MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY

East Lansing, Michigan

THE CONTRASTS of a modern university

The notion of contrast cuts two ways in the modern university. On the one hand, the institution of higher learning rests on a different foundation than an assembly line or a drill formation. On the other hand, we study both of these activities for honor points just as seriously as we read Aristotle and Hemingway.

A university, then, in one sense is a unit contrast to other ways of life. In another, it is an index of vertical contrasts.

Like a black-and-white photograph, a university defines and emphasizes its parts by contrasts of tone and mood. By this context-setting, image-sharpening device, certain aspects of the vast institution are set off in high relief, and other less important facets remain shadow-bound.

*Build on the premise of the Land Grant philosophy, they stand for many today

the spirit of the Little Red Schoolhouse.
But, the sophisticates smile, they have heart.*

The pulse of campus mood, like the weather, is cyclical . . .

*The green lush of reflected inactivity gives way the swirling fury

to the dormant inactivity of a uniform white blanket of motionless particles.*

but is also tempered by companionship.

*Two people can overpopulate
a quiet river

The meaningful contrast

a perceived imbalance.*

*Experience often transcends its surroundings.
But how often does it blend?
The creative man thinks symbolically and finds a harmony between mind and matter.*

The challenge of finding crossroads and bridging the unknown . . .

*Guy-wires of thought may be
during a ten-minute break

Contrasts in college appear with the change of an hour-hand . . .

*Campus moods vary with time and place, which set them,
with tone and tempo,
which temper them,
and with people,
who have them.*

*Methods and levels

or in enthusiastic slap-happiness.*

A university gives carte-blanche to expressiveness and we respond, as usual, in contrasts.

Contrasts shift with the image of every individual . . .

. . . and contrasts respond to the postures of a thousand occasions.

*Our goals are often as close but may beckon indistinctly from a horizon too cluttered with trivia to be immediately obvious.

They are usually practical,
but sometimes get as old-fashioned as service to mankind.*

Filled-up sections, class conflicts and other bugaboos of scheduling courses, make registration an arena of confusion and hectic activity.

STUDENT LIVING A day in the life of a student at MSU might begin, as it does with the circulation manager of the State News, at 4 a.m., or it could start lazily just before an eleven-o'clock at Berkey. It is often baptized by a cup of coffee and a doughnut in a drug store, but sleepy students with growling stomachs in eight-o'clocks often compete with the professor for volume.

It might be that easy day, with just two classes back-to-back, and Friday afternoon left open for a little TGIF'ing; or it might be a hectic one with three midterms to grapple with and the prospects of a term paper that should be further along than it is, supplying little twinges of uneasiness, staccato-like, throughout the day.

And so the Spartan life proceeds.

A university which offers students part-time employment probably claims the most educated window-washers in the world.

The Association of Grill-Hounds convenes daily in the bustling grill of the Student Union Building.

After all the fender-dodging, and the Berkey-Hall-sidestepping, and the twenty-minute walks between class buildings, made in ten minutes, there lies another, not necessarily academic life at MSU. Every student finds during his stay here at least one place he likes to return to; a little nook or unused corner classroom, to study in, to plan the future in, to find creative loneliness.

It doesn't have to be completely isolated, but should insure a certain privacy. It probably won't be a dormitory bedroom but it could be the storeroom of a fraternity house, with its naked light bulb, or a professor's office gained by special permission, or the Wolverine office late at night.

They get harder to find as enrollment rises, but time spent there grows correspondingly more valuable.

Public bus service was introduced on campus this year which serviced all main student traffic routes.

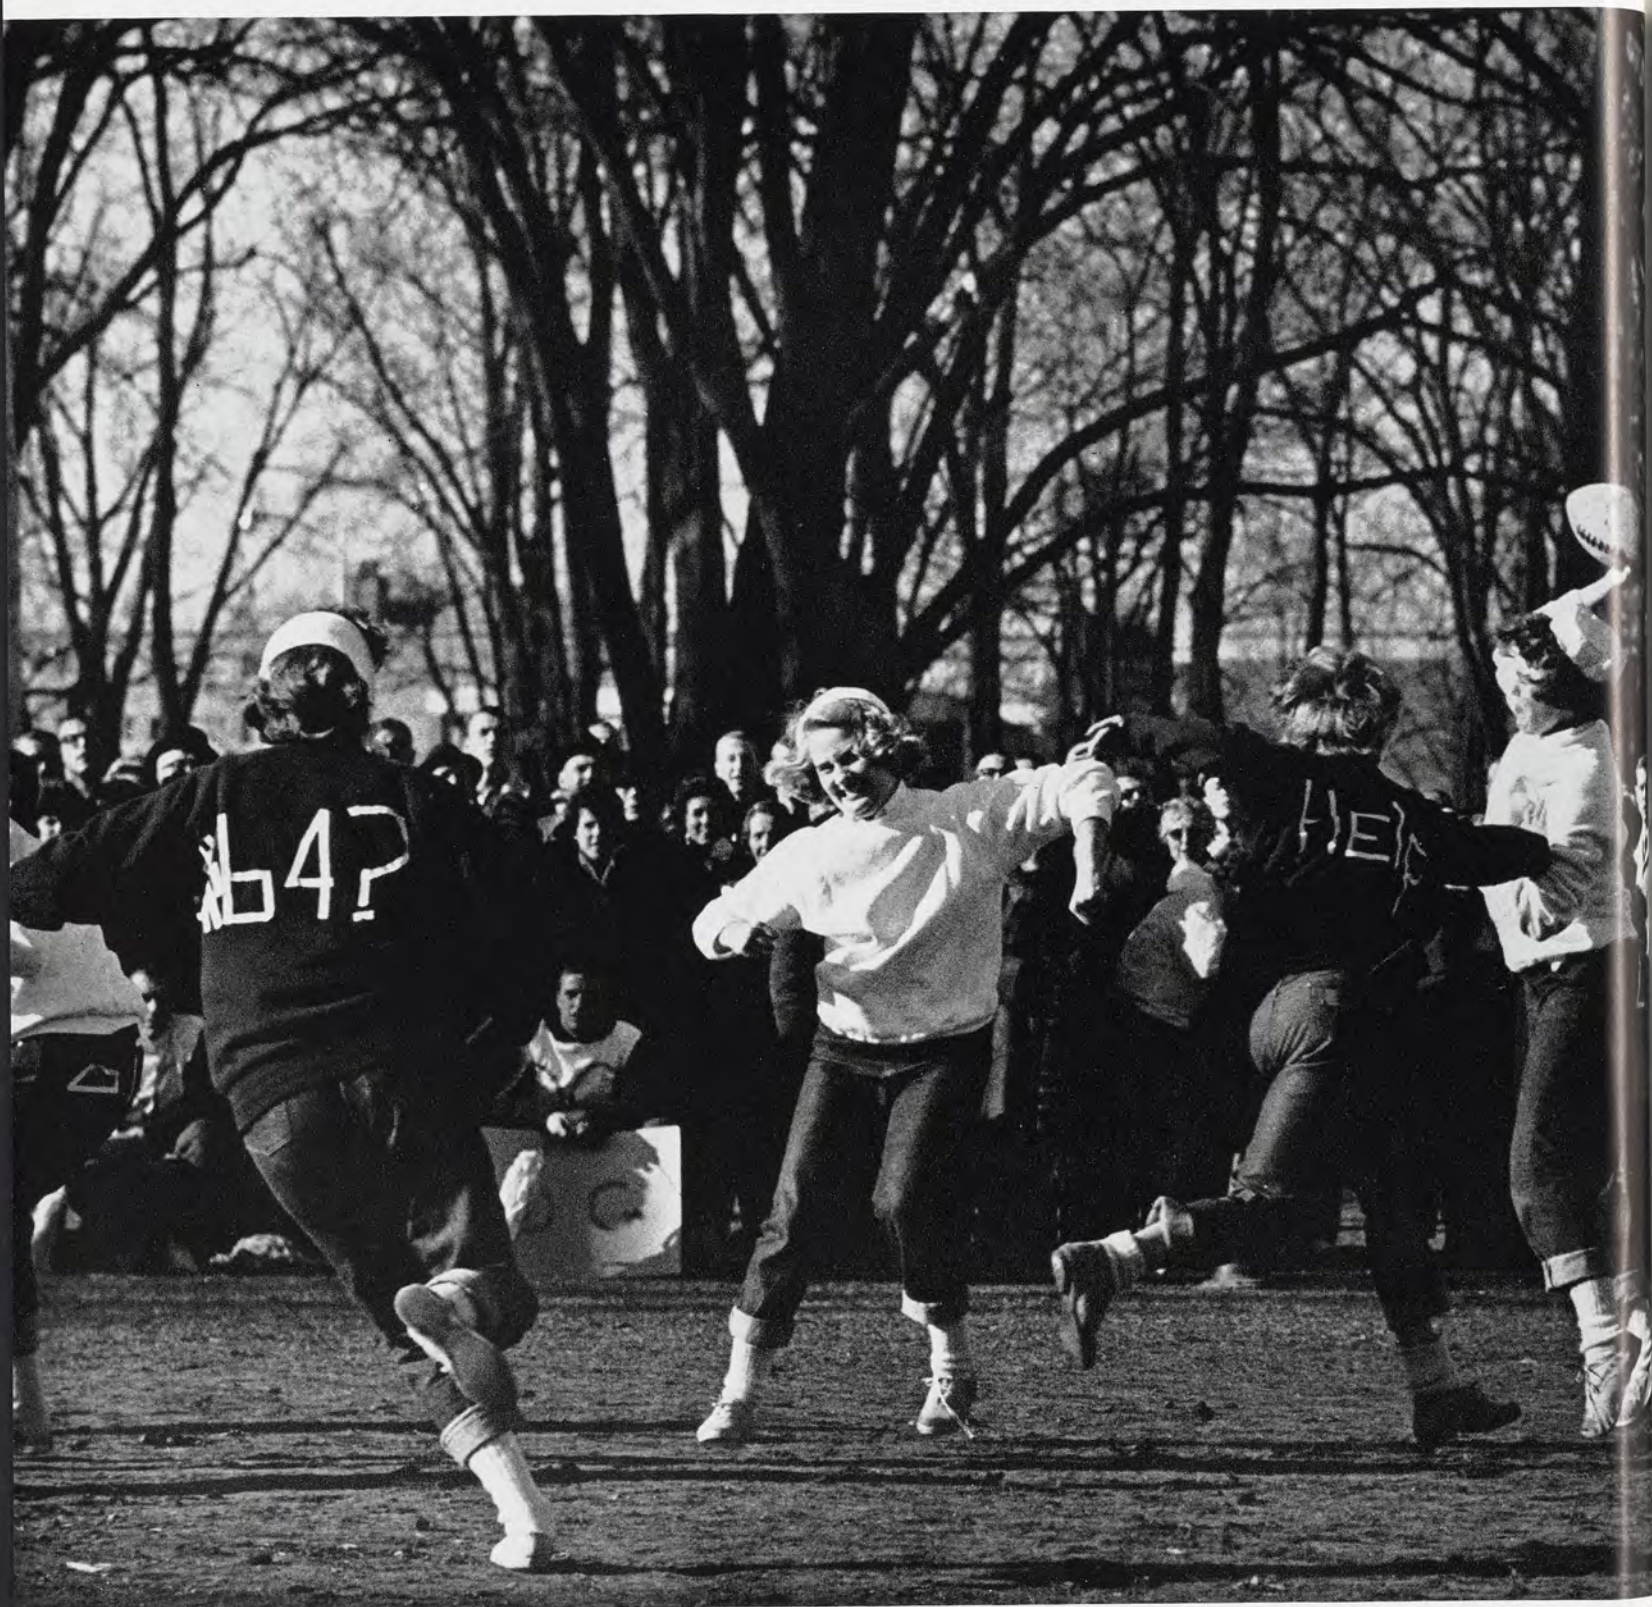

The most popular indoor sport on campus—

The Delta Gamma's and the Gamma Phi Beta's battle it out in their annual gridiron spectacle, the Powder Puff Bowl.

Precious minutes and hours snatched away from studies are too valuable to be merely lounged away. Student recreation is notoriously creative and often unique, though a game of bridge or an afternoon spent under the hood of a sports car are anything but passé.

MSU boasts large contingents of sun-worshippers, Monday-morning-quarterbacks, and jazz buffs. A cup of coffee, a pack of cigarettes and a booth in the Union grill are often the ingredients for a spirited discussion about any topic from the latest movie at the Lucon to Dante's Divine Comedy.

The faddish and the fashionable in recreation are always reflected by students. The long, dimly-lighted halls in coed dormitories looked like the rehearsal hall for the Rockette Twisters when Joey Dee and the Peppermint Lounge were frequent topics of conversation. And the talkathon craze found willing vocal chords among Spartan talkers.

Sunny weather is the harbinger of picnics, swimming, bermudas, sunglasses and honeymoon bridge.

A favorite springtime recreation spot is the Lake Lansing Amusement Park.

MSU student recreation ranges from the highly elaborate and expensive to the simplest forms of enjoyment possible. Friday afternoon during Winter term finds Grand River dotted with ski-laden cars bearing university stickers headed toward northern lodges. And during spring break the roads between East Lansing and Fort Lauderdale bear a little extra traffic.

Just as many pleasurable hours are spent, however, in rousing coed football games, driving by sorority row when the sun decks are heavily populated, and settling down with a sandwich and a soda to watch the late movie on TV.

Slow walks around Beaumont Tower late at night build many dream castles; intense discussion over a morning cup of coffee gradually builds a framework of thought to judge and live by; and snatched moments of objective disassociation from group activity create a treasure chest of memories.

The direction this coed's eyes are pointing, and the direction of the ball seem to be at slight odds.

Snow sculpture seems to give vent to all sorts of hallucinations, although this may be what the real Abominable Snowman looks like.

Fair weather draws the student cult of sun-worshippers together at the IM Pool.

A good show is hard to beat for entertainment, and it is also an inexpensive date.

Intellectual stimulation follows from academics to study intermissions.

Whether the "fun time" of a college career is measured out in the company of a victrola and a stack of record albums, or in the midst of a thousand throngs of athletic fans, time laid aside for strictly "druther" activities can be an important aid in achieving one's own "good life".

As the business life and the academic life grow more hectic in our time-bound society, recreation grows correspondingly more active and serious. Perhaps the Kennedy Clan is unique for a First Family in their football matches, but their fury is surely rivaled by MSU's coed gridiron spectacles.

Even though ominous comparisons can be drawn between the cheering crowds at a Homecoming game and the bread-and-circuses philosophy of Caesar Rome, creative recreation is far from dead in a university community.

Turkey trotters clammer over the last obstacle and rush toward the finish line in the pre-Thanksgiving event.

Bright sunshine brings out the beauty of fall at early season football.

Students are soon absorbed in the flurry of social activities which accompany each new school year.

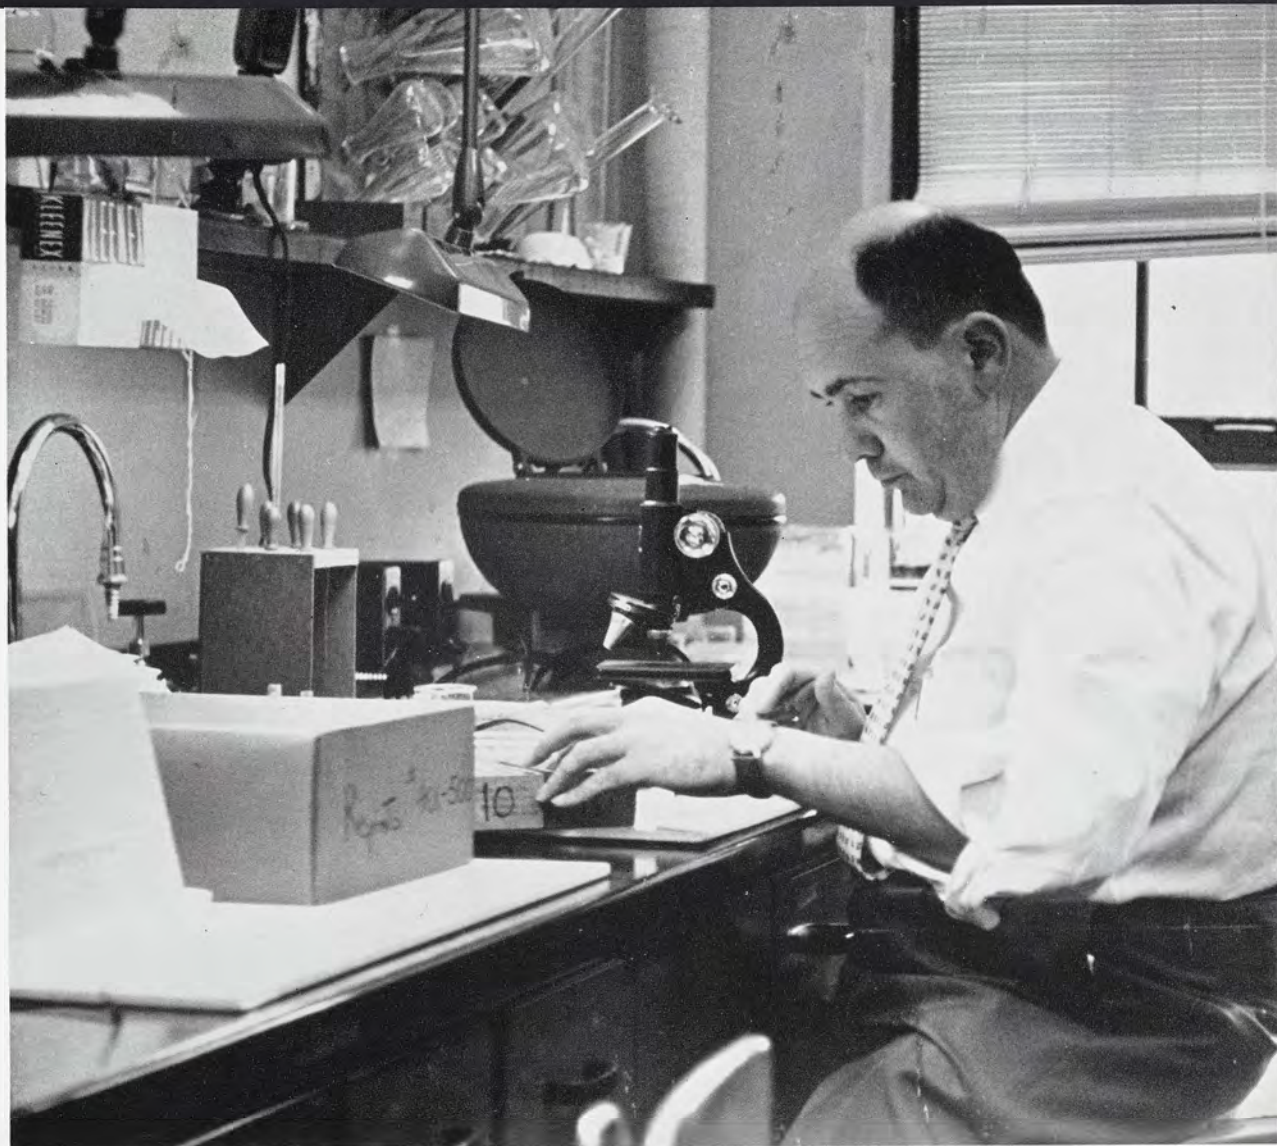

Academic counseling is a vital and integral part of the division of labor given the faculty members.

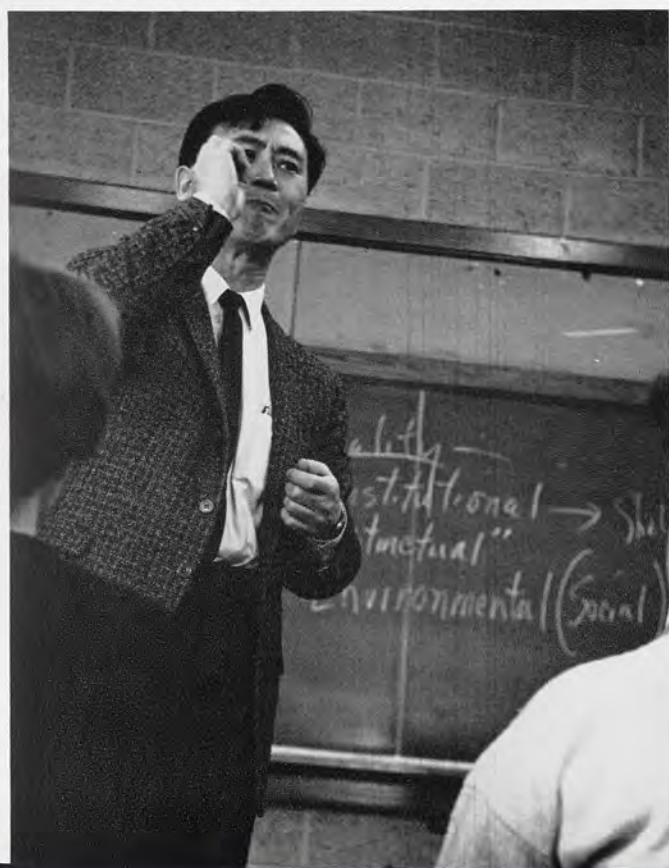

Already one of the busiest buildings on campus, newly-opened Bessey Hall houses three of the Basic Colleges.

Many faculty members are engaged in research projects, and publish their findings in scholarly journals

Dr. Hideya Kumata of the Department of General Communication Arts gestures to emphasize a point during a lecture.

The threadbare stereotype of a university professor as an absent-minded, pipe-smoking, twenty-syllable-word user is fast vanishing; but many students are looking for some sort of New Breed to emerge from behind the academic confines of laboratories and classrooms. This anticipated hybrid is not expected in scholarly circles for some time, as most professors feel that a generalized scholar is a contradiction in terms; that the essence of an academic life is in part a relaxation of the sanctions toward conformity.

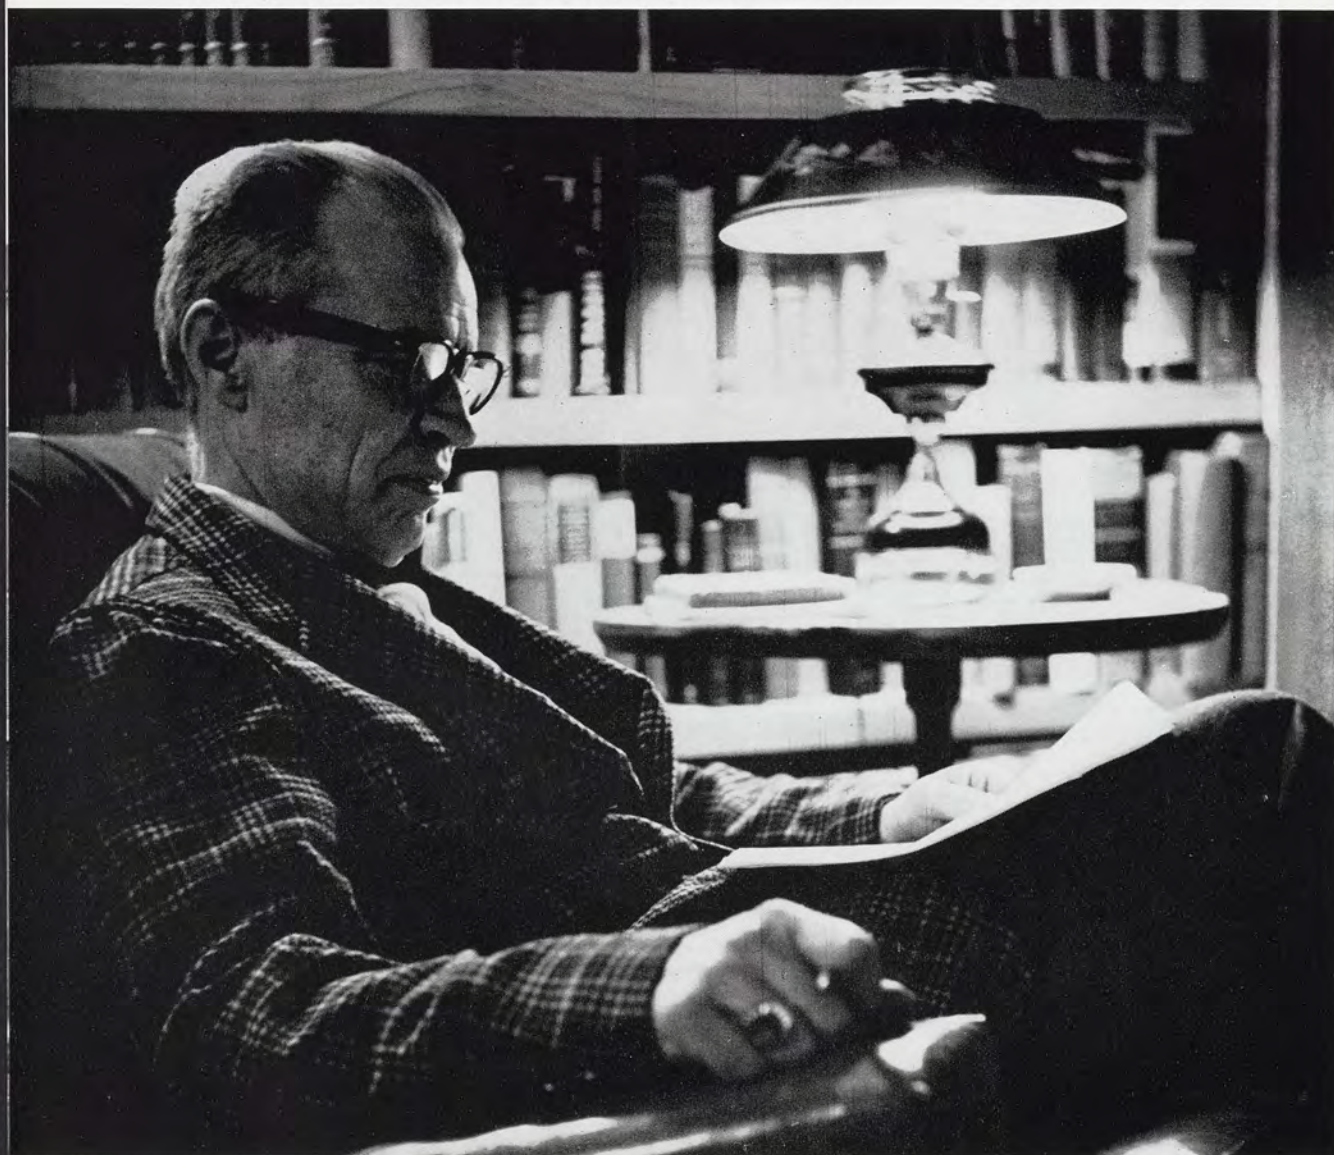

The interests and goals of MSU's faculty are as diverse as those of her students. Faculty members are as likely as a corporation executive to take an afternoon off for a round of golf, and their wives are as likely as any housewife to negotiate for an occasional evening out.

The one possible point of departure which a professor and his family might not share with the rest of the country's working force is the exciting opportunity to reside in a university community.

Three faculty members talk shop during their coffee break at Kewpee's.

Being a professor is not a nine to five occupation, but often takes up a good part of the evening preparing for the next day.

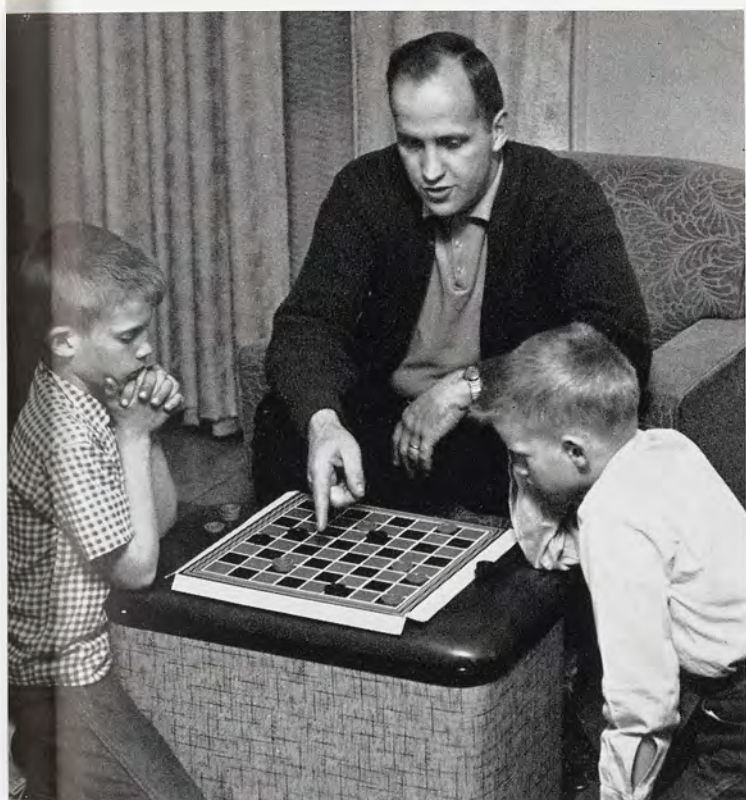

Michigan State's faculty is governed by, and governs through, a unique system of councils designed to insure efficient administration of academic problems.

