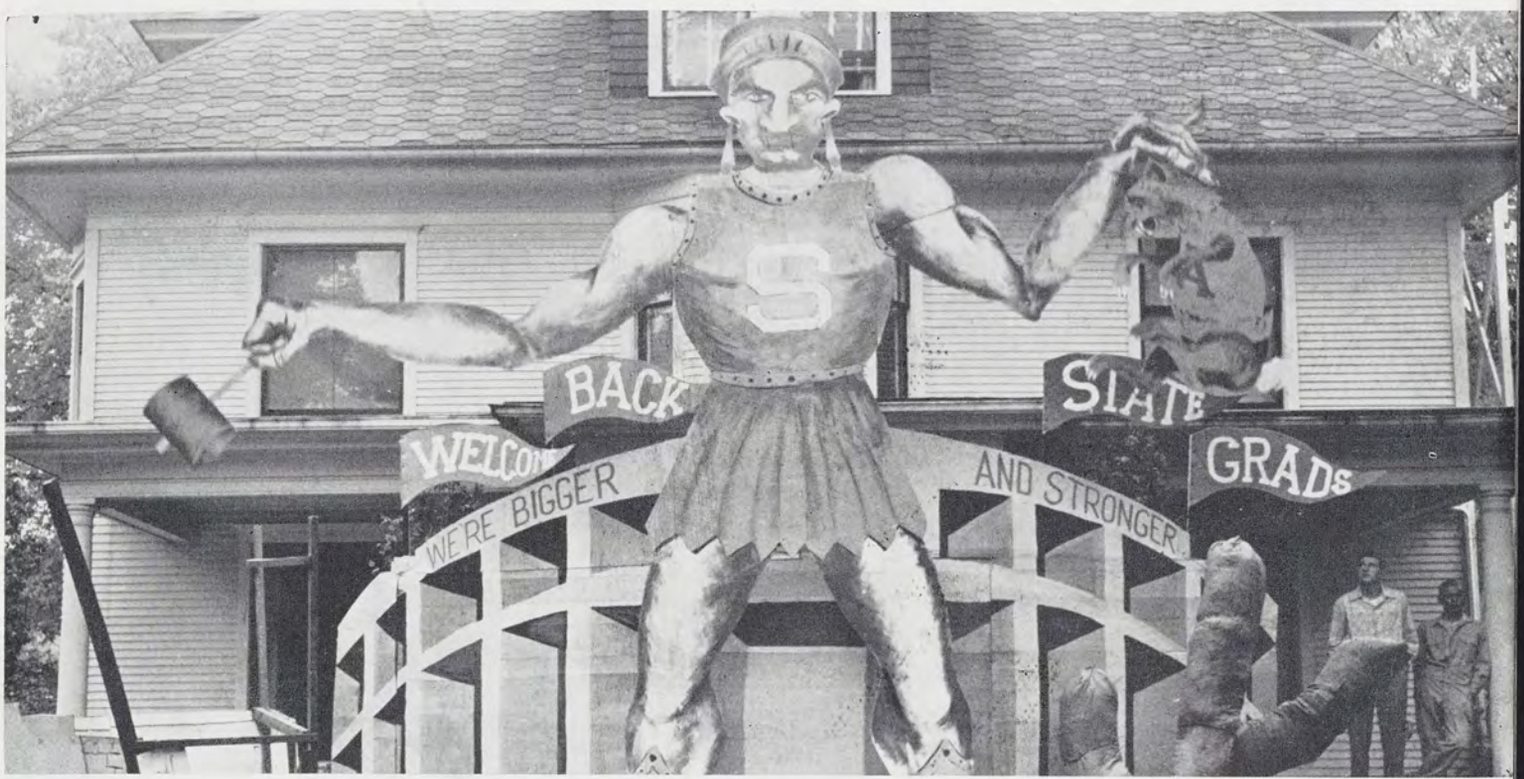
Opal Hewitt, Mardi Gras Queen.

Ruth Hawley, Harvest Ball Queen.

Flanked by Michigan State cheerleaders and riding "between the wheels," SUE KERN, this year's Homecoming Queen is escorted about Macklin Field in the best tradition of convertible pageantry.

Nostalgic alums gather to swap stories and renew acquaintances after Alma Mater's eleven thumped to a gratifying 61–7 victory over Arizona. Homecoming draws State grads back to the Cedar's banks in greater numbers.



Artistry in paste-board and brushes, plus fevered last minutes touching up, gave living groups at Michigan State much to be proud of. Theta Chi display.

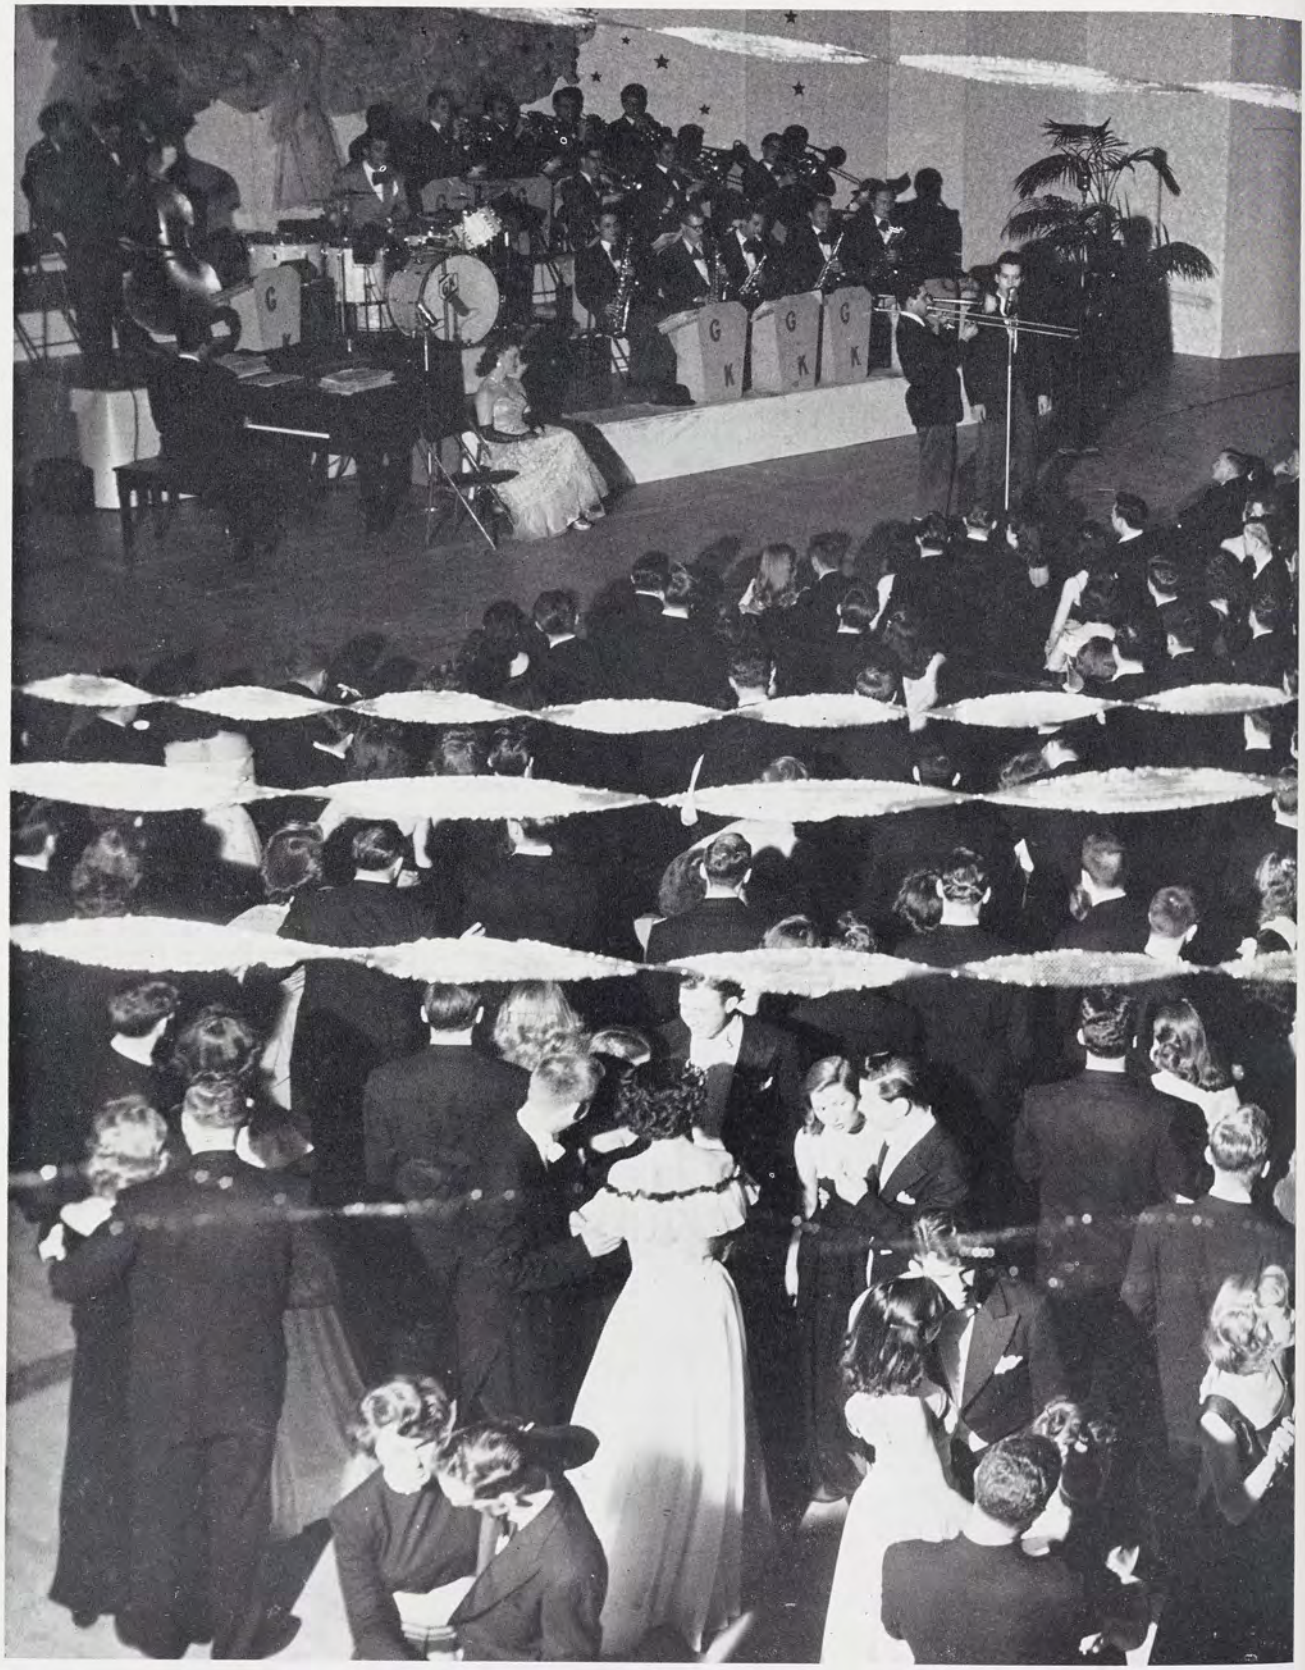
J-HOP



Michigan State's main auditorium was jammed with a glittering crowd of dancers on February 14th and 15th for the music of Gene Krupa. At intermission time, there was a race for cokes and cigarettes downstairs, where a dixieland combo provided excellent entertainment in a proper setting of low lights and smoke. A place to rest your weary neuro-muscular system was hard to find.

MARDI-GRAS AND CORONATION BALL

How ingenious could Michigan State students get? Only the judges at the Mardi-Gras costume ball could decide. Skitch Henderson's music played long and well, while dancers fought to keep their get-ups from tripping them or impaling another couple. Chuck Davey and Opal Hewitt were crowned King and Queen.

The lighter side of military life took the floor at the Coronation Ball in 1949. Uniforms and flashy sabers were everywhere, and buttons were bright with blitz cloth razzle-dazzle. The boys were prepared for an inspection but this time it was a labor of love. Look who inspected them.

All Things Considered . . .

IT'S WHAT YOU DO AND THE WAY YOU DO IT

Come inflation, mid-term, or house bill, Michigan State students insist on a variety of interest groups. It is the rare Spartan who passes four years without expanding his talents in several directions, or improving his proficiencies in a few. The wealth of opportunity and diversity which the campus offers him can only be understood in terms of the finished graduate. The confident senior who holds a degree from State in his palm is a pretty sure bet to cope with the complicated demands of success.

While the student plowed through econ and differential calculus, he learned to post horses, run meetings, organize committees, and dance Virginia Reels. He is given, at different times, purely social stimuli and plain drudgery. The extra hours involved he finds well spent.

Here, then, is the story of an active Spartan's life and hard times.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Composed of representatives elected from the districts in which they live, the Student Council is the student governing body of Michigan State. It controls and co-ordinates all student organization with an eye to making them more active and effectual.

The weekly meetings are seldom serene, but controversies are always ironed out to the benefit of the entire MSC student population.

Besides taking action on issues of immediate importance to the campus, the council sponsors the United Nations committee, campus elections, and the civil rights, N.S.A., and health committees. In the spring, the council turns its attention to lighter things, and the result is the perennially successful Mardi Gras.

The swank Hollywood type office of the council in the east wing of the Union has added a new vigor to State's legislative group.

AWS

Associated Women Students, a representative group of all coeds, is composed of two boards. The judiciary-legislative board seeks high standards of social conduct and scholarship, and promotes a feeling of friendliness among the coeds. The activities board seeks to formulate and further policies and plans of all campus interest to women students, to act as a coordinating body for women's organizations, and to prepare election schedules.

Among the projects which the AWS boards sponsored this year were the all college activities carnival, the leadership training program, Lantern Night, re-establishment of the Town Girls organization, and the holding of elections for women's groups.

The activities board is composed of elected representatives from fifteen women's organizations, while the judicial board members are elected from their housing unit.

The board, as well as the building, has been remodeled and operated this year under a new constitution. The governing body, the board of directors, is composed of fourteen members, including Leslie Scott, manager of the Union, and Miss T. Etoyle White, board adviser. Seven service committees, covering outings, tournaments, publicity, merit, publications, library, and social activities, are composed of 77 student members.

With the building almost finished now, Union Board is looking forward to one of its fullest and most successful years.

The new south wing, decorated in taupe, chartreuse, red, and chocolate brown, offers the latest facilities for banquets in its numerous and spacious dining halls. The last word in recreation is presented with the 18 bowling alleys and eight ping-pong tables.

The President's Dining Room provides a dignified setting for important luncheons and dinners at which Dr. Hannah is host.

An art gallery and a music library with five large listening rooms add a cultural tone. Three lounges and a barber shop complete the south wing directory.

INDEPENDENT STUDENT'S ASSOCIATION

The Independent Student's Association at Michigan State offers to those students unaffiliated with a social fraternity or sorority a chance to take part in campus activities and opportunities to develop leadership talents.

During the past school year ISA has made many contributions to campus life at MSC. Foremost among these was the Ride Bureau, a system which enabled students desiring rides home on week-ends and vacations to contact those who were driving to various points throughout the state and the country. The Michigan State Gazette, a student newspaper published by ISA members, also had a successful year. Other activities included hayrides, dances, and bowling parties.

MEN'S COUNCIL

The Men's Council was founded in 1940 when a need arose for coordinating the activities and voicing the problems of men's campus organizations. Since the war its membership has gained rapidly, until it now represents twenty groups. With worthy achievements behind it, future plans include an activities limitation for men, a student book exchange, and a handbook for men.

BIG SISTER COUNCIL

Members of the Big Sister council help orientate freshmen and transfer women to college life at Michigan State. Big sisters are chosen from those who petition the council for membership. They must have been on campus one term and have an all college one point.

Through summer correspondence and year round guidance the big sisters do much to help the new student at State.

HONORARIES

EXCALIBUR

Excalibur is organized to promote a wider exchange of ideas among the leaders of the various facets of college activity. The diversity of its members' interests and activities make it the only place on the campus where the problems of one part of student activity meet those of the others. Although the group never acts as a unit in any function other than lunch, the ideas expressed over a cup of coffee often find their way into the actions of the rest of the group.

Traditionally the top honorary at State, Excalibur makes room for only thirteen of the campus' largest wheels. These socially minded scholars may be recognized by their gray corduroy jackets with the deep red X sewed over the left breast pocket. Excalibur has filled its rolls with men selected for their leadership, campus activities, scholarship, and character, since its founding here in 1921.

A pleasant, if not major, function of the group is its weekly luncheon meeting at which pressing issues in campus politics are discussed with the least possible violence. In fact, the X men usually take a stab at solving almost any problem involving MSC.

Tapping for Excalibur occurs twice each year. Intermission at the Water Carnival is the time for the first one and the crowd applauds as eleven outstanding seniors walk to the stage to assume the duties that go with Excalibur membership. It is standard procedure for the eleven new members to select the remaining two sometime during the following fall term.

Not a national organization, Excalibur is the exclusive property of MSC. To the freshmen, the honorary's blue robes symbolize the ultimate aim of a BMOC. To these select seniors, they symbolize collegiate success.

MORTAR BOARD

Mortar Board, an honorary for outstanding senior women, is symbolized by a tiny black square edged in gold. Each spring at the May morning sing, we have a tapping ceremony at which time we choose from the junior class those women who are outstanding in leadership in their field, scholarship and service to the college. In June, Mortar Board celebrated the completion of her fifteenth active year on the Michigan State campus.

Our organization of senior women is dedicated to loyal service, and we assist in all student-faculty functions. We provide the way for cooperation between the various campus societies and encourage high standards of leadership and scholarship in the college woman.

Among our projects is the Dean's list of high scholastic achievement. This is a list of those students who average 2.5 or higher in any one term. Another project that has proved increasingly popular with the students is the Marriage Course which is offered each spring term.

One of the social items on our calendar is the Spinster Spin, which we sponsor annually with Tower Guard, and S.W.L.

With Lantern Night, one of the most colorful traditions of Michigan State College, we close our year's activities. All college women gather one night near the end of spring term to honor all graduating women. Japanese lanterns are lighted, and we wind across campus singing familiar songs.

BLUE KEY

Blue Key started at the University of Florida in 1924 when the student leaders got together with the alumni and interested friends in planning how they were going to take care of homecoming day and Dad's day.

Meeting regularly with all sorts of college questions confronting them, they decided to organize and took the name of Blue Key.

Blue Key is intended to foster a national student spirit through an exchange of ideas and common understanding. It is pledged to cooperation with the faculty, to study problems, to stimulate progress, and to promote the interests of the college. The chapter at State, since it came here in 1927, has been carrying out these aims with a great deal of success.

Among its many activities are the Blue Key Bulletin, a weekly listing of every event which is to take place on campus, and the choosing of their campus sweetheart. The queen, Nancy Rudy, received her crown at the annual Sophomore ball. Members also pitched in to make the WSSF drive successful.

Every two weeks the members get together over a loaded dinner table. After the scraps have been carried away they relax around the board and discuss pertinent campus issues and what to do about them.

The local chapter sent Arnold Bransdorfer to the national convention in Chicago this year. He carried with him a fine pictorial display of Blue Key doings at State and also a lot of weight since the MSC chapter is one of the largest in the nation.

TAU BETA PI

That star which all neophyte engineers hitch their wagons to is Tau Beta Pi, the top honorary in the engineering profession. Although an all college two point and a position in the upper eighth of the senior class is required for membership, this fraternity for slide rule artists is not a haven for the "grinds." Before a man is accepted into the organization his character and leadership abilities are closely scrutinized by the actives and must be found to be of the highest caliber.

Tau Beta Pi originated at Lehigh University in 1885. The State chapter, which came here in 1892, is the second oldest in the country. Strictly speaking, the association was founded for the purpose of honoring those engineering students and alumni in the field of engineering who had brought honor to their alma mater by their distinguished scholarship, exemplary character, and accomplishments in the profession.

As an impetus to high scholastic achievement, Tau Beta Pi, each year awards to the engineering freshman who has the highest point average, a fine new slide rule and also awards a cash prize to the initiate who writes the best thesis as part of his initiation program. This thesis is in turn entered in national competition.

As a further part of their pre-initiation duties, these demons of the drafting board prove that their brains are not packed with strictly theoretical knowledge. It's been said that some of the practical problems assigned would perplex Einstein.

TOWER GUARD

A State coed sporting a green and white armband means that a Tower Guard is on duty.

Tapping takes place in the shadow of Beaumont Tower on the first day of May. After serving a three week probationary period, the new guards receive a small golden replica of the tower and assume the duties that go with active membership in the group.

After an eviction which lasted throughout the war years, they again hold their meetings in Beaumont Tower.

Selected on the basis of scholarship, leadership, and service to the college during their freshman year, these B.W.O.C.'s help the students in many ways.

Many a floundering collegian is spared a nervous breakdown by the Tower Guard free tutoring service, and their reading to the blind is an invaluable aid. When visiting conventions descend on the campus, members spend considerable time doling out information over the booth top and conduct tours to local spots of interest. During registration week, new students are met at bus stations and train depots and escorted to their campus quarters.

Other Tower Guard activities include rescuing bewildered students from the pitfalls of registration and taking care of all secretarial work for the World Student Service Fund campaign.

But life as a Tower Guard is not all work. Joint parties and banquets are held with other honoraries on campus and the group is among the sponsors of the Spinster's Spin, annual spring term formal.

GREEN HELMET

Green Helmet was founded in 1939 to recognize and reward sophomore men who excel in scholarship, leadership, and personality. The minimum scholastic requirement is a 2.2 average. After a temporary retirement during the war, the organization returned to the same high position among campus honoraries that it has held since its inception here.