The Academic Senate, composed of professors, associate professors and assistant professors with tenure, and including the academic deans, meets once each term to consider legislative and policy matters.

The Academic Council acts as a screening agent for the Senate. Composed of the Deans, the steering committee of the Senate and two representatives elected from each college, the Council investigates academic problems through a system of standing committees and makes recommendations to the Senate for full consideration and debate.

Many faculty members utilize the facilities of the Intramural Building to keep in physical trim.

The fine points of checker strategy are reviewed by Professor John Thurber for the benefit of two youthful players.

The services which MSU performs are directed toward the benefit of the student and her own purposes. Although they are definitely secondary in importance to the academic program, they are by no means marginal in value.

Students are aware of university services from the day they receive their admission slip from one of them until the day they secure a job through another one. Like academics, services are overseen by men of specialized professional training, and in many cases, by men of advanced educational background.

SERVICES

Many transfer students and high school seniors visit campus before they apply to MSU.

Processing the applications of new students is a year-round job for employees of the Office of Admissions and Scholarships.

ADMISSIONS AND SCHOLARSHIPS One of the heartbeat services of the University, MSU's Office of Admissions, and Scholarships, headed by Dr. Gordon A. Sabine, selects those students who represent the expanding and finer quality enrollment.

Unlike many public institutions of higher learning, MSU is not required to accept every high school graduate in the state who applies. Rising standards are reflected by the fact that MSU has more incoming freshmen from the top ten percent of their graduating class than any other Michigan university.

To the most outstanding of those who are admitted each year, scholarships are awarded according to ability and need. From the ten all-expense Alumni Distinguished Scholarships to small yearly stipends, hundreds of Michigan State students are given opportunities to study through scholarship grants.

COUNSELING CENTER The Counseling Center offers students the opportunity to discuss specific problems with experts in advice. The 16 full-time and 12 part-time counselors give the University Counseling Center the largest staff of any of its type in the country. Last year the counselors advised over 5,700 students in slightly more than 15,000 different interviews.

Besides its guidance aid, the department also helps in other similar activities such as the orientation program, summer counseling clinic and a complete aptitude testing laboratory. The results of these tests aid advisors in discussing academic progress, career planning or personal adjustment, the most frequent interview topics.

Individual conferences with professional counselors help students air their problems.

Batteries of tests, designed to direct the student toward the major field he is best suited for, are administered regularly.

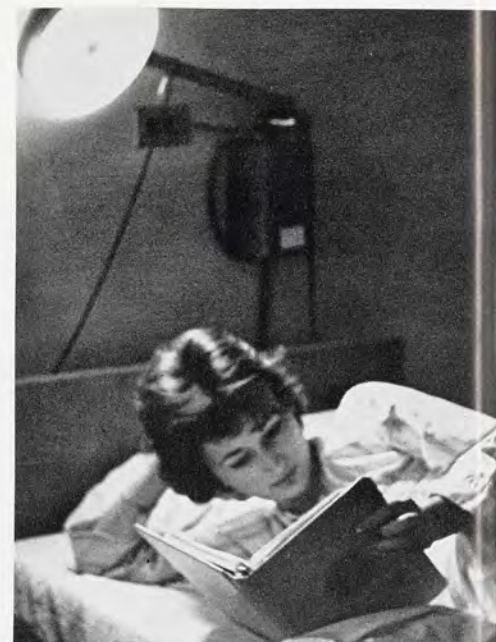

The daily line-up of patients at Olin Health Center fills the waiting room and keeps the office busy.

OLIN HEALTH CENTER Michigan State University maintains a centrally located, well-equipped health service in Olin Memorial Health Center. The Center has facilities for students and faculty who need medical, acute surgical or psychiatric treatment.

Michigan State is one of a few universities which does not have an explicit fee for this service. The Health Center is a completely self-contained unit, run as nearly like a commercial hospital as possible.

Last year nearly 75,000 visits were recorded. Students are allowed free physician consultation, and up to 40 days of hospital care without charge. Olin also provides all medications, medical supplies and X-rays at cost plus a reasonable handling fee.

Sickness doesn't necessarily mean a vacation from the books.

Olin Center maintains a completely equipped pharmacy.

Three job hunters wait for their appointments with prospective employers in the Placement Bureau.

Interviews are coordinated from a central desk.

PLACEMENT BUREAU A service for students seeking all types of employment is maintained by the Placement Bureau. Under the direction of Jack Kinney, the University Placement Bureau offers seniors and graduate students the opportunity of speaking with representatives from over 700 nationwide industries and 200 school systems.

Last year a new record was set in the total number of interviews, as 13,231 students talked with prospective employers. More teachers were recruited from Michigan State than in any previous year.

The use of individual conference rooms, private phones and the service of a secretary allows interviewers to feel as if they were in their home offices.

The Placement Bureau also maintains a complete listing of part-time jobs, on and off campus, available to students, as well as helping them to find summer employment in their specific interest areas. The Bureau also offers a continuing service to all alumni: they may use the service whenever they wish.

Seniors check the bulletin board of the Placement Bureau for lists of companies sending interviewers here.

Beaumont Tower underwent a refacing during Fall term.

PUBLIC SAFETY AND BUILDINGS AND UTILITIES

Public Safety is the concern of director Richard Bernitt and his staff of 24 uniformed, full-time police officers. This is the department which handles traffic safety, automobile registration, ambulance dispatch and the general safety of everyone on campus.

The Department of Buildings and Utilities takes care of the power plants, utilities systems, automatic MSU Centrex telephones, building maintenance and sidewalks. Theodore B. Simon supervises the activities of the carpenter shop, key shop, garage, paint and sign shop, telephone office and tin shop, in addition to the electric shop, engineering department, motor pool, plumbing shop, power plants and reservoir.

Campus Police squad cars include emergency ambulance and first-aid equipment.

ALUMNI RELATIONS Alumni Relations is a 49-year-old service with a mailing list of more than 72,000. MSU has 90 alumni clubs throughout the world.

The program features information to alumni about campus activities and news of fellow alumni. It also publishes an alumni magazine, ten issues and eight supplements each year. This publication is free of charge to each new alumnus for one year, after which it is available on a subscription basis.

The department schedules class reunions and handles football tickets for alumni. A complete list of alumni clubs and contacts for each club is included with the graduate's diploma and alumni card.

The Alumni Chapel was built with gifts from MSU Alumni.

Starr H. Keesler, Director of the Alumni Relations Office, confers with Don L. Mason, Assistant Director, and Robert C. Toll, Director of the MSU Development Fund.

Two department secretaries wade through the mountain of clerical work necessary in keeping in touch with thousands of alumni all over the world.

INFORMATION SERVICES The purpose of Information Services is to keep the citizens of Michigan informed about what's happening at MSU. Its function is the gathering and channeling, through the mass media, of all MSU news.

Last year Information Services published 750 pamphlets, 350 on agricultural information, 50 on sports, and 350 on miscellaneous subjects. This department publishes the sports programs as well.

The MSU Magazine is published by Information Services for alumni.

W. Lowell Treaster, director, heads a staff of 25. Information Services had its own news bureau and photography lab.

This department supplies information to television and radio, both local and commercial, and to magazines and newspapers all over the country. It also handles international mail.

The Office of Information Services maintains a fully-equipped photography laboratory.

The MSU Magazine is published by the Department of Information Services and employs a full time staff.

The Kellogg Center for Continuing Education.

CONTINUING EDUCATION Continuing Education celebrates its tenth anniversary in Kellogg Center this year. MSU was the first of five Kellogg Centers, the others later being founded at the universities of Chicago, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Georgia.

Continuing Education is a multi-dimensional service at MSU. This department handles university conferences, university extension service, the program of liberal arts for administration, the Evening College, and the Institute for Community Development Services.

Continuing Education also has charge of the Committee of Junior College Co-operation, and the University of the Air, a series of credit and non-credit courses on television. The Cap and Gown Series handles entertainment and cultural programs each year.

AMLEC is another Continuing Education service. This is a program to enroll American students for study of a language in Europe, and to provide training for foreign students studying here.

A pack of Cub Scouts becomes the peanut gallery for an afternoon show over WMSB-TV.

WKAR-WMSB WKAR-AM and FM is the third oldest radio station in Michigan. The station celebrates its fortieth anniversary this year, marking the event with a special series of documentaries, "Project 40". These documentaries cover some of the issues of the past 40 years, such as the problems of the aged, water resources, technorama, winter sports and the hundredth anniversary of the land grants.

WKAR broadcasts 98 hours each week, dividing its programming between music, rural news and feature programs. This year WKAR featured a series of broadcasts from the Metropolitan Opera.

WKAR transmitters deliver its message to 90 per cent of the population of the state. Its circulation is close to seven million.

The lab for advanced television courses is found in the WMSB Educational TV studios. In these courses students become acquainted with the equipment and with the headaches of producing television shows. They work with professional technicians who air many shows daily. WMSB shares channel 10 with commercial station WILX-TV of Jackson.

A turntable operator cues up a disc in the WKAR control room.

Three Indians stroll the campus in native costume.

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAM The International Program at MSU is headed by Dean Glen L. Taggart, who coordinates the activities of American students abroad and foreign students studying here. This department also handles research and international speakers.

MSU maintains five major advisory groups to accomplish this function. They are located in countries of Asia, Africa, Central and South America. These advisory groups handle research and MSU business all over the world.

This international impact is being felt by students in both courses and research on campus. Distinguished speakers and foreign students are a part of this impact, but the international dimension is being driven ever-closer home through the classroom and the teaching of returning faculty members.

A compositor pulls a galley proof of a column of type at Campus Press where the State News was printed until Spring term.

Pub Row, again this year, lacked a literary magazine, as the Department of English publication, the Tarot begun last spring, did not return to press. The functions of a magazine, however, were partly taken up by the State News' new feature supplement, the "Spotlight."

The Petticoat Press, self-styled coterie of Pub Row coed editors, was reduced in size to an organization of one, Marcia VanNess of the State News. The distaff side was as active as always, however, in the general editing of the four student publications. Perhaps the re-establishment of the male pride was responsible for Pub Row's smashing defeat of Student Government 31-30 in their annual basketball contest.

WOLVERINE The editorial groundwork of the 1962 Wolverine was begun as early as last April, even before the '61 edition was off the press. The six major appointments, the editor, three associate editors, business manager, and sales manager, were made by the end of Spring term.

Jerry Holmes headed the staff of thirty regular staffers as Editor-in-Chief, and Business Manager Wayne Parsons organized a group of forty salesmen. Lowell Kinney was responsible for the 950 pictures in the yearbook, and Bill Doerner wore out the typewriter ribbons as Copy Editor. Karen Draper had the ticklish job of co-ordinating printing and engraving in her position as Production Editor.

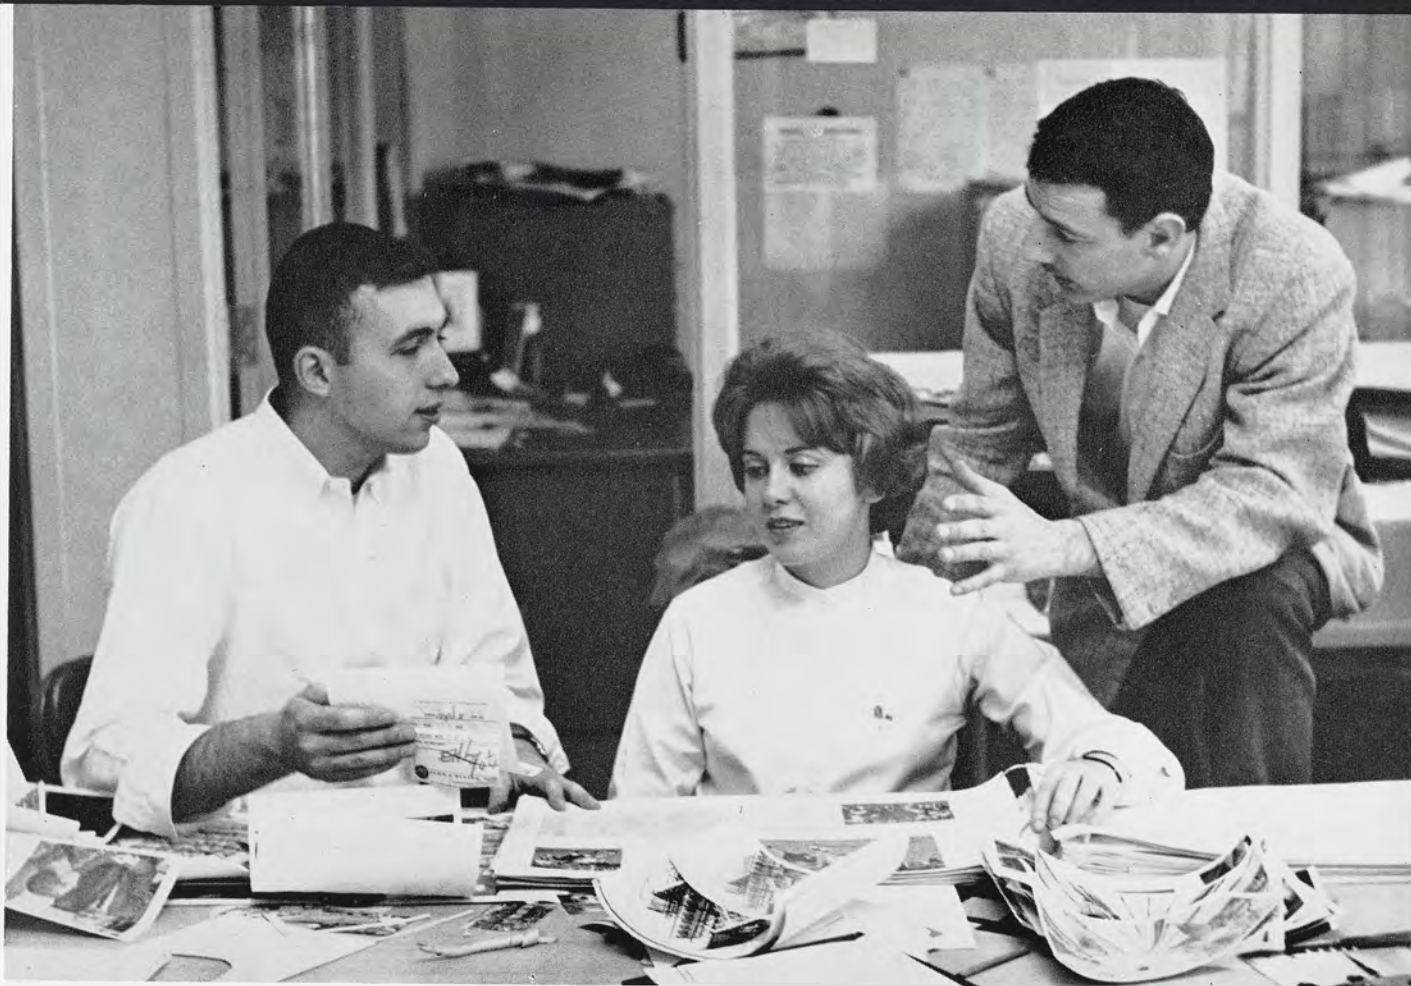

Judy Boughton and Doug Friz confer with Editor Jerry Holmes on the layout of the 1962 Wolverine.

Although a yearbook is painstakingly laid out and planned and hashed over months in advance of publication, it is by no means unresponsive to the tide of day-to-day events. The editors, riding the crest of the Rosebowl football wave Fall term for all it was worth, happily tore up the football section of the preplanned dummy, and began preparing an all-new "Rosebowl section". The Sales Manager, in correspondingly good spirits, had found himself a great promotion vehicle, and set up his fall campaign emphasizing the invaluable chronicle a Wolverine would be for this great event.

The sales drive was scheduled to begin the morning after the Minnesota game, and that day found the yearbook staff laughing nervously at each other. During the following week, after the Purdue heartbreaker, more red-penciling took place in 344 Student Services than any other activity, and every once in a while someone would look glumly up from his work and say, "Well, it was still a great idea."

Press operator John Stimson inspects a form on press at Speaker-Hines and Thomas.

Wayne Parsons, Business Manager of the 1962 Wolverine.

A year in the life of a Wolverine editor is measured out in campaigns—and deadlines. From the initial drive each fall to remind seniors to sign up for their graduation portraits, to the final back-breaking printer's deadline, the months pass with the rise and fall of various tension-builders.

When things are running smoothly, the Wolverine office is a showcase of neatness; but when the deadline heat is on, staffers have been known to get lost in the maze of rubber-cement cans and huge stacks of proof sheets.

Editor Jerry Holmes checks with John Vitovsky, campus representative from Speaker-Hines and Thomas.

The aborted Rose Bowl "special", although a tough project to give up, paved the way for increased Intramural athletic coverage in the 1962 Wolverine. MSU boasts one of the outstanding IM programs in the nation, and the editors felt it had too often been played down with respect to media coverage.

Another important decision which has to be carefully made is the choice of style on the divider pages. The 1962 Wolverine uses a series of hand-carved woodcuts to separate the major sections of the book. One of the earliest processes of pictorial reproduction, the art of woodcutting has become almost extinct since the introduction of modern high-speed photographic engraving techniques. The clean, striking linear qualities of woodcuts, however, have recently been rediscovered among layout designers, and this ancient art may be on the brink of its own renaissance.

Minna Reidel, Office Manager, puts some finishing touches on one of the "blob" posters that advertise the Wolverine.

Judy Platz and Judie Harvey work on some of the endless filing that's necessary for the Wolverine index.

The State News office becomes an arena of hub-bub each afternoon as the press deadline grows nearer.

The new offset process used by the State News means copy deadlines are earlier and requires a larger staff.

STATE NEWS A major change in the format of the Michigan State News greeted students the first day of Spring term classes with the headline, "Good morning, how do you like our new face?" It was indeed a complete facial lift, as the paper had changed printing processes from letterpress to offset. White paper, darker, cleaner print and higher quality photographic reproduction were the most obvious changes, but the whole schedule of publication was re-organized to accommodate the experiment.

The news is edited in the State News office as usual, and the pages are prepared for engraving in a special composition room just off campus. The mock-ups are then taken to Greenville, Michigan, where they are engraved and printed. The 20,000 copies of the paper are then trucked back to East Lansing in time for a six a.m. distribution.

Advertising manager Larry Pontius discusses an account with Lief Ericksen.

Bob Cook designs an advertising layout for a client.

Louis J. Berman, faculty advisor to the State News, confers with city editor Bill Coté.

A new section in the State News made its debut during Winter term. Called "Spotlight," it resembles the Sunday supplement in many newspapers, except that it is edited by the State News staff rather than nationally and it is distributed on Monday.

"Spotlight" contains entertainment reviews and previews, special columns about games and amusements, and regular feature stories of general interest. The tabloid paper usually runs 12-14 pages long.

1962 also marked the year when the State News was "on its own". Since its maiden issue it has been partly subsidized by the University, but mounting budget jitters last spring forced officials to cut off appropriations. Students were assessed $1 per term to help offset the sudden decrease in income, and advertising covered the remaining cost of operation.

Part of the student daily ritual is a thorough reading of the News.

The unsung hero of the State News staff is the Circulation Manager who braves all sorts of weather to get the news through.

Spartan Engineer staffers ready an issue for press.

Vic Hunn and John Thornton, Editor and Business Manager of the Spartan Engineer, silk screen notices that the current issue is on sale.

SPARTAN ENGINEER As one of MSU's two technical student publications, the Spartan Engineer's purpose is to disseminate technical information and news about local research projects in articles written by students.

The editors of the magazine began accepting stories written by graduate students this year, so that by-lines now include undergraduates, graduates, and faculty names. Content matter is balanced between local and national developments, and the new policy to include only material written on campus has been quite successful.

The Spartan Engineer is sold to the students and faculty members, and is distributed to the many national concerns which advertise in it.

MSU VETERINARIAN Located in the old Spartan magazine headquarters, the MSU Veterinarian is the student organ of MSU's College of Veterinary Medicine.

The staff of the magazine, vet. med. majors all, published three issues of veterinary news designed to keep all those interested in this field aware of recent developments.

Aside from this serious duty, staffers spent time polishing up their Oilcan Award which they retired permanently after winning it for three consecutive years. The award is presented to the publication presenting the most clever and original skit at the Publications Banquet each May.

MSU Veterinarian staff members paste up proofs in the final step before publication.

The Veterinarian staff forms an assembly line for the process of cutting out proofs for the paste-up.

Student Congress convenes weekly to discuss and enact legislation affecting the student body.

AUSG The All-University Student Government, patterned after the Federal Government, is divided into executive, legislative and judicial branches.

The Executive Branch of AUSG is headed by the President, elected by the student body each Spring term. He is directly responsible for the enforcement of all laws passed by the Student Congress. Assisting him in this function are the Executive Departments.

The Legislative Branch is contained within the Student Congress. Representatives are elected from each dormitory and collectively from the fraternities and sororities, married housing and off-campus students. They are chosen each spring or whenever a vacancy occurs. A special election was held during Spring term registration, this year, to determine whether graduate students should be represented in AUSG. The student reaction was favorable.

Larry Campbell, President of All-University Student Government.

The constitutional legality of all AUSG activities, both present and future, is determined by the All-University Judiciary. This same body also judges many cases involving student discipline. Another judicial body, the Student Traffic Appeals court, hears appeals from students summoned for traffic violations, and possesses the power to reverse a Campus Police decision.

Operating on a 25¢ fee from each student per term, and under the general direction of President Larry Campbell, AUSG again proved its financial responsibility with the many services performed for the students it represents, including free mimeographing service for all organizations, a student insurance program, and the organizations directory.

Jim Anderson, Administrative Vice President of AUSG, and Doug Dansinger, Executive Secretary.

One of the many benefits AUSG offers organizations is the mimeographing service.

An interest-free loan of $10 is available to any student through AUSG's Student Loan Bureau.

A spoof on campus activities was the idea behind "Campus Chaos," an original musical comedy presented as part of the annual Union Board Week.

The only bowling alley located near campus is in the basement of the Student Union Building.

UNION BOARD Need a ride home? Check with the Union Board Ride Bureau. Worried about getting some typing done? Go to the Union Board Typing Bureau. Looking for talent for a special event? See the Union Board Talent Bureau. These and other listings are kept up to date by the 125 member body of Union Board, whose responsibility it is to coordinate all cultural, recreational and social events held in the Union Building.

For recreation, the UB provides instruction in dancing, bridge, chess and bowling for any student who signs up. For those already proficient in these games, tournaments are sponsored.

To promote appreciation of the fine and popular arts, Union Board presents a series of painting and photographic exhibits throughout the year. Students with talent in the performing arts are encouraged to try out for the UB Talent Show, which this year was given continuity and presented as an original musical comedy.

The lounge in the Union is often used for just that.

Union Board also sponsors three or four dances per term for a nominal fee. Perhaps four to six jazz concerts and folk singing festivals are presented during the year under the auspices of UB.

The newly created Forum Committee gathers speakers and lecturers who are experts on a variety of vital issues and encourages student participation in the discussions which follow.

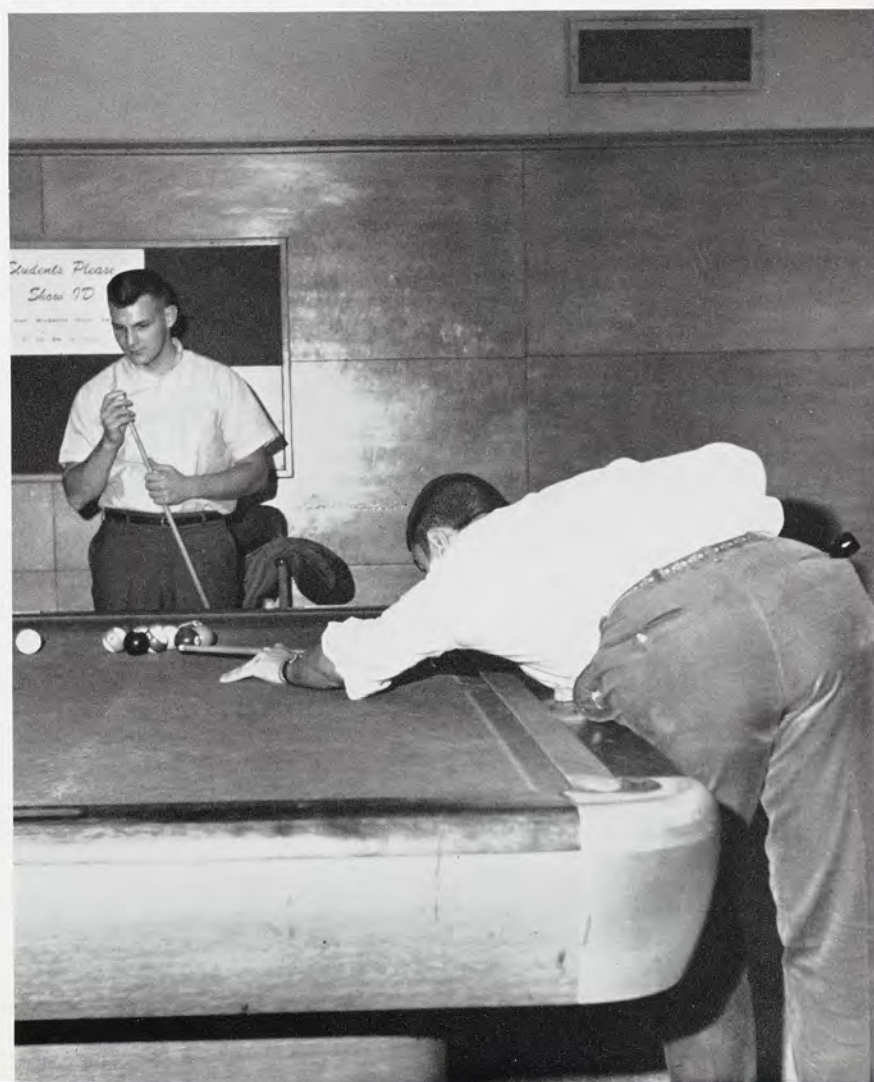

Any organization or activity which needs a place to meet may reserve a room in the Union Building. A complete catering service is maintained to service these functions. The Union Building also houses a browsing room where students may read and borrow books, an International Room for foreign students, and a special room for alumni.

All these many and varied activities and services are carried out by students who gain membership by petitioning and rushing each Winter term.

The Browsing Room offers a wide selection of reading material.

Pool enthusiasts meet in the Billiards Room of the Union.

Dr. John A. Hannah, President of Michigan State University.

ADMINISTRATION

Mrs. John A. Hannah, First Lady.

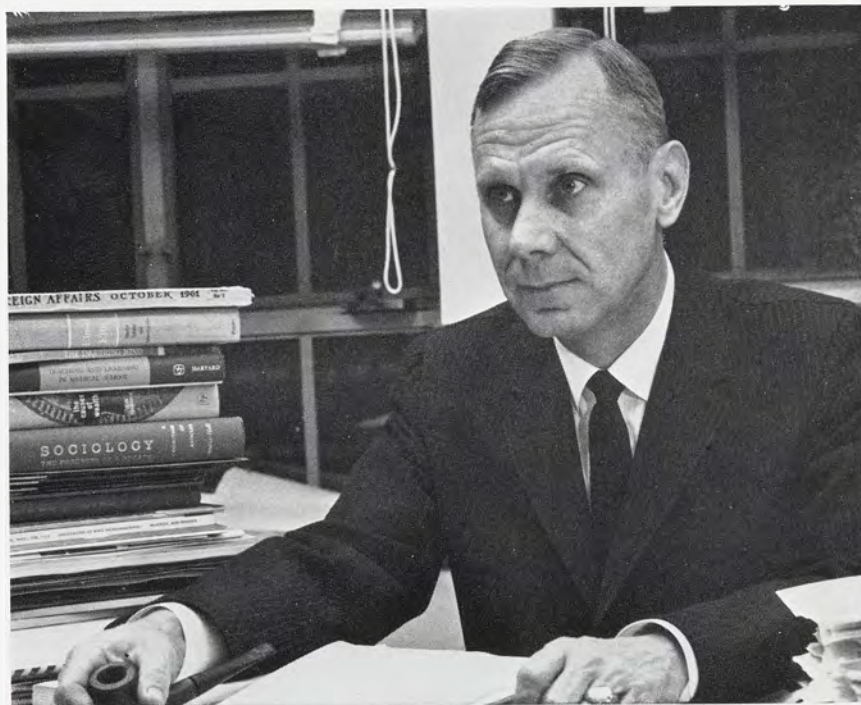

Entrusted with the dual responsibility of keeping financially solvent a public institution which owes final allegiance to truth alone, the administrators of Michigan State University endeavor to act in an enlightened business manner consistent with the fundamental principle that it should be the purpose of every university to seek the truth, to teach the truth and to preserve the truth.

If one generalization is possible about the highly individual backgrounds of MSU's administrators, it is that they are highly educated men who know how to cope with the practical, everyday decisions of leadership positions as well as constantly keeping salient the ideals of the university.

The men who assist the elected Board of Trustees in governing the University are highly skilled in specialized areas of administration.

Upon the shoulders of President John A. Hannah rests the total responsibility of the continued growth and progress of every kind related to Michigan State. He is appointed by the Board and is responsible to it for his decisions. The primary function of the University, academics, was overseen by Provost Paul Miller, who left Michigan State at the end of 1961 to become President of the University of West Virginia. His successor, Clifford E. Erickson, assumed the duties of his office January 1, 1962.

Dr. Paul A. Miller, Provost.

The Michigan State University Board of Trustees: Jack Breslin, secretary; Phillip J. May, treasurer; Don Stevens; Conner D. Smith; John A. Hannah, President; Jan Vanderploeg; C. Allen Harlan; Frank Merriman; Warren M. Huff.

Jacweir Breslin, Secretary.

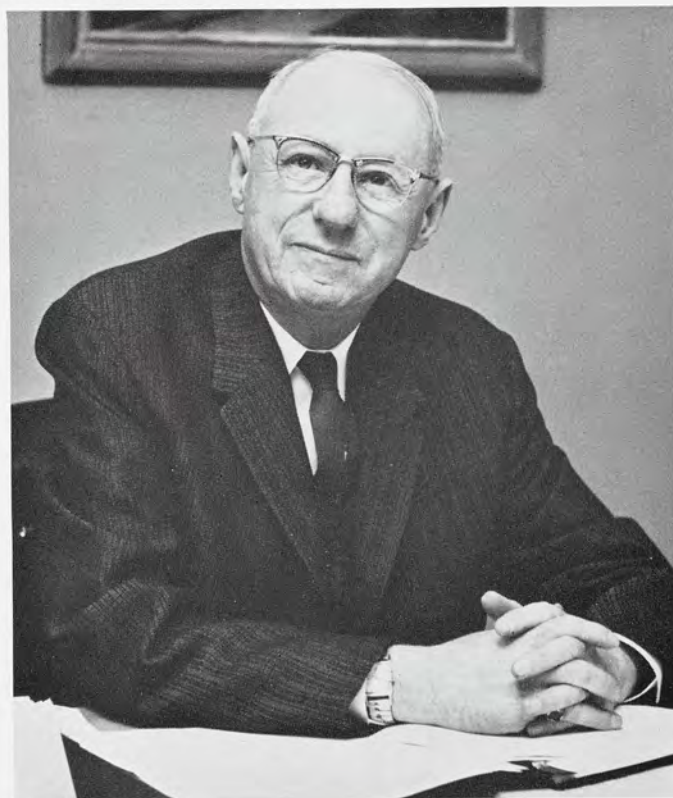

Clifford Erickson, Provost.

Phillip J. May, Vice President of Business and Finance.

William Combs, Dean of University Services.

Vice-presidents Philip May (Finance), Milton Muelder (Research and Development) and Gordon Sabine (Special Projects) head up extensive programs on both long term and short range bases.

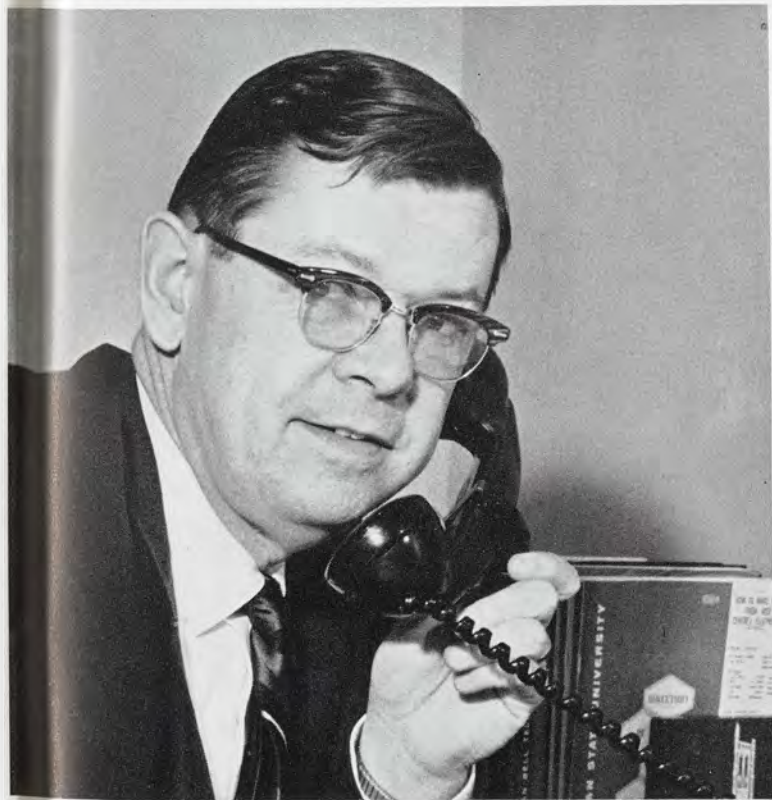

James Denison, Assistant to the President, is the Director of University Relations. John Fuzak is Dean of Students, and handles all personnel who guide and counsel students in their problems.

Jacweir Breslin, Assistant to the President and the University Secretary, is the custodian of all Board of Trustee and University records, is the custodian of the physical plant of MSU and its development, and the President's representative to the Michigan Legislature.

ALL-UNIVERSITY EVENTS

Each year at Michigan State solidifies certain traditions which have become rooted in the university life over the years; each year also brings possibilities for new traditions, like an upstart group of students who want to stage a Hawaiian Luau extravaganza, despite considerable opposition. They subsequently interviewed over 400 students who wanted to work on the event, and completely sold out tickets for the dinner during the three days of Spring Registration.

Each year at Michigan State is filled with carnivals and expositions and dances and shows which have been scheduled months, sometimes years, in advance, and prepared and rehearsed for weeks. Each year also brings hundreds of unexpected "news breaks," little events full of human interest and improvised fun. Like a Volkswagen found sitting in the Library pond one morning. Or a telephone conversation that lasts for about a week. Or a running battle between the Lecture-Concert Series and the Frosh-Soph Council over the appearance of a folk singing group.

A review of the events of the year is a summary of the culture, the showmanship and the frolic of the year. . . .

Sparkling champagne, 1920 vintage, sets the mood of Water Carnival as the lead float.

Months of preparation preface the opening night of the annual spectacle sponsored by the Senior Class.

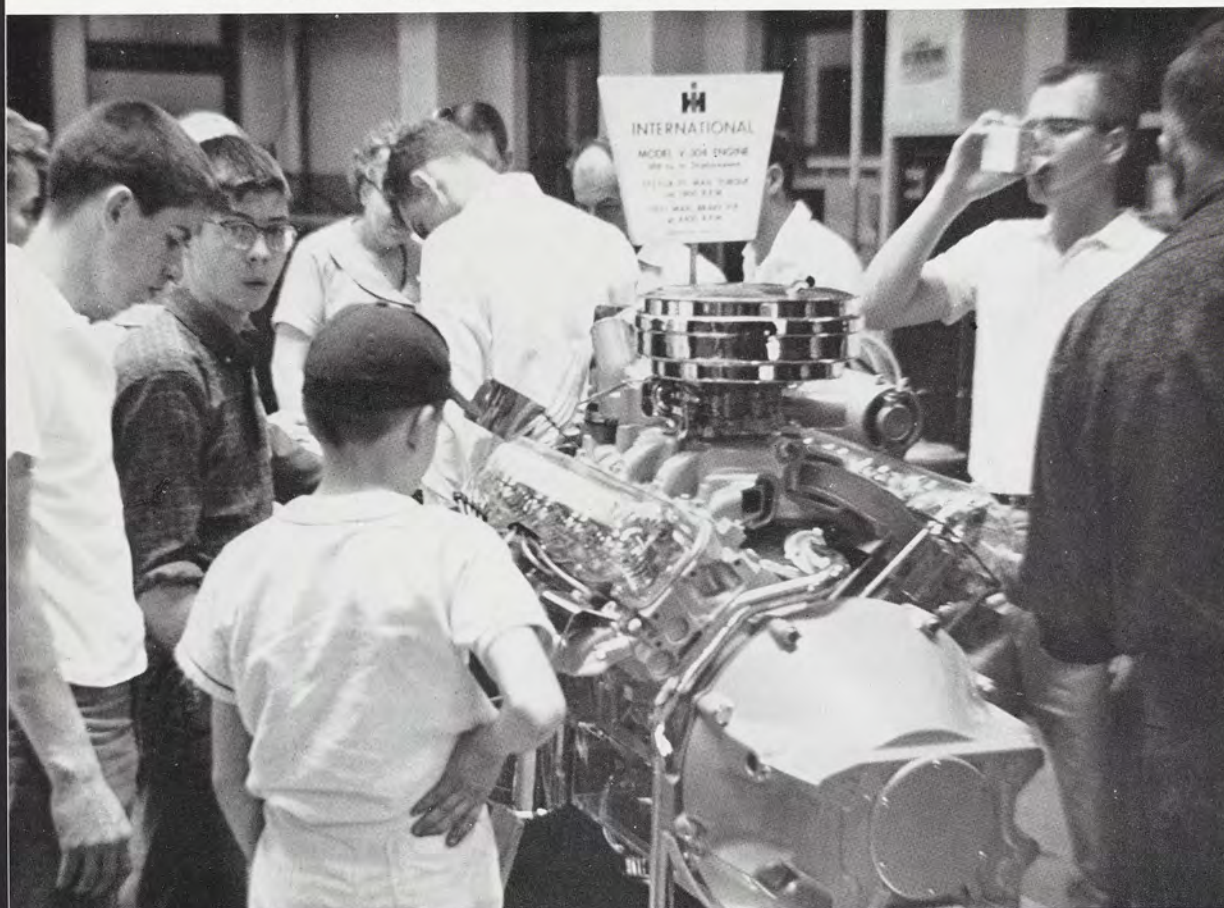

Capitalizing on the renewed interest in the wild and frilly era of the Twenties, via "The Untouchables" and other reminiscences, the Water Carnival flappers borrowed Frederick Lewis Allen's "Only Yesterday" title and set the stage for a procession of floats which chronicled everything from the Teapot Dome scandal to the popularity of bathtub gin.

Delta Tau Delta and Sigma Kappa won the coveted first place trophy, Delta Upsilon and Alpha Gamma Delta placed second, North Campbell Hall and Phi Kappa Tau took third place, and Beta Theta Pi and Delta Gamma took fourth.

The Engineering Exposition is advertised by a huge sign that must be hung by hand high over the door of Olds Hall.

People of all ages are attracted to the many exhibits that are sponsored by student organizations as well as corporations.

One of the micro-midget race cars gets some last-minute adjustments before the annual race.

Besides the annual Red Cedar extravaganza, Water Carnival, Spring term provides the setting for numerous other exhibitions and festivals.

The annual Engineering Exposition is sponsored by the College of Engineering to reward originality and creativity in this field. Competition with cash prizes is organized on an individual, class and group basis. All engineering honoraries and many student craftsmen construct displays and equipment, which range from mechanical games to distilleries to cyclon separators.

The 1961 affair, titled "A Better World Through Engineering," lasted two days and was climaxed by the May Hop over which the Engineering Queen reigned. On the morning of the second day came the annual micro-midget auto races held in the physics-math parking lot. Nine entries tangled in the three 15-lap heats.

The International Festival, also scheduled annually during Spring term, spotlights MSU's delegation of foreign students. Last year's show, called "Adventures Internationale," featured a stage show which included modern and traditional dancing and singing, and displays and exhibits of arts, crafts and costumes from all over the world. Groups from 17 countries and territories took part in the festival, which is sponsored by AUSG, International Programs and the Board of Trustees.

The Greeks at MSU have selected Spring term for their annual "big event," appropriately called Greek Week, which spans two May weekends and includes six major events.

Both sororities and fraternities held individual song-fests on a house competition basis. Members from the system at large collected early one Saturday morning, two thousand strong, and spent half the day working on a series of community projects. The largest was a clean-up program in nearby Urbandale, but groups worked at orphanages and other welfare institutions.

During the week each chapter invited several faculty members to dinner at their house. The affair was climaxed by a huge outdoor dinner, called Greek Feast, held on the Phi Delta Theta lawn.

Although the Lambda Chi Alpha Jr. 500 was not directly under the auspices of the Greek Week, it was presented in conjunction with it.

Bill Johnson and Jerry Roberts join in the laughter during an IFC Executive Council meeting.

One of the service projects for sorority and fraternity members during Greek Week was to help the citizens of Urbandale in their annual clean-up campaign.

Sarah Vaughn gave a well-received concert in the Auditorium Spring term through the efforts of the campus NAACP.

Springtime at MSU means, among other things, the annual Block and Bridle Horse Show. Last spring's affair, the thirteenth annual show, drew a full house to watch Spartan horsemen perform in both English and Western divisions. Ghali, the four-year old Arabian stallion presented to MSU by former Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, made his formal debut. He comes from one of the finest Arabian horse blood lines in the world.

Barbecue lovers make the annual Agriculture School Ox Roast a must on their spring calendar. The meal consists of prime beef, ash-baked potatoes, and all the trimmings. This event has become so large that it is held on the secret practice field.

Indoor spectatorship may waiver a bit during Spring term, but large crowds never mind sacrificing a warm evening for top-notch entertainment like a concert by Sarah Vaughn, presented in April by the NAACP.

A winner in Block and Bridle Competition accepts her cup.

Man-sized portions attract large crowds each year at the College of Agriculture's Ox Roast.

Students who excel scholastically or who demonstrate superior leadership and service to the university are invited to join various honoraries which recognize such outstanding contributions. The all-university honoraries, for which students from any college are eligible, are chartered on a class basis.

Alpha Lambda Delta, Tower Guard and Mortar Board, the freshman, sophomore and senior women's honoraries, co-sponsor the May Morning Sing held against a hopefully beautiful May dawn. The parents of the coeds who are to be honored are notified in advance so that they may be in attendance, and their living units are serenaded several evenings previous so that sorority sisters and dorm-mates can also be in on the big moment.

Phi Eta Sigma, freshman Men's honorary, relies on the flushed excitement of formal ceremony to convey the importance of membership, and Green Helmet, sophomore men's honorary, introduces its pledges at IFC Sing. Blue Key avoids publicity, inducting its members at a special banquet, and Excalibur announces its thirteen new members during the intermission of Water Carnival.

Sleepy parents glow with pride as they watch their daughters honored at May Morning Sing.

The living units of the new members of Mortar Board and Tower Guard are serenaded the night before their names are announced.

Jazz musician Stan Kenton was the director of the Summer Jazz Clinic on MSU's campus last summer.

A preview of the coming year's gridiron squad is offered each spring by the Athletic Department. The upcoming varsity team is pitted against a group of veteran alumni on a spring day in the stadium. The match draws an annual crowd of 14,000-18,000. The old timers last year managed to edge out the varsity 14-7, which is quite a favorable commentary on MSU's alumni in view of the team record last fall.

Summer visitors to campus pour in by the hundreds as prospective freshmen attend the summer orientation clinics, held during the first part of each week from the end of June through August.

MSU's counseling center sponsors the clinics to give new students a chance to get ahead on the battery of tests which preface decisions on major field of study, improvement courses, and corrective courses. Placement tests for honors sections in the two freshmen basics are administered, the chaos of registration is previewed, and students' hearing, speech and sight are tested.

Some future students stop for a break in the rigorous schedule planned for them during one of the summer Counseling Clinics.

LECTURE CONCERT SERIES The Lecture-Concert series, under the supervision of Dr. Wilson B. Paul, gathers a fine and varied array of talent each year. Presented to Michigan State students free of charge, its purpose is to widen their cultural experiences in the most enjoyable manner.

Approximately seven foreign films are presented in Fairchild theatre each term. The World Travel series brings a famous lecturer to the stage of the Auditorium on Saturday evenings.

Each year the Lecture-Concert Series presents more than 50 programs, featuring some of the world's foremost figures of the concert hall, stage and lecture platform.

Imogene Coca, King Donovan and Arthur Treacher appeared on campus Winter term in "Thurber Carnival."

The New York City Opera Company appeared at MSU with their presentation of "Cose Fan Tutte."

The New York City Ballet Company performed on campus Fall term.

The Robert Shaw Chorale made another appearance through the Lecture-Concert Series, Summer term.

Dr. Karl Boehm conducts the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra during their appearance at MSU.

Bennett Cerf autographs programs after his lecture on American humor in April.

The programs in the Lecture-Concert Series are presented to give MSU students opportunities for enrichment and enjoyment through personal experience with a variety of artistic achievements; to help students better understand the cultural, economic and social backgrounds of the peoples of the world; to give the faculty and staff opportunities to experience the intellectual challenge and aesthetic enjoyment that comes from a variety of cultural and educational programs; and to cooperate with other organizations in providing such cultural programs for the community.

In carrying out the final step in the above list, the Lecture-Concert Series assisted this year in bringing Sarah Vaughn and the Brothers Four to campus.

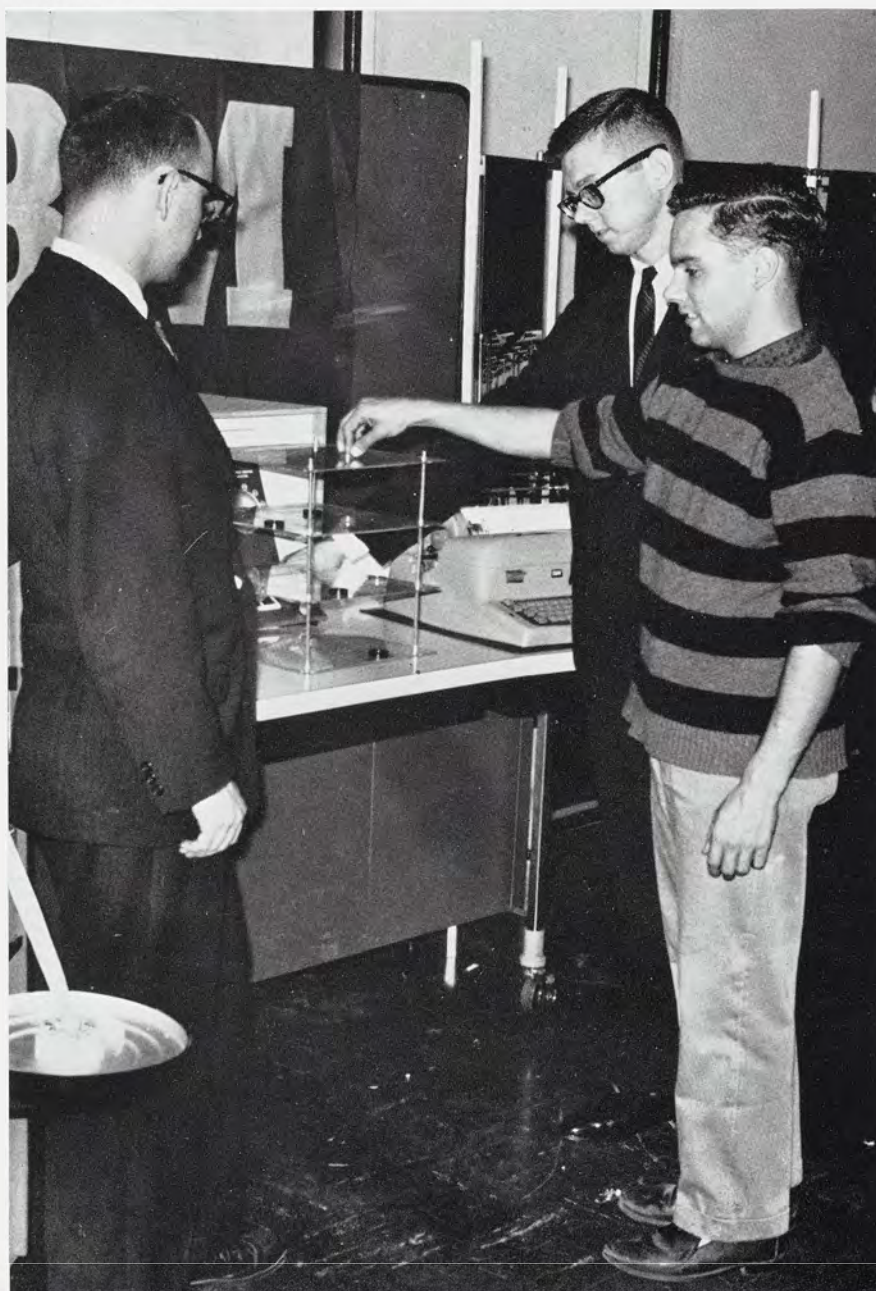

Leon Bibb, popular folk singer, visited campus during the summer.

The largest vocational service of its kind on any campus, the Career Carnival annually brings representatives from seventy leading organizations in business, industry, education and government. It is sponsored by the university Placement Bureau, but students actually do much of the work involved in its planning and execution.

Another Fall term carnival at MSU attracts mainly the freshmen and new students. The Activities Carnival brings representatives from many campus organizations to the concourse of the stadium in order to answer the questions of prospective members. Because each campus organization must keep one-tenth of one percent of fall term's registration on its roster to retain its charter, many organizations use this opportunity to recruit as well as to inform.

Forty feet of construction scaffolding was required to stuff the chicken wire on the Homecoming display of Triangle Fraternity.

The Spartans delighted the Homecoming crowd with a smashing 35-0 victory over the Hoosiers.

HOMEcoming By the time Homecoming rolled around this year, not even the intermittent rain which drenched the stadium could douse Spartan enthusiasm. Thousands of multi-colored umbrellas were opened in unison, as if to launch one end of a rainbow right from Spartan Stadium. The pot of gold at the end of this symbolic rainbow was the crashing 35-0 victory which rushed MSU to the number one team in national ratings the next week.

Homecoming Queen Kim Larlee reigned over the impressive gridiron spectacle which had been prefaced by many hours of work on the part of each living unit in constructing its display.

After the final victorious roar of approval, the crowd dispersed to the field and alumni collected in groups behind standards bearing the year of their graduation. After reminiscing with their classmates, many of them attended the open-houses of their living units to renew acquaintances with long-lost fraternity brothers and good friends.

Homecoming Queen Kim Larley cheers in delight during the game.

Larry Osterink, President of Excalibur, escorts Queen Kim to her seat in the stadium.

The Brothers Four, popular singing group, appeared on campus Spring term in a concert sponsored by the Frosh-Soph Council.

After freshmen have been tested and re-tested during "welcome" week, have been jostled and frustrated during registration, have been relieved of all their money at the bookstores, and have possibly decided to withdraw from sheer lack of physical stamina, the Frosh-Soph Council winds up its organizational year by staging its annual Frosh-Soph Daze.

A variety of contests and games are organized for no other purpose than plain hilarity. Included are an egg-throwing contest, a hunt for a "garter in the haystack," a gigantic tug-o'-war, and a sack race. The affair is climaxed by a presidential tree-sighting contest, during which the incoming and outgoing presidents try to sit each other out perched on the branches of a tree near the Union. This year's president-elect, Jamie Blanchard, established a new record aloft, nearly beating out the falling leaves on the tree in which he spent a somewhat uncomfortable night.

AWS canvassed the campus for talent for their talent show Winter term.

Sophomore Class President Jamie Blanchard set a new record in the branches as part of Frosh-Soph Daze.

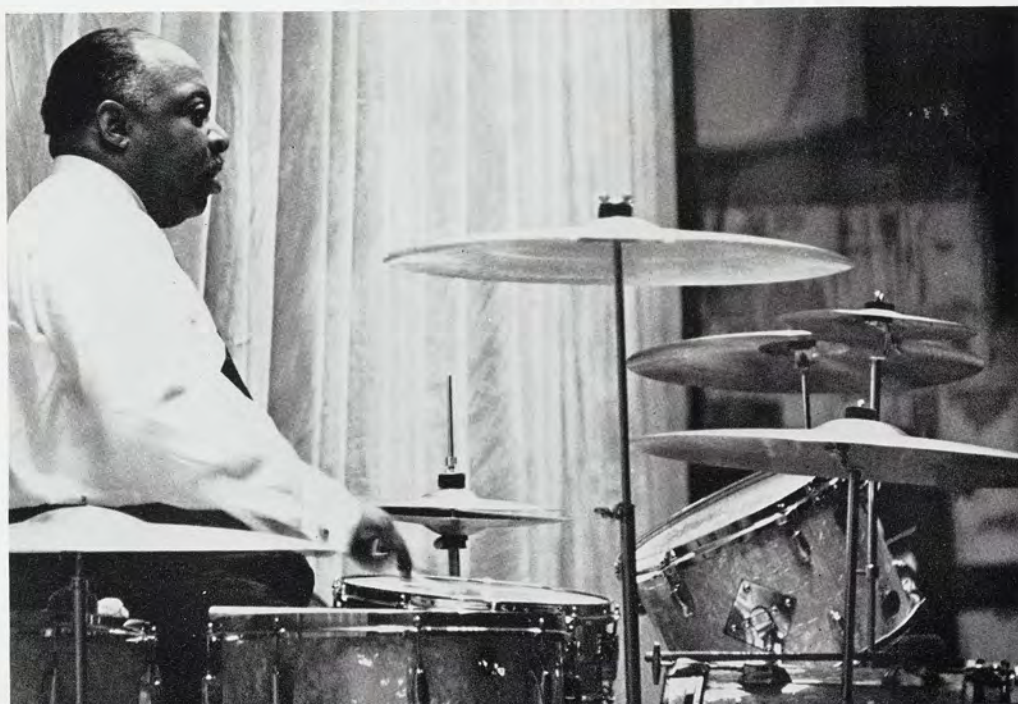

Their tongues set in determination, sack racing teams lumber off after the starting whistle.

Wild corsages were the order of the evening at the annual turn-about dance, the Spinsters' Spin.

Count Basie takes off on the drums at the J-Hop.

Although the twist phenomena found hosts of gyrating supporters at each all-university dance this year, traditional forms maintained their popularity in the variety of themes presented.

The Ag-Council, Harvest Ball, honoring their queen, began the MSU social season in October.

Later in Fall term came the annual military ball sponsored by the Army and Air Force ROTC cadets. A glorious victory amidst Rose Bowl speculation was appropriately celebrated at the Homecoming Dance, which also paid homage to Kim Larlee, the 1961 Homecoming Queen.

The J-Hop showed a profit again this year, and presented an evening with an Oriental flavor. Sandy McNeal was crowned Miss MSU during the intermission.

Two weeks later the women of Tower Guard, Mortar Board and Spartan Women's League joined forces to present the annual turnabout dance, Spinster Spin. The theme was appropriately "Tender Trap," and Bob Andringa was crowned Mr. MSU.

During Winter term the Vets Club sponsored the "Winterland Whirl" in honor of their queen.