In spring term eight of MSC's top brains were initiated into the organization, and during the fall quarter the remaining gaps in the membership were filled when sixteen more campus men were tapped. The new members were quick to get acquainted with the functions and traditions of this highly regarded group.

During the first week of fall term a freshman orientation smoker was held to introduce new Spartans to State's traditions. Later, Green Helmet teamed with Tower Guard in a tutoring service and assisted greatly in making the Activities Carnival a success. On December first the group provided ushers for the annual student-principal conference and the following day staged its annual faculty auction in conjunction with the W.S.S.F. drive.

On the docket of the honorary's plans for the future are a revised constitution, an up to date history, the establishment of an initiation ritual, and a revamping of the membership application. As for service projects, plans are under way for the issue of registration name tags and an improved tutoring service.

ALPHA DELTA THETA

Buried over there in all-man's land, the med techs voice their hopes and opinions thru Alpha Delta Theta, their National professional fraternity.

ALPHA ZETA

Promoting the profession of agriculture is the aim of Alpha Zeta, honorary and service fraternity. Kedzie chapter, founded in 1902, represents this national organization at Michigan State and is ranked as top flight among the forty-five chapters across the nation.

Only those hardy souls who have struggled into the upper two-fifths of their class are eligible for AZ membership, with special emphasis placed on outstanding leadership and character. Those who are elected to membership must be proficient in activities on the campus and in the school of agriculture. A good share of the country's agricultural leaders are Alpha Zeta members.

In May, AZ puts on its agricultural field day, a tradition which is always well received at the "New State." The event is attended by high-school seniors from all over Michigan whose interest lies in the agricultural field.

At the end of the day's program, which includes a description of the Ag school and activities, the neophyte agrarians are given a tour of the campus and college farms.

At the agricultural achievement banquet in winter term, a scholarship cup is presented by the Kedzie chapter to the sophomore in agriculture who has established the highest scholastic record in his first two years at State.

During spring term, AZ holds its initiation banquet and officially welcomes pledges into the fraternity.

D Z V

The shrill sound of a whistle and the thud of a pigskin makes every athlete's heart beat faster. Every Wednesday night since 1938 these men have met in their basement headquarters at Charlie Washburne's Smoke Shop.

The organization formed by varsity athletes and students interested in sports is the athletic brotherhood of Michigan State. Its primary purpose is to give those men who compete in varsity sports an opportunity to engage in intermural events. Since they banded together, these Herculean people have won more championships in the independent league than all the rest of the teams combined.

Since returning from la guerre, they have won the 'mural softball and touch football titles and in winter term the powerful DZV hoopsters defeated the best teams on the hardwoods to take the basketball championship.

When not actively engaged on the field of sport, much of the members' time is spent in their basement headquarters where sports stories are hashed and rehashed in bull sessions which last until the landlord tells them it's time to lock up.

All of their activities, however, are not concerned with athletics. The DZV's take an active interest in campus cleanup campaigns and also supervise recreation at a local community center for needy children.

PORPOISE

To sponsor and encourage all swimming activities is the aim of the Beta Chapter of the Porpoise fraternity. The local chapter of this national honorary swimming fraternity was established in 1930.

Under the excellent guidance of Coach Charles McCaffree, Jr., our group produces a water show every fall, one of State's most colorful affairs. Porpoise Queen Mary Ellen Koch and her court ruled over this year's presentation of "Aqua Maniacs." Features of the pageant included group swimming, stunt diving and comedy acts, all originated and executed by our own members.

We also help Green Splash with their water show and extend our aid on and off campus to various life-saving and water safety programs. Many of our members are active in the Boy Scout, Cub Scout and Y.M.C.A. swimming instruction classes.

In addition, we have established the Hubert E. Gluski Memorial Award given to the outstanding Michigan State swimmer of the year.

Those men of Michigan State College who have shown superior ability and an active interest in swimming are eligible for membership. Each candidate must meet the scholastic standards required by the rules governing intercollegiate athletics. Various speed and distance swimming tests are required of every pledge, along with diving tests, plunging for distance and floating.

Inviting many of the outstanding high-school swimmers around the state, we Porpoises wind up our yearly activities with a swimmer's outing every spring with plenty of food and fun for all.

WOLVERINE

Workers on Michigan State's yearbook were fast friends with the Union building's janitorial staff. When the nightly tours of sweeping and cleaning filled the halls with buckets and mops, the Wolverine staff filled the ash trays with cigarette butts and the master-dummy with pictures and copy.

The mortality rate for staff members varied from term to term as Editor Cynthia Gorham and Idella Graves, keeper of the cash, sought to cover the biggest graduating class in MSC's history. The student council numbered one hundred and forty-seven organizations in extra-curricular activities, which in itself presented enough work for a separate Organizations staff.

Light-weight steel desks, glass partitions, and fluorescent lamps were new that year, but hard work and publication's "comraderie" were inherited traits of the Wolverine office.

Noises were a strange mixture of industry and fun. You never escaped the incessant clatter of the typewriter, backbone of any publication. At one time or another during the day there was a roar of desperate laughter when something went hopelessly wrong. If the milk were spilt, the Wolverine staff couldn't cry over it; they had to correct it. Sometimes they just met to talk and have fun together or drink Grill coffee or compare lecture notes. A publication is rarely thought of as a club, though its workings require the same spirit of "give and take" and an even greater degree of efficient organization.

You hold the result of all this in your hands at the moment. Let Sparty be the judge.

STATE NEWS

Heading the ever-growing list of student publications at MSC is the Michigan State News, the daily student newspaper. The State News occupies a new five-room suite of offices on the third floor of the Union building. Again this year the State News was voted an All-American rating by the Associated Collegiate Press, and was picked as one of the nine top collegiate newspapers in the country.

With a staff of more than 100, the News strives to present a complete daily picture of both campus and world events to a readership of nearly 17,000. Its coverage of the local scene, through news and sports stories, features and pictures, provides a day-by-day description of life at MSC. The local picture coverage of the News is the largest of any college daily in the United States. The Associated Press wire service enables the News to give its readers on-the-spot reports from all parts of the globe.

The News is constantly looking for ways to be of greater service to the MSC student body. The State News Literary Supplement, published once each term, is now completing its second year of publication. The Supplement furnishes a vehicle in which all students can further their talents in all types of creative writing. The News also sponsors an all-college bowling tournament each winter term, and an all-college golf tournament during the spring and summer terms.

SPARTAN

The joke seemed funnier on the other side of the fence in '49.

With none of the editors and few of the staff which had put the MSC humor magazine through its paces for two years, Spartan editor Charles Gabel and business manager Arn Bransdorfer faced serious problems before they could be funny.

They saw their problem in a clear light. They set out to build a larger, more closely knit staff than the Spartan had seen in many a year, to model the Spartan as close to the student mind as possible, at the lowest possible price to subscribers. Their objective was, like a wary coach, "building for the future," with an eye toward their magazine's growing position as a campus tradition.

To accomplish these ends, informal get-togethers were held for the staff, the revived editorial board met almost weekly to pool ideas and work toward a basic policy. A readership survey guided the Spartan's policy of covering the campus through fiction, fact, photo, and cartoon. Promotion and publicity campaigns were plotted to boost circulation and capital away from the danger point.

When the smoke had cleared, the Spartan staff looked over the situation from its new office and decided that in this, Sparty's eleventh year, he never had it so good.

M. S. C. VETERINARIAN

This year's editions of the M.S.C. Veterinarian greeted its far-flung readers with a sparkling new layout. The make-up of the preceding eight volumes was cast aside in favor of a more attractive cover and a more readable page.

The M.S.C. Veterinarian is published quarterly by the Michigan State Student Chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association. Its circulation exceeds the thousand mark, and copies are sent to all practitioners within the State of Michigan as well as to institutions both in and out of the United States.

However, the character of the magazine has not changed. Scientific articles, case reports and other useful articles of knowledge are included in each issue. In addition to its customary alumni news and articles of interest to students and doctors of veterinary medicine, this edition contains the first installment of a new feature, "Student News."

SPARTAN ENGINEER

Newcomer to the family of Michigan State publications is the Spartan Engineer. In the spring of 1948, a group of interested engineering students under the leadership of Clif Gray organized and published the initial issue as a special project for college credit.

Elevated high above the maddening campus crowds in their fifth floor office of the electrical engineering building, the editors look over work submitted by students and faculty. This year the magazine has been sponsored by the Engineering Association and is under the immediate direction of a board made up of faculty members from the various engineering departments. It is hoped that sponsorship will eventually rest with Tau Beta Pi, national engineering honorary.

Pictures from Michigan State building and engineering projects and articles on local engineering developments and pertinent information are regular features of the magazine.

This publication is self-supporting, being financed by national advertising, alumni subscriptions, campus sales, and a standing order of 300 copies paid for by the engineering department, which are distributed to high schools throughout the State.

HOMESTEADER

1949 saw the Michigan State Homesteader on campus after an absence of sixteen years. Sponsored jointly by Agriculture Council and Senior Home Economics Board, it filled the gap between two departments and brought them into closer correlation. When the year drew to its close, the staff was considering abandonment of quarterly publication. The Homesteader seemed certain to succeed on a monthly basis.

1949 featured many "queens," and The Homesteader found one—doubtless the most original—for its first edition. Presented as Michigan State Homesteader Lass, a prize Holstein calf became the publication's first cover girl. She is now the mascot of the staff and a picture of bucolic coma.

Extension workers, vocational schools, agricultural and home economics schools, and interested individuals welcomed the return of The Homesteader, in 1949. Included in its pages were articles of general interest, the latest developments in agriculture and home economics, theories, reports on research, and feature material. The farmer and housewife were better served in 1949.

The Homesteader did more. It provided an outlet for the student to present his ideas on local, state, and national problems in his particular field. It built, perhaps better than it knew, for greater cooperation and understanding among students and faculty in the two schools. It provided a source of information about developments and activities which concerned both. Agriculture and home economics are related, basic, and essential industries. In 1949, The Homesteader pointed to a higher degree of integration and did the job well.

BOARD OF PUBLICATIONS

Operating under a streamlined organization, the Board of Publications this year acted as the final word in editorial appointments and guided campus publications toward conformance with current student tastes.

P. J. May, MSC comptroller, Stanley E. Crowe, Dean of Students, and James P. Dennison, Administrative Assistant, represented the college in 1949. A. A. Applegate, head of the department of journalism, was the board's chairman and Alan Scott, professor of journalism, its secretary. The editors of the Wolverine and State News, plus an addition of one student to represent minor campus publications, complete the membership of the board.

Cynthia Gorham, Prof. A. A. Applegate and Phil Spelman.

Meeting once a month, this group supervises all business connected with the administration of publications, elects managing editors and business managers in Spring term. Then, in honor of students working in the field of campus journalism, the Board of Publications holds its annual Publications Banquet in May.

SIGMA DELTA CHI

Sigma Delta Chi is a student branch of the national organization which includes men in all phases of journalistic work as well as those preparing to enter the profession. The purpose of the fraternity is "to associate professional and student journalists into an organized unit of good fellowship and to advance the standards of the press by fostering a higher ethical code, thus increasing its value as an uplifting social agency."

Established in 1940 on the MSC campus, the local chapter, composed of active workers on the three publications, now boasts a membership of 35 undergraduates and over 200 professionals. At the regular weekly meetings, editors of both daily and weekly newspapers are invited to give talks concerning the problems and various aspects of publishing a news organ. Members are given an opportunity to ask questions of the professionals at the close of each discussion.

In cooperation with Theta Sigma Phi, women's journalism honorary, SDX sponsored the annual journalism day in October. High school journalists from all over Michigan visited the campus to participate in forum discussions led by professors in the college journalism department.

At the annual fall term initiation dinner in November at the Hotel Roosevelt six new professional men were enrolled in the fraternity. On the program W. W. McCall, owner and publisher of the Isabella County Times-News, which he recently converted from a weekly to a daily newspaper, discussed some of the problems which one has to cope with in making such a conversion.

KAPPA ALPHA MU

Kappa Alpha Mu, national photographic honorary, extends special recognition to those persons displaying outstanding talent for and interest in the field of photo journalism. It further strives for the highest ideals for professional and amateur photographers.

State's Nu chapter of Kappa Alpha Mu received its charter in 1946, making national the former local honorary Alpha Xi Alpha.

New pledges are chosen by careful selection of photographers and those actively engaged in photo journalism who have attained a "B" average in photographic courses or by the discretion of the executive committee.

Fall term looms big with KAM'ers. It's homecoming queen time. Kappa Alpha Mu and the Spartan Magazine co-sponsor the selection of the Michigan State co-ed to reign over the football game and homecoming dance.

Photographic salon exhibitions are presented each term. The most interesting to KAM'ers is the print show in which the members enter prints in competition for selection to travel with the national traveling salons. Each spring, Kappa Alpha Mu sponsors the 50-print National Collegiate Photography Exhibition judged at the national convention by top men in the photographic industry. The authors of the best pictures receive valuable prizes. The 1948 top winner received a 7-weeks' summer job as photographer with Science Illustrated in New York City with a chance for "a future" upon graduation.

THE ARTS

MICHIGAN STATE BANDS

Members of the MSC bands put in an active year during 1948–49 under the leadership of Leonard Falcone, director of bands, and Don Jackson, assistant director.

The fast-stepping, 100 piece Marching-Concert band started things off last fall with drills two weeks before the term began. The band had to be ready for that Michigan game.

Bandsmen, led by Drum Major James Dye, took on a new appearance with a snappy marching cadence of 160.

Highlight of the football season was the band's trip to Notre Dame where its formations and playing made a great hit with South Bend fans.

The band was reorganized after football season into the Concert band. Following the annual custom of the band, coed musicians were auditioned and added to membership.

Outstanding events for the Concert band were the annual winter concert, two outdoor spring concerts, and out-of-town concerts at Marshall, Grand Ledge, Grand Rapids, and Niles. Excellent musicianship and popular repertoire won praises for these appearances.

In addition, the band played for several basketball games, annual Farmers' Week, senior swing-out, weekly spring military parades, several broadcasts, and commencement.

The green-clad Varsity band, celebrating its third season, grew in size and efficiency. With a complement of 88 men and women, the band expanded its playing scope to include several fall pep rallies, a Farmers' Week performance, and most of the basketball games. Its purely musical activities included several broadcasts. The year's work was climaxed by the annual spring concert in the band shell.

Members of the bands are chosen by auditions during fall registration week. Marching-Concert bandsmen receive one and a half or two credits per term, depending on experience. Varsity band members earn one credit per term.

Members of the Marching-Concert band with two years of service are awarded sweaters. Those playing three years earn blankets. Gold watch charms go to four year veterans.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

The Michigan State College Symphony Orchestra, led by Alexander Schuster, is celebrating its twentieth anniversary this year. Organized in 1929 by Mr. Schuster when he came to Michigan State from the concert stages of Europe, the group now numbers sixty-five musicians. Membership requirements include an audition held at the beginning of fall term, and a sincere interest in symphonic music. Many members also play in the Lansing Symphony Orchestra.

In its numerous performances, the orchestra has approached a professional level in the interpretation of different works by such masters as Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms. Music by contemporary composers is also played, and several members of the music faculty have had their compositions performed.

During the year, they present a fall concert, a Good Friday performance of Handel's Messiah with the mixed chorus, and the May music festival. In keeping with the custom of selecting the music of one artist for performance, this year they chose the works of Beethoven and presented selections from his violin and piano concertos and symphonies. In addition, they present programs for Baccalaureate, the Michigan Educational Association conference, Farmers' week, the annual Christmas concert and other college functions.

The symphony, in connection with the music department, offers ten scholarships covering college tuition to student musicians who show exceptional interest and talent in symphonic music. Students may receive one college credit for their participation in the symphony, or they may take part without receiving credit.

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB

To develop music interest and group appreciation is the purpose of the Michigan State College Women's Glee Club under the direction of Dr. William Sur. The organization is one of long standing on this campus, having been active since the early nineteen hundreds.

Membership is not restricted to music majors. Any girl who enjoys singing may audition before Dr. Sur or Miss Martha White, associate director, at the beginning of fall term. Tryouts are also held throughout the year whenever a vacancy occurs. There is no arbitrary number for membership, but it is the wish of the directors to keep the number between sixty and seventy voices.

Women who participate in our club for three years are awarded a silver pin in the shape of a lyre; those who serve an additional year are eligible to receive a gold pin of the same design.

During the school year the club's many activities include concerts for local organizations, Rotary clubs, Farmers' week, Boys' Vocational School, Thanksgiving church services, one radio broadcast each term, and Christmas caroling in the Union. In addition, they present a Christmas program featuring the music of many countries. This year they sang French and German carols and Welsh folk airs as well as the traditional Holiday music.

In the past they have combined voices with the Men's Glee Club for our annual spring concert led by Dr. Sur. Breaking tradition, this year the chorus consisted solely of women's voices and featured the cellist, Miss Janice Allen, senior music major.

MEN'S GLEE CLUB

Men of the Michigan State College Glee Club take pride in their organization and in their able director, David Machtel. Following a period of inactivity during the war years, the group was reorganized in 1946 and this year numbers seventy-five voices. Interested men audition for membership at the beginning of fall term.

The purpose of our club is threefold: to provide students and the people of Michigan with a quality men's chorus, to cultivate fellowship among those men on campus who enjoy singing, and to send out the name of Michigan State College in song.

In keeping with department regulations, members receive no awards until they serve six terms. At the end of this time, they are eligible for a six-inch white chenille letter with "men's glee club" written on it. After nine terms service, the men receive a gold key.

Foremost among our activities is our spring concert with a banquet for Glee Club alumni, members, and their dates immediately preceding the performance. We also sing at the May morning tapping service, Faculty club parties, and for broadcasts over the college radio station. Our outside engagements doubled over those of last year. We sang at the Kellogg Foundation in Battle Creek, various high schools throughout the State as well as at the Boy's Vocational School, the State Horticulture Convention in Grand Rapids, and the Zach Chandler Republican Club. Approximately one-half our work is gratis and with the remuneration we receive, we finance our banquet and pay for awards. This year we purchased green sweaters to give our group a uniform appearance.

Professor Machtel and our club welcome and appreciate visitors.

THETA ALPHA PHI

Established in 1923, the Michigan State Delta chapter of Theta Alpha Phi has worked to bring about an ever widening achievement in creativeness and all the allied arts of theatre. In 1949, the national dramatics honorary could look with considerable pride on its success.

Theta Alpha Phi had gone far beyond a purely honorary organization. It had, of course, set high requirements for membership, realizing that the combined efforts of the best would produce the best. By 1949, the group had given the campus many seasons of first-rate entertainment, from Ibsen to Anderson. Theirs had been a task of endless rehearsals, back drop decoration, lighting effects, sound problems, memorization, and finance. Theta Alpha Phi knew they must pay for quality, not so much in dollars and cents as in hard work and a hundred nagging details. Their annual term play, which is produced and sponsored by the group, had become so firmly established as a campus tradition that four night runs were required to keep Fairchild Auditorium at comfortable capacity. The packed houses weren't new in 1949, but they were an indication that Theta Alpha Phi would be working harder and growing bigger than ever before.

For twenty-five years, then, all their world was a stage and all their men and women more than players. It was time to celebrate the silver anniversary of a job well done.

The scope of Theta Alpha Phi now included studio theatre, workshop, experimental theatre, and at least one major children's production each term. There was good cause to celebrate.

THEATRE HIGHLIGHTS AT MICHIGAN STATE

Theta Alpha Phi, in 1949, presented three very different plays to sell-out audiences.

"As You Like It" represented MSC's first encounter with Shakespearian comedy. Using the Julia Marlowe edition of the play, director Don Buell divided the original five acts into two parts for better continuity. Two curtains were used to bring about the atmosphere of an Elizabethan stage, with inner and outer stages. The scenery for "As You Like It" was largely impressionistic backdrop and flat in gray, black, and white. To create a vivid contrast, the players wore brightly colored costumes of red, green, and blue.

Most unusual feature of "The Night of January 16th," a courtroom drama, was audience participation. When the case of "The People versus Karen Anders" had been weighed on both sides, the bailiff of the court chose members from the house to reach the final decision of guilty or not guilty.

Many departments aided Theta Alpha Phi in the production of "Dark of the Moon," a folk drama of the hill country. Taking the folk ballad "Barbara Allen" for the theme of the play, the authors included a great deal of original music, square dancing, and revival singing. Part of the cast included students of Folk and Country dancing as well as an excellent representation from the music department. Production was difficult but the end result was stimulating, and a special laurel for lighting effects and symbolistic costumes crowned the hard work "back stage."

ALPHA EPSILON RHO

Michigan State's chapter of Alpha Epsilon Rho, national radio honorary, celebrated its sixth birthday this year.

Membership is open to speech majors with high scholastic standing in their field and practical experience in radio work at the college station, WKAR.

Projects of AER include sponsorship of the WKAR workshop series and management of a script exchange library.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB

A small and energetic United Nations may be found over at the International Center on Michigan State's campus. Every Friday night members from all parts of the world gather to exchange ideas, meet their neighbors, and discuss international current events.

The International Club is open to all students attending State. Under the leadership of Director Dr. S. C. Lee, the group promotes international good will and friendliness and provides a program of culture for its eighty members.

There is ample opportunity to try a new language, exchange stamps, or enter a lively conversation with members about various customs and habits of different countries. Although a wide variety of languages are spoken by the group, English dominates the lectures and meetings.

The organization participates in many college activities, including intramural sports, the WSSF drive, and the Land Float Parade during Water Carnival week.

With an eye to promoting understanding, the club publishes a monthly magazine with announcements of coming events, stories on outstanding members, and articles on international relations.

In May the club presented Michigan State's annual International Festival. Receiving nation wide note and recognition, these festivals highlight the customs and music of the thirty-two countries represented on campus.

The group takes part in panel discussions with many other campus organizations. Several members are also active on the Speakers' Bureau of the college.

Completion of the Memorial Center will result in a larger and more spacious home for the International Club.

ALPHA PHI OMEGA

"Let it grow!" "Verboten!" If you remember these signs last spring, you remember Alpha Phi Omega's crusade against walking on thawing lawns.

Membership in A-Phi-O is open to those who have experience in the Boy Scout movement and have an earnest desire to render service to others. A-Phi-O is recognized as a service organization and is always assigned major projects in the interest of the college and the students because we are equipped to shoulder the responsibility.

The APO banner on the wall of the bandshell is a reminder that we originated and sponsor the ever-popular Inter-fraternity Sing each spring term. Our members enjoy working on the committees for the annual homecoming dance for the alumni association, the WSSF drive and the student-faculty carousel. Many students come face to face with an A-Phi-O conducted service when they are finger-printed at registration. Minor projects include our guide service for campus conventions and aid to hospitalized students.

Men of A-Phi-O extend their experience in leadership beyond the campus boundaries. The youth and community are within their scope of service. The young people's program at Towar Gardens and a full Scout Troop program provide enjoyment for us. Valuable experience is gained in this contact with the community's youngsters, who have the advantage of organization in planning parties and play.

The wide range of activities of Alpha Phi Omega develops within us a confident sense of leadership and a well-revered fellowship through its program of service.

M S C HOTEL ASSOCIATION

All men and women enrolled in Michigan State's Hotel Administration are eligible for membership in the Association. With the primary aim of furnishing better understanding of the hotel business, the group provides opportunities to meet hotel personnel and increase their knowledge of the field.

Hotel Ad students work each summer in a resort, club, or hotel to gain practical experience. This summer work nets them three credits a year.

These summer jobs are secured through the employment committee. A survey of past positions held by students uncovered many new friendships and contacts.

The employment committee compiles a list of students, listing their qualifications, and sends it to the various hotel associations throughout the country. Local hotel men are then contacted and they, in turn, secure the students they wish for summer employment. Work involved covers the entire field of hotel business, including kitchen supervision and cooking, waiting on table, bell hopping, clerking at the front desk.

The department takes the senior class to the annual Mid-West Hotel Show in Chicago. Nearly fifty men attended this year.

During their stay in Chicago, they are guests of the various hotels and clubs. Students help with registration and behind the scenes work and thus get Prominent hotel people speak to the Association at Michigan State on different phases of hotel work and lead informal discussion groups. Topics include hotel fire prevention, accounting problems, food service, insurance protection, and sales promotion. These talks enable students to get first hand information from people with many years of on-the-job experience.

At the beginning of each school year the Hotel Association sponsors the "Get Acquainted" meeting for all hotel students. Its purposes are to personally meet the new students and to acquaint them with the aims and functions of the hotel department and various interest groups on campus.

The Association also sponsors such social functions as luncheons and dances for its members. It works in close cooperation with Sigma Gamma Upsilon, the hotel honorary on campus.

JR. AMERICAN VETERINARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

The principal under-grad organization in the school of vet medicine is the student chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association. This large national order of veterinaries comprises several chapters and maintains its headquarters in Chicago. The Spartan chapter is now in its twenty-second year and its chief aim of promoting a friendly spirit between the vet majors is as much in evidence today as it was in the beginning.

Membership in A.V.M.A. is open to all undergraduate students enrolled in the school of veterinary medicine. At the bi-monthly meetings, outstanding leaders in veterinary science and related fields are invited to be guest speakers.

The meetings are not only an academic aid, but also serve to bring the vet students together under other than class room conditions, thus fulfilling the main goal of the organization. From the lectures contemporary knowledge of the vocation is obtained. The members learn of all the advances made in research almost as soon as the scientists discover them. Interest is also given to the discussion of material pertaining to the best business methods, a subject of particular interest to young doctors planning to open their own hospitals.

A.V.M.A. members also busy themselves with social events such as their annual winter term dance, "The Medicine Ball." This dance, now almost traditional at State, is co-sponsored with the med-techs.

VETERINARY ASSOCIATION

As usual, June was the time for the vet's picnic. Old friendships were renewed and another school year rehashed.

Other activities included the publication of the MSC Veterinarian. Rated one of the best in its field, the Veterinarian is a quarterly journal of the chapter and is now in its eighth year. This publication presents the newest developments in the field and serves as the alumni record.

Each May at the annual publications banquet announcement is made of the new editorial and business staffs of the Veterinarian. Awards are presented to those who have guided the journal through the past year.

AG COUNCIL

Aim and goal of the Ag Council of Michigan State College is to work for the general interest and welfare of the School of Agriculture. We organize the agricultural student body by coordinating the clubs within the division. A stronger student-faculty relationship is promoted and we sponsor at least one all-ag activity for our students each term.

The important social event of fall term was the Harvest Ball, an all-college semi-formal with a Queen and her court elected by the Ag students.

Many outstanding students in agriculture were honored during winter term at the Ag Achievement Banquet in People's Church. Identification and judging contests and a hog-calling session were among various events sponsored by the Ag clubs on Ag Field Day in the vicinity of the livestock pavillion. Awards were presented in the evening at the Ag Drag, a good old country-style square dance with all the accompanying atmosphere. Sponsored jointly by the Ag Council and Senior Home Economics Board, is one of the new members this year as well as the Housing and Lumber Merchandising Club and a representative from the Short Courses. Four faculty advisors are always present to help us steer a steady course and represent the faculty in student activities.

During the fall term of the year, the first all-ag convocation was presented in Fairchild Theater with President Hannah.

MSC'S 4-H CLUB

By 1949, the MSC 4-H Club had found the solution to "How You Gonna Keep 'Em Down on the Farm." Founded in 1934 as an organization open to all former 4-H club members or interested individual students, it had grown to a place of social importance not only in the division of agriculture but throughout the entire gamut of campus life.

BLOCK AND BRIDLE

Founded in 1930, Block and Bridle is a branch of the National Block and Bridle.

The club is open to students who have Animal Husbandry as one of their major interests. This organization assumes an important role in campus activities and serves as the spokesman for those students majoring in animal husbandry and livestock breeding.

The meeting, held the first and third Tuesday of the month, feature special speakers from the livestock and packing industries. Other entertainment after business meetings include moving pictures and slides.

Two of the most important activities of the club are the Little International and Farmers' Frolic. These events are sponsored jointly with the Dairy Club. The Little International is a fitting and showmanship contest in which both college dairy cattle and livestock are shown by college students. The evening entertainment, the Farmers' Frolic, not only attracts college students but many other Michigan residents as well.

In the spring term an annual junior and senior judging contest is opened to all students. Following the junior contest, a steak roast is held in a neighboring park. A week later, after the senior contest, a banquet is held honoring the winners in both the junior and senior teams.

Michigan State's meat judging team won second place this year at the American Royal in Kansas City. Bill MacLean was high point man of the contest in which teams representing fourteen agricultural schools competed.

The four man team, including MacLean, Clarence Prime, Jack Tornza, and George Wilson, travelled to Chicago and brought home a fifth place award from the eighteen team competition there.

DAIRY CLUB

To give dairy students an opportunity to meet alumni, to learn the practical side of dairying, to gain organizational experience, to work in a closer relationship with the faculty . . . are the aims of the dairy club.

The year's program as set up by the students themselves exemplifies much cooperation and imagination as well as hard work. Speakers obtained for the regular meetings provide a cross-section of the dairy industry covering many phases of the field.

Successful is the word to describe our events of the past year. A smoker was substituted for the annual bean feed because of the anticipated crowd. Our homecoming breakfast provides a get-together sparked with interesting talk by dairy alums.

During fall term four judging teams were sent out, two each for cattle and products. A production team went to the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield, Massachusetts and to the National Dairy Show at Waterloo, Iowa.

Actual participation in club events enables our members to learn the practical side of dairying and to become acquainted with the faculty and alumni. Trips are arranged to study occupational conditions. Speakers from a cross-section of the dairy industry illustrate its many phases and opportunities.

During the year, we cooperate with the Block and Bridle Club to present the Little International and Farmer's Frolic at the judging pavillion. Renewing the rivalry between production and manufacturing majors, a picnic and soft-ball game complete our activities.

SKI CLUB

Winter and the first snow means only one thing to members of the Michigan State Ski Club. The skiing season has officially opened. It's time to get out skiing equipment and head for the northland.

Each weekend the members of the club gather at some designated ski resort such as Caberafae at Cadillac or Waters to improve their skiing skill. Usually members drive up in groups but sometimes they charter a bus for special occasions. Ski racks are provided for members.

When they're not trying new ski runs in Northern Michigan ski enthusiasts gather around fireplaces to exchange shop talk on broken legs and difficult turns.

The Ski Club was organized three years ago. It joined the National Ski Association and the Central U. S. Ski Association in 1948. As members of these two groups, the club receives many invitations to enter mid-western and national ski meets. The club entered a candidate this year for snow queen of Michigan.

Army training films on skiing techniques, talks, and social activities are scheduled for the weekly meetings. An annual affair of the group is the informal dance, "the Snowball." Prizes included several ski trips and pieces of swank equipment.

The Ski Club welcomes beginners as well as experienced skiers. Old timers give instructions every weekend. A yearly inter-club meet is scheduled each winter to promote interest and competition.

Participation in collegiate ski meets by the college itself is one of the club's long range goals.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS

The AIEE, established on campus in 1918 under the leadership of Prof. M. M. Cory, is directly affiliated with the national organization for professional electrical engineers. The society holds its meetings jointly with the Institute of Radio Engineers.

Purpose of the branch at MSC is to promote a closer contact between its members and the students of electrical engineering, and also provide more mutual relations between students, faculty and professional engineers. National membership in the society entitles the student to a full year's subscription to the Electrical Engineering magazine, a technical digest of the recent inventions in the field today.

The society invites several prominent engineers to address the students each year on both technical and non-technical topics. Noteworthy among this year's speakers was Mr. Adolph Rauth, in charge of the testing laboratories of Consumers Power Company, who spoke on: "AIEE: What can it do for you?"

Highlights of the year include the fall banquet, the winter engineers ball and the annual spring picnic, where the rivalry between the juniors, seniors and the faculty is encouraged. A large student delegation represented MSC at the annual district convention of the AIEE.

Dr. J. A. Strelzoff has turned the duties of faculty advisor over to Mr. Charles E. Goodell, instructor of electronics. During the past year, membership has surged from 75 to almost 200 active members.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF CHEMICAL ENGINEERS

The State chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers opens its doors to all Chem Engineering majors and department faculty members. The local organization was started in June of 1938 for the purpose of acquainting the students with the ethics of the profession, to introduce them to the parent organization and to ready them for membership in that group after graduation. The chapter also seeks to impart a thorough understanding of general engineering principles to its members, with particular stress being placed on the chemical end of it.

A.I.C.E. has been active at State since its inception except for the years between 1943 and 1946 when, like so many other campus groups, a lack of personnel made maintaining the organization impractical. Now, however, due in part to extensive membership drives, the membership is rising fast.

Meetings, which are both informative and entertaining, are held on the first Wednesday of every month. On these occasions, men from industry are invited to speak. They bring to light the present-day opportunities there are in chemical engineering and tell the members what they may expect and what will be expected of them after graduation.

Activities of last year included a spring banquet at which a large turnout enjoyed the dinner and an interesting after-dinner speech. The success of this affair led the chapter to decide in favor of making the banquet an annual event.

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF AG. ENGINEERS

The student branch of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers is an organization in which all undergraduate students, both in the technical and non-technical curricula of Agricultural Engineering, are eligible for membership.

The club helps to create a better understanding between faculty and students. Through speeches and movies presented by faculty members and representatives of industry, the student learns what types of work are being done in the various fields of agricultural engineering.

He is also acquainted with the opportunities which exist for him, as an agricultural engineer, should he choose one of those fields.

The organization started in 1937 as the Ag Engineers' club. In 1938 it was accepted as a student branch of the A.S.A.E.

This year the national convention of all student branches of the A.S.A.E. was held in the new agricultural engineering building with our club acting as host. The group published the Student Journal, annual publication of the student branch.

These two activities, while significant, were only a small part of the program which made this a big year. Mention can be made of the annual banquet, an occasion which seems to get bigger and better every year, and Farmers' Week, when the members of the club serve as guides, giving directions and explaining new types of farm machinery. Finally, add to all this dances, parties and other social functions which have helped the club become one of the top student branches in the nation.

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CIVIL ENGINEERS

The American Society of Civil Engineers founded its student chapter at State in 1921. The aims of the student organization are the same as those of the parent society. It affords the beginning of professional association, disseminates engineering knowledge and promotes fellowship among civil engineers.

To promote technical knowledge the ASCE has secured men prominent in the profession to address its members. The chapter is grateful to its senior contact man, Harry Conrad, president of the Christman Company. He has been instrumental in bringing the deans of Michigan contractors here.

Membership in the student chapter is open to civil engineers who have completed three terms. Freshmen interested in Civil Engineering are invited to attend its meetings. The society's organization room is open to all interested students where they can make use of the magazines and pamphlets kept there.

This year activities of the society have been varied. One of the meetings was given to explaining engineering to the members' wives. Now we realize some of the problems the engineering faculty faces. Later, a beverage party was held at one of the local emporiums.

Spring term saw the annual joint dinner with the Michigan section of our senior society. The most important activity of all was that of our job committee. Their work in placing men on summer engineering projects will stand out as a major contribution of the class of '49.

AG EDUCATION CLUB

The Agriculture Education Club was founded in 1930 to foster a professional attitude among students preparing to teach vocational agriculture.

In 1949, that was only part of the story. Social meetings were held throughout the year and there were joint parties with the home economics club.

AMERICAN LEGION

Red Cedar Post 402 of the American Legion was established at State in 1942. Since its beginning here, the post has aided in the solution to many problems of interest not only to veterans, but to the campus as well. Among the major projects undertaken were the cooperative grocery store for trailer village and vicinity and the nursery for children of MSC students.

PSYCH SOCIETY

Since its inception in 1946, the Psychological society has been sponsoring its own lecture series. The group also conducts special panel discussions to investigate further the problems in which they are most interested.

THE MARINE CORPS CLUB

In 1949 the "late unpleasantness" was history by four years and the Marine Corps club had been swapping stories about it since 1946. Among the members were men who fought at Guadalcanal, Tarawa, Iwo-Jima and similar campaigns, and who hadn't yet found much use for an infantryman.

The club accepted for membership any student at MSC, whether male or female, who had been attached to the corps, whether directly or indirectly.

Activities during the year included term parties, athletics, and participation of it's members in as many campus organizations as possible. The Michigan State Marines went further to contribute to campus life by producing a float for the landfloat parade and by organizing a rifle team.

The purpose of the club was to promote mutual friendships among its members and fellow students, to engage in social activities during the school year, and to aid in upholding the traditions of the United States Marine Corps and MSC.

All things considered, the average student was glad to see some outlet for those among them who shared a similar experience during more trying years than 1949. The USMC, they were happy to note, had given more to its personnel than war stories and the GI Bill. It had given them the much talked of, but seldom accomplished "l'esprit de corps." It was strong enough to draw them together at State and to add stature to its name by giving part of that pride to the campus.

While many of the Marine Corps club's members were learning and sweating over Aristotle and the Reformation, raising families and living in Trailerville, most of them, in 1949, were enlisted in the reserves.

CHRISTIAN STUDENT FOUNDATION

Membership in the Christian Student Foundation is open to all those who feel at home in a liberal, interdenominational fellowship.

The C.S.F. belongs to the Interfaith Council on campus and is affiliated with the World Student Christian Federation.

The organization provides opportunities for expression and interpretation of religion.

Y. M. C. A.

The YMCA of Michigan State College is a fellowship of students and faculty men united by a common loyalty to Jesus Christ for the purpose of developing Christian personality and building a Christian society.

Members of the association are seeking to give expression to the Christian religion which is intellectually mature, emotionally satisfying and socially adequate for the day in which we live and the future we face.

The Spartan Y, during the past year, has conducted a varied program. Retreats and mixed parties have provided wholesome life for all students. The Y has organized trips with both sightseeing and educational value. Along with the work of its special interest committees and groups, the association has sponsored several college projects including the freshman camp, Spartan Forum, married students recreational program, and its Saturday afternoon basketball league. Members were instrumental in the success of the WSSF drive.

Y.W.C.A.

College House, home of the Young Women's Christian Association here at Michigan State, is a center of friendliness for women students. It gives every coed an opportunity to develop valuable skills in leadership training and to make firm and lasting friendships.

Development of the individual for more creative living is the aim of Y.W.C.A. This growth is fostered within the person herself as well as within her college and community. To aid in this personal growth, Mrs. Gonon talked on "Modes and Manners." Dr. Landis of the effective living department gave two lectures on courtship and marriage.

The Y.W. annual program includes a number of social activities such as a Halloween party and an "Utter Nonsense" party held at the forestry cabin. Both were joint Y.W. and Y.M. affairs. Every year the two groups sponsor a freshman camp to acquaint the first year students with the college and to meet some of the college leaders. A Christmas party, Thanksgiving convocation, retreats, a tea for associate members held at President Hannah's home, social service projects in the community and work with the international students conclude the long list of social activities of the organization.

The "Y" welcomes all girls of the college. It is interdenominational, interracial, and intercultural. An affiliate of the national organization, the Y.W. was founded in 1894 at Michigan State.

NEWMAN CLUB

The Newman Club is the gathering place for Catholic students at Michigan State College. Its purpose is to foster the spiritual, social and academic life of the student with chaplain and faculty direction.

Chaplains are available for individual and group spiritual guidance. The Newman Club at Michigan State College has three chaplains: Father Jerome V. MacEachin, pastor; Father Michael Mleko and Father George Zabelka.

The Newman Club aims to create a friendly atmosphere for social diversion under Catholic student sponsorship. Term dances, mixers, hikes, hayrides, picnics and communion breakfasts provide opportunity for Catholic students and their friends to meet socially. The Newman Club weekly bulletin presents the schedule.

Open forums, panel discussions, inquiry classes and bi-weekly Catholic information hours are regular Newman Club program features. Catholic library facilities are available at Newman Hall. The Sunday night meeting of the Philosophy Club is open to all students interested in strengthening their intellectual foundation for happy Christian living.

The formation and development of a capable student leadership that will make its Christian influence felt beyond the limited Catholic group to the whole campus community is a vital objective of the Newman Club program.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE ORGANIZATION

A purely religious group, the Christian Science Organization is open to all Michigan State students. It belongs to an international family of similar college groups located throughout the United States, Canada, and England.

Meetings are held every Tuesday evening in the chapel at People's Church. They are under the direction of faculty advisors Miss Mary Gephart and Mr. William Gilbert.

Each term the group appoints a student to conduct the weekly meetings. His duties include leading the group in prayer and reading passages from the Bible and Science and Health, With Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy. Following the readings, members speak briefly on their experiences in Christian Science.

Lecturers touring the United States come to State's campus twice a year to speak to the group and interested townspeople on Christian Science. They are members of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church in Boston. The lectures are open to everyone interested in learning about the aims and ideas of Christian Science.

Goals of the organization include unification of Christian Scientists at Michigan State and correction of erroneous impressions of the religion.

Once a year the group publishes a Letter of Progress which it circulates to colleges and universities of the nation. These letters give information and tell of the varied activities of Michigan State's Christian Science Organization. Members also distribute the Christian Science Monitor newspaper to the dormitories and other student living groups.

SPARTAN CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

In the perplexed world of today, the members of Spartan Christian Fellowship seek through Bible study, prayer, and fellowship, a more complete understanding of the plan and purpose of God for us as individuals and members of society.

Spartan Christian Fellowship is the local chapter of Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship which had its beginning in the British Isles during the last century. Following World War I, Inter-Varsity was organized on a national scale with chapters in nearly every university in the British Isles. Similar organizations were introduced in Canada, the United States and other parts of the world.

S.C.F. provides a means of helping students mature spiritually. There is a rare warmth of mutual concern present when our members welcome all inter-denominational, Evangelical and Christian students at Bethel Manor, our activity center.

Social events of recreation and entertainment are a large part of the S.C.F. program. Holding first place on our social list was the semi-formal spring banquet for the installation of new officers for the coming year and honoring the graduating seniors of S.C.F.

Leading the school year's activities are the fall and spring week-end conferences where problems of Christian life are presented and discussed. Lecturers and students consider vital and timely subjects pertinent to the thinking of the evangelical Christian student at the weekly Inspirational Hours. The Sunday Bible study and the daily prayer meeting along with small residential study groups unite in accomplishing Spartan Christian Fellowship purpose of "Knowing Christ and Making Him Known."

INDIA STUDENTS ASSOCIATION

The students from India form the second largest national group of foreign students on the campus, boasting thirty-six names on the membership role. In any social gathering or in the several national parties that they hold each year, you can tell them by their colorful national dress, particularly the girls in their saris. Last year they celebrated their country's independence with appropriate ceremony in a background of traditional music, folk dances, and Indian movies.

Whenever they present India Night, or twirl a few dances as a group as in the International Festival Spring term, or hold the annual farewell party for graduating members, they distinguish themselves by the success with which they transfer the cultural background of an ancient country to a young America. During spring term they had a student-faculty get-together to thank the faculty members who helped them through the year. President Hannah attended. They sang original songs of praise to MSC and mystified the teaching staff with phenomenal demonstrations of the art of legerdemain. On the night of Diwali, the Indian equivalent of Halloween, they threw a party in the best macabre fashion.

With several religious backgrounds, Hindus, Moslems, Sikhs, Christians, and Zoroastrians, under the leadership of their president, Sundarum Krishnamurthi, they are a well unified group action in true Gandhian spirit, and in the words of the State News, "are doing so much to further world understanding."

All Things Considered . . .

The Spartans March for Preparedness

The command, "Sound off," caused more voices to chant "1, 2, 3, 4, . . . , in front of Demonstration Hall this year than in any other year of Michigan State's history. The growth of the military program at MSC has progressed rapidly since 1862, when a few Plow Boy Guards elected to take military science classes. Today all non-veteran freshman and sophomore men automatically enroll in Basic ROTC. This amounts to almost 2000 basic military students. Coupled with about 500 advanced cadets, the number of military students at State in 1948-49 is the largest in its history.