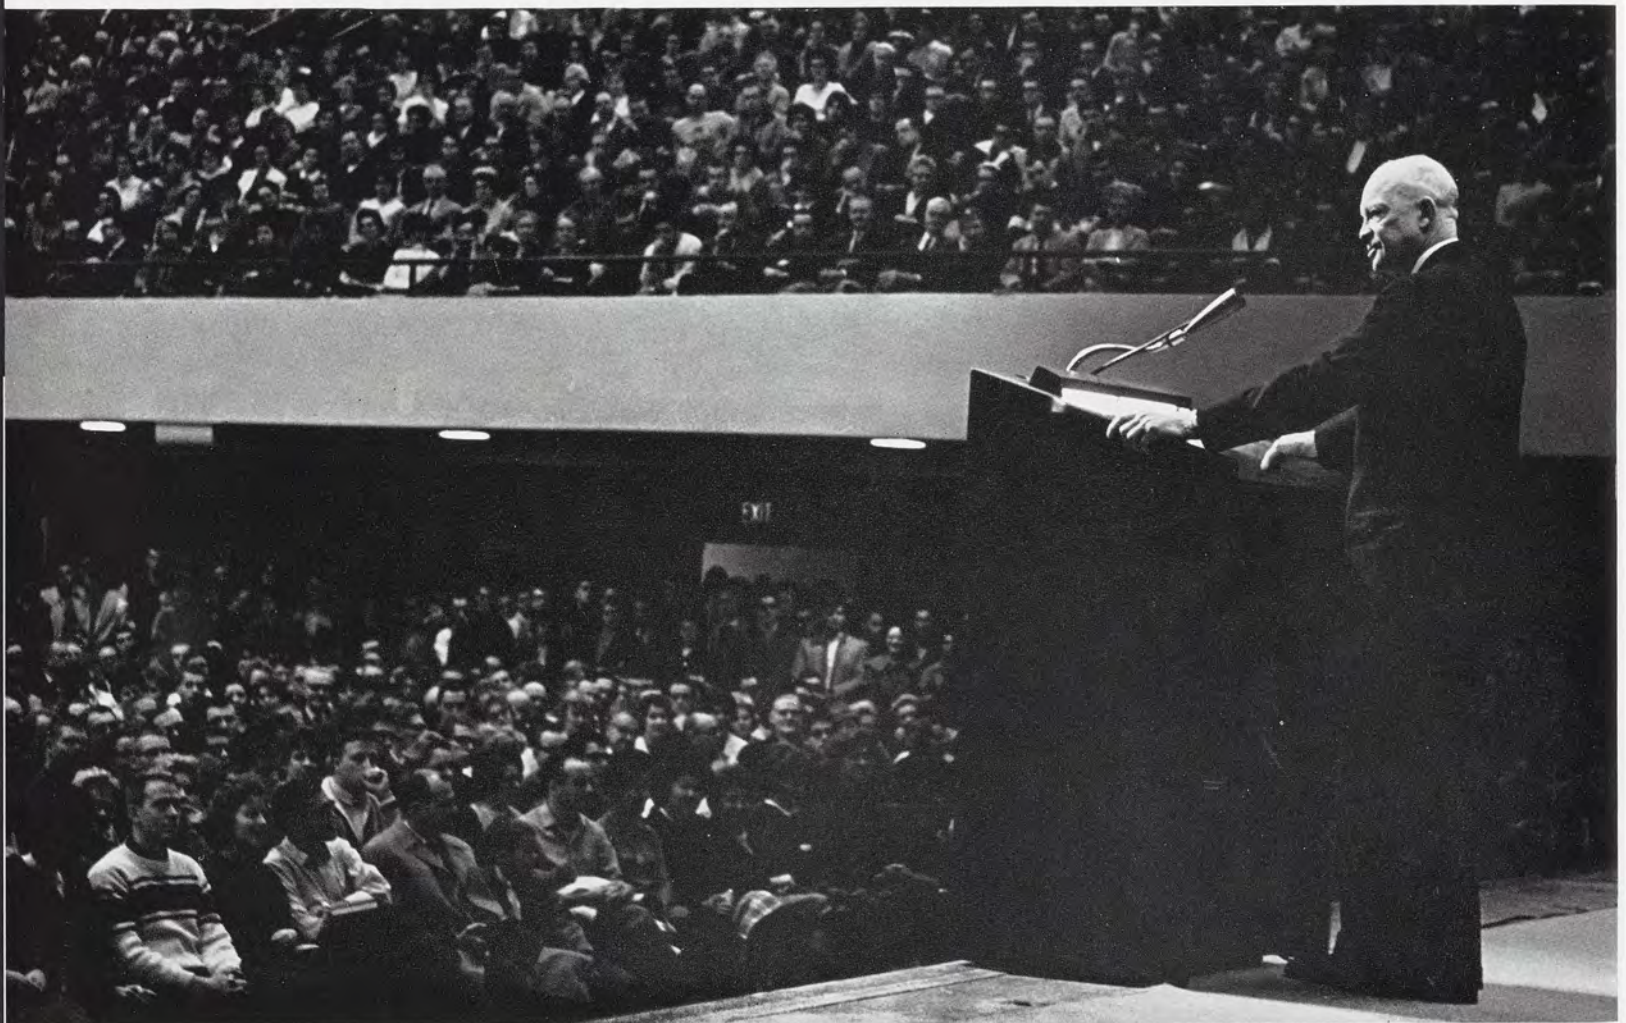

Couples voted on their choice for Veterans' Club Queen by writing the name of one of the finalists on their ticket.

Twisters strut the new craze during one of the Union Board dances.

A team of talkers keep the conversation going during the week-long talkathon

Ike paid MSU an impromptu visit during Fall term finals after a Constitutional Convention address in Lansing.

The spontaneous and unexpected events of campus life are always a fascinating, and sometimes important, facet of Michigan State University. Maybe a student in one of the dormitories is talking to his girl friend about the wave of talkathons in various universities, and the next day both of their residence halls embark on a conversation which continues uninterrupted for nearly a week. Talkers converse in shifts, and the contest rates state-wide publicity. One spot it is not well received is the legislature, and there are veiled hints about budget cuts if this "youthful energy" is not harnessed in another fashion. Inevitable variations on the theme follow, including a twist-a-thon, and the men of Lambda Chi Alpha triumphantly silence the legislators when they announce, as finals loom large, that they are sponsoring a study-thon.

Or perhaps a former president of the United States is scheduled to appear before the Constitutional Convention, and is invited to come to campus. Five thousand cheering students interrupt their final examinations to jam the auditorium for a fifteen minute speech. They honor him with three roaring standing ovations, and huddle around the stage exit for an hour after the talk to "get a closer look at Ike."

Bryan Hall's answer to the talkathon was a twist-a-thon.

Rehearsals for "The Good Woman of Setzuan," during the first stage, emphasized lines and movement.

Tryouts for the musical production, "Brigadoon," were held informally and were open to any student, Spring term.

One of the Children's Theater productions this year was "Beauty and the Beast."

The season got off to a light start with the robust comedy, "Born Yesterday."

A new series of productions began last summer in the "Summer Circle" theater.

MSU's theater season began unusually early this year, with the production of five shows in a summer theater session. The plays were presented in arena theater session on a special stage set up in Demonstration Hall.

The regular season got off to a light start in October with the comedy, "Born Yesterday." Next came Marlow's classic, "Dr. Faustus," followed Winter term by Brecht's morality play entitled "The Good Woman of Setzuan." American realism in the form of Tennessee William's "Streetcar Named Desire" was next on the playbill, and the year was extravagantly climaxed by the operetta "Brigadoon" in May.

In addition, the theater department began a series of student productions Spring term under the title, "Studio 49." They are produced and directed entirely by student talent.

MSU ACADEMICS

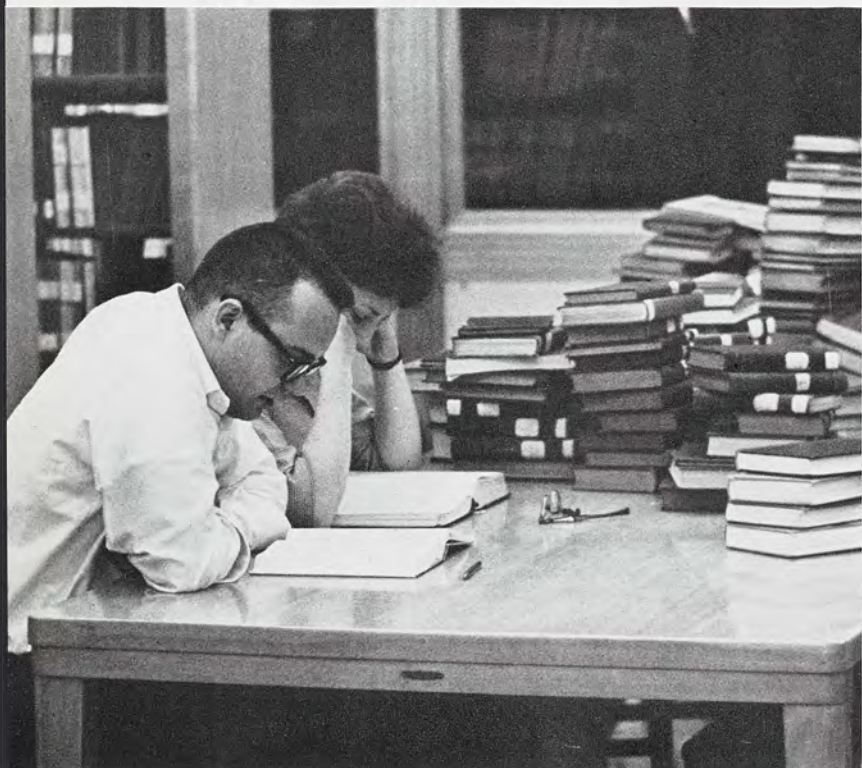

*MSU's philosophy of grass-roots education was recalled when we began to register on the dirt floor of the IM building.
This was the last year freshmen were drafted into ROTC and the first year we slid through turnstiles to get to our assigned reading.*

Burning the late-evening electricity, the library is a favorite place for a study date or a date with studies.

Hidden behind a mountain of reference books, two students pour over readings for a term paper.

Though Michigan State is not usually referred to as an academy, its aims and goals resemble those of institutions throughout history which have been called academies. The purpose of Michigan State, as set forth in theory and practice, is "to provide an education to fit the times . . . , to disseminate and advance knowledge in the fields of learning . . . , and to extend the services of the University to the people of the state, nation and world."

Thus, the academics of MSU are local, and they are global; they include research, and harness the practical benefits of research; they honor the disciplines of ancient academies, but they keep abreast of current developments in laboratories and factories.

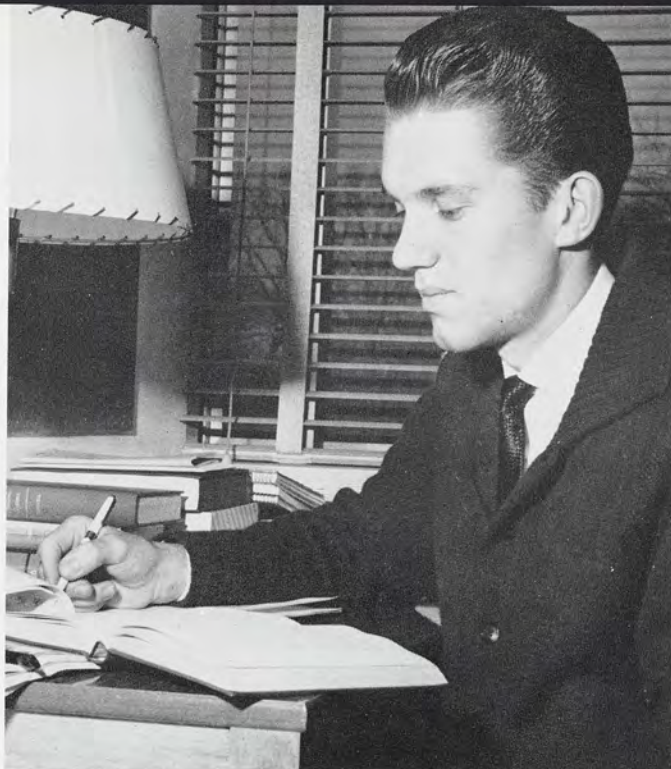

The academics of the University, for both faculty and students, are its lifeblood, its basis. Upon them rest the many services and semi-academic functions.

In another sense, the academic philosophy of the University departs radically from the two prototypes in institutions of higher learning which preceded it.

The ancient academy, the anvil of learning, was preoccupied with organizing and recording knowledge. Its purposes were to divide and catalog after careful inspection and deliberation.

The Medieval monastery, on the other hand, existed primarily to preserve and record knowledge. Its delights were the discovery of something old rather than the construction of something new.

The modern university, such as MSU, honors the traditional functions of its heritage, but clearly intends also to "provide," "to disseminate," and "to extend." The activities of the academy and the monastery were pointed inward; those of MSU radiate to "the state, the nation and the world."

Many hours with the books is required of all students if their future plans include graduation.

Two coeds check the library card file before hunting through the miles of shelves for their references.

The various basic courses in the University College were moved into the offices and classrooms of Bessey Hall.

Study areas in the Library are sometimes crowded but not so much that students have to curl up on an empty book shelf.

Students in the basic psychology courses cooperate with the graduate students in some reaction experiments.

Because the aims of Michigan State University transcend the myopia of academic hermitage, her services extend to the underdeveloped areas of the world besides drawing increasingly large numbers of out-of-state students. As the number of international projects grows, and the number of foreign exchange programs mounts, more and more professors return to campus from leaves of absence to Asian and African universities and are able to teach from a higher vantage point; and more and more Americans are able to learn along side students from other cultures. In 1961-62, every state in the United States and 80 foreign countries were represented on the East Lansing campus.

The traditional "ivory tower" of institutions of higher learning has been felled and transformed into a bridge at MSU. And the men and women it carries to East Lansing, and the men and women it reclaims from other countries serve to broaden the base of higher education.

The Natural Science Building is the scene of hundreds of freshman students going to and coming from the only class in the University College to stay in the same quarters.

One of the most frequent criticisms leveled at academic circles is that education is "up in the clouds." At MSU, the reply to this charge might be, "Sure it is, and come on up—the weather's great!" Or it might be, "Take a look at this new tractor model and tell me about it."

In other words, the operational definition of academics at Michigan State is broad enough to include the ancient love of learning for its own sake and a pursuit as earthy as a tractor design.

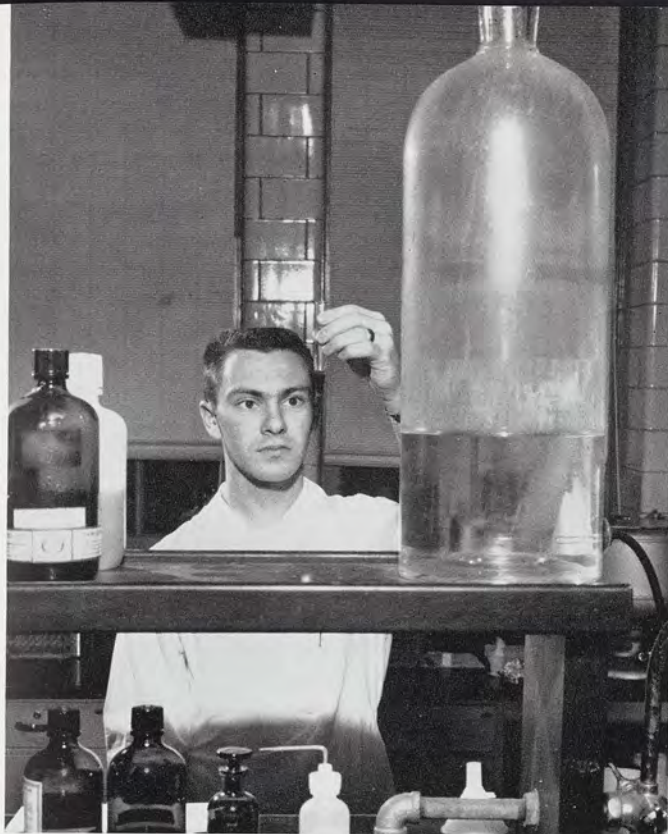

This is why the training for a career which in the past has been learned in a trade-school atmosphere or in a modern-day version of apprenticeship, such as hotel administration, is superimposed against a background of liberal education at MSU. The elevation of academics here has many levels.

A group of canoeing novices learn to balance their crafts by grouping them together in a canoeing class.

A small, round-table type discussion holds forth.

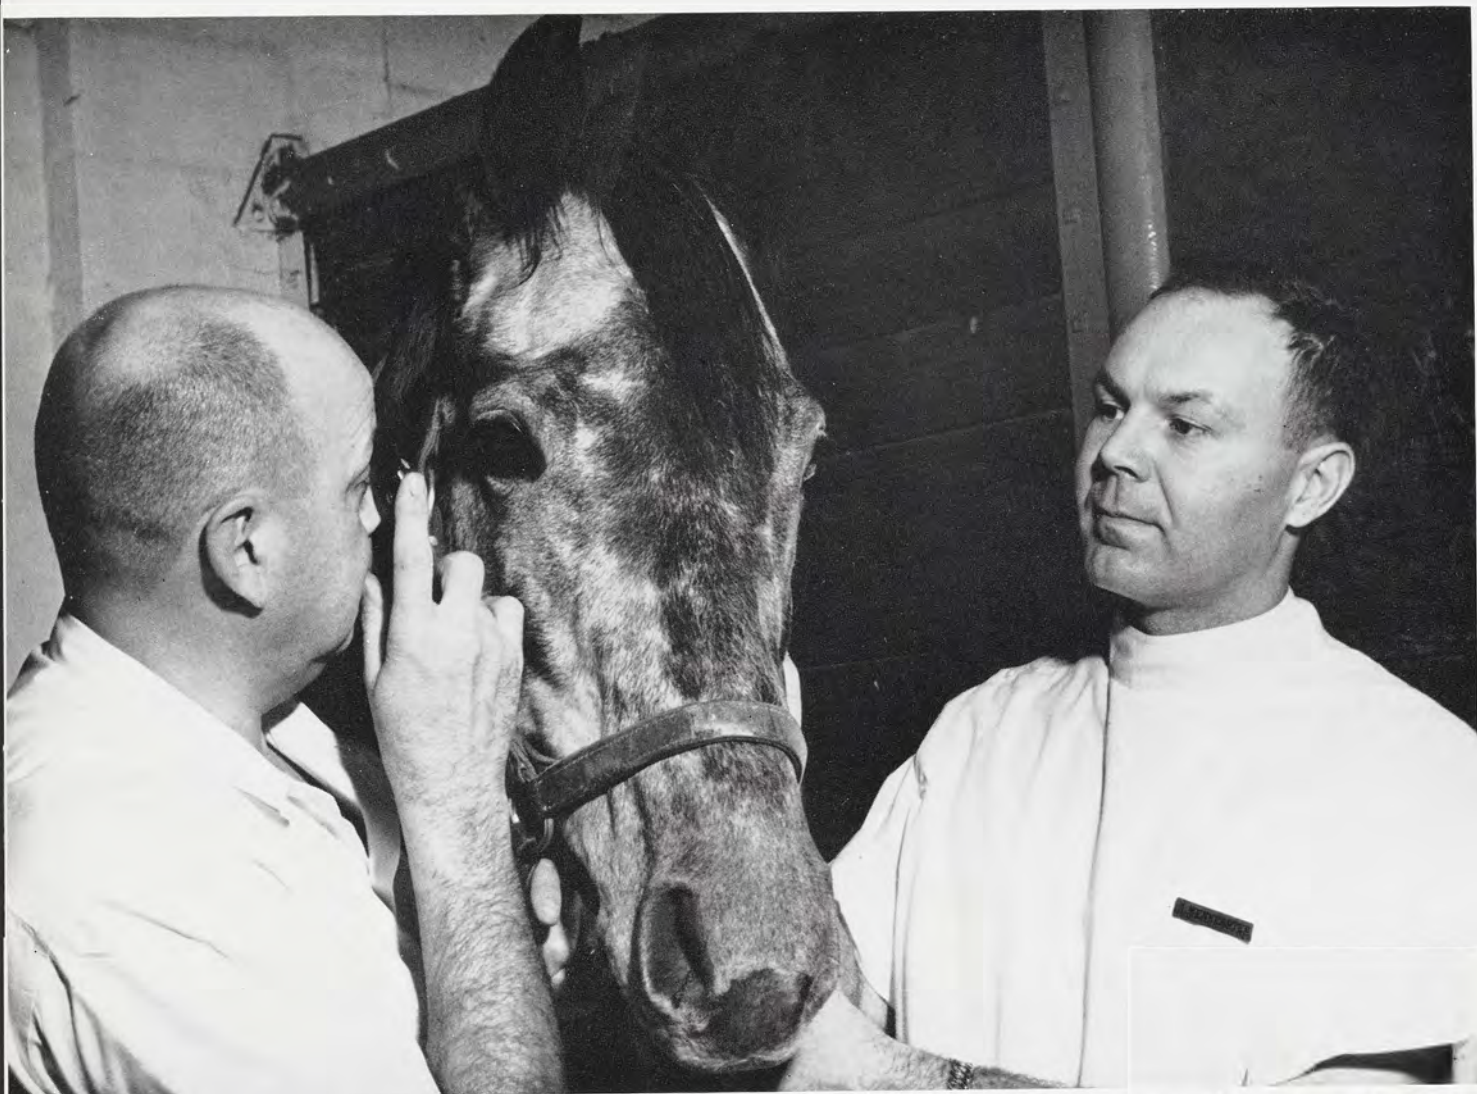

A laboratory assistant checks a test tube in a chemistry lab.

If one dichotomy has been forced on modern education, it is the distinction between research and practical benefits. Like many two-value orientations, it becomes increasingly hard to defend in the complex of modern society. Is the research of an industrial efficiency expert devoid of "practical benefits?" Or does the experimentation of agricultural plant breeders tell us nothing of research value?

At MSU, the polar structure of such outworn academic frameworks are minimized in favor of a more unified approach to knowledge. Along with this attitude comes the demand for cooperative efforts in the quest for learning, and interdisciplinary courses and projects have become more frequent of late.

Two students pause to be processed in one of the series of check-point desks at registration.

The various schools and colleges provide services to the community as well as top-rate training for the students.

SCHOOLS & COLLEGES

The academic organization of Michigan State is centered around the primary division of colleges. In all, there are nine colleges, seven of which are degree-granting. These schools are further sub-divided into 81 departments of instruction offering 171 programs of study. All of these are offered on the undergraduate level, and many on the graduate level. In addition, there are cross sections from all colleges, such as Honors College, which oversees the superior students from the University at large.

Some colleges have systems of dual enrollment; the largest program of this sort involves the College of Education and the College of Science and Arts. Many schools have organized student advisory boards to review and inspect the academic benefits of the several colleges.

The Deans of every college meet regularly with university officials to discuss progress and problems of an administrative nature and to review matters such as budgetary. This Council of Deans is responsible directly to the President.

All but one college, Education, is organizationally divided into departments and schools, and the line of command is carried on in this framework.

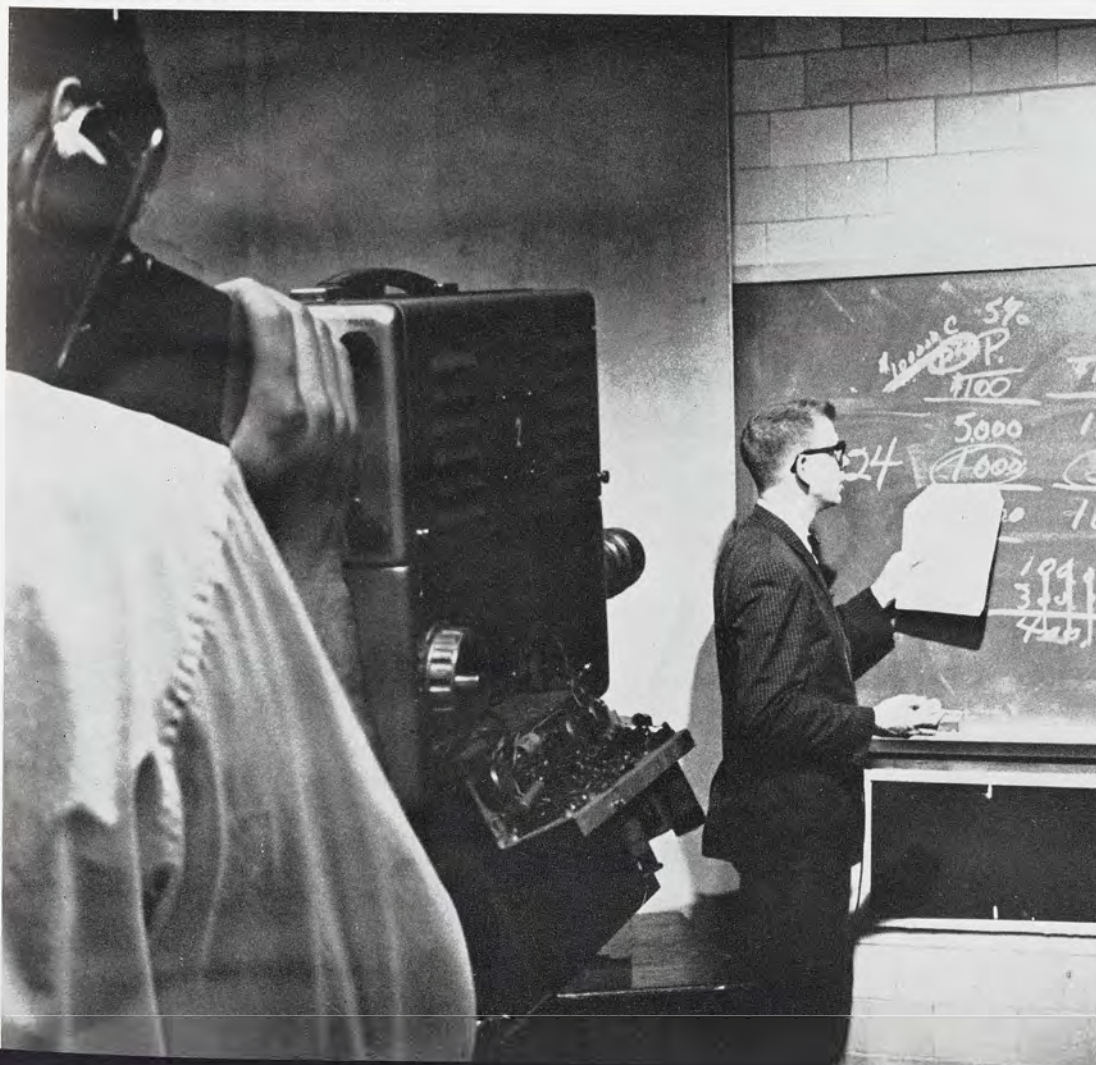

These colleges, and their predecessors, have granted a total of 67,806 degrees to men and women since 1861. Almost one-third of that number were enrolled Fall term excluding over 1,000 at MSUO.

The largest college at MSU is Science and Arts, with a total enrollment of 6,313. The smallest is Veterinary Medicine with an enrollment of 770.

Closed Circuit television has made it possible for one instructor to teach more students while keeping the individual classes reasonably small in size.

The TV classes originate in either the closed circuit facilities of Giltner Hall or the Education Building

Two music majors practice for their senior recitals.

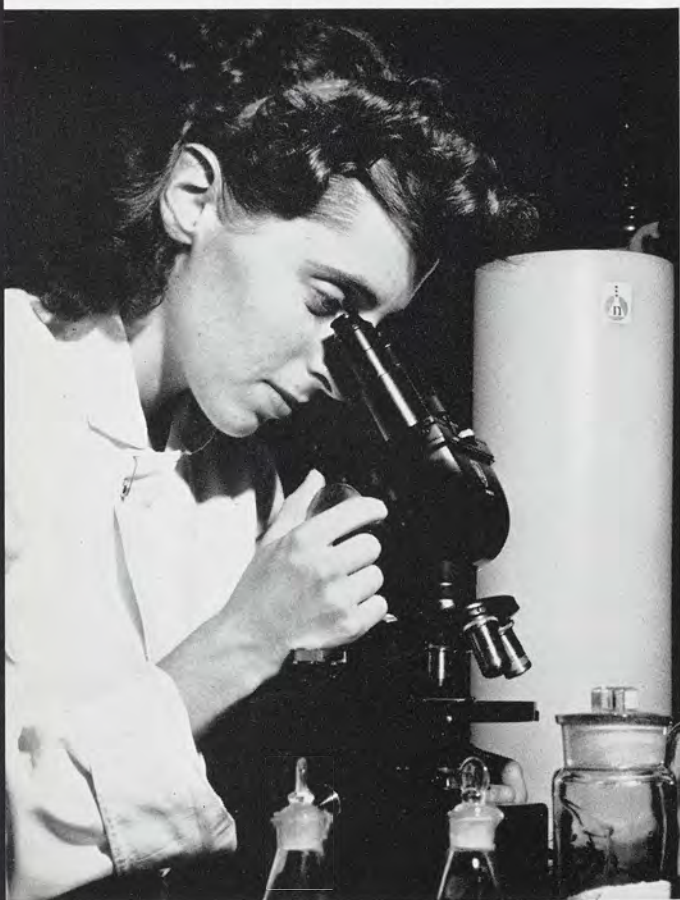

The seven degree-granting colleges confer a total of 18 degrees upon satisfactory completion of appropriate programs of study in the departments, schools, divisions and colleges.

They include Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Fine Arts, Bachelor of Music, Bachelor of Science, Master of Arts, Master of Arts for Teachers, Master of Business Administration, Master of Fine Arts, Master of Landscape Architecture, Master of Music, Master of Science, Master of Social Work, Master of Urban Planning, Diploma for Advanced Graduate Study, Doctor of Veterinary Medicine, Doctor of Business Administration, Doctor of Education, and Doctor of Philosophy.

The degree programs can be planned to also fulfill the state requirements for teaching certificates in public schools at all levels.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

Named to emphasize the universality of its curriculum, the University College was unique among similar programs when it was founded in 1944. It remains one of the only general education programs at any school to have a separate identity and college status.

Since 1944, many colleges and universities have modeled their own lower school programs after it.

All freshmen and sophomores are enrolled in University College. Besides giving every MSU graduate a common core of essential courses, this organizational plan facilitates major changing and allows students from many different courses of study to communicate early in their college careers.

Housed in the newly constructed Bessey Hall, three of the college's four main departments are now in the same building. Only Natural Science remains in its previous quarters.