Besides growing in enrollment, the State ROTC has broadened out in the courses instructed. The curriculum now includes classes in the air force, infantry, field artillery, anti-aircraft artillery, signal corps, ordnance, quartermaster corps, armored cavalry, and military police.

The United States is continuing to expand its peacetime military program. As students of Michigan State College, we can be proud of the prominent role the State ROTC unit has been assigned in the preparedness plan.

COLONEL AND OFFICERS

"For many years Michigan State College has seen ROTC uniforms on its campus. Two world wars have seen many of these same students as skillful and faithful leaders of men.

"Michigan State ROTC graduates have served their country well and will continue to do so in the future. Here at State the Military Program has grown in size to become the third largest ROTC unit in the country. Some of our ROTC graduates will be awarded Regular Army commissions while others will be tendered Reserve commissions in the Army and Air Force. All military students will be better able to serve their country if the need should arise. All will be better citizens for their ROTC training."

Charles E. Dissinger.

Colonel, Calvary.

The new commanding officer in charge of MSC's military department is Colonel Charles E. Dissinger, holder of the Distinguished Service Medal. Under his command are more than 2500 military students, the largest ROTC enrollment in State's history. Future "shavetails" are whipped into shape by the cream of the Army and Air Force's regular officers and men.

R. O. T. C. ACTIVITIES

State's military program stretches 'round the year, functioning both on and off the campus.

On campus, the highlight of the military year comes during the spring. In spring term once each week, all military students in full uniform pass in review before Col. Dissinger, a special guest, and the Honorary Corps Sponsors.

Off campus, the annual trek to far away summer camps for a taste of actual military life gives the advanced military student much to think about for the rest of the school year.

The Spartan Guard has in recent years spread fame to Michigan State's ROTC program. They annually participate in the Holland Tulip Festival parade and program. Last year they received a special plaque award for their marching excellence.

INFANTRY

The "Queen of Battle" has always held an important spot in the military program at Michigan State. Now in accordance with the national preparedness program, the infantry unit at State is efficiently training officers to fill the important position the infantry will hold in the rapidly expanding peacetime army.

Students enrolled in the Advanced Infantry course know and accept the duties and responsibilities of junior infantry officers in time of peace and war. The graduating seniors from Michigan State who receive commissions as Reserve Infantry Second Lieutenants are qualified to perform all duties expected of them. They have been taught the information necessary to all infantry officers. All in all, a reserve infantry officer from Michigan State is a mighty handy man.

ARMORED CAVALRY

It has been several years since "Gallop Ho" has reverberated through Dem Hall. Modern warfare has caught up with the army horse and turned him out to pasture. Now, the roar of engines is heard instead of the clopping hoofs, and the smell of exhaust has replaced the traditional cavalry odors.

The 1948-49 armored cavalry unit had forty-one advanced students. They had the latest and most up to date training in gunnery, tank driving, signal communications, motors, and troop movement techniques. To supplement this, trips were arranged for the advanced students to see the Detroit Tank Arsenal, where tanks were seen from the drafting board to the first motor back-fire.

At summer camp, the advanced cavalry students put their classroom theory and knowledge to the acid test.

ARTILLERY

The branch of Artillery has been discontinued by the army and is now replaced by the basic branches of Field Artillery and Anti-aircraft Artillery. The Field Artillery advanced students learn the use of the howitzer and similar weapons. The advanced Anti-aircraft students are instructed in AA guns and equipment. Both MSC units use the most modern weapons available.

AIR CORPS

The Air Force in its third year at Michigan State College is again the largest unit in the State ROTC. With 544 basic students and 166 advanced cadet officers, the Air ROTC detachment is "flying high."

Instruction is given in Air Navigation and Meteorology, as well as USAF Organization, training, and supply. Second year advanced students specialize in either Air Force Administration and Personnel Management or Aircraft Maintenance Engineering. Huge aircraft engines, including cutaways of a B-29 engine and a jet engine were added to the equipment for use this year.

Field trips to Selfridge AF Base and actual flying experience at summer camp add realism to the new course. Four years of ROTC training leads to a Reserve commission in the Air Force.

SIGNAL CORPS

Advanced ROTC Signal Corps enrollment at MSC this year consisted of 25 second year men and 11 first year students. All are electronics or physics majors or have had Active Federal Communications.

Signal Corps students are taught in a two fold system. They are given the principles underlying the communication equipment and then practical experience in operating a variety of Signal equipment maintained at Dem Hall. As a sideline to gaining practical experience, Signal Corps students operate equipment such as the public address system and radios at field events.

Each student who enters the advanced ROTC Signal Corps at State knows that his purpose in the United States military team will be to live up to the Signal Corps motto, "Get the Message Through."

QUARTERMASTER

Following World War II the Quartermaster Unit was one of the first in MSC's post-war program to be reactivated. Future Quartermaster officers from Michigan State are well grounded in the fundamentals of their branch. They are instructed in the principles of property accountability and responsibility. Above all, they learn to look at supply problems from a human point of view.

First year advanced students are instructed in supply procedures of the smaller army units. Second year advanced students learn the intricate methods of large scale supply by studying procurement and supply procedures of General Distribution Depots. An army may travel on its stomach, but those who choose to walk will find Michigan State's Quartermasters well prepared to hand out shoes.

MILITARY POLICE

In its third year at MSC the Military Police Unit is the largest of all the State ROTC ground force units and the largest ROTC Military Police Unit in any university in the country. This unit contains 88 students. To make the advanced MP students competent reserve officers, a variety of specialized subjects is taught. These include traffic control, military government, military law, general and special investigation, and train and town patrol.

Military Police summer camp was attended by 43 MSC students at Ft. Sheridan, Illinois. Besides practical demonstrations held at camp, several field trips were held. These trips included visits to the Milwaukee Disciplinary Barracks, the Chicago Police Department, and Ft. Custer. While at camp the MSC rifle team won the rifle marksmanship trophy.

ORDNANCE

Ordnance ROTC students at State are trained in the research, development, and design of military and naval equipment. This equipment includes tanks, rifles, machine guns, artillery, binoculars, and range finders. One of the highlights of the ordnance course is a tour through the Ordnance Tank Arsenal in Detroit.

At the six weeks summer camp at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland, ordnance students gain valuable practical experience while working on research, development, and proof testing projects. They also make observation trips to eastern arsenals during summer camp.

During summer camp the opportunities for ordnance students to learn were not restricted to the Aberdeen Proving Ground. All week-ends were free time and were fully used for study above and beyond the range of the military text.

SCABBARD AND BLADE

Scabbard and Blade is a national society organized in 1904. The chapter at Michigan State College was formed in 1914. Scabbard and Blade members are pledged to serve their country by spreading intelligent information about the military requirements of the nation and to be ready to take an active part in military affairs. In line with its purposes, Scabbard and Blade has worked since its founding to unite all the military departments of American colleges.

Cadets are chosen for Scabbard and Blade membership for both a high scholastic standing and an active interest in the military. This common interest has served to make Scabbard and Blade a unified group with friendship and cooperation characterizing both the social and serious activities of the fraternity.

SPARTAN GUARD

The Spartan Guard is a basic military honorary. It is composed of members of all ROTC units who are interested in the military and who have outstanding military scholarship. Spartan Guard members are distinguished by their white leggings and gloves, green shoulder cords, and special lapel pins.

The Guard has been active both on and off the campus during the entire school year. During fall term it acted as guard of honor at the Coronation Ball, rendering honors to the Corps Sponsors of all the ROTC units. Winter term it presented a close order drill exhibition for Farmers Week. For spring term parades it marched as a separate parade unit. Its marching excellence in the May Holland Tulip Festival was recognized by its being presented a special award of merit.

RIFLE TEAM

The Michigan State College Rifle Team is made up of two teams. One is the Varsity Rifle Team, open to all male students enrolled at State for undergraduate work. The other team is the ROTC Rifle squad which is restricted to members of the Cadet Corps. Matches are throughout the winter term with teams from schools from all over the U. S.

The ROTC selects a team of five members to compete in the William Randolph Hearst match held annually between December 1st and February 10th. The teams which win first or second place in the William Randolph Hearst match in each Army Area are then selected to enter the national intercollegiate matches. The Rifle team and individual members also compete for the Hearst awards given by the National Rifle Association.

PISTOL TEAM

Michigan State College's pistol team has completed another successful season. In their third year since being reactivated following the end of World War II, the pistol team competed in telegraphic meets with colleges throughout the entire United States.

Their outstanding schedule of teams included the University of Massachusetts, the Coast Guard Academy, Cornell, Texas A&M, M. I. T., University of Wisconsin, Massachusetts State College, Marine Corps at Quantico, Penn State, West Point, Princeton, University of Illinois, and Annapolis.

Last year's team had the outstanding record of winning 15 out of 17 matches. All of the teams' practice sessions are held in the well equipped basement rifle and pistol range in Demonstration Hall.

R.O.T.C. CORPS

As the honorary colonels stepped beneath the arched sabers at the 1948 Coronation Ball, the forty-fourth election of State ROTC Corps Sponsors became official.

The 1948-49 staff of sponsors is the largest one in the history of Michigan State College. The sponsors are headed by Jean Profit, Honorary Colonel. Serving with her are ten Honorary Lieutenant Colonels, each co-ed representing one of the nine branches of service at MSC and one the Spartan Guard.

Profit Honorary Colonel; Charmaine Chinnow, Air Force; Norma Fischer, Antiaircraft Artillery; Shirley Minter, Field Artillery; and Jacqueline Gelzer, Cavalry.

SPONSORS

These Honorary Colonels reign over a cadet regiment 2800 strong, the third largest ROTC unit in the nation. This stands in sharp contrast to the single 1904 corps sponsor representing but 100 men.

The most important function of the Honorary Colonels comes spring term at the weekly parades. There, decked in their snappy capes and caps, they select the best marching company.

BIG WERE THE ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF THE SPARTANS IN OUR YEAR

Five men on the Olympic team . . . crashed the "Big Ten" . . . successful sports year . . .

The Spartans are out to beat the best of 'em . . . we're big time now . . . we've reached the dividing line of two eras in Michigan State's athletic history . . . So watch out "Big Ten."

Past are the days of MSC's reign as one of the mid-west's independent powers . . . in the future are new laurels as victors in the most powerful athletic group in the nation . . . the Western Conference.

Who will forget that memorable Sunday in December, 1948, when the students, faculty and alumni waited tensely for some news . . . news from the Chicago meeting of the "Big Nine" where State's application for membership was under consideration . . . and that tumultuous demonstration of the students when the news . . . "We're in" . . . was flashed from the "Windy City"?

It was the climax to years of hopes . . . the reward for hard work and disappointments. It's a bigger job that lies ahead of us . . . a reputation to maintain . . . new glories to win . . . a few more disappointments to overcome.

With top-rated teams . . . athletes of Olympic team caliber . . . good sportsmanship . . . the best coaches . . . how can the Green and White fail to make its presence known as a power in athletics?

Big were the accomplishments that made Michigan State a member of the Western Conference . . . greater still will be its history in the future.

COACHES

Since coming to Michigan State in 1923, Ralph H. Young, director of athletics, has led the Spartan athletic program into the nation's foremost conference, the Big Ten.

Mr. Young was graduated from Washington and Jefferson university where he starred in football in 1915.

Under his supervision, Spartan teams have always been known for their sportsmanship and fair play even though the Green and White squads failed to have winning seasons in some years.

The Michigan State College coaching staff has been bolstered by two new mentors during the past year . . . Harris F. Beeman and Harold W. Paulsen.

Beeman, star netter and captain of the Spartan squad in the early '40s, was named to succeed the late Gordon Dahlgren as tennis coach. He also directs the intramural sports program.

Paulsen, University of Minnesota hockey star for three years, will coach hockey, MSC's newest sport. Intercollegiate competition in his sport will begin in 1950.

THE VARSITY CLUB

The Michigan State Varsity Club is composed of junior and senior men who have earned a major letter in athletic competition and have an all college scholastic average of at least 1.0 or better.

In the years which preceded the war, the Varsity Club was the most powerful club on campus, and it was mainly the Varsity Club that enforced the campus rules and traditions. It was a familiar sight to see a violator dunked in the Red Cedar with a warning of more drastic action if he continued his antics.

The club has initiation of members during both fall and spring term. A banquet highlights the initiation of new members. Last spring the club held a chicken barbeque at which time 85 chickens, 60 pounds of potato salad, 15 gallons of milk, coffee, 200 ice cream cups and an assortment of pickles, rolls etc. were consumed by the huskies and their dates. The picnic promises to become an annual affair.

The Varsity Club also sponsors the annual "Varsity Ball." This is an all-college dance and traditionally takes place during spring term. Last spring the club engaged Stan Kenton to provide music for the evening.

ATHLETIC TRAINERS

There's a crew of men in the athletic department who receive little praise and credit for the tremendous job they do. They're the trainers and the equipment men.

Heading the trainers is Jack Heppinstall, whose job it is to keep the kinks out of muscles and give general aid to the beleaguered athletes. Heppinstall, who was a trainer for the 1948 Olympic team, is ably assisted by Gayle Robinson and Frank Lindsley. Jack has been at Michigan State for 34 years as head trainer.

Top man in the equipment room is Edwin M. Kapp and Dick Conn is his assistant. It is a big job that confronts these two men in keeping the uniforms and all equipment in first class shape.

FOOTBALL

Michigan State's hard-hitting, smoothly-precisioned 1948 football machine was without a doubt the finest grid unit in Spartan history. Under the guidance of Coach Clarence "Biggie" Munn, the State gridders fought their way into national prominence. The team won six, tied two, and lost only to Michigan and Notre Dame, the two mightiest powers in the nation.

The Green and White opened against the University of Michigan in the dedication game for beautiful Macklin Field stadium. The Spartans thrilled a capacity audience of 51,000 fans by battling the powerful Wolverines for the full 60 minutes. State came from behind to tie the Rose Bowl champions at 7–7 in the third quarter, but in the waning minutes of the game the Wolves capitalized on a defensive holding penalty to push over the winning marker. The final count was 13–7.

On the following Saturday, MSC rolled over a hapless University of Hawaii team in a wild, free-scoring contest. Coach Munn used every available player as his team unleashed a 10 touchdown barrage to win 68–21. Hawaii accounted for all three scores via the passing route. Setting a new collegiate record, the Islanders threw 52 aerials and completed 28 in a futile effort to catch the high-powered Spartans.

Michigan State journeyed to South Bend, Ind., the following week to meet the undefeated Fighting Irish of Notre Dame. Sophomore back LeRoy Crane electrified the crowd early in the opening period with a short plunge into pay dirt to give State an early lead. However, the Irish bounced back to score twice before the intermission.

Four more times State moved into the shadows of the Notre Dame goal line, but four times the big enemy line held. Meanwhile, led by big Emil Sitko, the South Bend lads hammered the State forward wall for two more tallies and the game ended with Notre Dame on the long end of a 26–7 count.

A week later State smothered Arizona, 61–7. It was a sad day for the Wildcat coach, Mike Casteel, former Spartan backfield tutor. Every Spartan player in uniform saw action. The lone Arizona score came late in the game.

Undefeated Penn State was the next foe. Playing away from home, Michigan State drew first blood when "Little Dynamite" George Guerre scampered into the end zone on an end sweep and George Smith converted for a 7–0 lead. A combined running and passing attack led by Elwood Petchel and Fran Rogell evened the count for the Nittany Lions. With only five seconds remaining in the first half, Guerre intercepted a Petchell pass and ran 100 yards for a score, only to have it nullified by a clipping penalty.

State again took the lead early in the third canto when Gene Glick passed to end Ed Sobczak and Sobczak scored standing up. Penn State roared back when Petchell passed to Sam Tamburo who lateralled to Simon, a guard who ran the remaining distance to score. The conversion was good and the final count was 14–14.

Oregon State next felt the wrath of the MSC touchdown machine. The Beavers managed to hold State to a 21–14 edge at halftime, but after the intermission a passing and running combination paid off for the Spartans, who turned the contest into a 46–41 rout.

Back in Macklin field the next week, the onslaught was turned on Marquette who collapsed completely for an easy 47–0 State win. Again every man on the bench saw action as the Hilltoppers failed to come within scoring distance.

A Gene Glick engineered passing attack overwhelmed Iowa State at Ames, Iowa, the next Saturday. The Spartan quarterback heaved four touchdown passes and halfback Lynn Chadnois supplied the running as the Cyclones fell, 48–7.

The following week, Washington State journeyed to East Lansing but went back to Pullman with a stinging 40–0 setback. Lynn Chadnois led the scoring drive against the Cougars with three tallies.

An inspired Santa Clara eleven dampened the Spartan hopes for a bowl bid the following week. The State squad flew to San Francisco and fought the Broncos to a 21–21 standoff. Trailing 21–14 in the closing minutes of the game, Gene Glick passed to Sobczak who ran unmolested for the score. George Smith added the all-important conversion to clinch the tie. Hopes for a Spartan victory in the closing moments faded when Smith's attempted field goal was wide of the uprights.

SPRING TRAINING

It was a call by Coach Clarence "Biggie" Munn to 200 grid candidates that started the 1948 spring training for the Michigan State Spartans.

Most of the spring training dealt with the fundamentals of football and served as the proving ground for the all-powerful State gridders.

On hand to put the squads through their intensive training sessions were "Biggie's" three able assistants who were bolstered by numerous other coaches.

Forest Evashevski, who was a former Michigan grid star, tutored the backfield candidates and whipped them into first class ball handlers. Line Coach Hugh "Duffy" Daugherty and Leverne "Kip" Taylor, ends coach, put the men through the paces on the tackling and blocking dummies.

The Weatherman aided the cause of the Spartans by providing ideal October football weather for the spring scrimmages, however, the Red Cedar dampened the spirits of the gridders for a while when it overflowed its banks.

As the season of daily scrimmages progressed, only about 2 candidates dropped out because of the rough workouts they were given. The fact that so few were eliminated was indicative of the high caliber of material the coaches had to work with.

The climax of the spring training season came when the squad was divided into two teams, the Greens and the Whites.

The lettermen-studded Green team, coached by Evashevski and Robert Flora, tromped the White team 47-6, in the first game to be played in the new Macklin Field stadium. The underdogs, composed mainly of newcomers to the squad anchored by some varsity men, were coached by Taylor and Daugherty.

JAY VEE FOOTBALL

Michigan State's Junior Varsity football squad ended the 1948 season even with the board with a pair of wins, a pair of losses, and a tie.

The eleven began early drills under the guidance of John Kobs and Alton Kircher, who served as co-coaches for the first two weeks.

Head varsity coach, Biggie Munn, decided the varsity staff needed augmenting so he assigned Kobs and Kircher to the group, then Jack Brotzman and George Makris took over the reins in the Jayvee camp.

Their debut, one week later against the Ionia State reformatory eleven, was auspicious as the JV team romped to an easy 65–0 decision over the outclassed Ionia aggregation.

State's Junior Varsity squad dropped a heartbreaker the following week when the University of Michigan gridders took a close 21–19 victory.

Ohio State's Junior Varsity traveled to East Lansing the following Saturday and fell victim to a revitalized Spartan eleven as MSC won handily, 20–0.

Makris and Brotzman then took an injury-riddled squad to Ann Arbor where the teams clashed in a driving rain and a sea of mud. The Wolverine Junior Varsity gridders found the conditions to their liking as they triumphed easily, 27–8.

BASKETBALL

The 1948–49 basketball season marked the close of an era in Michigan State athletics. After 23 seasons at the helm of the Spartan cage squad, Coach Ben VanAlstyne resigned, effective at the end of the campaign. Assistant Coach Al Kircher will move up to the head coach's position next fall.

In his long tenure as basketball mentor, VanAlstyne's teams won 232 games and lost 163 for an all-time .587 average. Only five times during that stretch did the team fail to win at least half of its games.

During the 1948–49 season the Green and White cagers won only nine contests, while dropping 12. Hard hit by the loss of star center Bob Brannum who signed a professional contract, the team's attack failed to click until late in the season.

The single bright spot during the year was the high scoring feats of forward Bill Rapchak. Rapchak set a modern scoring record for one game with a 29 point effort against the University of Virginia to eclipse Sam Fortino's former record of 26, set against Syracuse in 1946.

The Whiting, Ind., star also netted a total of 211 counters for the year to create a new mark for three years with 528 points. Fortino's former standard stood at 454.

Both Hillsdale and Alma fell on the same night as the Spartans began the season with two games. Sophomore center Ray Steffen scored 22 points in his first college game against Hillsdale in a 53–43 victory. Forward John Granack paced another squad against the Scots with 20 points and Rapchak added 12 as Alma lost 46–33.

Michigan's defending Big Nine kings handed the Green and White its first defeat with a 66–33 drubbing. While the Spartans seemed unable to penetrate the Wolverines' defense, Michigan scored almost at will. Indiana came out on the long end of a 48–36 verdict in the next game.

Michigan State won two out of three games played during the Christmas vacation. Iowa was surprised 49–34 and tiny Mississippi college was routed, 74–28. Cornell university dumped State, 56–45.

Marquette handed State its fourth loss as the Hilltoppers ran up the highest opposition score of the season. The score was 68–48.

Rapchak gave a hint of things to come as he narrowly missed the one-game high with 25 points against the University of Detroit. The Titans lost, 66–49. When the Spartans nipped Western Reserve, 44–43, the local rooters gathered hopes for a prolonged winning streak. However, Detroit smashed the hopes with a surprise 35–34 win at Detroit.

Forward Bob Geahan flipped in the deciding goal as the Spartans topped Wayne, 37–35, in the longest game of the season, a double overtime. Rapchak meshed 19 points to pace the squad in a 63–38 conquest of the Tartars a few days later.

The Spartan five showed unexpected resistance to Michigan in the second meeting between the two schools, but the Wolverines made it two for the year with a 49–38 decision.

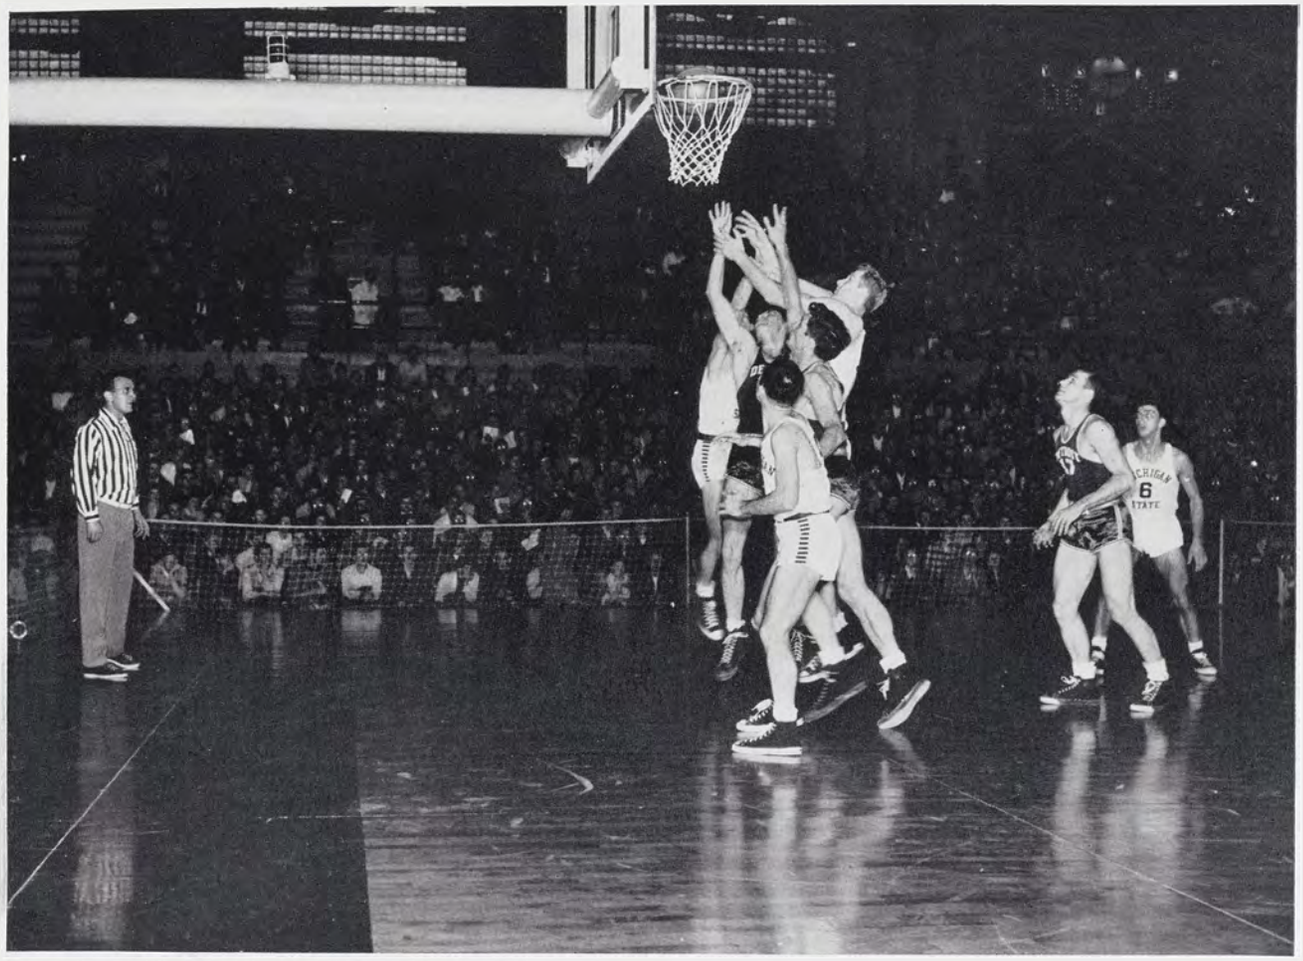
Geahan's 15 point effort went for naught as Notre Dame humbled the Spartans in the first of two road games, 63–47. Leo Barnhorst with 18, and Jim O'Halloran with 12 handed the game to the Irish. Marquette swamped the Green and White for the second time, 59–42. The losing streak reached four as Purdue came out on top, 66–48.

Led by Joe Noertker, then the nation's second highest scorer, Virginia was the next Jenison attraction. The Spartan defense limited the Cavalier star to five points while Rapchak poured 12 field goals through the hoop and added five charity tosses to set the scoring record. MSC won, 62–43.

The season ended with three losses. Minnesota won, 57–47, Notre Dame took its second for the year, 43–41, and Ohio State copped a 70–51 victory.

Led by big Jim McIntyre and Whitey Skoog, the Gophers worked just hard enough to take the Spartans. A second half rally stopped short of the mark in the Notre Dame contest. Geahan and Granack paced the late drive, but it was not enough to prevent the Irish from registering their second triumph of the year over the Spartans.

Dick Schnittker's 19 counters led the Buckeye squad to a smashing win in the finale. The Spartans trailed throughout and were never in the game.



A mad scramble for the ball is the result of a Spartan attempt for a field goal against the University of Detroit five.

WRESTLING

Varsity grapplers look on as Coach Fendley Collins applies pressure to one of his hapless proteges.

Paced by Olympic representative Bob Maldegen and NCAA champion Dick Dickenson, Michigan State's grapplers won six matches, lost one, and tied one during the 1949 season. The lone loss was to powerful Iowa State Teachers which ended a streak of 15 meets without defeat.

The Spartans won four and tied one against Big Nine opposition. The Green and White matmen trounced Purdue, conference champion, twice, 20–6, and 15–9. Ohio State was the victim of a 26–0 shut-out and Indiana lost, 24–5. Illinois held State to a 13–13 stalemate in the season's opener.

In other matches the Spartans blasted Kansas State 32–0 and upset mighty Cornell college 15–13.

Heavyweight Maldegen turned in an undefeated season in dual competition and Dickenson lost but one bout.

Five seniors brought their collegiate careers to an end. Besides Maldegen, Don Anderson, Pat Sullivan, John Dowell, and Jack Kreiner wrestled their final bouts in Green and White livery.

FENCING

With only three veterans, Bill Lacey, Gerry Payton, and George Custer, back from last year's squad, fencing Coach Charley Schmitter had to beat the bushes for some fencing talent. With a team composed mainly of newcomers, the fencers were off to a rough start.

The Spartans dropped their first three matches, to Ohio State, 16½–10½, to Notre Dame, 15–12, and the third went to Chicago, 15–12. Their first win of the season was at the expense of Wisconsin, who they defeated to the tune of 17–10.

University of Detroit provided the next triumph for Michigan State when they fell before the Spartans, 18–9. The Green and White foilsmen then took to the open road and split the two-meet trip, losing to Illinois, 19–8, and topping Northwestern, 17–10.

The Green and White lost their final meet of the season to Wayne with an 18–9 score which gave them a season's score of three wins against five defeats.

BOXING

Augmented by two national champions, Coach George Makris' boxing team emerged from under a tough schedule with comparative success.

Plagued by accidents and eligibility troubles, the Spartan team finally cemented an eight-man group which upset Penn State, 5–3, and gave Wisconsin their biggest scare in ten years by fighting them to a 4–4 tie. The Badgers had a record of 23 consecutive dual meet victories until they encountered Michigan State.

Chuck Davey, three-time National Collegiate champion, concluded his senior year in college by attempting to capture his fourth crown at the tournaments which were held in East Lansing this year.

Earnie Charboneau, 112-pound champion in 1948, competed in the 125-pound bracket this year because the flyweight division is used only in Olympic years.

One hundred and thirty-five pounder, Bert Davey, brother of Chuck, had his boxing career brought to an abrupt end when he was hit by an automobile, which resulted in two broken legs. Heavyweight Gabriel Marek was lost to the team for a two-month period due to a broken thumb received in practice early in the season.

GYMNASTICS

Although the Spartan acrobats came out of the season with only a single win and a tie, against five defeats, it was a greatly improved team that faced the nation's top teams in its second year of intercollegiate competition.

Coach George Szypula's charges initiated the season with a meet against Ohio State. Spartans led the Buckeyes, 43–37, going into the last event, but were tied in the trampoline event, 48–48.

The following week the mighty NAAU champions, Penn State, invaded East Lansing and the Nittany Lions handed the local team its first defeat, 61–51. An Olympic team member, Bill Bonsall, was in their lineup, but was out-pointed, 21–19, by Mel Stout, the Green and White star aerialist.

A week-end trip to Wisconsin and Minnesota brought the first win of the season and another loss. On Friday night, Feb. 11, State dumped the Badgers, 65½–29½, but dropped on the following afternoon to the Gophers, 58–38. Last year the Gophers were the Western Conference champs.

Starting off with a bang in the first event against the University of Illinois squad, and tied in the fifth, the Spartans were unable to garner enough points to put them on the winning side of the ledger and lost another one, 50–46.

With a certain amount of lust for another victory, State's gymnasts converged on Chicago and attempted to over-power the University of Illinois (Navy Pier), but were turned back 50½–45½.

Only remaining hope was the Michigan Wolverines, who were scouted and not considered a big threat. Contrary to all predictions, the Wolves came through in fine fashion and ended the season for Michigan State with a 54½–45½ drubbing.

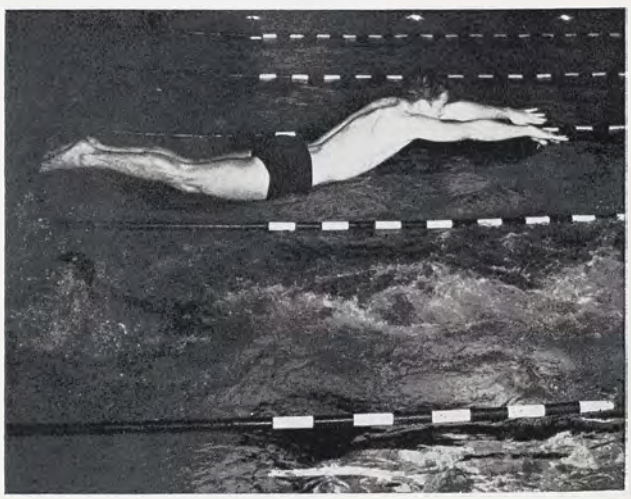
SWIMMING

Roaring through its dual meet season with eight wins and only one loss, to the University of Michigan, the Michigan State College swimming team, under the fine coaching of Charles McCaffree, continued to hold its spot as one of the finest squads in the country.

Led by George Hoogerhyde, Olympic representative, the Spartans had depth in every event. Another Olympic swimmer, Howard Patterson teamed with Don Korten to give State one-two in all the dual meets.

Breaststrokers Dave Seibold, Al Omans, and Howard Wilson provided scoring punch in every meet, with Seibold breaking his own varsity record, 2:23.4, for the 200-yard event.

Ray Williams and Danny Simpson gave the team their first power in diving in several years. These two boys were consistent point scorers.



It's a quick get-away for Jim Quigley as he takes his turn in the 400 yard free style relay against the Wisconsin Badgers.

BASEBALL

With a fine squad of experienced players returning, prospects for a fine Spartan baseball squad in 1948 looked excellent until the lure of major league bonuses swept the team of five key performers and several topnotch reserve players.

Instead of a potential contender for national honors, Michigan State baseball rooters were forced to settle for the worst season in 14 years. Coach John Kob's nine won only 10 games while dropping 14 and tieing one for a .417 percentage. Only twice before in 23 years, in 1932 and again in 1934, did a Michigan State baseball squad fail to compile a .500 average.

Star pitcher Robin Roberts and captain-shortstop Marty Hansen both penned contracts with the Philadelphia Phillies, with Roberts finishing the season as one of the National League's rookie "finds" of the year. Pitcher Rod Morgan went to the Yankees, Don Harris joined the St. Louis Browns, and Dick Massuch, first baseman, went to a Brooklyn Dodger farm club.

The Spartans opened the campaign with one of the poorest southern trips in history as far as percentages were concerned. They won three tilts and lost the same number to Dixie schools.

Returning north, the Kobsmen were unable to get the right combination of hitting and pitching and dropped three of the first four games and tied the fourth. Ohio State won two contests by run margins and the Wildcats of Northwestern took a 7–5 decision and settled for a 9–9 deadlock.

But the Green and White appeared to hit their stride as they thumped Wisconsin in the Old College field opener and swept the two-game series the following day. When the University of Detroit fell in an overtime duel the streak reached three, but went no farther as Ohio University copped two games.

From there on the Spartans were an in and out ball club. Lacking depth in pitching strength, they were unable to start another concerted winning streak. They won only four of the last ten games.

Hurler Bob Krestel provided the lone bright spot in the last half of the season, with two masterful pitching performances. He forged a sterling three-hitter against Michigan Normal and then limited the University of Michigan to nine scattered blows for a 7–3 verdict. The win was the fourth in a row for Michigan State over Coach Ray Fischer's squad.

George Rutenbar steps to the plate ... faces the mound ... ready to swat one into the Red Cedar.

After Western Michigan's Broncos topped the Spartans, 4–3, and Detroit lost a return match, 4–2, the team lost five in a row. Notre Dame won two, Michigan ended State's domination with a 9–2 trouncing on Old College field, and Western Michigan won the second of the year. Ohio university made it five with a 6–3 defeat. In the finale the Green and White eked out a 5–4 verdict over the Ohioans.

Third baseman Danny Urbanik walked off with batting honors with a .344 percentage. Urbanik's stick work was one of the high points of a very dismal season. His clubbing accounted for much of the team's scoring punch.

TRACK SUMMARY

After a mediocre 1948 outdoor season, Michigan State's thinclads came back strong in the 1949 indoor campaign and were acclaimed the nation's top indoor squad.

Injuries and illness to several key men hampered the success of the outdoor unit. In inter-squad competition the Spartans won one dual meet and lost two. They placed third in a triangular meet and also placed third in the Central Collegiate conference outdoor meet.

Ohio State, Big Nine champions, walloped both State and Purdue in a triangular meet in the season's opener. The Buckeyes dominated every event in running up 93 points to Purdue's 34 and Michigan State's 31.

Next the Spartans bowed to Penn State, 77–54, in the first home meet, but bounced back to beat Notre Dame, 74–67. Illinois' mighty team swamped the State team, 84–46. Illinois also won the CCC outdoor crown with Notre Dame second.

Led by a strong group of lettermen and several flashy newcomers, the 1949 indoor aggregation left little to be desired in the way of success. Coach Karl A. Schlademan had at least two good men to call upon in every event. This power and balance enabled the team to come out on top in every meet in competition against the best runners the East and Midwest had to offer.

No scores were kept in the Michigan AAU meet but the Spartans dominated the show, winning three firsts and nine seconds. In the 27th annual Michigan State Relays two weeks later, the Green and White raced to seven first places in 17 events. No other school won more than two.

In the only dual meet of the season, the Spartans easily defeated Ohio State, 79½–34½. Later in the season the Buckeyes tied for first place in the Big Nine meet.

Coach Schlademan took a small 14-man group to New York for the team's first appearance in the IC4A indoor meet at Madison Square Garden. Although more than half the team had never run on a board track before, State copped the team title by a nine point margin over Yale. Michigan State won three events.

A week later the Spartans ran wild in the CCC indoor meet at Jenison fieldhouse. State won five firsts and five seconds enroute to its third straight CCC crown. State totalled 60½ points with Michigan Normal second with 33½ and Notre Dame third with 33.

CROSS COUNTRY

A power-packed Green and White cross country squad turned in the first harrier grand slam in history in 1948. The Spartans easily won the IC4A, NCAA, and Senior NAAU titles, a feat never before accomplished in a single season. Boasting no individual star, the Michigan State aggregation was a balanced unit with less than a minute separating the first five top finishers in every race.

In inter-squad meets the Spartans trounced Penn State, 21–36, for the third straight win over the Nittany Lions and shared top honors with Wisconsin in a triangular meet with Purdue. State and the Badgers finished with 31 points while the Boilermakers were a poor third with 66. Bill Mack placed second against Penn State and Tom Irmen finished second in the three-way meet to pace the Spartans.

The first major crown won by the State harriers was the IC4A title. Running the five mile distance over New York's Van Cortlandt park, the State runners finished with a team score of 55, far ahead of second place Manhattan's 86. Sophomore Warren Druetzler placed fifth and Mack finished eighth to lead the MSC unit.

With Druetzler again leading the way, the team captured the NCAA title on November 15 over the four-mile Michigan State campus course. Captain Bob Sewell finished twentieth to clinch the victory. Mack in sixth place, Jack Dianetti, eleventh, and Irmen, sixteenth, were the other three point scorers.

Spartan power reached its peak five days later in the NAAU meet at Detroit. Five State runners placed in the first ten to win in a breeze. Druetzler took third place to lead State. Behind him came Mack, Dianetti, Sewell, and Irmen.

TENNIS

During the 1948 season, Coach Harris F. Beeman's tennis squad turned in 12 victories, including seven shutouts, against one lone defeat to produce the finest record since 1934.

Following a shutout conquest of Ohio State, the netters handed the University of Michigan a smashing 6–3 defeat and continued the run with 9–0 wins over Purdue and Chicago. The streak reached eight as Illinois fell, 6–2, Kalamazoo lost, 7–2, and Wayne and Western Michigan were routed by 9–0 counts.

The only defeat of the season came early in May with a 5–4 loss to Michigan, but the squad ran off four more wins with an 8–1 conquest of Detroit followed by shutouts over Wayne, Detroit, and Western Michigan.

In post season competition the top four men, Captain Al Reynolds, Jack Shingleton, Bob Malaga, and Bob Chuck captured the CCC trophy at the Detroit Tennis club.

GOLF

Winning six matches and losing the same number, MSC's golf squad had a hot and cold season, the longest streak being three wins in a row.

The Spartans dropped their opener to Western Michigan, 26½–18½, but rebounded to swamp Detroit 23½–3½. In the next match Michigan handed out the campaign's worst defeat, a 23–7 drubbing.

State then won three in a stretch with wins over Western Michigan, Ohio State, and Marquette before Wisconsin's Badgers ended the skein with a 11–7 defeat of the Spartans.

A narrowly missed 15-foot putt lost the next verdict to Michigan but the team regained its winning ways with a 25–2 rout over Detroit. In the final three duels, Notre Dame won a 19½–10½ decision and Wayne and State split a two-game series. The Tartars copped the first, 19½–7½, and State took the finale, 22½–4½.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING TEAM

Michigan State's Spartanettes, under the direction of Coach Dorothy Kerth, maintained their undefeated dual meet record this year, downing all six of their opponents. This season's wins brought their total number of consecutive dual victories up to eighteen.

The State mermaids proved themselves to be the best in national collegiate swim teams when they upset the champion Purdue Tritons, 54–39. This was the only meet all season where the visiting team threatened to lead the scoring.

Starting in December, the women's swimming season extended through the early part of March. In addition to dual meets, the Spartanettes participated in a State AAU meet at Ann Arbor where MSC won the 200-yard relay and Peggy Wedgworth, the Spartanette's breast stroke artist, won the 50-yard event, her specialty.

Other meets which were attended by the women were the Invitational Mid-west meet in Wisconsin, the National Intercollegiate Telegraphic swimming meet, and the Michigan AAU Synchronized Duet and Team championships.

The swimming squad will lose three women by graduation this June. Donna Maddock, the leading backstroker; Barbara Kerr, State's freestyle swimmer; and Jean Bowen, a synchronized swimmer and diver, will be leaving the squad.

In spite of the team's loss, Coach Kerth is optimistic about next year's prospects. Peggy Wedgworth, a star performer, will be returning along with Dee Wienberg, another Spartanette standout. With some good freshman material, there should be a strong nucleus to build with for 1950.

GREEN SPLASH

In the spring of 1949, Green Splash, co-ed swimming honorary, had much to accomplish in aquatic circles. Spartanettes worked eagerly to produce a water ballet and found their hard work rewarded by a full house. The latest tricks and routines were applauded. Fashionable bathing suits were modeled for eager males. Green Splash was hostess to Michigan women gathered for the State A.A.U. women's meet.

W. A. A.

Upon enrolling at Michigan State College, women students automatically belong to the Women's Athletic Association, but they must earn one hundred points before they may become a voting member.

W.A.A. seeks to promote a lasting interest in athletic activities for women, that will not only make for a higher physical efficiency, but will also create a spirit of true sportsmanship among women on this campus.

The intramural program consists of tournaments in volleyball, bowling, swimming, golf, tennis and softball. The activities for all-college or individual participation are hockey, soccer, fencing, badminton, dancing, basketball, life-saving, riflery, hiking, canoeing, table tennis and skating. Any girl who wishes to compete in athletics can find numerous opportunities and facilities.

Some high points of the year are the freshmen and cross-country hikes, the overnight canoe trip, and the intercollegiate telegraphic bowling, swimming and archery tournaments. Then, too, there is the W.A.A. cabin on college property, which is used by many students. They also send representatives to college playdays, intercollegiate golf tournaments and hockey matches.

Awards are given to individuals for points earned by participating in W.A.A. activities, and plaques are given to the winners of the intramural contests. Then, there is the intramural trophy given to the organization earning the most points during the year.

W.A.A. is governed by a board of executive members and sport managers guided and assisted by Dorothy Parker of the physical education department. The association is affiliated with the national Athletic Federation of College Women.

DELTA PSI KAPPA

Alpha Epsilon chapter of Delta Psi Kappa was established in 1946 at Michigan State to develop interest and recognize worthy members in the field of physical education. The group sponsors splash parties for all-college recreation and promotes discussions about health. Requirements of active interest and high scholarship must be met for membership.

P. E. M.

Members of P.E.M. are women who major or minor in physical education. Creating a professional attitude among women in the field and acting as a service organization for the department is the two-fold purpose of the club.