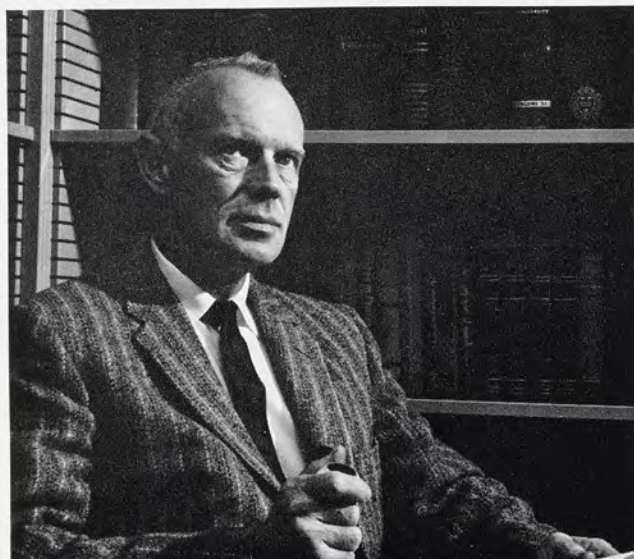

The completion of Bessey Hall brought all the basic course headquarters together except for Natural Science.

Freshmen and sophomores are trained through University College courses to use the library for reference work.

Edward A. Carlin, Dean of University College

Students who have not yet declared a major field, called non-prefs, receive direction through University College.

University College offers five main courses, four of which are compulsory for graduation.

A reorganized course in Social Science was administered experimentally this year and will be in full operation Fall term. It will emphasize MSU's philosophy of international education and cross-cultural material.

A new course offered by University College to seniors, graduate students and Honors College members, was begun Winter term. Called the Great Issues Course, it uses the team method of instruction, drafting outstanding professors from all colleges, to keep abreast of the interdisciplinary direction of modern education.

Display boards which parallel the progress of basic courses are located in Bessey Hall.

Founded 100 years ago by the Morrill Act, the College of Agriculture at MSU was the nation's first school to approach the farming industry scientifically. Today, a century later, its eminence among similar schools is reflected not only within the college itself, but also by the number of inter-curricular programs, such as the Agricultural Communications Project and the Agricultural Engineering department, in which the school participates.

The College of Agriculture divides its work into three major areas: teaching, extension work throughout the state, and research. The Ag school also hosts the largest Farmers' Week in the nation, attended each year by thousands.

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

Dr. Thomas K. Cowden, Dean of Agriculture.

The present curricula program enables ag students to study in any one of three basic areas: agricultural business, agricultural science, or general agriculture, all leading to the bachelor of science degree.

A fundamental understanding of the basic physical, biological, and social sciences as they apply to agriculture and conservation, a broad educational background, and technical knowledge for specialization is what the College of Agriculture offers to its students.

Because the College is convinced that the best scientific training is the path to this goal, ag majors are provided with a very real and practicable lab in the form of the various university farms. These farms include livestock, and experimental and demonstrational fields.

MSU's dairy farm produces much of the milk consumed daily on campus and provides part time work for ag students.

A student majoring in restaurant management cuts doughnuts from a roll of dough in Kellogg's kitchen.

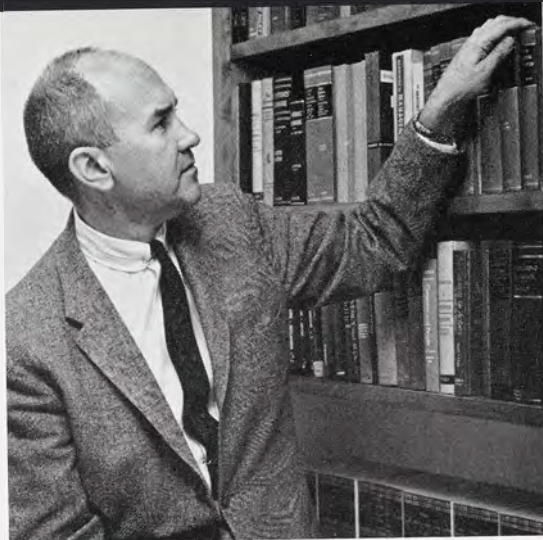

COLLEGE OF BUSINESS & PUBLIC SERVICE

The College of Business and Public Service, encompassing perhaps a wider curriculum than any school other than Science and Arts, contains three schools and seven departments.

The departments of Accounting and Financial Administration, Business Services, Marketing and Transportation Administration and Production and Personnel Administration, comprise one organizational group clustered around the central idea of business administration.

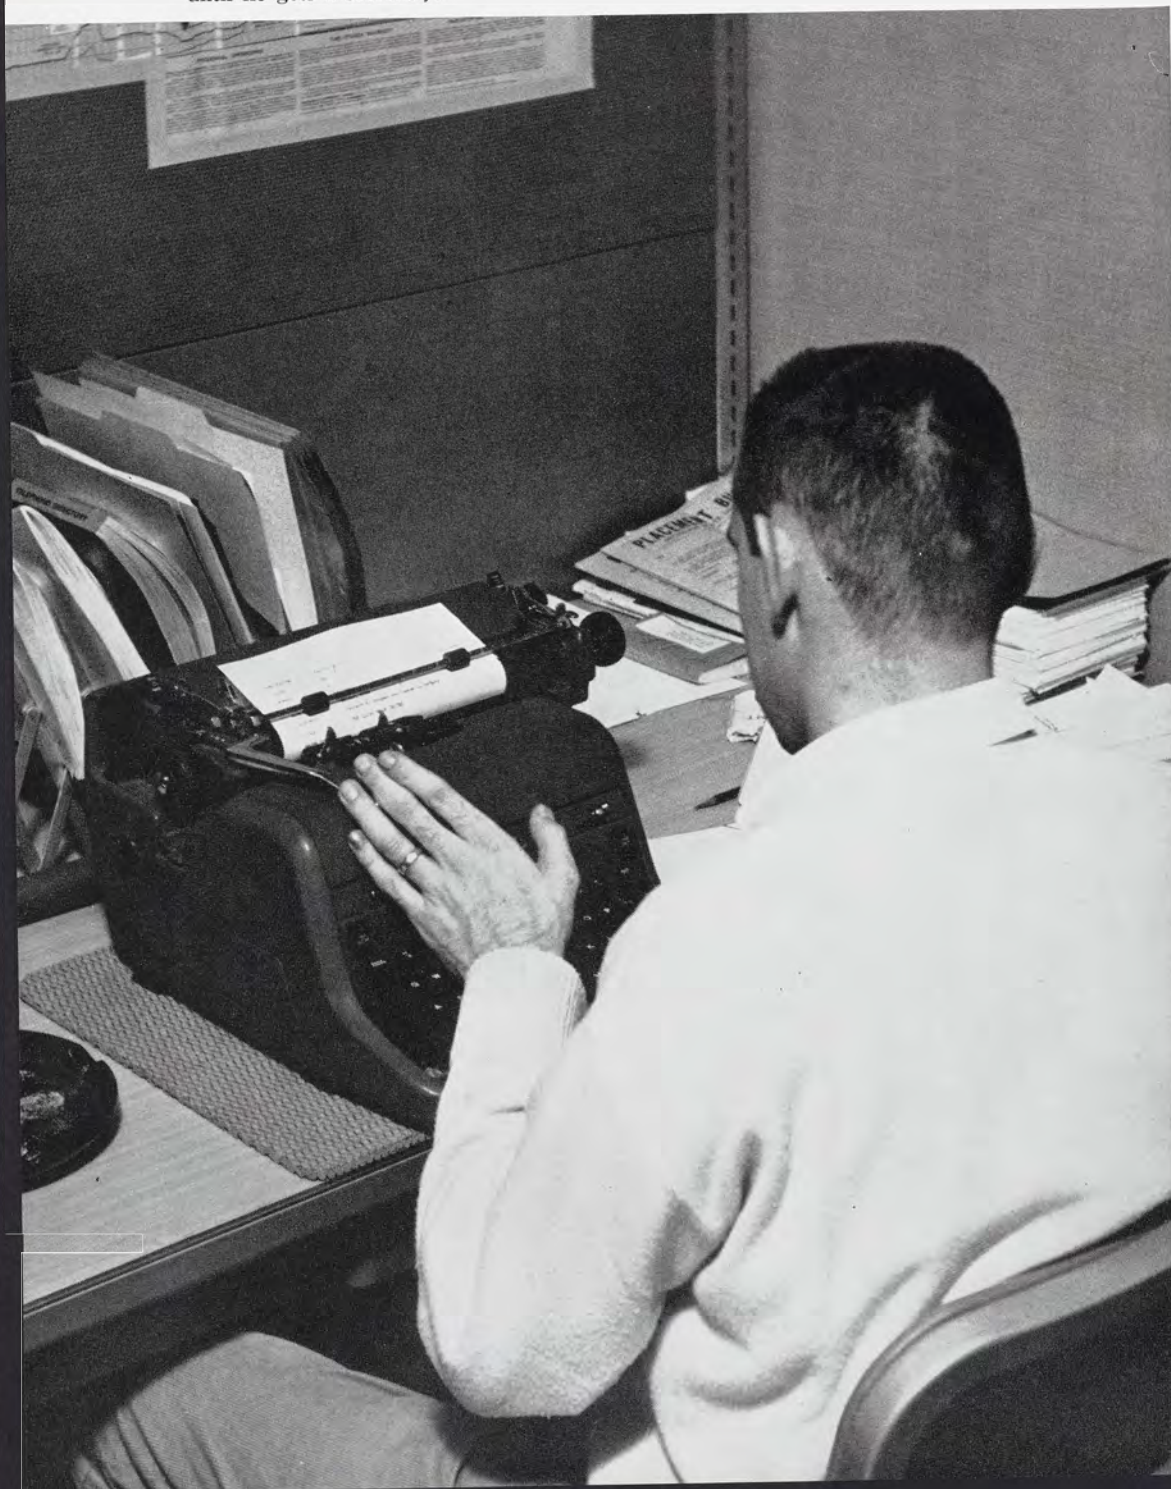

The public service syndrome includes the schools of Hotel, Restaurant and Institutional Management, Police Administration, and Social Work, and the departments of Economics, Political Science, and Urban Planning and Landscape Architecture.

A new undergraduate program has been formalized for business ad students, oriented toward the behavioral sciences and quantitative methodology. College officials feel that this direction is the way American business is heading.

The College of Business and Public Service also looks abroad in its planning sessions. It either sponsors or cooperates in business programs in Brazil, Vietnam, Italy and the Ryukyu Islands.

The graduate division of the College of Business and Public Service moved into new quarters in Eppley Center located on south campus in time for the opening of Fall term. The building was formally dedicated during a day of ceremonies and seminars in mid-October.

This college offers programs leading to the Bachelor of Arts and the Bachelor of Science degrees on the undergraduate level and to Masters and Doctoral degrees on the graduate level of study.

The College of Communication Arts is the youngest school at MSU; at the same time it is the oldest school of its own kind in the country. Perhaps a dozen other schools across the country have since been organized along the same lines.

Several unusual programs have recently been organized under the auspices of this college. Working with the U.S. International Cooperation Administration, the College of Communication Arts has participated in a series of more than 100 week-long seminars for foreign students bound for home after study in the U.S. Over 5,000 men and women have taken part in these seminars, designed to help them communicate the fruits of their studies more effectively when they reach home.

William B. Hawley, Dean of the College of Education.

The College of Education encompasses in its curriculum all the facets of America's gigantic educational system. This college trains elementary and secondary school teachers, college and university instructors, administrative and counseling educators and pioneers in continuing education.

The only college on campus without departments, the College of Education participates in one of the most extensive international programs; faculty members are spread across the globe in Okinawa, Nigeria, Pakistan and South America.

In its research program, the College of Education often assess the needs of school systems of the nation. Last year a project was completed for the Public School system of Chicago in which recommendations in the millions of dollars were submitted after months of investigation.

COLLEGE OF EDUCATION

Each graduate from the College of Education spends one school term student teaching in schools all around the state.

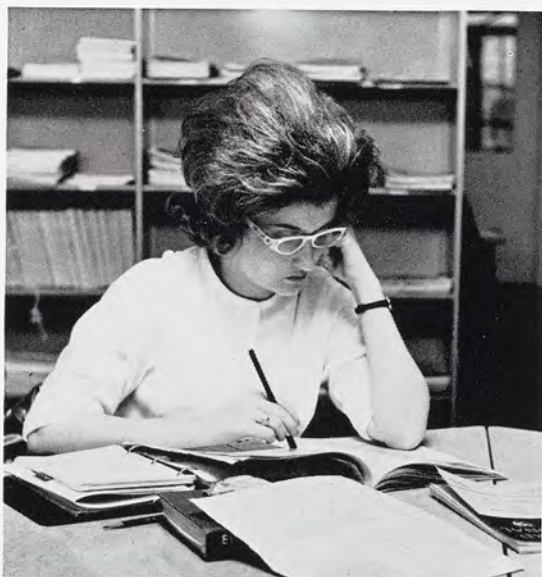

Since one-third of the recipients of a Bachelor of Science degree at MSU qualify for their teaching certificates, the College of Education is playing an important role in combating the national teacher shortage.

An experiment was conducted this year in Abbot Dormitory with an entire precinct reserved for elementary education majors.

ENGINEERING

The College of Engineering starts the next school year in new quarters, located on south campus near Anthony Hall. The new building will provide space for increased research and graduate study.

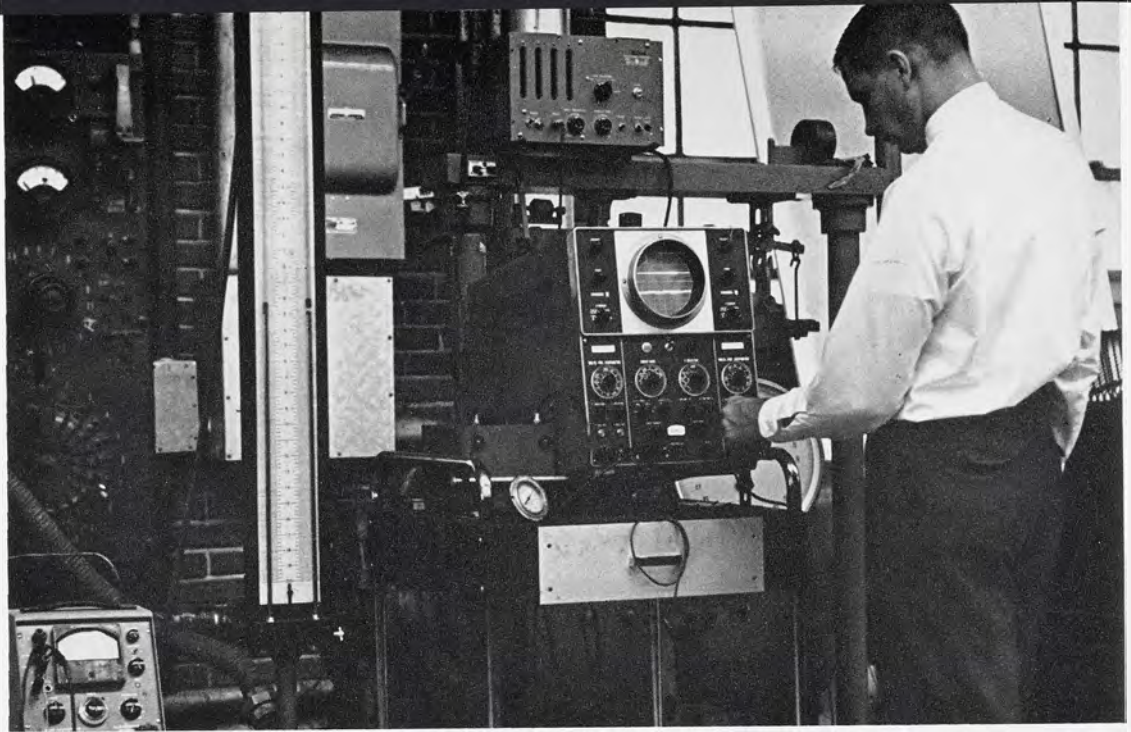

Focused on space-age technology, the engineering program must be flexible enough to keep abreast of new findings. The department of electrical engineering initiated a new curriculum this year, which emphasizes the engineering of large and complex systems.

A new computer to be added next fall, financed in part by the National Science Foundation, will be one of the largest and fastest in the country.

Dr. John D. Ryder, Dean of Engineering.

The College of Engineering offers degrees in six major areas: the departments of agricultural, chemical, civil, electrical, mechanical and metallurgical engineering all offer programs on a graduate and undergraduate level.

The College of Engineering also offers, in cooperation with the College of Science and Arts, a five-year program in engineering for international service which leads to two degrees, Bachelor of Science and Bachelor of Arts. This program is designed to serve the needs of students preparing for engineering careers in foreign lands. The college itself participates in international programs in India and Okinawa.

The College's digital computer, Mistie, will be replaced next fall by a much larger and more useful computer system.

HOME ECONOMICS

Dr. Thelma E. Porter, Dean of Home Economics.

Coeds run experiments on sterilization to strengthen their understanding of its importance.

Along with the College of Agriculture, the College of Home Economics was established by the Morrill Act 100 years ago. As a land grant school, it has numerous tie-ups with federal research stations in home economics and sponsors sizable extension program with one home agent in every Michigan county.

A new undergraduate program was initiated this year, with a drop in the total number of core requirements and more emphasis on a general liberal education. The four reorganized core courses are designed to serve as electives for non-majors as well as focal points for majors.

One of the most important recent developments within this school is the rapid growth of the number of graduate students. To keep up with the new demand for flexibility in graduate programs, a new doctoral curriculum was begun two years ago.

SCIENCE & ARTS

Even the pine tree is analyzed by the researchers interested in discovering the mysteries of nature.

La

Laboratory research is an essential integral of the College of Science and Arts.

The largest college at MSU, and the broadest in scope, is the College of Science and Arts. For this very reason, the Board of Trustees at their January meeting, approved a plan to divide the college into three new colleges: Arts, Natural Science and Social Science. This reorganization plan will go into effect in July.

Differing from the other schools on campus principally in its lack of professional orientation, the College of Science and Arts offers two types of programs. A student may major within a department, or may major within a much broader framework called a division. The two divisions are social sciences and humanities. The college also cooperates closely with the College of Education in the secondary school program, in a system of dual-enrollment.

Many courses in the Science and Arts curriculum afford the instructor and the student the opportunity to work together.

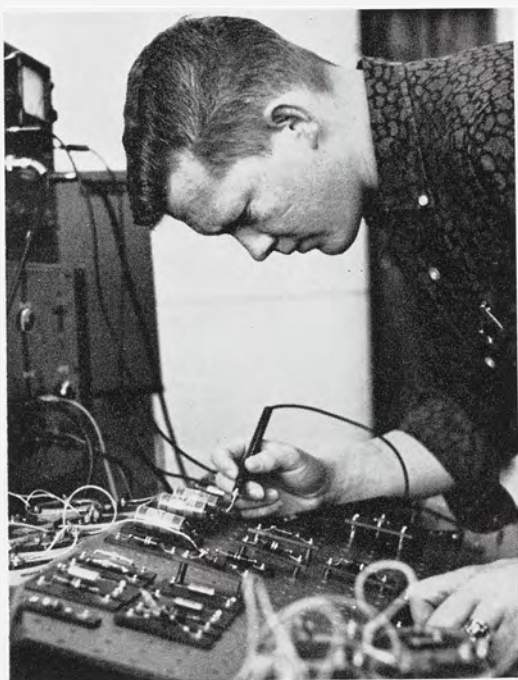

Informal discussions after class with instructors can clear up a perplexing Geology problem.

A major requirement for graduation with a Bachelor of Arts degree was instituted this year under the auspices of the College of Science and Arts. Students working for BA's must take one year of a foreign language. Students working for Bachelor of Science degrees were granted more latitude in their mathematics and science requirements. This was done to accommodate borderline majors, such as Psychology and Geography.

To facilitate administration of the many activities of the college, the various departments are organized into five divisions: Biological Sciences, Fine Arts, Language and Literature, Mathematical and Physical Sciences, and Social Sciences.

Physics lab sessions give students an opportunity to test theory by making practical applications.

Courses in Foundations of Physical Education are taught to Freshman women by closed-circuit television to facilitate more classrooms and a larger enrollment.

Practical, on-the-job experience, such as setting a pony's broken leg, is a large part of the Veterinary Medicine Program.

The College of Veterinary Medicine operates the only six-year program on campus. Except for the department of Medical Technology, which graduates students on either four or five year programs, all Vet Med students spend two years in lower school and four in upper school.

All Veterinary Medicine students must pass a Student Selection committee before admission into Upper School. The college is limited to 64 students per class by the American Association of Veterinary Medicine on the basis of facilities, staff and applications.

Girls in Medical Technology learn to use a tissue slicer for making slide specimens.

Medical proficiency is demonstrated many times in the small animal clinic operated by the College of Veterinary Medicine.

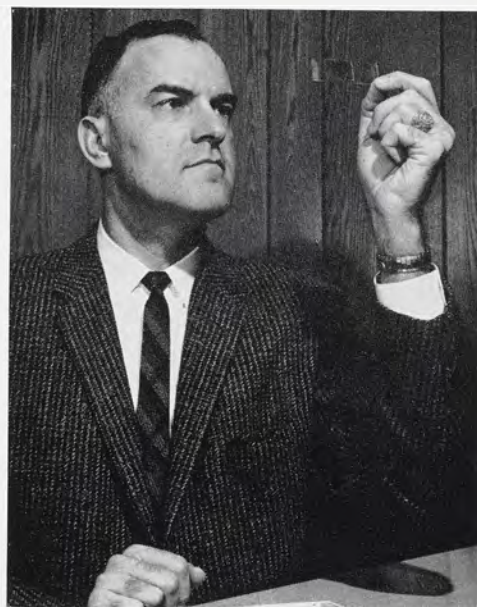

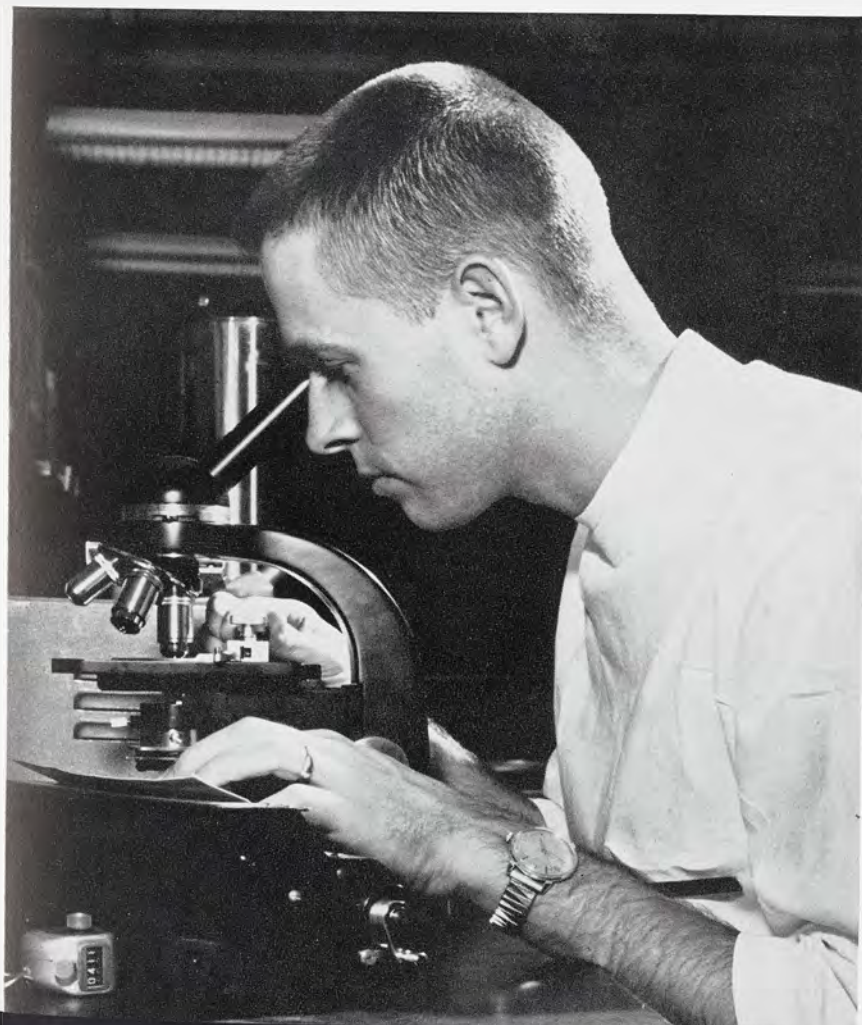

Advanced students in the College of Veterinary Medicine become part of an ambulatory service; classes visit farms within a radius of 20 miles and treat livestock under professional circumstances. Fraternities and sororities with mascots are also well aware of the clinics located in Giltner Hall. Here local pets as well as university livestock are treated, and the college's research program is centered.

The College of Veterinary Medicine is organized into five departments. They are Anatomy, Microbiology and Public Health, Physiology and Pharmacology, Surgery and Medicine and Veterinary Pathology, and includes the School of Medical Technology.

Two Veterinary Medicine students have to forcefully hold one of their patients until the anesthetic to take effect.

Many class and research hours are spent analyzing specimens through multi-eyed microscopes.

RESERVE OFFICERS TRAINING CORPS

Col. Thomas Barrett, Professor of Air Science, and Col. James Skells, Professor of Military Science.

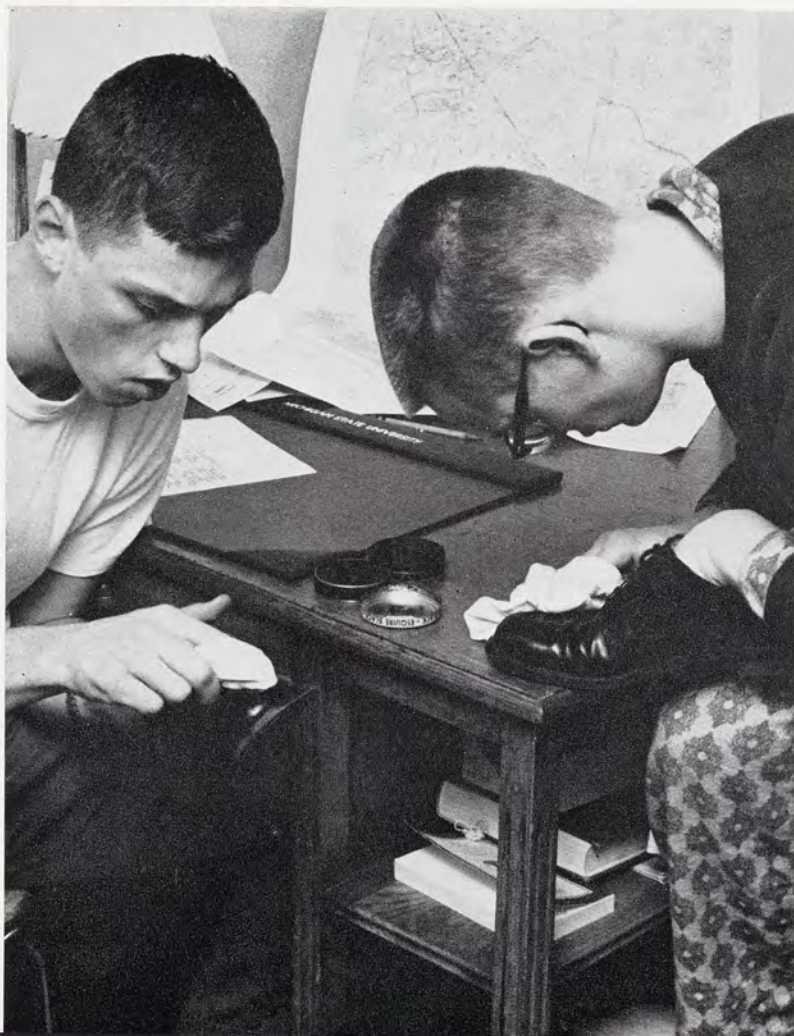

The ROTC program at Michigan State is comprised of the United States Army and Air Force, and consists of courses in the Basic and Senior Divisions of Army and Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps. For the past 77 years, all male students at MSU, unless they were aliens, veterans, enrolled in a short course, physically unfit or over 23 years of age, were required to enroll in either the Army or Air Force program during their first two years in college.

1962 marked the end of this compulsory program, and next year's freshman class will enroll in basic ROTC on a voluntary basis. Upon completion of the first two years, a student may, as in the past, apply for admission to the advanced course which trains students for commissioning as Reserve Second Lieutenants in the U.S. Army or Air Force. Sophomores next year will be required to complete their second year.

Inspection in the Air Force ROTC requires that the cadets stand at rigid attention and stare straight ahead.

Dr. Stanley Idzerta, Dean of Honors College.

Founded in 1957, the Honors College was the first experiment of its kind and has since been used as a model by Iowa State University and by the University of Oregon.

Dean Stanley Idzerta, the only full-time honors program director in America, receives about five requests a month from other schools for information about MSU's program.

Honor College students are selected at the end of their freshman year, must have an all-college of 3.5, and maintain a 3.2 after admission.

HONORS COLLEGE

The Honors College members often find individual discussion of pertinent issues mentally inviting and invigorating.

Students under the Honors College Program work closely with their faculty advisors.