The P.E.M. Newsletter to all alumnae of the phys ed department, parties, dances, faculty teas, and outside speakers fill the social side of the program.

All Things Considered . . .

PEOPLE DO MORE THAN ANYBODY

Just as it's impossible to judge a book by its cover, or a coed by her Toni, the year 1949 could not be examined only in terms of physical change and activity. Whatever might have transpired at Michigan State, whatever the success, people were at the core of the matter. Instructors didn't give credits and honor points to people simply because they were enrolled students, but this was no block to every-day consideration by staff and student body.

The Deans and the Board of Agriculture really make the wheels go 'round, but what makes Michigan State the co-ordinated institution it is? A lot of people who are learning to work and play together. Freshmen, seniors, profs, Beaumont Tower, and long treks to south campus are all a vital part in the college career of any Spartan. People built the school to one of the finest in the country. They gave Michigan State an unchallenged reputation for campus-wide friendliness.

STATE BOARD OF

PRESIDENT JOHN HANNAH . . . . in the eyes of the students, the state, and the nation, an educator without equal.

AGRICULTURE

In 1949, 16,000 Spartans were governed by the State Board of Agriculture. The name, mentioned in campus conversations, was certainly respected. They had guided Michigan State College through a period of tremendous growth. It had functioned as a sort of administrative entity.

The board, peculiar to the system set up by the State government, is defined as a "Constitutional corporation of independent authority," which means it is not subject to State legislative authority. The term in office for a member of the board is six years.

Working hand in hand with them, the president of the college and the state superintendent of public instruction are ex-officio members. The college's secretary and comptroller-treasurer are subject to the board and are automatically members of it.

In the able hands of Chairman Clark L. Brody, the board meets once a month to oversee college affairs and consider applications for degrees. Not many Spartans realize that theirs is the final word on the granting of a bachelors. Two vacancies are filled at a general election in the Spring of every other year. Actually the board amounts to a college board of directors for the State.

Many developments which escape the public eye were brought about by wise planning and thoroughgoing investigation. In 1949, MSC saw the graduation of the second class of students who entered the Basic College. New curricula in metallurgical engineering, police science, and journalism were part of the board's work. During their time as members, the Big Ten of Administration helped give the college's chemistry department recognition by the American Chemical Society.

No single group worked harder, none could be more gratified by the New State, than the Board of Agriculture. That MSC was a leading university in America, few doubted. In 1949, the job was well done.

ADMINISTRATION

Karl H. McDonel

In the capacity of custodian of buildings and grounds, Karl H. McDonel, Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, makes certain that the campus remains one of the most beautiful in the nation. During this period of expansion at State, his job has been made more trying than usual, but through it all the campus is still one of the country's show spots.

Philip J. May's educational background and his wealth of experience in the accounting field have prepared him well for his position of comptroller and treasurer of the college. He earned a business administration degree from the University of Minnesota, is a certified public accountant, and is a past deputy auditor general for the state of South Dakota. During the war Mr. May was in charge of the army overseas accounting division.

Philip May

Stanley E. Crowe

Besides answering the queries of the many students who daily invade his office, Stanley E. Crowe, Dean of Students at State, makes every effort to bring to the campus the finest in entertainment. Dean Crowe graduated from Ohio State and received his master's degree from the University of Michigan.

The position of registrar is never an easy one and with the great influx of students, Mr. Robert S. Linton found that his hands were full. After surveying the situation, he developed what is now considered one of the finest systems of registration in any school in the country. Mr. Linton is himself a State alumnus, graduating in 1916. He has been on the staff at MSC since 1924.

Robert Linton

Tom King

Thomas H. King, an educator with an active and varied career, was named Director of Alumni Relations at Michigan State in April, 1948, succeeding the late Glen O. Stewart. Coupled with his position as Director of the Placement and Personnel Service, this makes him one of the college's busiest officials. Mr. King has also served as Director of Veterans' Affairs, head of the Department of Police Administration, and end coach for the football team.

Dr. Charles Holland

Dr. Charles F. Holland, a graduate of Michigan State and the University of Michigan Medical School, is the Director of the college Health Service. Though the work involved in this capacity is pressing, he still makes his daily rounds as consulting physician at the college hospital.

THE DEANS

L. Dale Faunce

Mrs. Isabelle Gonon

Howard C. Rather

Popular L. Dale Faunce, new Counselor for Men, coordinates the activities and gives friendly aid in solving problems of the male students at Michigan State.

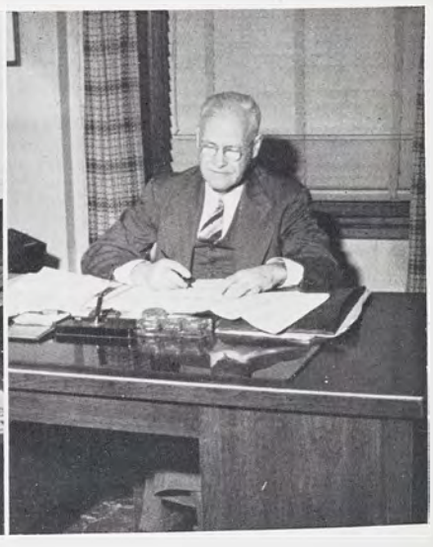
Mrs. Isabelle Gonon, Counselor for Women, is the gracious lady who guides State's coeds along the road to successful living.

The honor of being the first head of the Basic College justly rests with Dean Howard C. Rather.

Head of State's largest school is the fine distinction earned by Lloyd C. Emmons, Dean of Science and Arts.

West Point graduate, Colonel Dorsey R. Rodney heads the school of Business and Public Service.

Lloyd C. Emmons



Dorsey R. Rodney

Ernest L. Anthony

Miss Marie Dye

Lorin G. Miller

The longest period of service as a dean is the record held by Miss Marie Dye, Dean of Home Economics.

Besides his time consuming job as Dean of Engineering, Lorin G. Miller also directs State's engineering experiment station.

Dean of one of the country's outstanding schools of veterinary medicine is the responsible position of Claude Stever Bryan.

To Ralph C. Huston belongs the enviable job of being dean of the Graduate school.

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

President Buzz Hart steered the Senior class through its last year at Michigan State. Also on the officer roster for the Seniors was Betty Lee who served as vice-president. The job of taking minutes fell to Secretary Marjorie Pullar. Treasurer Jim McCartney balanced the books and double checked receipts.

The annual spring Water Carnival, one of MSC's spectacular shows, is sponsored by the Senior class. The show consists of picturesque floats, log birling and canoeing contests. Buzz and Betty will preside as King and Queen robed in the traditional cap and gown.

A well known highlight to spring term is the Senior Ball. Held in the College Auditorium it provides a grand climax to four wonderful years of college life.

JUNIORS

Chief organizer of the Junior class was President George Smith who led the all knowing third year students to a successful year in '49. Jim Gallagher helped coordinate Junior activities as vice-president. Paper work and records were supervised by Secretary Lois Brown. Problems financial were pondered and solved by Treasurer Richard Dickenson.

SOPHOMORES

All Things Considered . . .

Living Meant a Lot of Walking

Living quarters at Michigan State ran the gamut in '49. Bright new dormitories, coop houses, tin roofer quonsets, pre-fabs and trailers for the married crowd, and fraternity houses provided college homes for State's 16,000.

Time was when a visitor to the college could see at a single glance the extent of student housing. Now he would have to wear down his heels to see the complete picture of the situation. The pre-fab area alone covers as much space as the center of campus once did. Mason-Abbot Hall was scarcely landscaped when the ground nearby was torn up for the construction of Snyder-Phillips, and when the class of 1949 graduated, this chain reaction of housing construction was going on across the Red Cedar.

Living quarters, then, represented the growth of Michigan State College as fully as the new classroom structures and crowded sidewalks.

PAN HELLENIC COUNCIL

Pan Hellenic Council governs and coordinates activities of the sororities at Michigan State. The main purpose of the group is to provide a medium through which sorority women work to unify the interests of all women students.

Each sorority sends two voting delegates who take problems of their individual houses to the council meetings and bring back all information and decisions. Maintenance of university and sorority standards, scholarship supervision, and social affairs are among the mutual problems discussed.

Perhaps the most important activity of Pan Hellenic is the supervision of rushing procedures. Various rush plans are discussed by the delegates. The plan agreeable to the majority is put into effect.

A convocation for women interested in rushing is held annually. At this meeting, a board of sorority women gives students information concerning sorority life and answers their questions about affiliation. The council also acts as a judiciary board and determines penalties for the violation of rush rules.

In cooperation with the Inter-Fraternity Council, Pan Hellenic sponsored the all college Halloween dance in October. The college auditorium took on the atmosphere of a haunted house with its black cats and jack o'lanterns. All work for the dance was done by joint committees made up of fraternity and sorority members.

Every spring Pan Hellenic organizes and sponsors the annual sorority sing. Sorority members decide on the type and number of songs to be sung and choose the number of judges. A sing cup is awarded to the group taking first place. Permanent possession of the cup is given to the sorority winning top honors in the sing three years in a row.

Under the direction of the council, girls from the various Greek groups act as recreational leaders for the Towar Gardens community. They teach playground games and songs to the children and instruct them in cooperative play.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

It was a year of accomplishment and good fun for Alpha Chi Omega.

Most of us hadn't stopped talking about winning the sorority sing when the time came for summer vacation. Fresh in our minds were many informal get-togethers in any room that seemed handy, and those long sessions in the "coffee corner" of the kitchen. After our dining room ceiling was soundproofed against the dulcet "Rag Time Cowboy Joe," someone added further improvements to the building by installing two-hundred watt bulbs on the front porch.

There were serious moments too. When we thought on our national projects, for instance. We were proud of "Star Studio" at the MacDowell colony for artists, and our program for training technicians to aid victims of cerebral palsy.

ALPHA GAMMA DELTA

Following the homecoming game with Arizona, we opened the house to all for a real celebration, and Dad's Day at the AGD's gave much fun, what with luncheon entertainment by the "Gopher Girls" and a rip roaring football demonstration by the papas.

International Reunion Day at Ann Arbor brought excitement galore. The Founders' Day breakfast brought back a host of memories and reminded us of the many traditions of AGD.

Something new this year was our argyle sock raffle for Spartan men, the Diamond Draw. AGD point averages may not have benefited, but we discovered the faculty were really people at our apple-polishing party. We also sponsored a benefit bridge and clinic work for the care of cerebral palsy victims.

ALPHA OMICRON PI

Support of the Frontier Nurses social service organization is outstanding in the program of A O Pi. The national chapter gives financial aid and State's chapter contributes clothing, toys, and other essentials to the nurses organization, a group designed to aid the mountain people of Kentucky. The Frontier Nurses employ medical help that travels over rough mountain trails to help those in need.

Alpha Omicron Pi is one of the first sororities at Michigan State to almost completely do away with the traditional courtesy week. In its place, we hold a dance or party fall and spring terms for the new initiates.

The date for our annual dinner dance is circled in red on our social calender for winter term.

Two A O Pi's are honored each year when their names are engraved on the scholarship cup and the Harriett Weston Ansly achievement cup.

ALPHA PHI

A Founders' Day luncheon with University of Michigan members and outstanding alumnae helped Beta Beta celebrate Alpha Phi's 76th birthday this year.

Complete with handcuffed dates, third degree tactics, and tin plates for refreshments, our "jail" party provided a welcome variation on the usual radio party.

Days were crammed with Northern ski trips, brightly colored homecoming displays, the crazy basketball game with the Kappa's and our outlandish costumes, spring loafing on the sundeck, snowball fights early in the winter, and volleyball practice in the sunken garden.

Beta Beta sought donations for the American Heart drive in conjunction with our philanthropic work for the Cardiac Aid Foundation.

A three day District Convention held in East Lansing in May rounded out a busy year.

ALPHA XI DELTA

Serenades, study hours, term parties, and tubbings as well as work on the sorority sing, water carnival, homecoming, and philanthropy projects are prominent on the Alpha Xi Delta calendar. Each year a senior banquet is held to honor the most outstanding graduating senior and pledge.

Alpha Xi's made themselves felt in many of the clubs and honoraries on campus in '49. Joan Combs assumed the secretarial duties of Delta Phi Delta, Sally Seaver presided as president at Gamma Phi meetings, Delores Wesolowicz led the Glee Club, and Marion Craig was vice-president of Green Splash. This year also found Doris Bauer the vice-president of Newman Club, Vonda Eckard on Tower Guard, and Mary Pate playing an active role in Sigma Delta Pi.

CHI OMEGA

Fall term of '48 found Chi Omegas together again in their white house on Oakhill avenue ready for a busy year. It was easy to fall into the swing of campus life at State with a crowded social program.

Picnics, hayrides, teas, radio parties, formal dances, the sorority sing, and homecoming provided happy memories for Xi Gamma chapter.

Our seventeen graduating seniors will find the familiar cries of "fourth for bridge," midnight coffee in the kitchen, and the early morning discussions on most serious topics, difficult to forget.

Founded in 1925 at State, the fraternity stresses friendship, scholarship, campus activities, vocations, education, and civil service. Every year a $25 award is given to a student who excelled in the field of sociology, economics, civics, or psychology.

DELTA DELTA DELTA

Something new has been added! It has been a busy year and more since Phi Gamma chapter of Delta Delta Delta was installed on Michigan State's campus. Already we're building our supply of traditions and activities.

First, traditions. At the close of formal rushing, our Tri-Delt pledges entertained the pledges of other sororities at an afternoon tea, and we also observed Delta, or "turn-about" week. In the fall, we joined our alumnae in celebrating Founders' Day. The first Sunday in May was the date for our annual Pansy Breakfast.

Then, activities. We're remembering our terrific term party, exchange dinners, our two-term first rank in scholarship, and our contribution to the Delta national project of college scholarships for worthy women in America and China.

DELTA GAMMA

As we blow out the three candles on this year's birthday cake, we're reminiscing over the bright spots of a bright year.

There were the openhouses after football games, the Halloween party, pledges' pajama party, Christmas for orphans, our winter term formal, the presentation of a braille watch to the outstanding blind student on campus, and rushing amidst a flurry of snow flakes and parties—all traditions of Delta Gamma.

We'll remember with pride Wolverine editor Cynthia Gorham, Mortar Board Jan Byam who designed our prize winning Water Carnival float, and Pat Patterson, sharing her memories from our national Diamond Jubilee convention.

As the flames of our three candles died, we climaxed the year with a midnight candle light procession in honor of the twelve seniors who will be bidding goodbye to our house on the hill.

DELTA ZETA

A spanking new downstairs greeted DZ's this fall when we moved into the white colonial house on Abbott Road for the final term of '48. Complete redecoration included new draperies, carpeting and furniture.

Wishing to carry the transformation to the upstairs, we donned jeans and gave each room a new face—individual color schemes, wall paper and all.

This year holds fond memories for us all—the singing after each meal, the bridge games in the living room and those nightly midnight snacks before bedtime. Our radio parties and exchange dinners interspersed study sessions as did the Rose Ball, our yearly dinner dance.

GAMMA PHI BETA

Our school year was preluded by a brigade of room cleaners. We painted, upholstered, rearranged and then moved in.

Highlight of the year for the Gamma Phi's was winning first place among sororities in the annual homecoming decorations contest. Our hands are still scarred from scraping off the papier mache.

We won our yearly game of touch football with the Pi Phi's. Trophies were awarded that night at our joint term party. A final touch to winter term was our annual dinner dance held at the Lansing Country Club.

But more important than our social reminiscing is the fact that Beta Delta, the youngest chapter of Gamma Phi Beta, was well represented in the administrative and honorary organizations on campus.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA

"The time has come," the seniors said, "to talk of many things; of study, parties, and diamond rings, and contests and queens."

Apologies to the Walrus, but this has been an eventful year . . .

. . . Of queens, like Barb Tanner, national Sigma Chi sweetheart, and almost-queen, Joy Butler of the homecoming court.

. . . Of contests and cups, like the Water Carnival, and sharing the honor of the winning float.

. . . Of parties, like the uproarious Bowery, the formal term party, and the picnics with children from the Michigan School for the Blind.

. . . Of annual affairs, like Father's Football Day, and Mother's Day.

. . . Of pledge classes, Founder's Day, and Alumni teas;

. . . And finally, of seniors themselves, who may watch us raise our hands in hail, seniors, and farewell.

KAPPA DELTA

Kappa Deltas returned this year to a newly decorated house and a new housemother. The inevitable classes and participation in campus activities were interspersed with a tea for Mrs. Coulter, a children's Halloween party and our inter-sorority bridge tournament. The Porpoise team came through to win one of those fabulous trophies to add to the beloved Water Carnival awards.

We are losing 17 seniors this year: Lois Goers, our active president; Alma Eve of the S'News; Lucy and Daisy, invaluable athletes; Cricket Freethy, leader in the hotel ad department; Pianist Louise Lobb and roommate, Lorna Henderson; Corps sponsor Marion Stone and ex-equestrian Marian Morse; the singing of Phyl Jansen and jokes of Dotty Cobb and Jill Mills; two Mary Lou's—Rahilly and Rudesill; Jeannie Slack, scribe Jo Green, artist Char Runnells; our publicity women Mary Woody and Pat Elliott. Good-bye and good luck.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

The Kappa Key was covered in glory during 1949. Sue Kern's Homecoming crown was new in '49, and took its place beside Marilyn Pierson's Mortar Board: and the house on M.A.C. found a compromise of beauty and brains. Musical Pat Finch was prominent in Orchesis, one of the many activities in which she took an active part.

If you were gunning around campus in 1949 you would have found Kappas in almost everything: Union Board, Omicron Nu, Sigma Epsilon, Phi Kappa Phi, Theta Sigma Phi, would have proved that.

To join what was old and what was new in '49, Kappa Kappa Gammas held their traditional celebrations for Homecoming, Founder's Day, and the Spring Sing. Fourteen seniors left for the Brave New World and became sentimental alumnae.

PI BETA PHI

The Pi Phi Year in Review:

September: Disguised a little under a new coat of paint, but still home, the Pi Phi house took us in, short hair, long skirts, and all.

October: Homecoming; and the arrival of old grads. Swede Swanson and her crew worked hard on our king size cigarette package.

We inaugurated the gridiron clash between Pi Phis and our neighbors, the Gamma Phis. Trophies were awarded at our co-term party.

February: We held our Black and White ball, annual dinner dance, at the Lansing Country Club, and afterwards, the traditional talk-it-over party.

April: Founders Day, the day Pi Phis all over the country pay tribute to twelve girls who, long ago, saw the future in fraternities for women.

June: Goodbye to the seniors. We'll see you all at homecoming.

SIGMA KAPPA

Topping our calendar of events for 1948 was the winning of the coveted national achievement award. Presented to us at the Jubilee Convention at Sun Valley, the award gave us second place among fifty Sigma Kappa chapters.

Redecorating the recreation room was no small job, but the results were well worth the effort. Wearing wool socks and mufflers, we held our May morning breakfast in typical unseasonable Michigan atmosphere. Several ski treks to Grayling and the Halloween scavenger hunt added even more excitement.

We joined Sigma Kappas all over the nation to sponsor the Maine Sea Coast Mission. Locally we supported the Michigan Children's Aid Society in their work with the underprivileged.

ZETA TAU ALPHA

Events like the last minute touches on the homecoming decorations, the founders' day program when we celebrated our golden anniversary, various radio parties, and the excitement of new pinnings and engagements won't soon be forgotten by the girls of ZTA.

Since our fraternity was founded in 1898 at Virginia State Normal College, we have established many traditions such as after dinner coffee in the living room, initiation and senior banquets, and the annual "Star Dust" dinner dance. The most unusual one is the passing of a blue garter from girl to girl when she gets married.

We've kept our fingers on the campus pulse by listening to reports from our sisters in AWS, Mortar Board, Theta Alpha Phi, Kappa Delta Pi, Orchesis, State News, Senior Home Economics Board, and Green Splash.

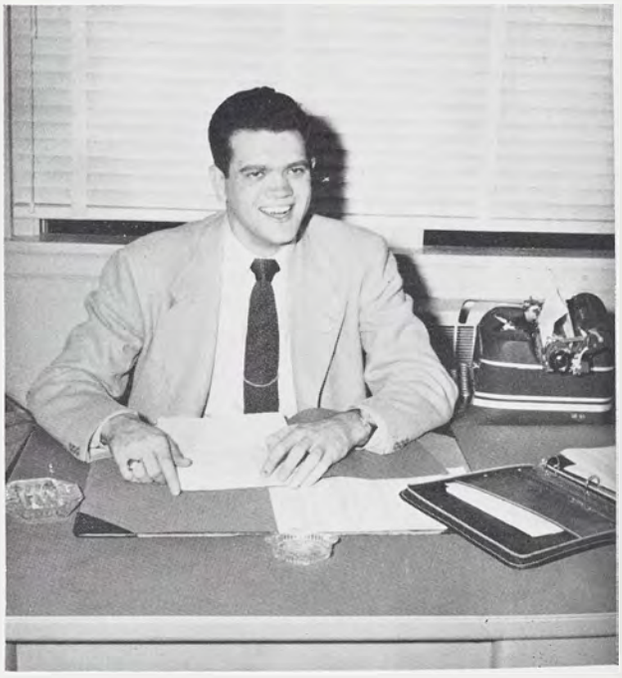
INTER-FRATERNITY COUNCIL

State's Inter-Fraternity Council is one of the most active organizations on campus. Throughout the year, IFC took its place in "what was new at MSC," adapting its primary purpose to situations peculiar to the campus.

An enrollment of 16,000 was something new in '49. What growing pains affected the student body affected fraternity life and aims in general. Twenty-two participating fraternities sent their representatives to exchange ideas at the council's regular meetings.

Doug Trezise.



Jim Metzger, Art Godfrey, Jack Keller.

Buzz Hart, Jules Martinek, Jim Hazen.