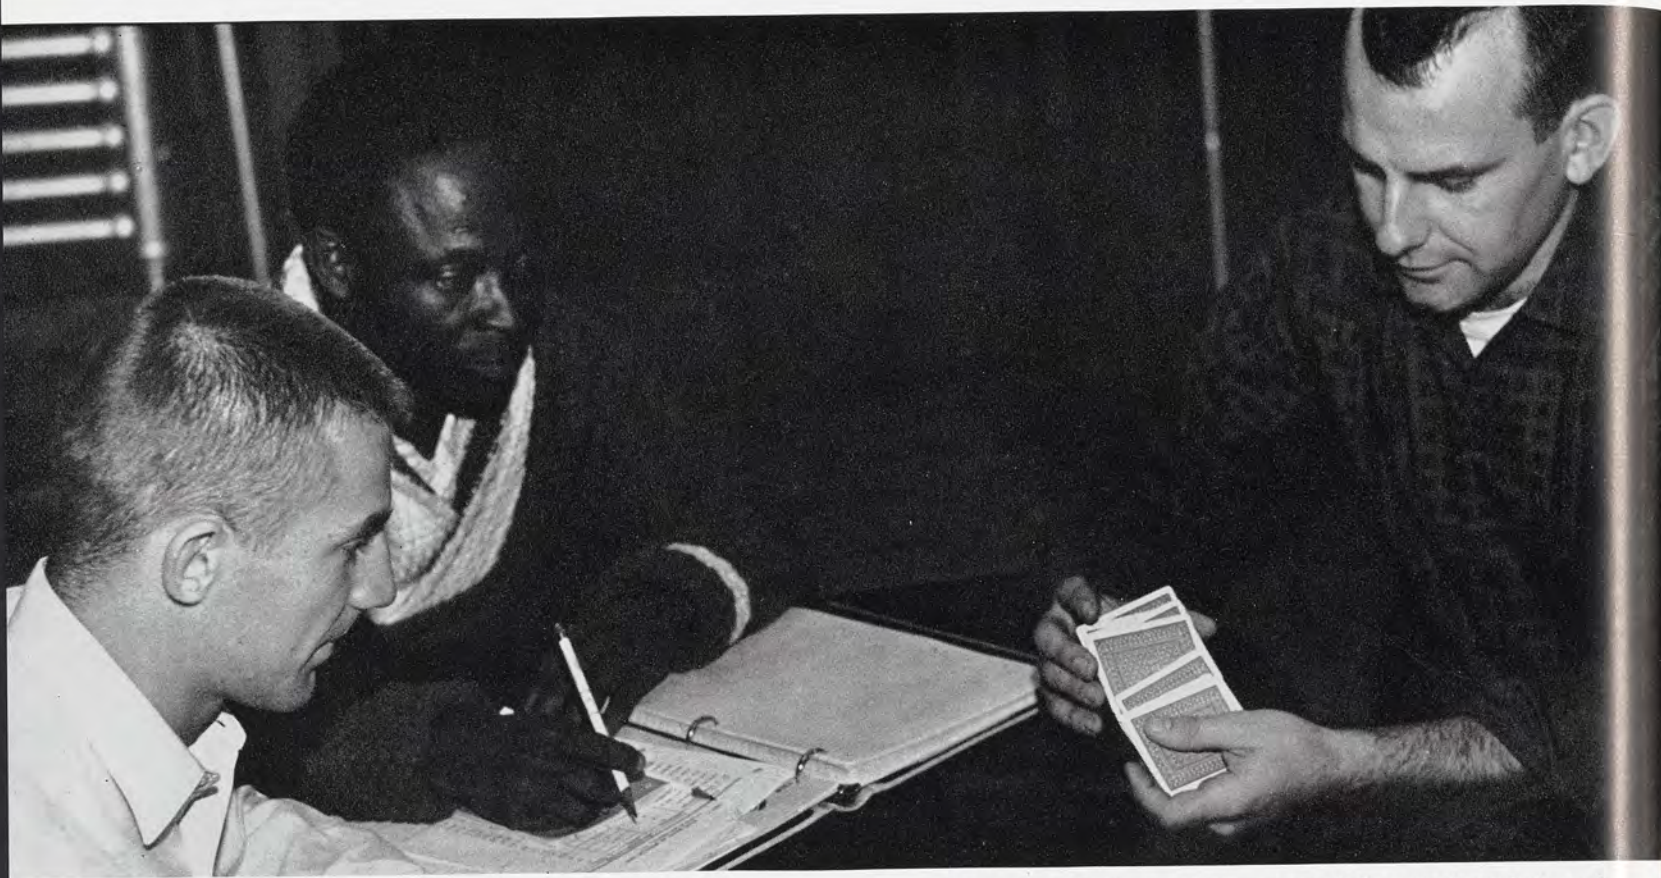

Honors College students may follow individualized academic programs and register under a special program.

Comprising the top four percent of their classes scholastically, Honors College Students can automatically enroll in graduate courses, and enjoy special research facilities. They also register the first day each term and have opportunities to attend faculty seminars as well as the various co-curricular programs arranged especially for them.

Last year 73 percent of Honors College graduates went on to continue their education. Four or five publish in scholarly journals each year. Only one recipient of the last 33 Woodrow Wilson Fellowships awarded to MSU students was not a member of Honors College.

A new program was initiated this year by Honors College. Called the University Scholar program, it allows the 25 so far enrolled, to register their curriculums at the end of the third week of each term, after they have attended prospective class and section choices.

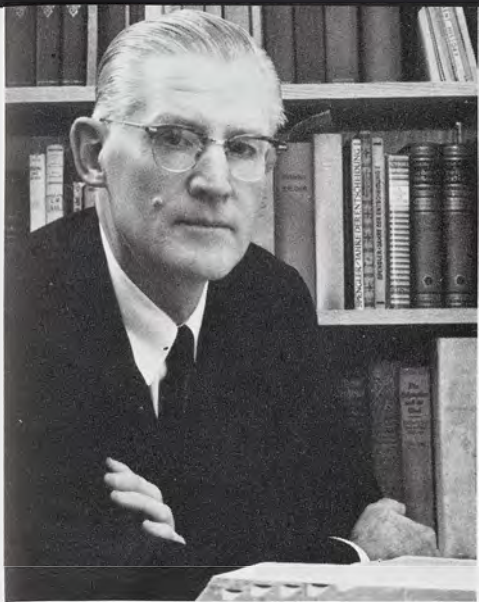

Graduate students carry on many varied research projects such as this psychology experiment on probability distribution.

GRADUATE STUDIES

Some students doing advanced study in Physics make use of the Beta Ray Spectrometer to study energy levels of radioactive nuclei.

Dr. Milton E. Muelder, Dean of the School for Advanced Graduate Studies.

In response to its manifold obligations to graduate study, Michigan State University has established eight colleges authorized to give programs leading to advanced degrees. The colleges offering graduate programs are: Agriculture, Business and Public Service, Communication Arts, Education, Engineering, Home Economics, Science and Arts, and Veterinary Medicine.

The School for Advanced Graduate Studies, under the leadership of Dean Milton E. Muelder, exercises the over-all review and supervision of the graduate education programs conducted in the several colleges, and provides leadership in the evolving of new programs as well as insuring standards for existing programs consistent with the highest national standards.

MSU-OAKLAND

Four residence houses accommodating 48 students each are being constructed and are intended to give the residents a living atmosphere that is of an informal and congenial nature.

Michigan State University Oakland originated in 1959 as a new idea in education. Located between Rochester and Pontiac on the 1600-acre Meadow Brook estate given them by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Wilson, the curriculum strives for a liberal education with emphasis on quality and depth.

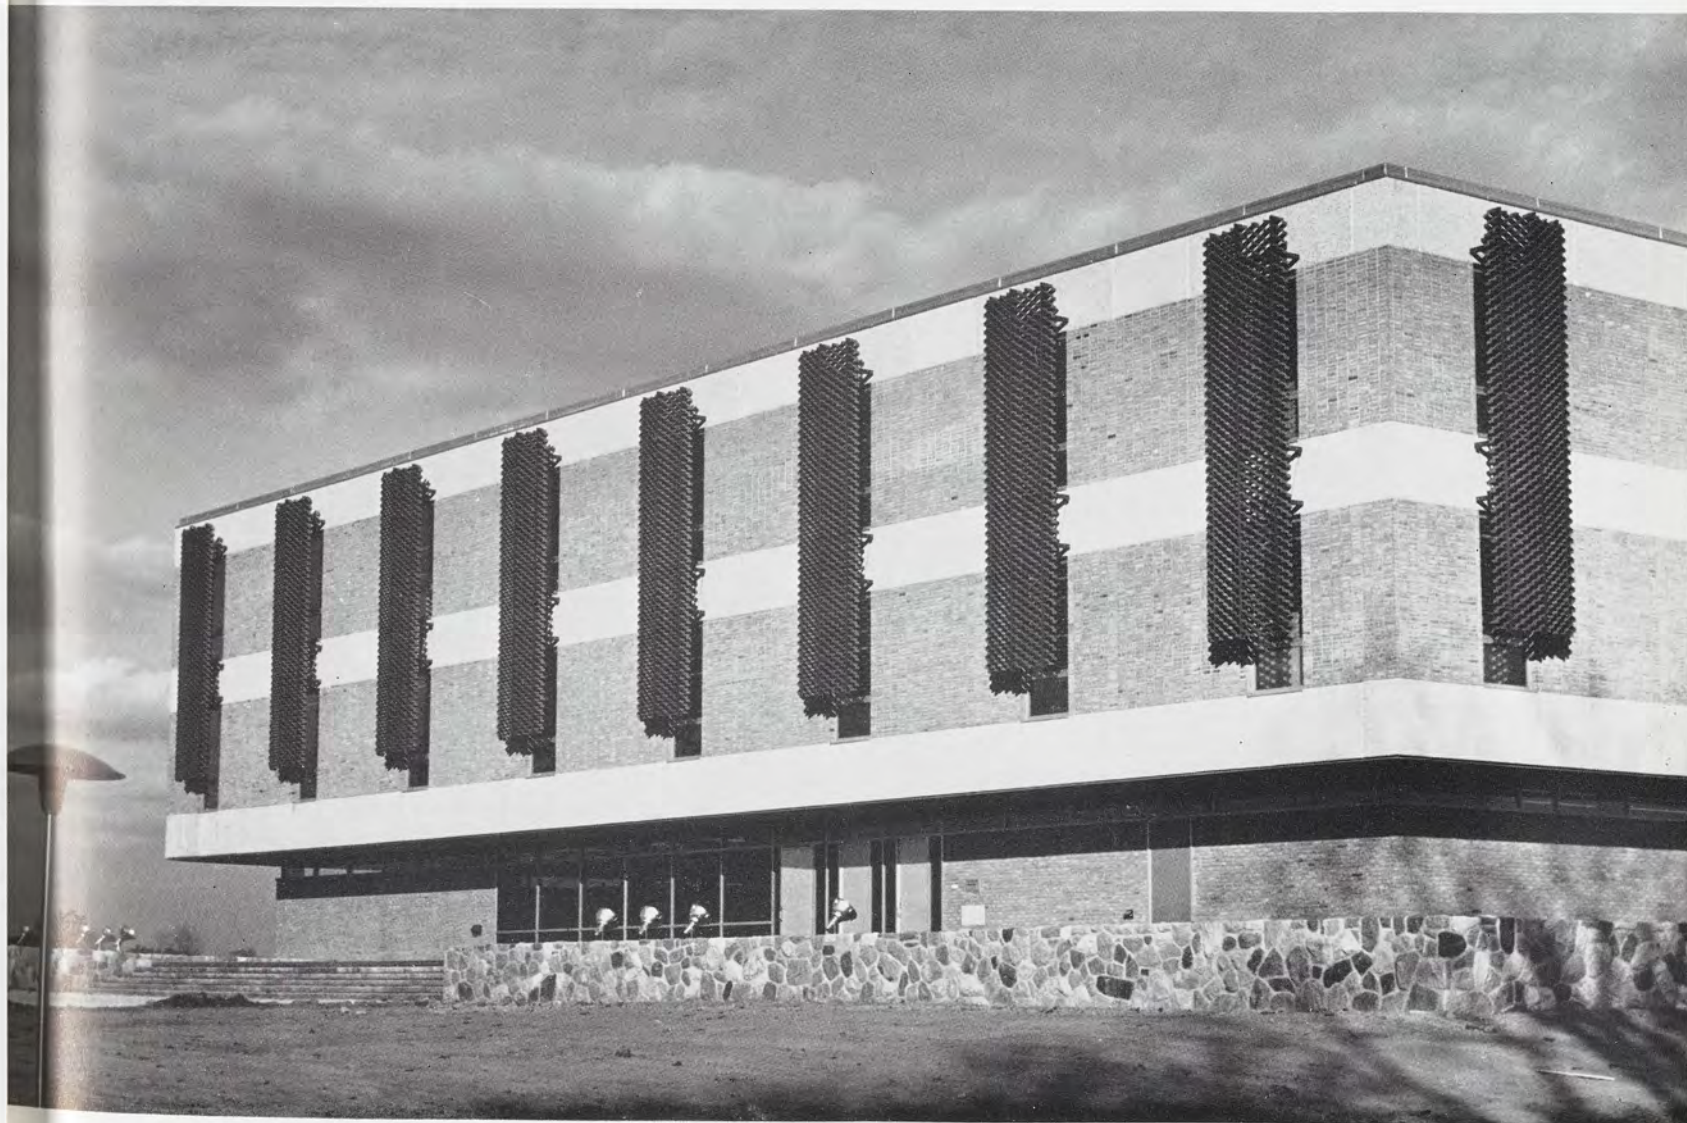

Degrees are granted in four academic fields: Liberal Arts, Business Administration, Engineering, Science and Teacher Education. Every student must take approximately one half of his work in liberal arts studies and all except majors in the physical and life sciences, and engineering and mathematics, must become proficient in at least one foreign language of the eight offered, including Chinese. One year of foreign studies is also required.

There are no required physical education courses at this sister university of MSU. Football team, ROTC, fraternities and sororities and most rules have been omitted from the school organization. All work and no play is not the rule at MSUO, however. They have a well-planned intramural sports program, a new-kind of housing which provides for small-group living and a variety of student activities including a concert series. The series featured well-known figures such as pianist, Eugene List; soprano, Jennie Tourel; Charles Laughton; and the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

Dr. Durward B. Varner, Chancellor of Michigan State University Oakland.

The Kresge Library, built with funds from the Kresge Foundation, was a new and welcome addition to the MSUO Campus, this year.

While the library accommodates the studious, the new Student Center, seen in the background, offers a more social atmosphere.

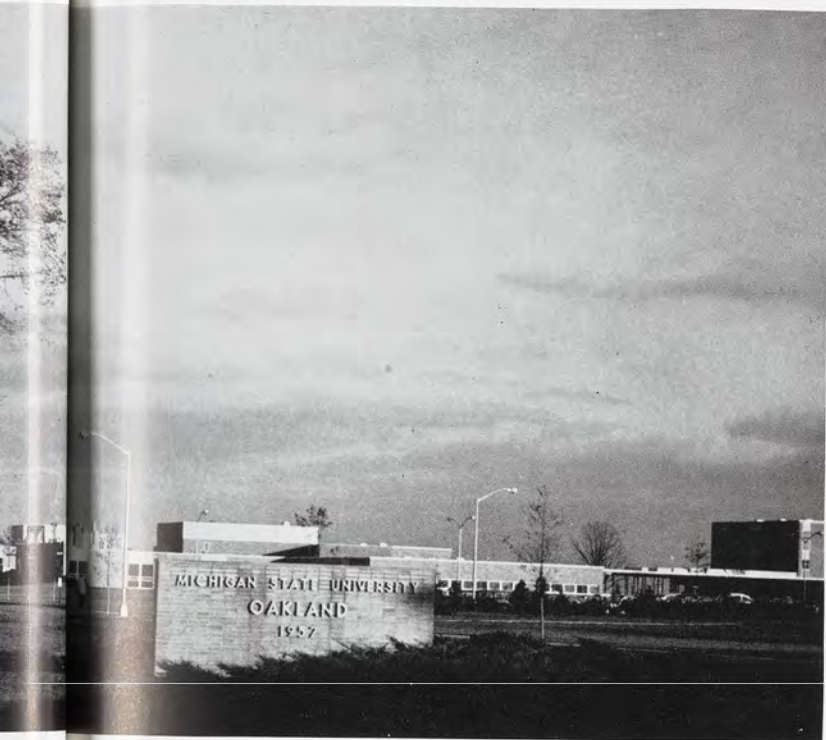

The 1065 students attending MSUO this year had a new library, new science and engineering laboratories and classrooms, and a new Trimester Plan allowing them to graduate in two and two-thirds years, ready for them. New living facilities were also ready for use.

The 55 members of the faculty hold the distinction of having the largest percentage of Ph.D.'s of any college or university in America: 90%. Their average age is 32 years and they came from institutions such as Yale, Harvard, Cornell, and Columbia to teach in this new educational experiment. Faculty research and study is cultivated and encouraged and a number of the faculty have had their works published since the founding of the university.

A $1,500,000 intramural building, with swimming pool and basketball courts, is in the planning stage and construction to expand the Student Center began in the spring. Four dormitories, or houses, are planned. Each house to accommodate 48 students. One has been completed and the others are ready for construction. The houses are intended to provide a more home-like and personal atmosphere for their residents.

Modern, low-level buildings are rapidly filling the rolling hills of the old Wilson estate, home of MSUO.

The interior of the new library, not yet completely stocked, offers a quiet and well lighted study atmosphere.

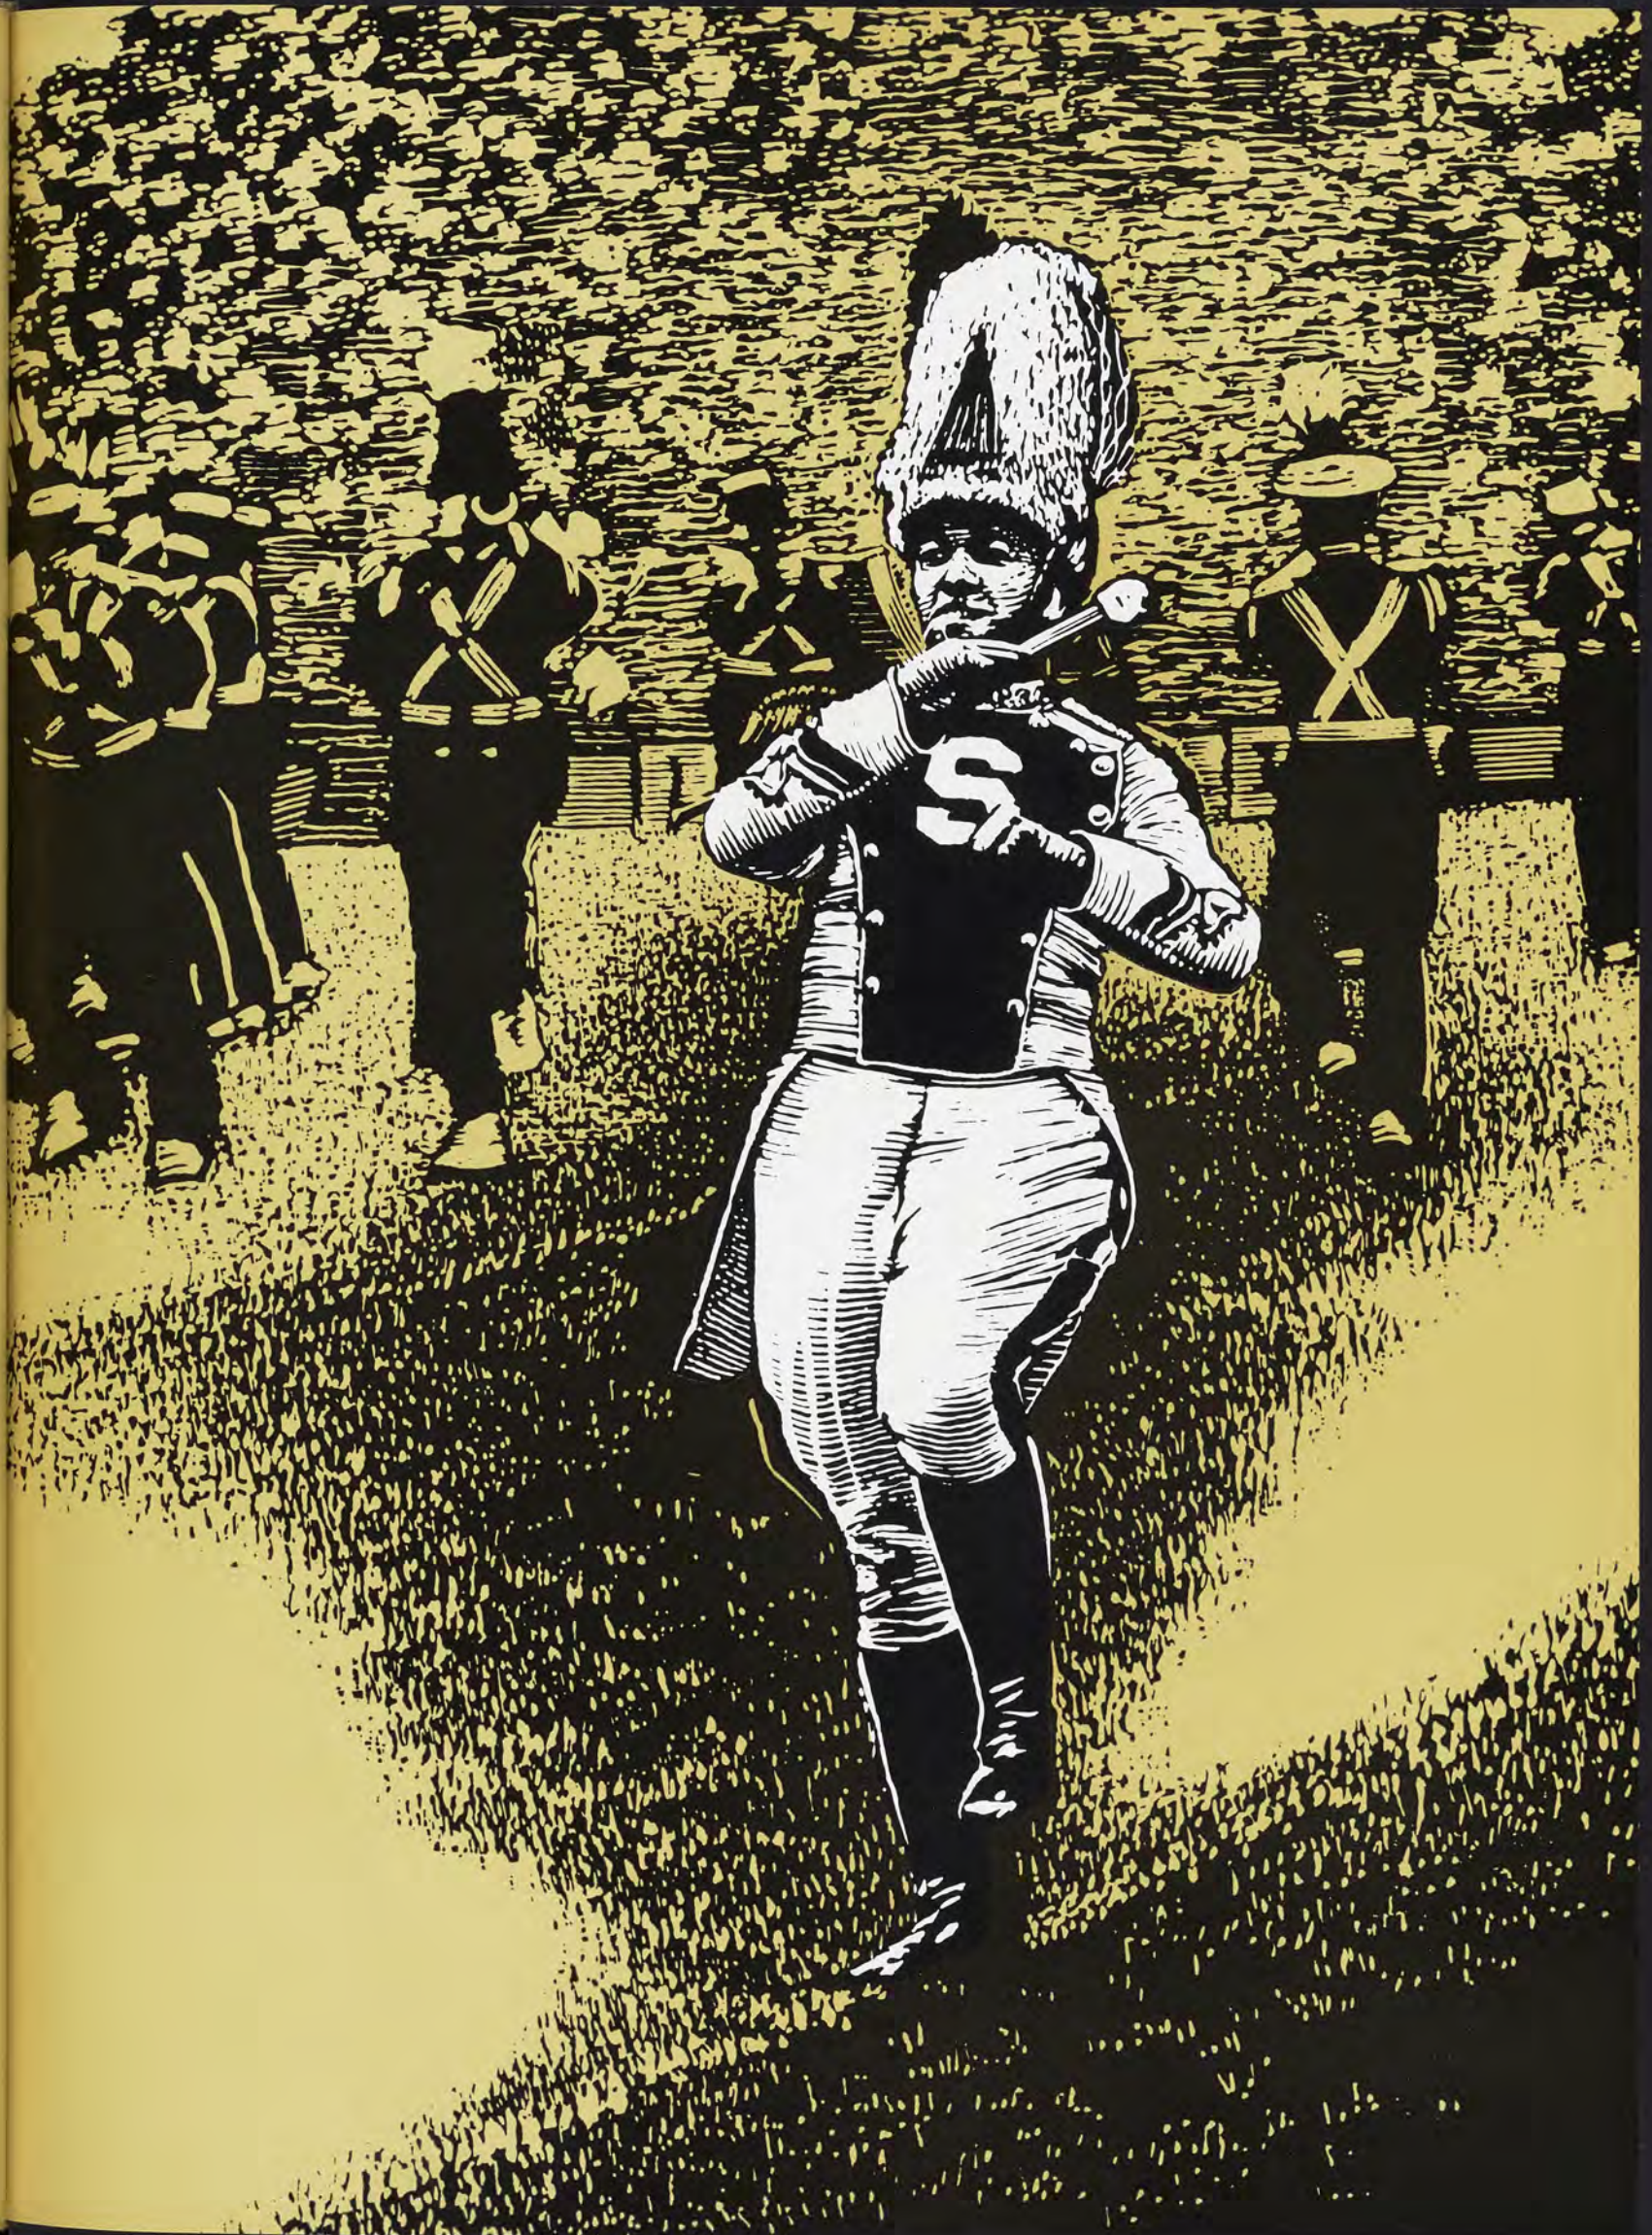

The centrally located Administration Building is convenient for students and faculty on Oakland's expanding campus.

MSU ATHLETICS

*Twice this year we thought we had the Rosebowl made,
But the Gophers had tunneled a Sandy trail

ATHLETICS-MSU

Utter disbelief at the appearance of a basketball-headed State player in the Northwestern-MSU game is the impression created by this picture.

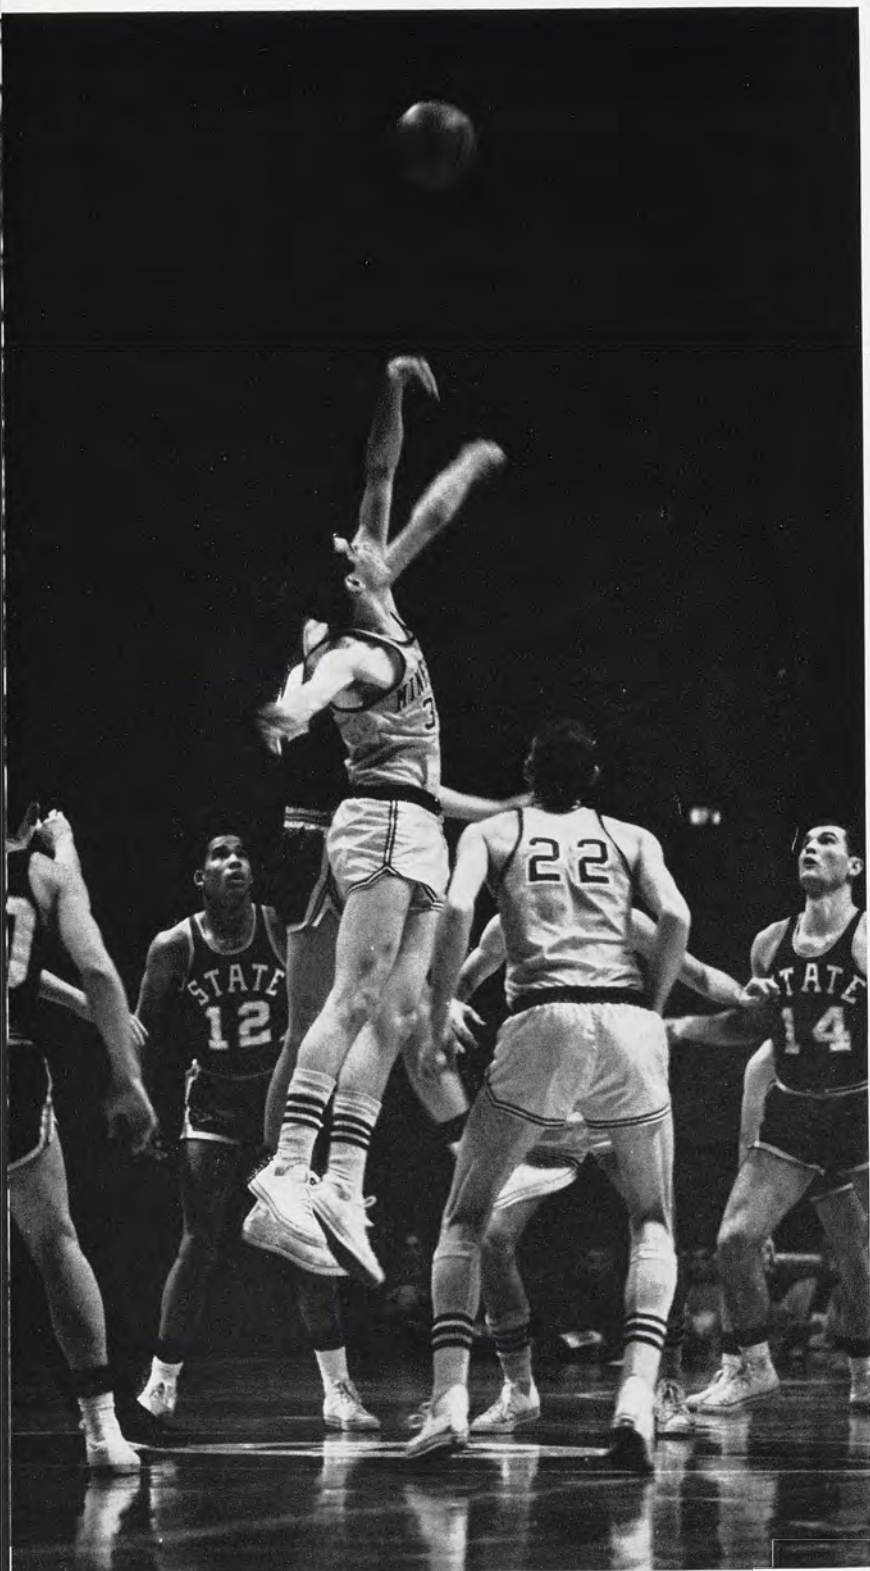

The development of character as well as intellectual achievement is one of the important tasks of the modern university. For this reason, MSU instituted a multi-million dollar athletic program offering intercollegiate, intramural and recreational athletics, based on the assumption that character is the product of the athletic field as well as the classroom and dormitory.

The intercollegiate program, the most extensive among schools in the Big 10, has produced numerous individual and team conference, national and international, champions. The program includes football, basketball, baseball, track, hockey, swimming, gymnastics, soccer, wrestling, golf, cross country, fencing and tennis.

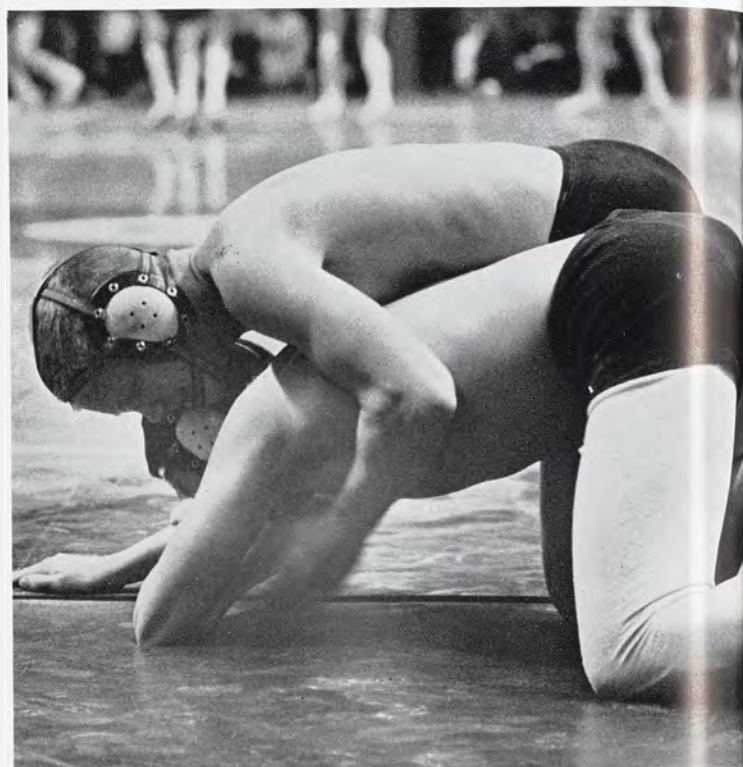

The Intramural Program coupled with the Physical Education Program, provides the busy student with a means of escaping the tensions of study. Every University College student must fulfill a requirement of six credits of physical education course work. These classes are designed to acquaint the student with the various recreational sports he may enjoy throughout life. A basic course in health is given as a prerequisite.

One of the big features of the Intramural Program is the three and one-half million dollar Men's IM Building. The building is the hub of the program and has lent its facilities to many outstanding public sports events.

Two of the top attractions of the building are the swimming pools. In the late spring, summer and early fall, the outdoor pool is a haven for swimming enthusiasts and suntan fans. A co-recreational night once a week, gives the students the opportunity to swim in the winter.

The physical education program, as well as introducing the whole gamut of American sports to each MSU student, has produced top-notch coaches for American schools.

FOOTBALL-MSU

The magic scent of roses, and screams of "we're number one" penetrated the air over Spartanland after the football team won their first five games, including three shutouts over conference contenders Wisconsin, (20-0), Indiana, (35-0), and arch rival Michigan, (28-0).

Then some of the screams died and a few of the petals dropped when the Spartans ran up against All-American quarterback Sandy Stephens and the Golden Gophers of Minnesota, last year's conference champs.

The final nail in State's title hopes coffin was driven the following weekend by the "spoiler-makers" of Purdue. Spartan fans saw the roses wilt when end Art Brandstatter's conversion kick was blocked and Purdue won 7-6.

Despite the disappointment of the missed championship and the Rose Bowl trip, the team compiled their best season mark since 1957, winning 7 of 9 games to finish third in the Big 10, behind Ohio State and Minnesota, and 9th in the nation.

In the first five games, the Spartans held opponents to 10 points; those scored were a field goal, kicked by Stanford, and a touchdown by Notre Dame. Both teams were previously undefeated and ironically led at half time, apparently having stymied State. However, in what is becoming a tradition here, the Big Green roared back to win both games.

The Spartans won the first five conference games starting with Wisconsin at Madison. The Badgers, considered a dark horse in the Big 10, had opened their season victoriously the previous week against Utah. Playing for the first time, and away from home, the Spartans were considered the underdog. Also, Wisconsin sported the highly touted passing combination of Ron Miller and Pat Richter. However, thanks to the fine defensive playing of senior captain Rocky Ryan and junior Ernie Clark, they proved to be inefficient in scoring against State.

Another big asset to the team that day, and during the rest of the season, was junior fullback George Saimes. Saimes scored 12 points, six of them on a 34-yard run.

Ernie Clark crumples Michigan's speedy halfback Benny McCray. Clark was one of the Wolverine's many frustrations during the 28-0 rout.

Even an unexpected assist from an official didn't help this hapless Irish runner. George Saimes nailed him after a short gain in the close 17-7 contest.

A touchdown receives varying degrees of crowd reaction.

In the opening home game the following weekend, the Spartans piled up 36 yards rushing while holding Stanford to 37, and won the game 31-3. The brightest spot of the day was a group of sophomore running backs: Sherman Lewis, Dewey Lincoln, Earl Lattimer and Herman Johnson. Lewis was second to Saimes in total points and rushing yardage for the year, scoring 38 points and averaging 6.2 yards per carry.

It was a sad day for the loyal supporters of the Wolverines of Ann Arbor when the Spartans invaded Michigan Stadium. There was some false joy when State chose to kick off but it vanished 13 minutes later when the scoreboard read 14-0 in favor of the Spartans. The scoring was done by senior Gary Ballman and George Saimes. A second quarter pass to senior Carl Charon made it 21-0 and Lewis picked up the final tally.

The Wolverines missed the scoreboard by a recalled touchdown. The next Saturday at home Notre Dame gave the big green some anxious moments but also fell 17-7.

Amidst the nostalgic sentiment that alone belongs to Homecoming, State showed little sentimentality and hospitality to Indiana. The Spartans roundly trounced the Hoosiers 35-0 before 55,361 fans. Charon had another fine day including a 48-yard touchdown run in the third quarter. Coach Duffy Daugherty told the press that junior quarterback Pete Smith had "come of age" as a Big 10 quarterback.

That same weekend, another quarterback entered the picture and went on to become All American. His name was Sandy Stephens and he led the Golden Gophers of Minnesota, all the way to Pasadena. The Spartans fell hard. It just wasn't their day. Although they were twice within scoring distance, the score was 13-0 Minnesota at the final gun.

Umbrellas of many sizes and colors were lifted during the Homecoming game, making the Stadium look like a giant mushroom bed.

Quarterback Pete Smith has plenty of time to take aim before firing a pass down the middle.

At Purdue Saines scored the Spartans' lone tally and they led at the half 6-0. Purdue scored in the third period and made the kick. Final score 7-6.

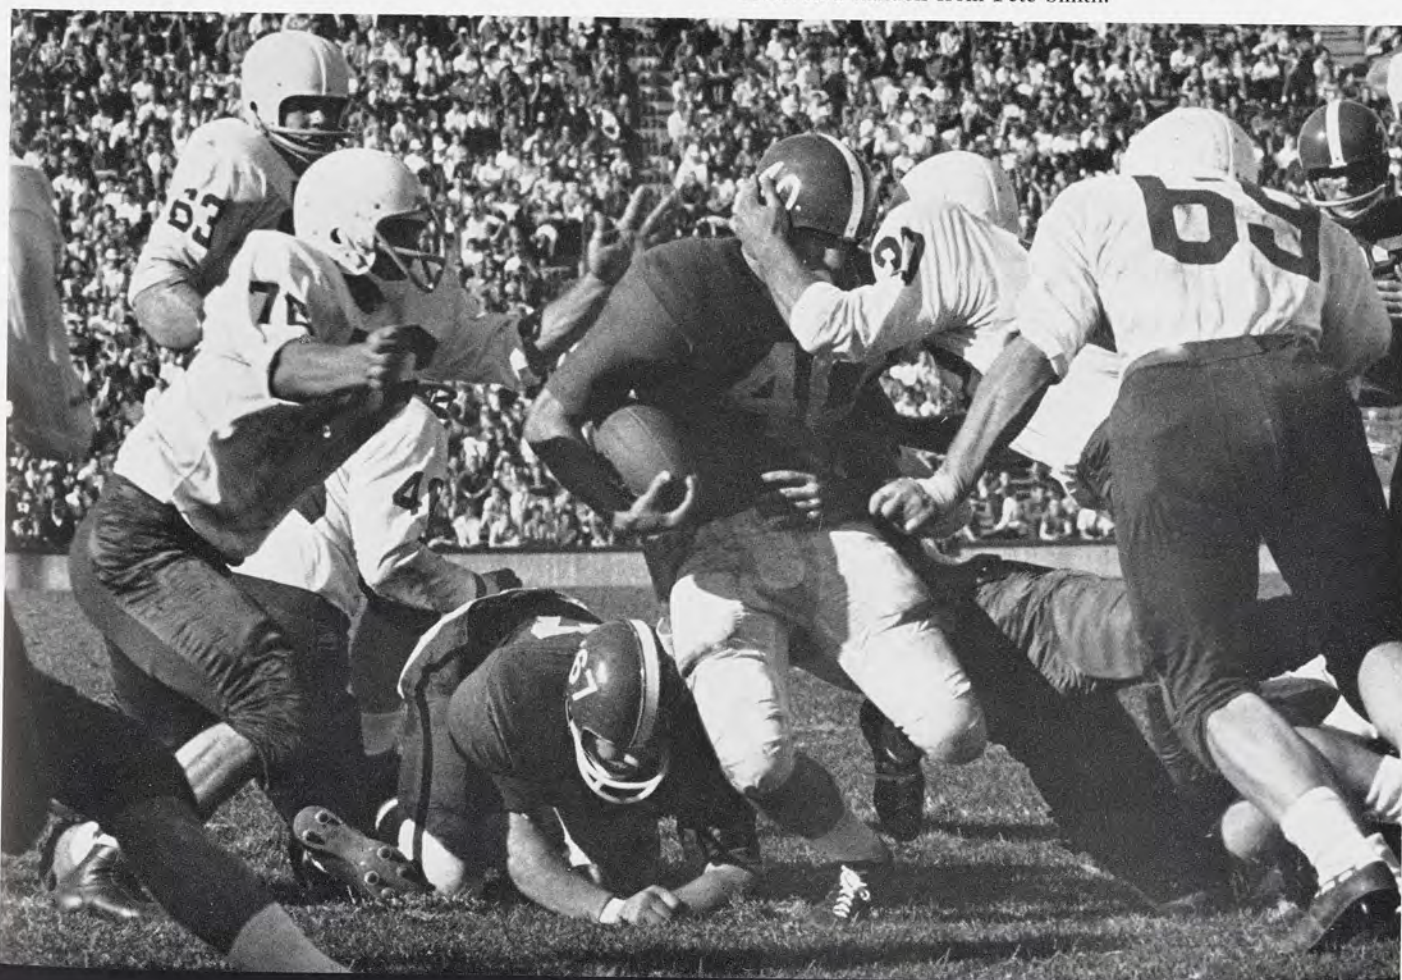

It was the Northwestern game that etched the value of the sophomore backs to the team. Having depended on fullbacks Saines and senior Ron Hatcher in previous games, Duffy suddenly switched tactics resulting in a 21-13 victory over the Wildcats. The switch was to use Lewis and Lincoln as the predominant ball carriers. Lewis scored two touchdowns and Lincoln picked up 86 yards in 18 carriers. Sophomore Matt Snorton caught a pass from Smith for the third score.

In the Illinois game Lewis picked up his longest run of the season when he scampered 54 yards to score the second TD. The first one was a 57-yard pass from Smith to Lewis. Ballman raced 56 yards for the third touchdown of the day. Junior Lonnie Sanders caught a 29-yard pass to cap the scoring, 34-7.

An added link in the toilet paper chain is tied by a Spartan fan.

Coach Daugherty said of the season in retrospect, "If anyone had told me last summer that we would end up with a 7-2 record, including victories over arch rivals Michigan and Notre Dame, I would have been very surprised and pleased". He attributed the fine record to a combination of three hard core groups: seniors Ballman, Brandstatter, Charon, Fontes, Pete Kakela, Tony Kumiega, Dave Manders, Ryan, Bob Suci, Bob Szwast and Tom Winiecki; Juniors George Azar, Ed Budde, All-American Dave Behrman, Clark, Jim Kanicki, Saimes, Sanders, and Smith; Sophomores Charlie Brown, Dave Herman, Johnson, Lattimer, Lewis, Lincoln, Roger Lopes, Ron Rubick and Matt Snorton.

Saimes was voted All Big 10 and Behrman All-American. Both will be back next year and Saimes, voted the team's most valuable player, will be the squad captain. Smith threw for an average of 44%. Saimes led in the rushing and scoring departments with a 5.5 average and 48 points. One Spartan coach won't be back next year. Bill Yeoman, backfield coach, took a head coaching position at Houston.

BASKETBALL-MSU

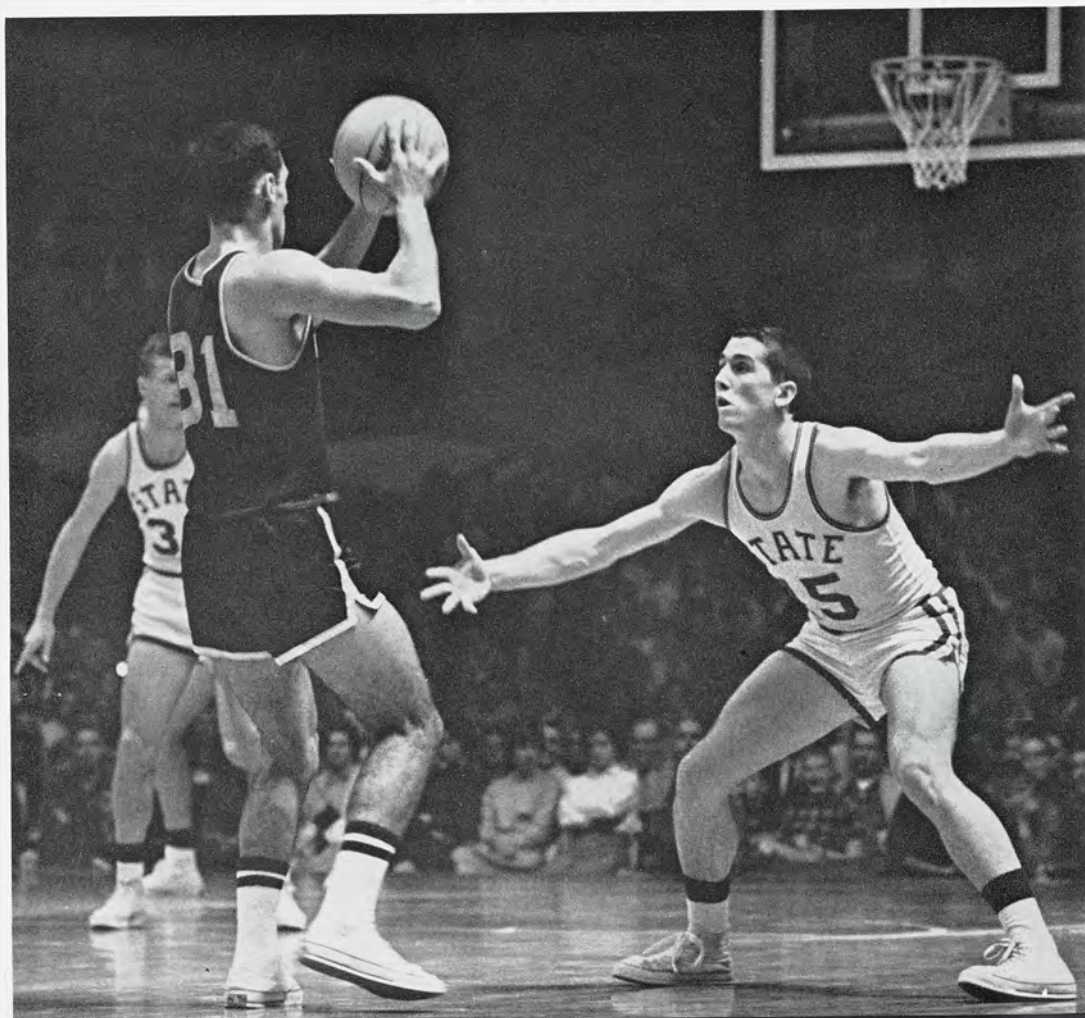

Michigan State's 1961-62 basketball team finished in a tie with Northwestern for last place in the Big 10, but the Spartans can look forward to the future. Only two players were lost via graduation.

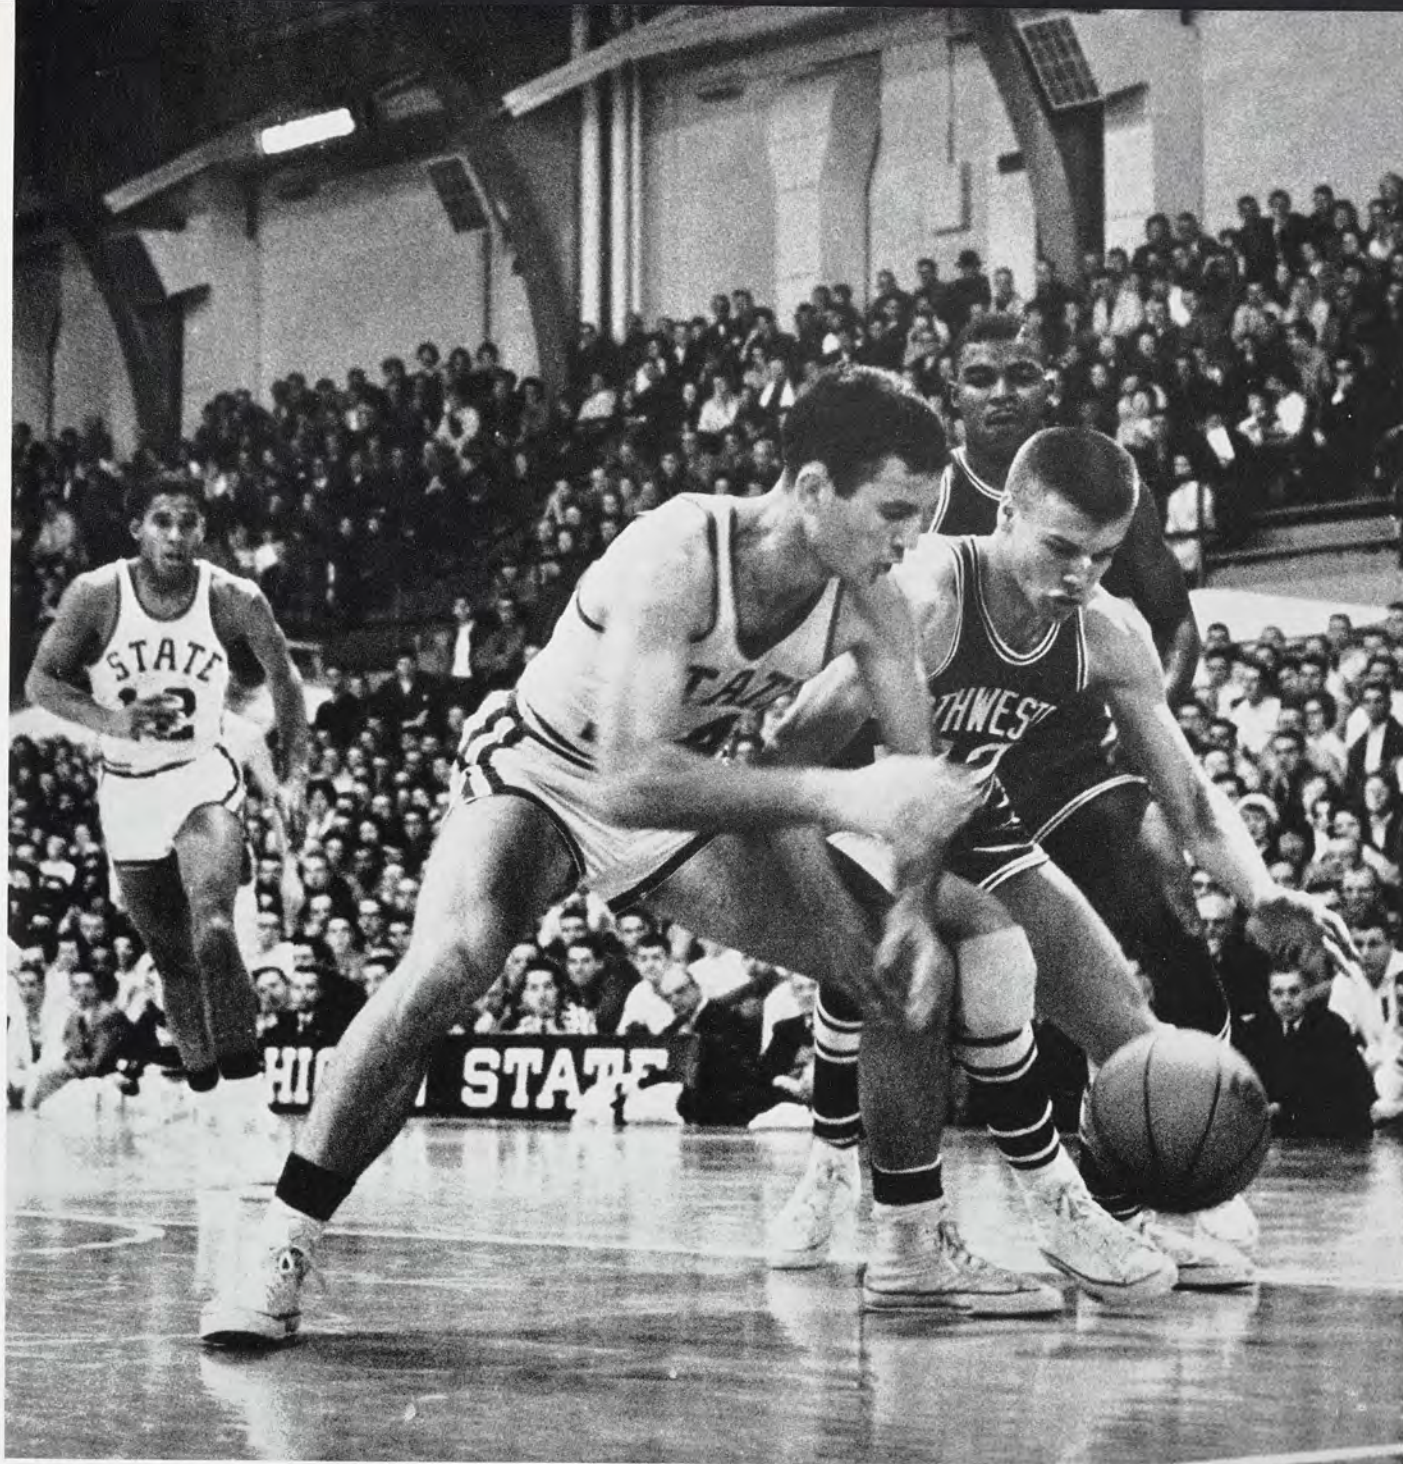

The lone seniors, Art Schwarm and Bob Sparvero, each received awards at the annual basketball banquet following the season. Schwarm, a three-year regular for State and team captain this year, was honored with the Chicago Tribune Trophy as the most valuable player; and the Leadership Trophy. Sparvero won the Peter Scofes Sportsmanship Trophy.

Sophomore forward Pete Gent was given the Charles Phillips trophy as the Player of the Year.

The Spartans completed the 1961-62 campaign with an 8-14 overall record and were 3-11 in Big 10 action.

Sophomore forward Pete Gent led Michigan State in scoring during the 1961-62 season. Gent tallied 311 points in 22 games for a 14.1 average, and he also topped the Spartans in rebounds with 206.

Schwarm was second in the scoring department as he finished with 273 points in 22 games for a 12.4 average. Junior forward Lonnie Sanders was third with 219 points in 20 contests and a 10.9 average.