The main purpose of the council is to promote fraternity life and activities to the best interest of the college. It settles disputes between member fraternities, supervises rushing and pledging activities and regulates initiations.

To help facilitate efficient rushing, the council sponsors smokers and similar functions to acquaint prospective members with the various fraternities.

A requirement for fraternity initiation is the passing of the IFC test governing the multiple phases of college life at MSC.

For Alma Mater in 1949, IFC promoted a great many charitable works. Three hundred and fifty boys from Lansing Vocational School attended home football games through its efforts. Later in the year, the council sent an appeal to every house for ties and turned them over to the same school as Christmas gifts, and through its contributions in another field, adopted a European war orphan, providing for every need.

ALPHA CHI SIGMA

Michigan State's chapter of Alpha Chi Sigma was founded in 1928.

Composed solely of men desiring to make chemistry, chemical or metallurgical engineering their profession, its purpose is to promote the advancement of chemistry, bind its members more closely together and aid them in the attainment of their ambitions as chemists.

The chapter is kept in close contact with various phases of chemistry through members of the fraternity's professional chapters. After the homecoming game, the chapter staged a party for alumni of the fraternity to celebrate its twentieth anniversary.

While founded as a professional chemistry fraternity, the men of Alpha Chi Sigma carry on a broad social program and are active individually and as a group in campus activities.

ALPHA EPSILON PI

When fall term rolled around we put the harness on Dobbin and started the hayride season. Mixing in a few picnics, radio parties, we held open houses after every home football game.

Winter term was our concentrated season. We used Dobbin again, this time for sleigh rides, and we staged a scavenger hunt. Our big formal of the term was a dinner dance at the Hotel Olds.

Aims of AEPi have been directed to high scholastic attainment and active participation in inter-cultural and inter-faith endeavor.

Established in 1929 as a local society, the present chapter joined the National Jewish fraternity in 1934. During these twenty years, Mr. Alex Cohen, prominent business man, philanthropist and civic leader, has acted as advisor to the fraternity.

ALPHA GAMMA RHO

Not too long ago, one of State's men-about-campus was heard to say, "What I like to see in a fraternal organization is friendliness and cooperation." Perhaps without realizing it, that person was directly discussing Alpha Gamma Rho. Since the day of their founding, the AGR's have kept embodied within themselves a true spirit of brotherhood.

Organized originally at the University of Illinois in 1908 by combining two local organizations, AGR is now composed of thirty-one national chapters. In 1922, Tau Chapter of Alpha Gamma Rho became the first national fraternity to establish itself on campus following the first World War. Since that early beginning, it has established and maintained a reputation of excellence in leadership and scholarship. Recently the AGR's received Inter-Fraternity Council's highly coveted scholastic trophy.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA

Generally known as the "Great Big Hairy-Chested Men," we are strong in intramural athletics. This year we captured firsts in basketball, and baseball, second in bowling, third in track and the all college baseball championship in the summer. Items like these keep the trophy shelves well stocked at the "House on the Hill."

We have our share of members in the honoraries and governing bodies, too, and ATO is well represented in the Varsity club.

Among the important social activities for the year were the Blackfoot Ball (to which guests from all ATO chapters in Michigan and members of all campus fraternities were invited), a hardtimes party, the porch formal, and a Christmas party for the underprivileged kids of Lansing.

ALPHA PHI ALPHA

Alpha Phi Alpha came to MSC in May of '48. This is the first social fraternity for the Negro students to be founded at this college. Although we have no house, we plan to get one in the near future.

Alpha Phi Alpha, a national organization of 92 undergraduate and 97 graduate chapters, was founded to provide a medium of social fraternity life for the negro college men.

Although A Phi A is a social fraternity, one of its main functions is to provide service to mankind. Today society is attempting to progress from its long held discriminations to a feeling of equality for all men. To further this aim, and in keeping in step with our times, all chapters of Alpha Phi Alpha opened their doors in 1941 to all college men regardless of creed, color, or national origin. It was the first Greek letter social organization to do this.

We do this with the hope in our minds that in the not too distant future, other social fraternities will take the same stand, to preserve the democratic life which we have all fought to retain. Already a member of the Inter-fraternity Council, we feel that this is a step forth in the advancement of inter-racial groups on this campus. We endeavor to work with the other Greek fraternities and the administration to further our aims. Although our chapter is small, we feel that we can still do much to start other fraternities on the road to opening their doors to All college men.

Pledges of Alpha Phi Alpha are known as the sphinxmen and may be identified by the small sphinx-head worn in their lapels.

BETA TAU

The Red Cedar was pretty cold when we pulled the Phi Taus into the water during our annual tug of war this year. No serious casualties resulted, except dampened spirits.

We took second place in the first annual Lambda Chi Alpha "Junior 500" pushcart race, thanks to the front axle of the DTD'S cart. Our tug of war trophy needed company.

Friends again after our joint swimming lesson, we banded together with the Phi Taus to throw the first "Delta Street Shuffle." The all-college affair drew a crowd of over 3000 students which made poor old block long Delta Street creak and groan.

Last summer a delegation from Beta Theta Pi brought us the good news that we are to come into their fold in '49.

DELTA CHI

Delta Chi, in 1949, had its share of key campus positions. They could list the presidents of student council, union board, A.I.E.E., and the forestry and ski clubs, a secretary of the interfraternity council, spartan business manager, an art editor, a member of the publications board, business manager of the Dionysians, and a football manager.

They borrowed atmosphere from Las Vegas for their traditional gamblers party, with lucky charms and loaded dice and all the trappings. Despite progressively higher stakes, Lady Luck was kind, and everyone broke even.

Social activities were the winter term formal dinner dance at the Country Club of Lansing, hayrides, skiing excursions and the like, all of which made a rounded program appealing to all tastes.

DELTA SIGMA PHI

A packed schedule of athletics, campus activities, and social events made a full year in 1949 for Alpha Pi chapter of Delta Sigma Phi.

The "Sailor's Ball," a revival of one of our national traditions, was the high point of our full social calendar. Attired in pirate costumes and beachcomber's rags, we and our dates obtained our "sea legs" in a nautical atmosphere.

Other social events included the annual pledge party, the night club party which boasted professional entertainers, the Christmas party for orphans and the winter term dinner dance.

As we proudly polish our grand Water Carnival trophy won for the second consecutive year, we look with anticipation to the coming year and a third grand prize, something which no other organization has accomplished.

DELTA TAU DELTA

Formal dances, radio get-togethers, canoe parties, and exchange dinners sparked our social slate this year.

Something unusual was the Shanghai Shuffle. The fellas removed their coolie hats from moth balls, while rickshas and an opium den completed a real oriental theme. Early in the fall territorial relations were strengthened through playing host to the Hawaii football team and coaching staff. For homecoming the shelter was decked out in full regalia for the alums, and we hosted a brother Delt, Bob Strong, whose band played for the homecoming dance.

During the spring of 1948 we captured trophies from the "Junior 500" race and the water carnival, and in the fall we defended the IFC football championship.

FARMHOUSE

The highest honor that came to Farmhouse this year was the Interfraternity Scholarship Trophy. Individual honors were taken by Tom Anderson, winner of the Borden Award Scholarship and the Ag Senior Scholarship Cup, Tom Irmen, newly elected captain of the track team, George Wilson, who placed seventh among all judges at the International Livestock Show in Chicago, "Salty" O'Rourke, new member of Blue Key, and Dean Allen, who joined Green Helmet. Brothers Wilson, Peffers, Pugsley, Riley, Irmen, Kline, Anderson, and Reath all are members of the Ag honorary Alpha Zeta.

Red letter events were our winter term formal and the annual spring AGR-Farmhouse softball tussle for possession of the "Thundermug." Rounding out the years activities was a summer picnic near Maumee, Ohio.

KAPPA SIGMA

This year we Kappa Sigs kept alive our long standing tradition of packing the calendar full of social gatherings. Far and away our best party of the year was the winter term formal, the Stardust Ball, inspired by one of our most illustrious brothers, Hoagy Carmichael. Other items on the agenda were the Halloween Shindig, pledge sponsored parties for the actives, and the yearly picnic for the graduating seniors.

This year Michigan's Alpha Zeta chapter was host to our group at the first annual fraternity district conclave at Ann Arbor. Both chapters enthusiastically praised the venture.

In the sports picture, Don Mason, placed by the country's sports experts on the All Star second team, and George Smith, place kick artist, brought fame to Kappa Sigma.

LAMBDA CHI ALPHA

We started the school year by sponsoring the first annual Pushcart Derby. Fraternities and dormitories competed against each other as they sped around the inner circle drive of the campus in their hand-made carts.

Taking first in the men's division at the 1948 Water Carnival for our "Birth of the Jazz" float repaid us for all our hours of hard work, supervised by Nick Heller. Radio and term parties, picnics, exchange dinners and our origination of the first Greek Feast were other activities on the social list.

We returned this fall to find that the interior and the exterior of our house on Haslett Street had undergone a vast renovation, and it is now one of the most modern fraternity houses at State.

PHI DELTA THETA

Championships in swimming, golf, and tennis resulted in the addition of new interfraternity trophies, and runner-up awards in basketball and track. Other honors included a third place in the interfraternity sing and the tapping of eight members by campus honoraries.

Highpoint of our social activities, along with radio parties, picnics, and our annual term party, was the Upsan Downs Derby party after which the famous Kentucky Derby was fashioned. Spectators viewed the races on the track set up in the dining room while others sipped juleps on the veranda.

At the traditional Founders Day Banquet the foremost purposes and ideals of our organization were reemphasized; the cultivation of friendship, the acquirement of a high degree of mental culture, and the attainment of a high standard of morality.

PHI KAPPA SIGMA

In 1948, local fraternity Kappa Epsilon was affiliated with the national fraternity Phi Kappa Sigma.

After a house on Albert Street was purchased during the summer, we really had a job on our hands. The house was a wreck when we started "operations repair," but soap and water and dozens of hands wielding paint brushes had it in shape in time to hang the name plate for the initiation on October twenty-fifth.

In winter term came the big event, the formal installation and granting of the new charter. We remember seeing many campus dignitaries at the formal dance which followed the installation ceremonies.

Informal affairs as radio parties, a Halloween celebration, and picnics made the year pass too quickly for all of us.

PHI KAPPA TAU

Phi Kappa Tau, 1949 edition, opened the year with a bang heard round the campus when we were co-sponsors of the "Delta Street Shuffle," all-college street dance. The affair was so successful that we are planning to make it an annual event.

In keeping with another tradition, the annual tug-of-war with our Delta Street neighbors, Beta Tau, was held. Beta Tau now holds the cup after dunking our actives in the Red Cedar.

We had frequent radio parties, many in costume with unusual themes. A winter term formal, and spring term informal dances were also on the social calendar. Pinnings and marriages seemed to be on the increase, and we spent many evenings in impromptu serenading of campus co-eds and homecoming queens.

PI KAPPA PHI

Pi Kappa Phi's couldn't believe their new house was "really real" in 1949. It was, and few people on campus could overlook the loving care lavished on it.

Before the "late unpleasantness," the Pi Kaps lived in what later became the AGR house on Grand River. When "Uncle Sam Wanted Them!" the house was sold.

You could find Pi Kaps active in a majority of activities this year. They followed the sound policy of building from within the group for outside expansion. But all work and no play could make a dull Pi Kap, so the social chairmen got busy and produced results. Before long the boys were encircling the dates in red pencil: the Founder's Day Dinner, the annual winter term dinner dance, the national convention in Detroit, ad infinitum.

Yet Pi Kappa Phi maintained they could still retain high scholarship. And darned if they didn't end up in the top three houses again.

PSI UPSILON

The year got off to a roaring start with a great gathering at Homecoming (which was helped no end by our winning the first place award for decorations), a really rustic barn dance, the annual roof raising Bistro party, and a couple of radio get-togethers thrown in before Christmas.

When we returned from the holidays expecting a slight rest from social activities we found we had forgotten about the big formal dinner dance, so it was into tuxes or tails and off for another fine time.

Spring term was the time for golf clubs and comps. The two didn't mix so we compromised with Saturday afternoon picnics. We rounded out the year with a Mother's Day dinner and program which included numbers by our glee club.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON

Good old Southern hospitality and spirit are meaningful traditions at SAE everywhere, for Sigma Alpha Epsilon, founded in 1856, is the South's oldest social fraternity.

Having members in athletics, campus politics, music, publications, and nearly every activity you might name, we combine talents to get things done.

At the hard times party, the chapter newspaper headlines the event; SAE engineers install lighting and loudspeakers; the artists convert the house into a Dali-like shambles.

During intermission, the Dixieland band performs between jokes by an SAE emcee. Then mechanics tinker with Violet the truck until she shows enough energy to transport tired coeds to their campus homes.

Our newest contribution to campus affairs is the annual all-college Christmas party, which is in its second year.

SIGMA CHI

Last year, for the first time in Sigma Chi history, a national sweetheart was chosen. The honor went to blond, blue-eyed Barbara Tanner, sweetheart of our Michigan State chapter. At the national convention in Seattle, Barb met and talked with such well known people as John Wayne, Patrick J. Hurley, and Steve Hannegan. She is now looking forward to a Hollywood screen test.

The Sigs had other firsts as well. We won the interfraternity Sing, which gave us our second straight victory and a chance to keep the trophy if we win again. We teamed with the Kappa Alpha Thetas in the Water Carnival and came out with top honors.

Another cause for great celebration was the long awaited burning of the mortgage, which occurred on Homecoming Day.

SIGMA NU

Throwing open the doors last fall, we welcomed back Bob Maldegan from the Olympics and put Messrs. Krestle, Vogler, Guerre, and Eshbaugh to work on the varsity football squad. NCAA flyweight champ, Ernie Charboneau, also checked into the house along with tankman Dave Seibold.

We were well represented in all fields of extra-curricular activities as well as in class honoraries and divisional clubs. Buzz Hart was president of the senior class, Bob Maldegan held the chair of the Varsity Club, Dave Seibold prexied Porpoise, and Dick Poole led Blue Key. Also, many brothers sat in on meetings of Blue Key, Varsity Club, and Excalibur.

Our biggest social affairs were the spring term Nut House party and the White Rose formal at the Hotel Olds during the winter session.

THETA CHI

Activities started off with a bang as we entertained the alums at the homecoming open house and buffet supper. We rang out the term with a Halloween party in the best hobgoblin, pumpkin-faced style. Winter term brought all of the fraternity's traditions together at the big event of the winter season—the formal Red Carnation Ball. With spring came the Bowery Ball with it's barber shop music, gay nineties costumes and the annual trip around campus in our carriage.

But social obligations formed only part of the pattern of fraternity life for the Theta Chis. All members contributed to the honoraries, clubs, and athletic programs of the college. We assisted new students in seeking their interests and helped through the period of orientation.

ZETA BETA TAU

During the past year, members of Zeta Beta Tau traveled to New York City to celebrate their golden anniversary. They had a gay time at the convention held in the Waldorf-Astoria.

The social functions for the new year started with a stag party for our new pledge class. Then came wiener roasts, radio parties, the pledge-active tug of war across the mighty Red Cedar, and finally our long awaited spring term formal.

Intra-mural sports and many campus activities were a drawing card for our excess energy.

Since 1898, the Blue and White has spread into forty-three separate units. Recognizing the anniversary of their first year on campus November 14, members viewed the past with an attitude that promises a successful future.

DELTA UPSILON

One of the newer fraternities on campus, Delta Upsilon was founded as the local fraternity Delta Rho in the fall of 1946 by three DU transfer students. It has the distinction of being one of the few non-secret social fraternities in the United States.

After our constitution was accepted by the student council and the administration the work of building a fraternity really began. This proved to be a real learning situation for all of us. The thing that we will never forget is the method involved in writing letters—all kinds of letters from simple requests for information to a call to arms of Delta Upsilon alumni everywhere. We also learned something of the art of organization. It seems that in building a fraternity as in building any other kind of a group there are miles of red tape to cover and we found, the hard way, that it must be covered inch by inch. In getting the organization together perhaps our greatest reward was the opportunity we had of meeting and dealing with so many generous, patient and helpful people.

Receiving our charter from the national organization at the installation ceremony this fall was the brightest spot of the year. Prominent persons from all parts of Michigan and the nation were there to help make the event a success.

We are represented on the student council, union board, Sigma Epsilon, Scabbard and Blade, Dionysians, ASME, and all campus publications. Intramural athletics and the IFC sing occupy much of the time of our members.

Delta Upsilon's formula for a thoroughly rounded year of social activity includes dances, radio parties in the forestry cabin and hayrides.

WOMEN'S DORMITORIES

That the life of Michigan State's male population revolves about women's dormitories is no fiction. They would have it no other way and it's a pretty safe assumption that the girls concur in this. The all-American Sparty who graduates without knowing the telephone numbers of at least 75% of female living quarters probably worked too long over his books.

More than a place to eat and hang their babushkas, the structures west of the student union building were busy with campus activities, proms, coke dates, and when the spirit moved their inhabitants, academic drudgery.

This year Campbell, Landon, Yakely, Williams, Mayo, and Gilchrist comprised some of the most beautiful campus homes anywhere in the country. Coeds were proud of them and worked to give their particular dormitory a distinctive position in campus affairs.

The freshman or senior could lack for nothing. Her dormitory provided a recreation room, a spacious lounge, records, radio, and piano to pass the leisure moments of her busy life. You can always tell a "State" girl, but you can never tell her much about gracious living.

The front steps of a college dormitory provide an ideal vantage point for viewing the coming and going of the residents. Whether the dash out the door is prompted by a coke date in the grill or a project deadline on South Campus, hurry characterizes most of the exits.

NORTH CAMPBELL

With the razing of the old employment office, North Campbell recently came out into the open so passers by on Grand River got their first good look at that worthy edifice, but it's been rumored that several male students at State knew it was there all the time.

That home away from home for hundreds of MSC coeds is usually well stocked with the male animal, especially on occasions of the open houses and radio parties with which the year is liberally sprinkled.

The term party, however, is the function that gets the greatest attention. All of the girls join in on the decorations, refreshments, music, and the dozen other things that go into a dance to make it a real success. The joint participation demonstrated in preparing such affairs shows that the girls possess the willing, family-like spirit that is essential to successful group living.

At the housemeeting, held at the beginning of each term, everyone gathers in the main floor lounge to absorb the housemother's words of caution concerning that frightening body of fact, the dorm regulations. After this sobering lecture the strain is relieved through the medium of coke and sandwiches, but none the less, the coeds spend a fitful night dreaming of late minutes and campused weekends.

However, all is not as bad as it sounds because the Campbellites soon discover that a code of laws that operates under the honor system is not too hard to take. Consideration for others soon gets to be a habit that keeps rules unbroken and nerves unjangled.

SOUTH CAMPBELL

The physical beauty of South Campbell reflects the internal harmonious living of some 200 girls. Possession of the W.A.A. athletic cup, the volleyball cup, and the basketball trophy is a prideful one. It took a lot of pulling together to put them on our mantle.

Christmas caroling and the May Sing are other South Campbell traditions. The term parties, after hour snacks in the rooms, and Sunday breakfasts in the lounge are symbols of our collegiate spirit. The Southern Exposure, our dormitory newspaper, gives the inside scoop on all happenings around South Campbell.

Laughter at midnight gab sessions, feverish studying for finals, blind dates, and dormitory bridge games characterize our campus home. With its water carnival floats, homecoming decorations, and faculty teas, South Campbell is truly a hall of friendship, fame, and fun.

SOUTH WILLIAMS

Situated on one of the highest hills on campus, surrounded by evergreens, and overlooking the Red Cedar, South Williams is one of the most picturesque dormitories at Michigan State.

There is always something doing to keep the 152 residents of the dorm busy and on the go. As if after hour spreads, serenades, tubbings, housemeetings, and faculty teas weren't enough for any group's social calendar, we also presented the Christmas tea, homecoming open house, and the "Get Acquainted" party. Other events of note were the semi-formal term parties. Everyone joined in the job of planning the dances, decorating, and cleaning up the debris the next day in a spirit of cooperation.

The scramble to answer phone calls, meeting dates in the living room, winter snowball fights, and spring picnics help draw the girls of South Williams into a close collegiate family.

NORTH WILLIAMS

Fall term saw many new faces roaming the halls of North Williams. In order to get to know one another better, the girls planned a "get acquainted" day. By working together, 167 girls in the dorm developed into a closely knit living group and found college living fun and lively.

North Williams is filled with memories and traditions like the Japanese Garden party held in May. Refreshments were served to the girls and their dates on the lantern lighted terrace. Following this term party, the senior girls were serenaded with their favorite college songs and presented with a rose bowl and spread.

Homecoming coffee hours, election of dorm officers, the installation of incoming officers, radio parties with their dancing and bridge games, exchange dinners with the men's dorms, term parties, Halloween and Christmas celebrations, the sorority housemothers coming to dinner, the singing of Christmas carols, the senior banquet with its serenades and red roses, the inter-dorm sports participation, all make the girls of North Williams love their college home on top of the hill.

EAST MAYO

Most of us don't recall the old days when only two girls were assigned to each room in East Mayo so we cheerfully divide dressers, desks, and closets three ways. We do remember, however, trying to get back to school early to avoid getting that upper bunk.

One of our most prized memories of East Mayo is the annual Christmas party for 80 children of Towar Gardens, complete with a red suited Santa Claus, presents, and refreshments.

The laundry room with its shampooing, home permanents, hair drying, washing, ironing, and coffee making taking place simultaneously provide much cheerful confusion.

Entertaining dates in the smoker, term parties, open houses, coffee in the lounge after football games, house meetings, pajama parties, and fire drills are part of East Mayo traditions.

WEST MAYO

Built in 1930, West Mayo is the oldest coed residence on campus. The warm and cozy atmosphere and beautiful terraced grounds will long be remembered as characteristic of our friendly college home.

Many happy memories brightened our year including those of the installation dinners given each term by the retiring council in honor of new officers, the annual spring term lantern party on the terrace, and the drifting notes of piano and singing while sitting by the crackling blaze of the fireplace.

The football games with the bus boys, bulletin boards of news and sometimes late minutes, continual buzzes for phone calls, appetizing after hour spreads, the clamor of turning out lights for serenades, tubbings, floor meetings, excited voices coming in at 12:30 on a Saturday night, and the bustle of cleaning up before room check all combine to make group life at West Mayo wonderful and unforgettable.

EAST LANDON

After the confusion of people moving in last September, East Landon began to settle down. The girls began to know each other and there were many times when sleep was forgotten and they gathered in some room to sing "Happy Birthday" to a dorm mate, spilling cake crumbs on the floor throughout the chorus.

Other times East Landonites gathered just to talk about the events of the day or the all important date. This is the way they planned their spring term party, "Magnolia Lane," which featured Harmon Burrell's orchestra. Highlight of the evening were "magnolia rickeys" served in the lower lounge, which was decorated like a Mississippi river boat, complete with water wheel and gang plank. This semi-formal dance was attended by 150 couples.

Christmas season found the girls busily wrapping packages for the Lansing Red Stocking Club. To climax the holiday festivities, a party was held and the 125 gifts were collected and given to the Lansing group.

The sports-minded Landon girls produced a strong baseball nine and the runner-up volley ball team. Interest in swimming ran high, with five girls participating in the inter-collegiate meets.

Twenty-eight graduating seniors were entertained at the annual dinner in their honor the last of May. Each girl was presented with a corsage and favor.

Not all of this dorm's activities were concerned with the immediate future for they were the first dormitory to set aside some of their dues to buy a sewing machine. This project was so successful that they became more ambitious and purchased a mahogany console radio phonograph for the main lounge.

WEST LANDON

Fall term found us a completed dormitory and ready to entertain the alumni and guests. During the football season, we served after-game coffee and doughnuts to all who came. At Christmas we held our annual party in the dining room and each new girl brought an ornament with her name on it for the tree, thus continuing one of West Landon's holiday traditions.

The winter term party, "Basin Street Blues," was a success from the ballroom upstairs to the vivid decorations in the recreation room.

Among the more informal dorm activities were the bridge sessions, hastily made beds for room check, hours of knitting argyles, homecoming decorating, singing around the piano, house meetings, fire drills in the early hours of the morning, the mad dashes for eight o'clocks, and fraternity serenades.

The Zephyr, official newspaper of the dorm, heralded coming events and parties and highlighted outstanding personalities of West Landon.

GILCHRIST

The year of 1949 brought many new names to the campus and many new buildings as well. One of the newest is Gilchrist Hall, the latest addition to the women's dormitory row.

At first glance, Gilchrist looks just like another wing of Yakeley. But closer examination reveals it is a compact one unit dormitory. Although attached to Yakeley, it is not a part of it.

Definitely something in itself is this modern structure which boasts a light blue dining room, modernistic lounge, a large recreation room furnished with comfortable sectional furniture, and paneled woodwork of a gray and white texture throughout the lounge and lobby.

Gilchrist is not to be outdone when it comes to dorm spirit either. In her first year Gilchrist entered the sports field with her volleyball, basketball, and softball teams.

EAST YAKELEY

The year got under way with East Yakeley girls making bigger and better plans for successful college days. There was much to do to keep each one of us busy through the following months.

Our first party for the term was an open house after the homecoming game. We brought our friends back to the lower lounge for coffee and doughnuts.

One Sunday afternoon Mrs. Gonon and her staff were our guests for dinner. Officers from both east and west escorted them to dinner and then down to our rec room where Frances Johnson sang and Carol Maxwell played the piano.

A "Jitney" dance helped increase our fund to buy a sewing machine for the dorm. Tickets were sold for each group of dances. Cookies and cokes were served "for a price."

"Santa's Shuffle" was the title of our Christmas dance. Bob Shinberg's orchestra furnished the music. This along with trimming the Christmas tree in the sunroom helped the dorm have a true holiday spirit.

WEST YAKELEY

Yakeley, named after Elda Yakeley, Michigan State's first registrar, opened last year introducing to the campus the finest among women's dorms. West Yakeley boasts every modern convenience from beautifully furnished lounges to Bendixes in the laundry.

Combining democratic ideas with new surroundings, Yakeley has gradually emerged to share the campus spotlight in numerous activities.

Known among women students for its fine co-operative spirit West Yakeley maintains the democratic systems of choosing officers by election. Any girl who feels she is capable of holding a dorm office submits her name and thereby nominates herself.

Surprise initiations performed by candlelight, term formals, parties on week-ends and occasional faculty teas are all included in Yakeley's social program.

These are among the many reasons why West Yakeley residents are loyal to their collegiate home.

MEN'S DORMITORIES

Although the apartments over the Smoke Shop, where reside God's chosen few, are pleasant, it is, nonetheless, the aim of the vast majority of State's male population to get a coveted berth in one of the college's dorms. The convenience that they offer is only one of their drawing cards. They are warm in the winter and cool in spring and any resident will tell you that air conditioning is here to stay. It is rumored that the college administration spirited away the chef of the Waldorf-Astoria for the sole reason of giving to the dorm dwelling Spartans meals that are supreme. As places of architectural beauty the dormitories cannot be approached and building and grounds department keeps the lawns looking like the greens of the nation's finest golf course. Nor are the residents left only to mull over their text books. What is college without parties? Every term, it seems, finds many occasions when the boys put their books away and hie themselves down to the recreation rooms of their buildings to partake of a gala record party. What with a few good bull sessions thrown in for good measure, life in the dorms cannot be termed "dull."

The home-like surroundings of a dormitory library give State Students additional study areas in which to hit the books or ponder the day's events over a newspaper. During the frequent breaks conversation breaks out and covers dates and women with a thoroughness not often exercised on more academic matters.

MASON ABBOT CLUB

Pleasantly surprised, 1200 men returned to Mason-Abbot Hall this year and found that their campus home had acquired a new interior. Draperies which had maintained the original decorum were replaced with a more handsome specie destined to see long service in the battle of early morning sun worshipers versus late sleepers seeking more shut eye. Easy chairs in the individual rooms were given rejuvenation and were once again holding their own. The ever important dining rooms saw a welcome change to dishes instead of the tolerated trays, and raised eyebrows in the serving lines diminished considerably.

The dormitory's social calendar had a successful beginning with a combined Mason-Abbot open house. Invitations were sent to women on and off campus. The many guests were exposed to the good fellowship of Mason-Abbot residents and their genial advisors, "Doc" and Mrs. Luker and Mr. and Mrs. Dickerson. Follow-ups were assured as the men made mental note of interesting telephone numbers and other more or less vital information.

The year was rounded out with a long and varied list of dormitory activities that included sports competitions, participation in all-college events, and social affairs. All were calculated to make Mason and Abbott Halls the homes of spirited young men, rather than just a place to park text books.

SNYDER

Inside and out, this year produced the finishing touches in the "bringing up of Snyder Hall." Our lobby was brightened with new gold and blue easy chairs, coffee tables and thick rugs underfoot. Outside, all hands hailed the planting of grass and trees, replacing acres of what was appropriately called "no man's land."

On the social side, Snyder residents will be sure to count among their most vivid memories the jubilation from winning the annual push-cart derby, the almost continuous football and softball games on the south lawn, and the resounding splashes as seniors hit the water of the Red Cedar in a pre-graduation ducking.

We'll not easily forget the pride in showing off Snyder to the folks from home or the long hours spent grinding out a term paper in the lower lounge.

PHILLIPS

T. Glenn Phillips Hall, completed two years ago, is now looking more like home to the 650 men living there with the addition of trees, shrubs, and other landscaping around the exterior of the dorm.

An integrated community in itself, Phillips, is unique in the spirit of friendliness and socialibility which prevails among the men. This spirit is fostered by the bi-weekly radio parties, the term parties, the songfests, and the bull sessions that the men usually engage in. A familiar figure at these get-togethers is Mr. Cooke, the resident advisor, who is as adept at group discussions as he is at the ping pong and pool tables.

Our men can always look back and remember the days they spent in Phillips as some of the best of their college days.

QUONSET VILLAGE

The residents of that foreign outpost of State's campus, variously called Little Siberia, Muddy Acres, and sometimes Quonset Village, have formed themselves a council whose duty it is to direct activities conducive to the social welfare of all. The council is composed of twenty-six counselors, an advisor, and two representatives chosen from each precinct. Each term these politicos get their heads together on plans for the quarterly dance. The dance, which last fall drew a thousand couples, is usually held in the Women's Gym.

Originally an emergency housing project for MSC's returning vets, Quonset Village has become an integral part of the New State.

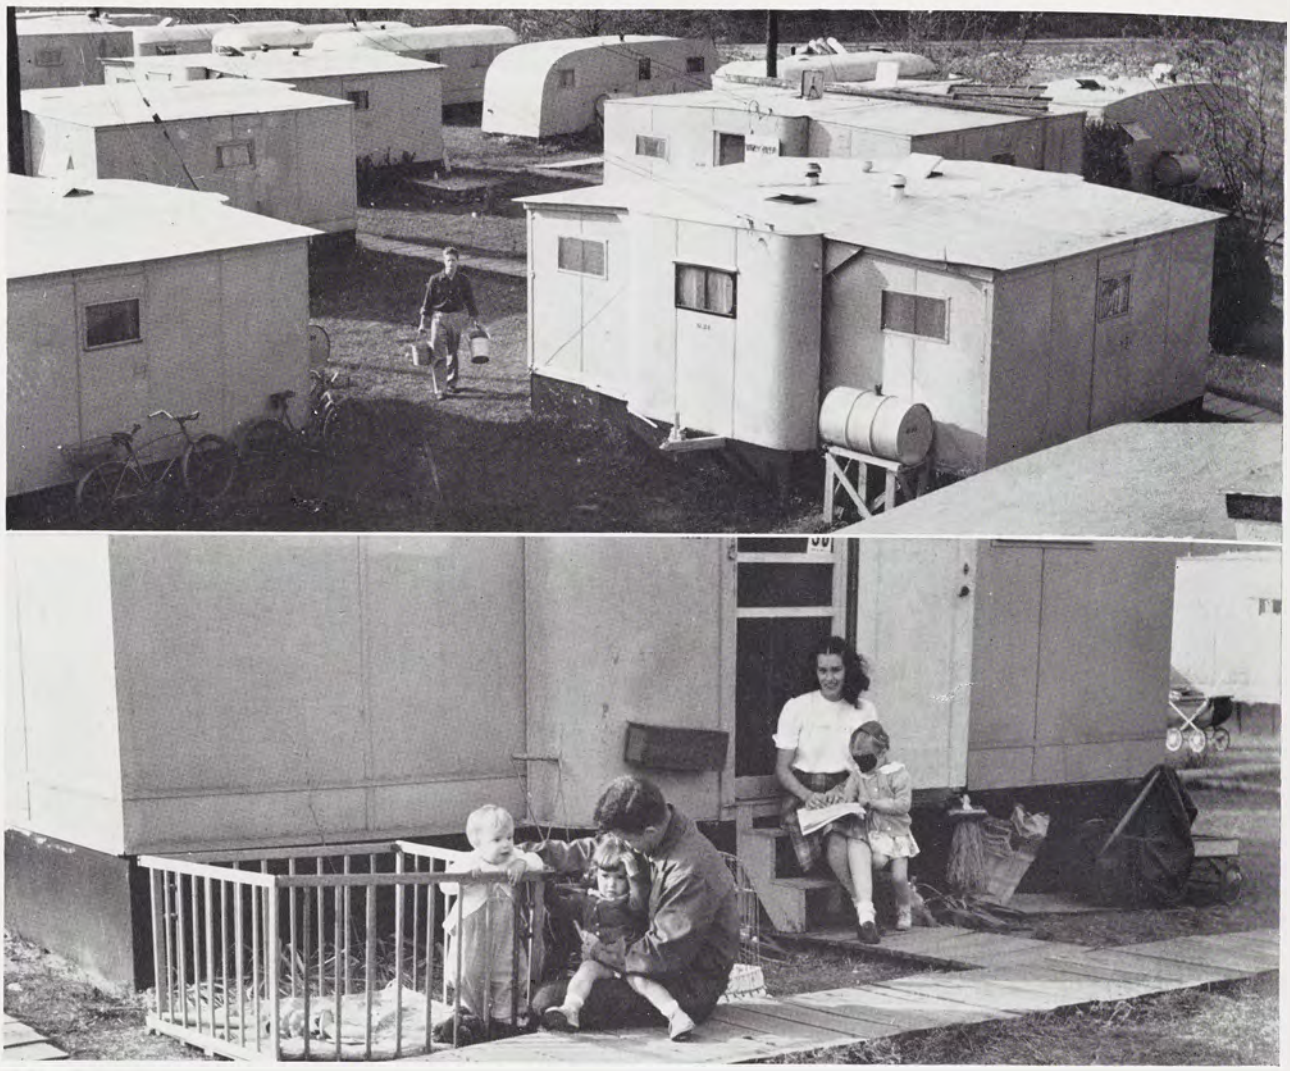
SPARTAN VILLAGE

The rows of pre-fabs, trailers, one-story bungalows and barracks apartments on the out-skirts of campus play a unique role in college living at Michigan State. Known as Spartan village, these novel living quarters are filled with ex-GI's and their families.

There is a common bond between neighbors in this community. All the husbands are doing the same work, getting a college education to prepare for a better job. They're all getting better than average grades as well. Their efforts are felt in the rise of academic averages in campus classrooms.

"Keeping up with the Jones's" is a phrase and a feeling that is rare in Spartan Village since money coming into these GI families revolves around the government allowances. Although some wives do work, teaching school or banging typewriters in downtown offices, incomes vary little from one family to another. Many are paying off old debts and establishing savings accounts.

A cooperative grocery and meat market helps young wives cut corners and aids in making budgets work out to the last penny. First class fruits, vegetables, staples, and meats are available at far lower prices than up-town merchants can offer.



TOP: Water boy.
BOTTOM: Jim and Marilyn Montgomery with Jim, Jani, and Jerri.

SPARTAN VILLAGE

The patter of small feet is heard in three out of four units. Mothers double up on afternoon baby sitting, often looking after five or six energetic youngsters at a time. This sharing of time and effort does much to help busy homemakers get marketing and laundering done without worrying about their young ones.

Recreation is by necessity kept within certain financial limits. Creative games, card playing, movies, and get-togethers with lively chatter as the main attraction contribute an important part to Spartan Village relaxation. The J-Hop, Senior Ball, and other dances are on the social calendars of many couples as are numbers on the lecture-concert series. Many an engineering problem has been left until a late hour because of the Minneapolis Symphony or Ballet Russe.

Occasionally residents of Spartan Village feel like exchanging the heavy load they carry with students on the other side of campus. The going does get rough, what with families, market lists, money problems, plus the examinations and term papers that pop up with remarkable regularity. But they have their goals firmly in mind and the wills to attain them. Their eyes are looking straight ahead to the future.

WOMEN'S CO-OP LEAGUE

The Women's Cooperative League, comprising all of the 150 co-ed residents of the eight off-campus, college operated women's co-op houses, finished its third successful year in '49.

The council, the coordinating body of the league, is composed of elected representatives from each house and strives to unite the efforts of the individual living groups and to encourage all of the league members to participate actively in every campus function. These ends have been effectively accomplished by welding the various member houses into a compact working unit.

To aid the Big Sister program, an Orientation Guide was published by the league in '49 and gives to all new girls a thorough understanding of the cooperative system at Michigan State. Nor is this the only Co-op League publication.

Last year the group began printing the "Octagon," a monthly newspaper which serves not only to keep the co-op co-eds abreast of league activities, but of all campus affairs as well.

The first social gathering of the year, a party to welcome the new freshmen in the houses, was held at the Forestry Cabin. Several campus notables were in attendance. This was followed by the annual Co-Hop which is sponsored jointly with the Men's Co-op Council. Spring was the time for the traditional formal installation service for new League members, and the rest of the year was filled with house parties and exchange dinners.

As an incentive to study, a rotating scholarship plaque is presented each year to the house having the highest point average.

ELSWORTH

We are completing our ninth year of cooperation at MSC with the addition of more new names to the 168 men who have lived at Elsworth.

We have worked through the second year of operation with the new annex and an expanded active membership of forty-six. This year two new furnaces were installed and much repair work was accomplished. It all adds to our motto of "doing all our own work," and we gain valuable experience in living together, in solving household and social problems not encountered in regular college activities.

On the lighter side the house began fall term with a comic character party. Dinners, informal parties, and the annual Senior banquet for graduates and their parents.

HOWLAND

Founded in 1948, Howland House is the newest and largest co-op house on campus. It was named for Mr. Arthur Howland, Associate Professor of Agricultural Economics, who has done extensive work in the field of cooperative enterprises.

Providing forty-five men with a place to eat and sleep, the house offers an opportunity to get experience in living together as an economic and social unit which proves invaluable after leaving school.

The house teams have made a very good showing during the past year in intra-mural athletics. On the social side, the house has had a full year. It started off last fall with an exchange dinner and gained momentum throughout a grand and gay procession of radio and term parties.

HEDRICK

Effective living is more than just another Basic subject to the men of Hedrick House. By the use of cooperative ideals and techniques they provide themselves with a fuller and less expensive collegiate life.

Starting off with the idea of open membership, co-op men find that they can gain much through close contact with others of every race, creed, and variety of ideas. The only uniformity demanded is a desire to work cooperatively with others.

Every man has a voice in the affairs of the house, a voice he can use at the weekly house meeting where every question is put to an open vote. This gives men practice in democracy and a sense of being able to direct their own affairs.

Cooperative living provides training for whatever is in store for Hedrick graduates.

ASHER

Established by eight men who lived together in a private home, Asher House was officially organized at Michigan State College in the fall of 1947. These men, sharing the same religious views and ideals of living, decided to expand so that a larger group could participate in the bond of fellowship and comradeship.

INFORMALS

Thousands of MSC students jammed the streets, kindled bon-fires and tied up traffic for hours when official word came through announcing State's acceptance into the Big 10. Pictured are captain Hal Voegler and George Guerre, star halfback, on the shoulders of rooters.

The annual Horse Show played to a packed house early in Spring term. A part of the show was polo, played with a basketball and brooms. Here, two of the players are preparing to kick a field goal.

The old grill was packed when the student enrollment was only 5,000. Now the grill has been greatly enlarged and the place is still jammed morning, noon, and night. The Union is now thinking of adding additional grill space by utilizing the bowling alleys, billiard room, ping-pong room, and the lounges as additional coffee space.

Spring parades are as much a part of campus tradition as the Water Carnival. Every Tuesday during spring term all ROTC men in full dress uniform pass in review before the regimental officers and Corps Sponsors. Here the Armored Cavalry unit leads the parade with an Armored Recon Car.

Businessmen Support Your Record of the Year

It is to the business men and merchants of the Lansing area that the Wolverine owes so much for their support. These men, the economic backbone of the college community, give to the yearbook year in and year out their very much appreciated material help. Without their aid it would be utterly impossible to publish this record of the student's year at Michigan State which, it is hoped, will give the student of today a few pleasant moments in some far off tomorrow. They have done their part in making the book a success and, if past performance is any criterion, they will continue to do so. It is now up to you, the students of Michigan State, to show that you sincerely appreciate the interest that the business men and merchants have taken in you and your yearbook. Give your wholehearted support to the advertisers you will find on the following pages.

The roots of Michigan State College are founded in the soil. And it is probably due to that important truth that Michigan State is showing such remarkable progress among the greater educational institutions of the country.

Primarily we are an agricultural people, dependent upon the wealth that comes from soil cultivation, and from the development of the sciences which bring about soil improvement. In this development it is no longer possible to segregate the kinds or amount of education needed by the scientist farmer. Literature and language, art and science, medicine and chemistry, domestic science, physiology, engineering, animal husbandry—all are needed in the intensely complicated, highly mechanized scientific business of Agriculture.

The farmer is no longer an isolated and forgotten man in overalls. He is the basic scientist, the basic mechanic, the evolutionist, the most necessary producing unit of our population. It is a high compliment today to say of a man that "he is a good farmer" for in saying that we say that he combines the qualities which make up the best elements of American citizenship.

State College has a great and expanding future in the development of scholarship—the development of science put to use through men and women trained in all phases of this basic form of American Living.

OLDSMOBILE "ROCKET"

Oldsmobile's "Rocket"—new high-compression 8-cylinder engine. 135 horsepower plus improved gas economy.

"Futuramic Design!" "Hydra-Matic Drive!" "Whirlaway!"—these are all famous Oldsmobile firsts. And now, Oldsmobile is first again with Futuramic power for America's only Futuramic car. All new in concept and design, Oldsmobile's "Rocket" Engine means unbelievable smoothness, quietness and flexibility . . . combined with sensational acceleration. The "Rocket" opens up a whole new world of motor car efficiency. For this is the engine that makes high-compression performance—tomorrow's kind of performance—a reality on the highways of today. And this revolutionary new power plant is featured in the spectacular, new lower-priced Futuramic "88" as well as the big, luxurious Oldsmobile "98." They're the "New Thrill" cars of the year, brought to you by Oldsmobile, pioneer of Hydra-Matic Drive and builder of the Futuramics.

TEAMWORK

Engineering - Education - Industry - Agriculture

Modern food production requires teamwork . . . the combined efforts of growers, educators, engineers and craftsmen in industry.
Colleges—such as Michigan State—are important to the team: as information centers, as well as sources of skilled personnel.
This close cooperation—teamwork—produces more than food . . . it leads directly to a better way of life.

IT'S OVER AND DONE:

Sunny Side Up

WITH THANKS TO . . .

The staff of the 1949 Wolverine; Mr. Philip May; Mr. Gerald Knapp and the college accounting department; and the administration for their fine cooperation; the LeClear Studio; the Indianapolis Engraving Company; the Ann Arbor Press; and the S. K. Smith Cover Company all of whom did so much to make this yearbook possible.