Michigan State, as a team, scored 1,651 points to the opposition's 1,675, and averaged 75 points per game to 76.1 for its opponents. The Spartans' shooting percentage for the year was .376.

After Michigan State had dropped five games in a row midway through the season, Spartan head coach Forddy Anderson decided to go with his youth. He started four sophomores along with Schwarm the rest of the way.

First-year men Bill Berry, Pete Gent, Fred Thumann, and Bill Schwarz joined Schwarm in the starting lineup when the Spartans met Michigan at Ann Arbor, and the new combination responded with MSU's initial Big 10 victory, 80-74.

On a Saturday afternoon in January, State met Northwestern in Jenison Fieldhouse in a regionally-televised contest, and the Spartans were beaten 71-70. Sophomore guard Bill Schwarz fired home a push shot from mid-court in this game, but it was barely one second too late to keep State from defeat.

The Spartans then lost four games in a row—three to the Big 10's top teams, Ohio State, Wisconsin, and Purdue—before they met Indiana at Jenison Fieldhouse.

Indiana's offensive-minded Hoosiers were in the thick of a battle for second place in the conference, but State earned its third Big 10 win, 97-85.

Despite a fine record of eight wins, two losses and one tie during their spring training tour, the Spartans posted only a 6-8 record in Big 10 play. After dropping their first six conference games, they won five of the remaining seven to finish fifth.

Fine hitting played an important part in the success of the last half of the season. The team finished fourth in Big 10 batting averages with a season average of .280 and a conference average of .256.

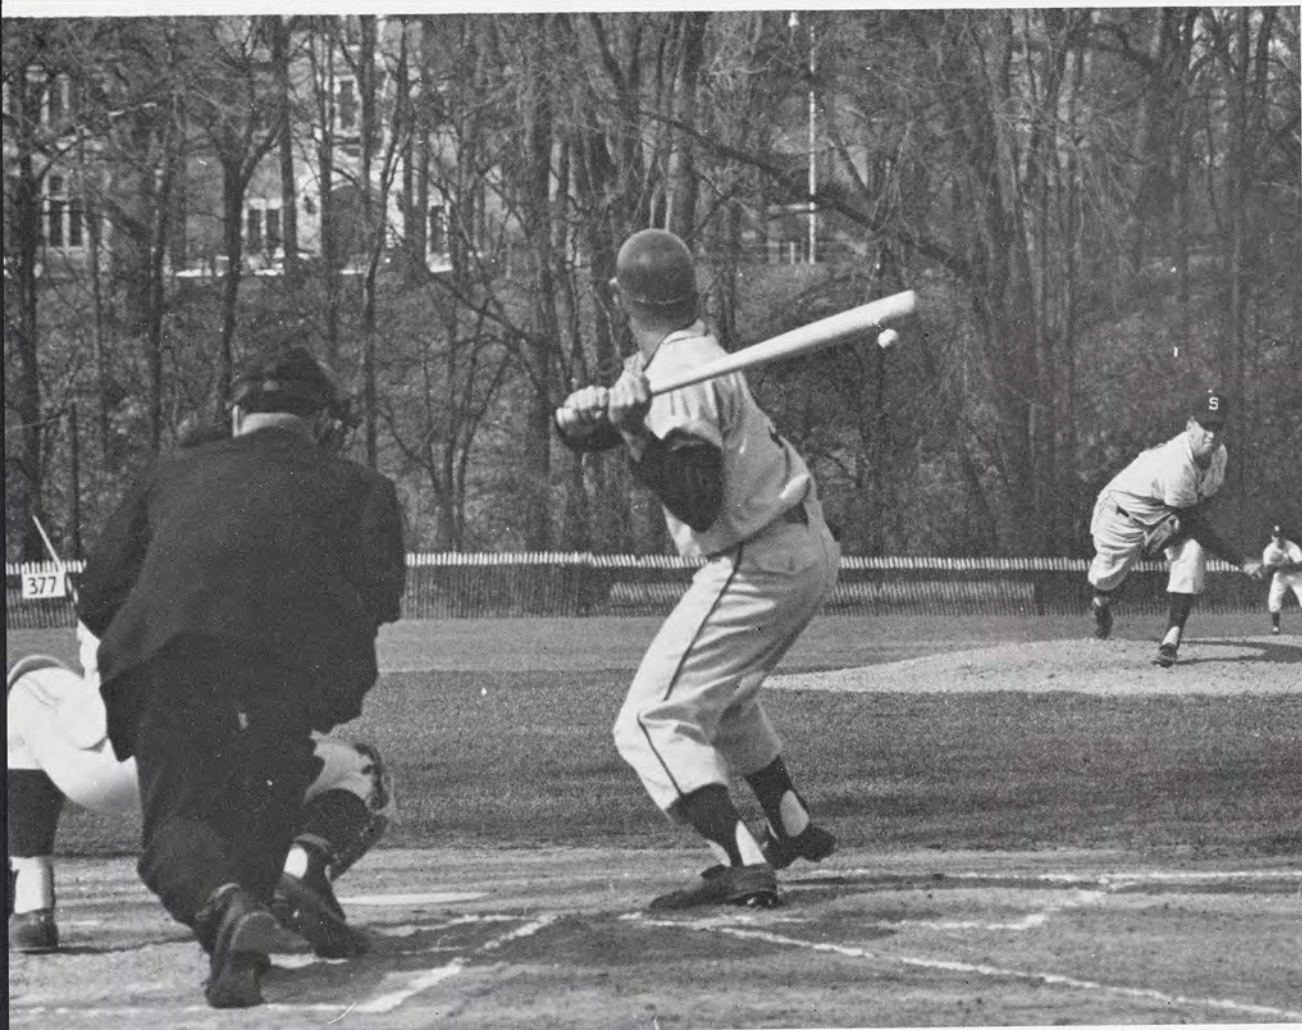

Left fielder Tom Riley, chosen for the All-American second team, was the individual batting champion with a .359 average and six home runs. The team's "Most Valuable Player," first-baseman Bill Schudlich, placed second in team averages with .333 and five home runs.

The team had fine support from its pitching staff which posted a 3.1 earned run average. Robert Ross led the hurlers with a 2.22 earned run average, striking out 57 batters and had a 5-2 record. Jack Nutter had a perfect record, 3-0, and a 2.98 earned run average. Mickey Sinks carried much of the load, pitching 67 innings and striking out 67 batters.

Michigan State's hockey team culminated one of its finest seasons with a thrilling 4-3 overtime victory over the University of Denver in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association Play-offs.

Varsity Ice Hockey calls for rugged play and extremely fast action. Here, Spartan goalie John Chandik chases a flying puck.

MSU soccer games were held on the mornings of most home football games and drew a large student following.

SOCCER-MSU

Fast action and rough play highlight the varsity soccer games.

Winning soccer games has become a tradition at MSU and the "61" season was no exception.

State opened with a 7-0 win over Earlham and then kept right on winning until former NCAA champion St. Louis University stopped them, 1-0, in the season's finale. This gave the Spartans an over-all record of eight wins and one loss.

Mab Ventura proved to be State's biggest scoring gun. He belted 22 goals, setting a new State record for most scores in a single season. He also holds the career mark with 36 goals.

Defensively the Spartans were sparked by its rugged halfback line, comprised of All-American Reinier Kemeling, All-Midwest Ken Graham and sophomore Sam Donnelly, who was voted as the most valuable player by his teammates at the season's close.

Behind this trio stood Capt. Ted Saunders, who has allowed only 16 goals in 18 games during the past two years.

TRACK-MSU

Spartan trackmen had a tough season last spring mainly because the team was primarily juniors and sophomores who lacked the necessary experience of meet competition.

In the Big 10 Conference Meet, State finished sixth with a total of 16 points. They also came in sixth in the IC4A meet with 14 points, and sixth in the CCC with 19 points. The remainder of the season was comprised of the Michigan AAU in which the Spartans garnered 20 points, and the NCAA in which they scored two points.

Senior standouts Solomon Akpata and Zach Ford bolstered the young team and accounted for much of the scoring. Akpata, broad jump and hop, skip and jump specialist, was State's top individual scorer with a total of 53 points. Second was Ford, sprinter, who amassed 37 points during the spring season. Jerry Young, a junior distance man, finished third in scoring with a total of 24½ points.

Bennie McRae of U of M, and Herm Johnson of MSU run neck and neck over the high hurdles.

Spartan harriers had an up and down season that finally landed them in the number two slot in the Big 10 Meet, having won it for the past six years.

The high point of the season for the team was winning the IC4A team title at New York. This was the 13th time the team had won over the years.

However, in the NCAA meet at Forest Akers golf course, they slipped to the number nine position. Senior Captain Jerry Young placed 18th in the National Meet.

Last spring the MSU Varsity Tennis Team compiled their finest season in seven years, 16 wins, 4 losses, and a rank of second place in the Big 10 Conference.

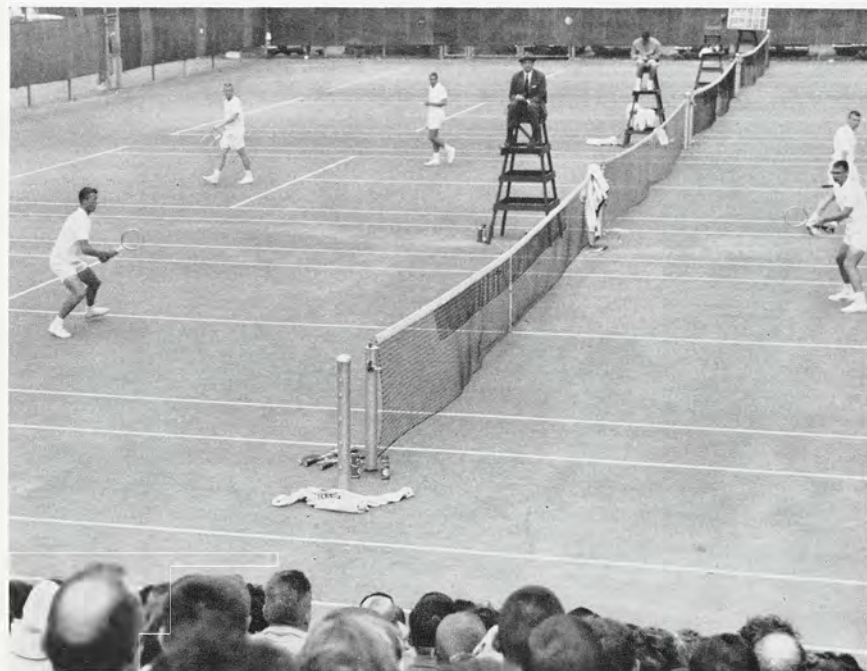

Dick Hall and Jack Damson were the stalwarts of the squad. Hall had 14-6 in dual meet play while Damson had the best average with 18 wins and 2 losses. In doubles, Brian Eisner and Hall went 15-5 and Bill Lau and Ron Henry combined for a 16-2 record.

In the Big 10 Tennis Meet, held at MSU, State emerged with two championships and four second-place spots.

An overall picture of the Michigan State swimming team was summed up in a comment by assistant coach Bob Mowerson: "This is the best team which has ever represented Michigan State but has one of the worst dual meet records." The Spartan tankmen, with a dual meet record of five wins and four losses, placed fourth in the Big 10 and sixth in the NCAA Meet.

The outstanding highlight of the season was the 400-yard freestyle relay team composed of Jeff Mattson, Doug Rowe, Bill Wood and Mike Wood. Breaking the standing Big 10 record of 3:15.9; and the NCAA record with a time of 3:15.5.

Among the graduating seniors who will be remembered for their strong contribution in rounding out this fine Spartan team are Captain Carl Shaar, Doug Rowe, Richard Blazejewski, Richard Brackett and Juergen Matt.

In one sense, it was a disappointing season, but there is a strong indication that future teams will be as good as this one with hopes for a better won-lost record.

GYMNASTICS-MSU

Michigan State's second place finish in the Big 10 championship was indicative of things to come next season and of the fine showing of the squad this year. Coach Szypula's team racked up a fine record of eight wins and four losses.

Sophomore Dale Cooper and senior Steve Johnson copped first places in both the Big 10 and NCAA meets; Cooper on the still rings and Johnson on the trampoline. Senior Gani Browsh took first position in the free exercises at the Big 10 meet.

Defending Big 10 champ Larry Bassett was upset by Arno Lascari on the parallel bars. Lascari is from Michigan, the 1962 Big 10 champions, and the only team to beat the Spartans twice this season.

Two of the biggest wins of the season were over the Badgers of Wisconsin, 84-27 and the Buckeyes of Ohio State, 79-32.

WRESTLING-MSU

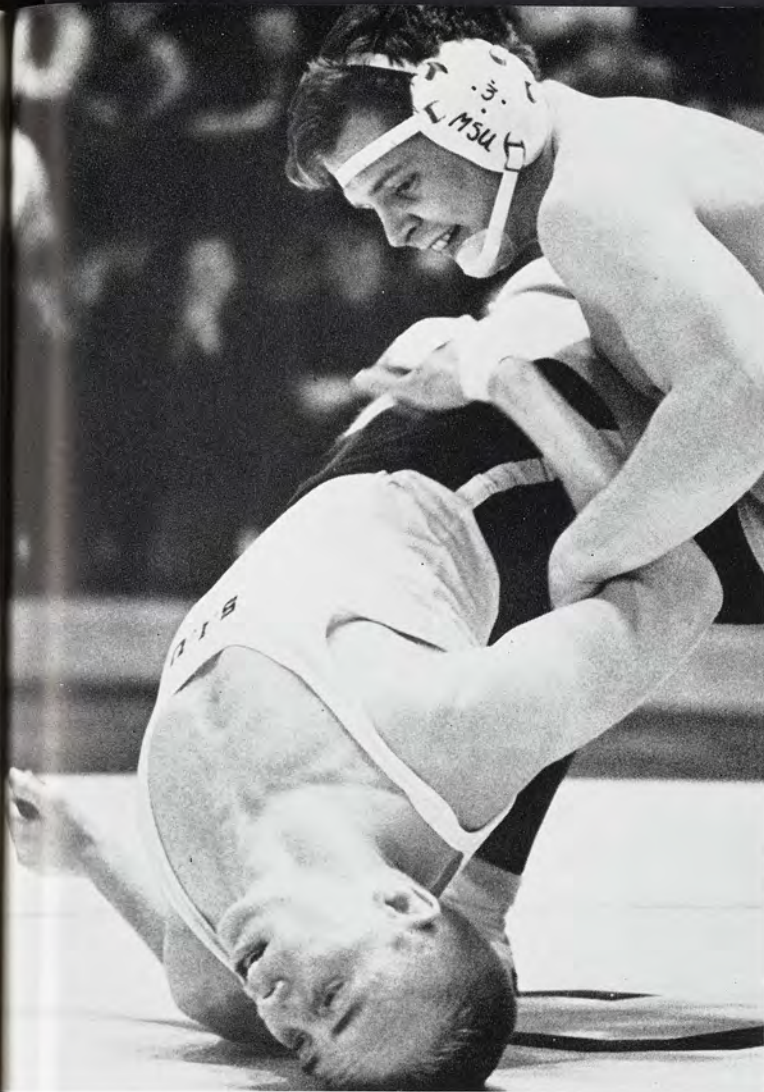

The Spartan wrestling team, last year's Big 10 champs, compiled an impressive record again this year, but failed to retain their title. The grapplers ended up with a 6-1-2 tally and a fifth in the Big 10.

An outstanding performance was turned in by heavyweight John Baum, who was undefeated in dual competition. Others who showed promise for next season were sophomores Tom Mulder, Okla Johnson, Walt Byington and Hap Fry, and junior Alex Valcanoff.

The only Spartan to gain a position in the Big 10 semi-finals was Senior George Hobbs who finished second. Valcanoff took a third and Mulder and Byington each took a fourth. Senior Bill Guicciardo, who also had a good season, was defeated in his first match and Baum lost the consolation bout. In the NCAA finals, the Spartans finished 9th with 18 points.

INTRAMURALS

Michigan State University believes that physical fitness and recreational activity are important to the total educational program. As a result, the University has one of the finest intramural sports programs in the country and boasts of a multi-million dollar Men's Intramural Building. These facilities were designed solely as a service to the students.

The IM Building was planned and the Program is conducted so that students may use the facilities at almost any time during their leisure hours. The department has attempted to vary the activities offered in order to better serve the wide range of student interests. Last year the Intramural Program and facilities served some 10,839 participants in 28 different sports activities. All students are encouraged to acquaint themselves with the services offered by this program.

A speeding member of the Spooners, Independent Champs, races out of reach of his Lambda Chi Alpha pursuer in the IM Touch-Football Championships Fall term.

Each area of the Men's Intramural Building was planned for multi-purpose use. Tennis, basketball, volleyball and badminton can be housed in each gym or arena with the exception of the large dirt arena used for baseball, football, and soccer. At any one time all the facilities can be utilized to form seven basketball courts, eight tennis courts, 12 volleyball courts, or 26 badminton courts. In addition there are 12 handball or paddleball courts, four squash courts, four golf driving nets, rooms for wrestling and tumbling, fencing and archery, and weightlifting. To round out the picture are two huge swimming pools — one indoor and a larger outdoor.

Financed by student fees, the Intramural Building provides the student with opportunities for competition in team, dual, and individual sports, informal sports activity, sports clubs, and co-recreational activities.

During Spring and Summer terms, softball teams are formed and compete for IM titles in fraternity, dorm and independent divisions as well as for the all-university crown.

Basketball is the IM sport with the most participation Winter term.

Runners in the annual Turkey Trot begin their race around Old College Field for a prize of a turkey, duck, goose or goose egg.

During Fall term, the main activity is touch football. Lambda Chi Alpha won the All-University competition; the fraternity title went to Delta Tau Delta; Rather Hall became the champions in the dormitory league, and; in independent action, Evans Scholars copped the crown.

Fraternity bowling is also held in the fall and Delta Sigma Phi walked off with the league championship.

In table tennis West Shaw took the dormitory crown and Zeta Beta Tau, the Greek title. Viet Sinh topped the independents.

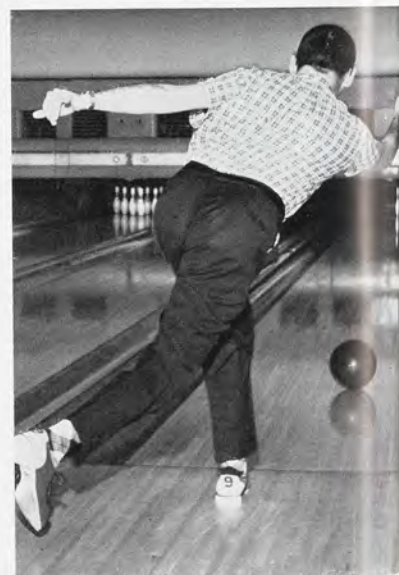

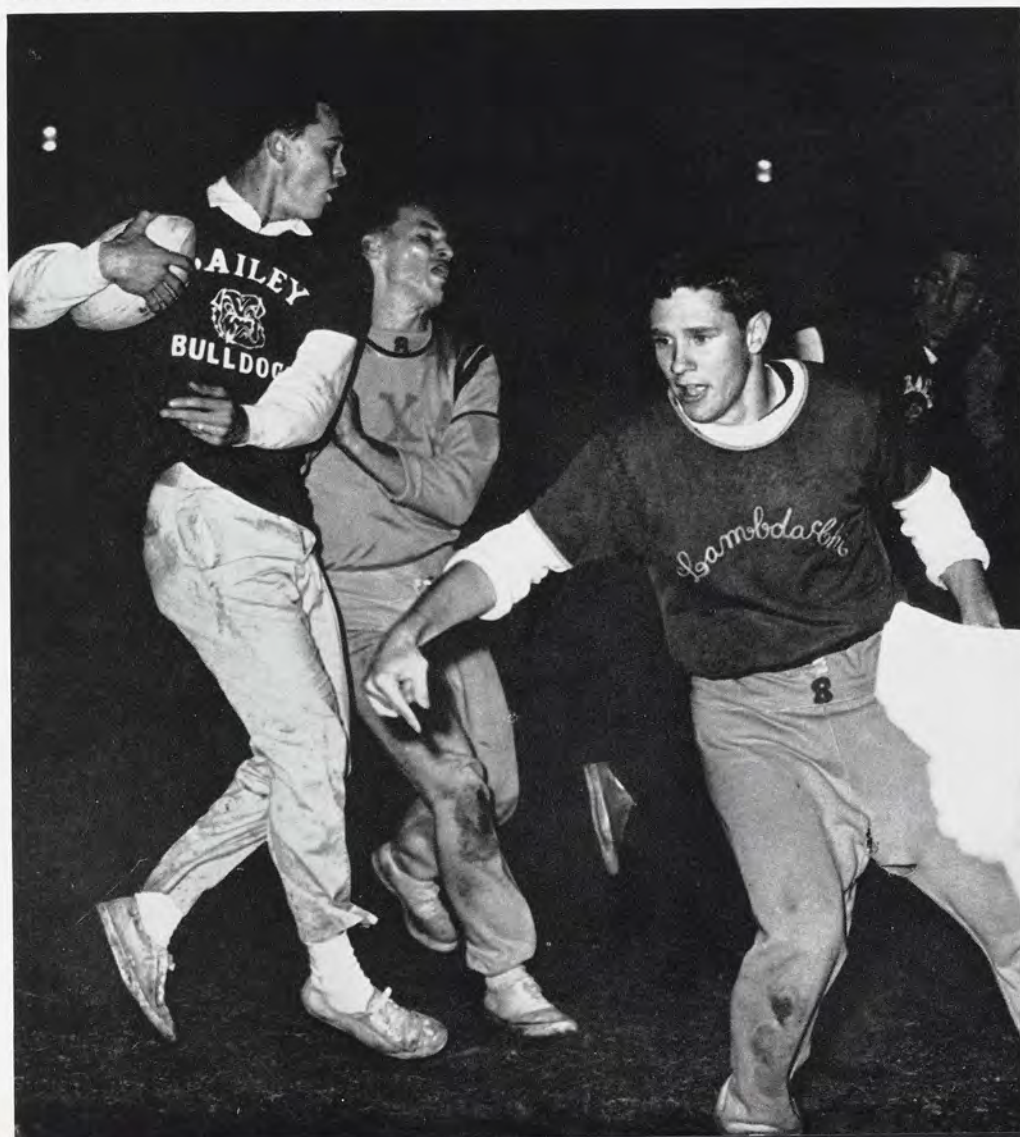

Bailey Hall stopped all the teams in dormitory competition and became the volleyball champions.

Independent badminton was won by the Hawaiians. The dormitory and fraternity winners were West Shaw and Lambda Chi Alpha, respectively.

Highlight of the fall season was the Turkey Trot with a live turkey going to the winner. This year's champion was Bailey Hall.

Paddleball activities were championed by Lambda Chi Alpha in the fraternity league, East Shaw won in dormitory play, and the Independents again claimed Evans Scholars as their top club.

The All-University Champions, Lambda Chi Alpha, check a Bailey ball carrier in the touch football tournament Fall term.

Intramural bowling tournaments are held each term, including summer.

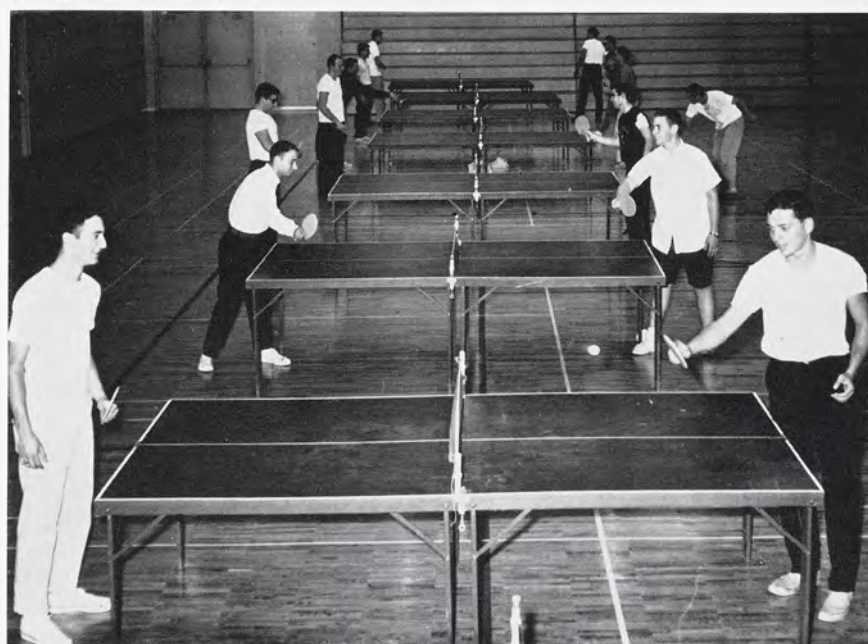

The annual Turkey Trot draws dozens of runners from men's living units who jog around Old College field.

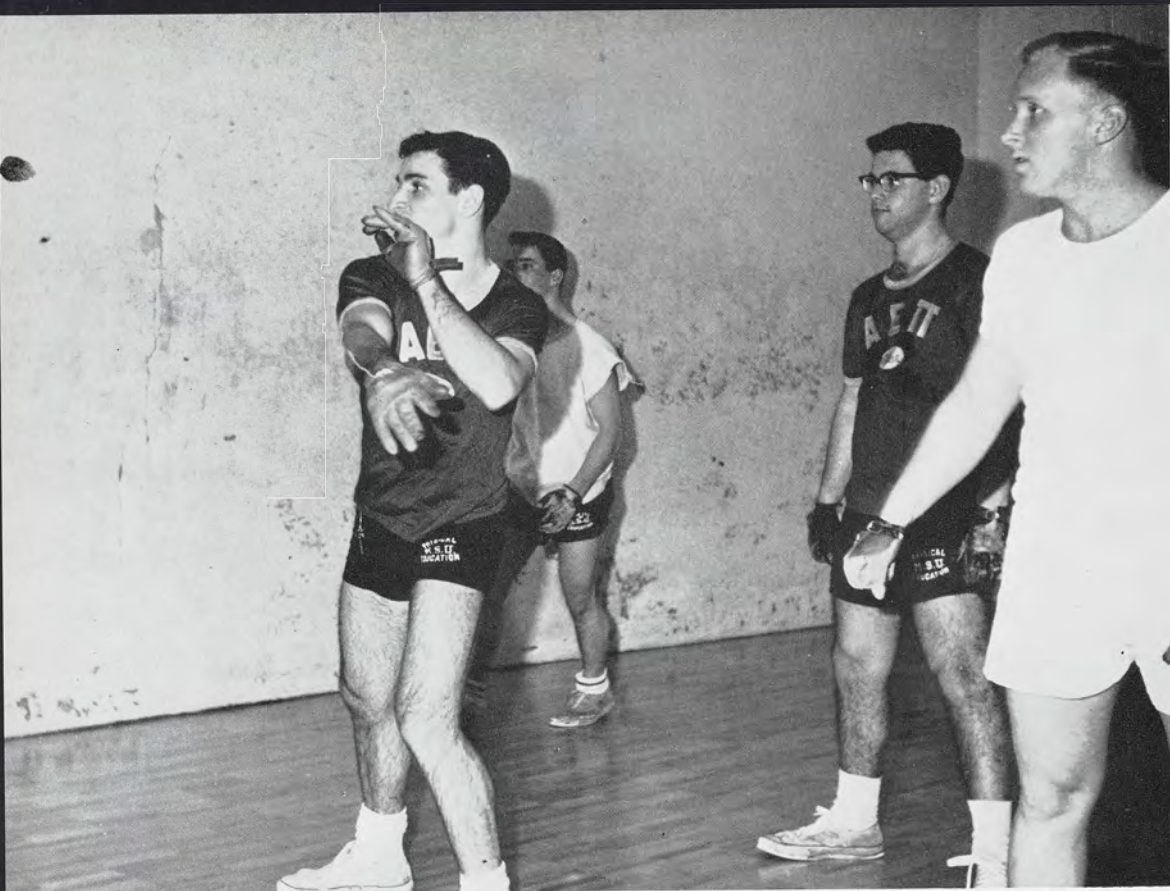

Sports skills included the football pass and place kick. Stu McMillin won the pass contest and Dick Campbell was the champion of the place kick activity.

Other individual sports held during fall term are handball doubles and archery won by a team of Ben Brown and Ken Benjamin, and Fred Woolman, respectively.

Gymnastics and wrestling are major individual activities fall term. This year the side horse event was won by Ed Fidelman. On the horizontal bars Fidelman repeated as winner. Gymnastics competition on the parallel bars went to Brent Lowery. Steve Huber won the rings event and Marlin Davis topped all contestants in the rope climb. In wrestling J. J. Lipsey won the 123-pound event and the 130 class went to Jim Rognlie. Ed Rubel copped the 137-pound event while Dave Westrate took the 147-pound division. The 157-pound class was won by Lee Montgomery, Jim Miskin took the 177-pound event and the heavy class was won by Doug Whan.

Ping-pong tables line a gym in the IM Building for the annual table tennis tournament.

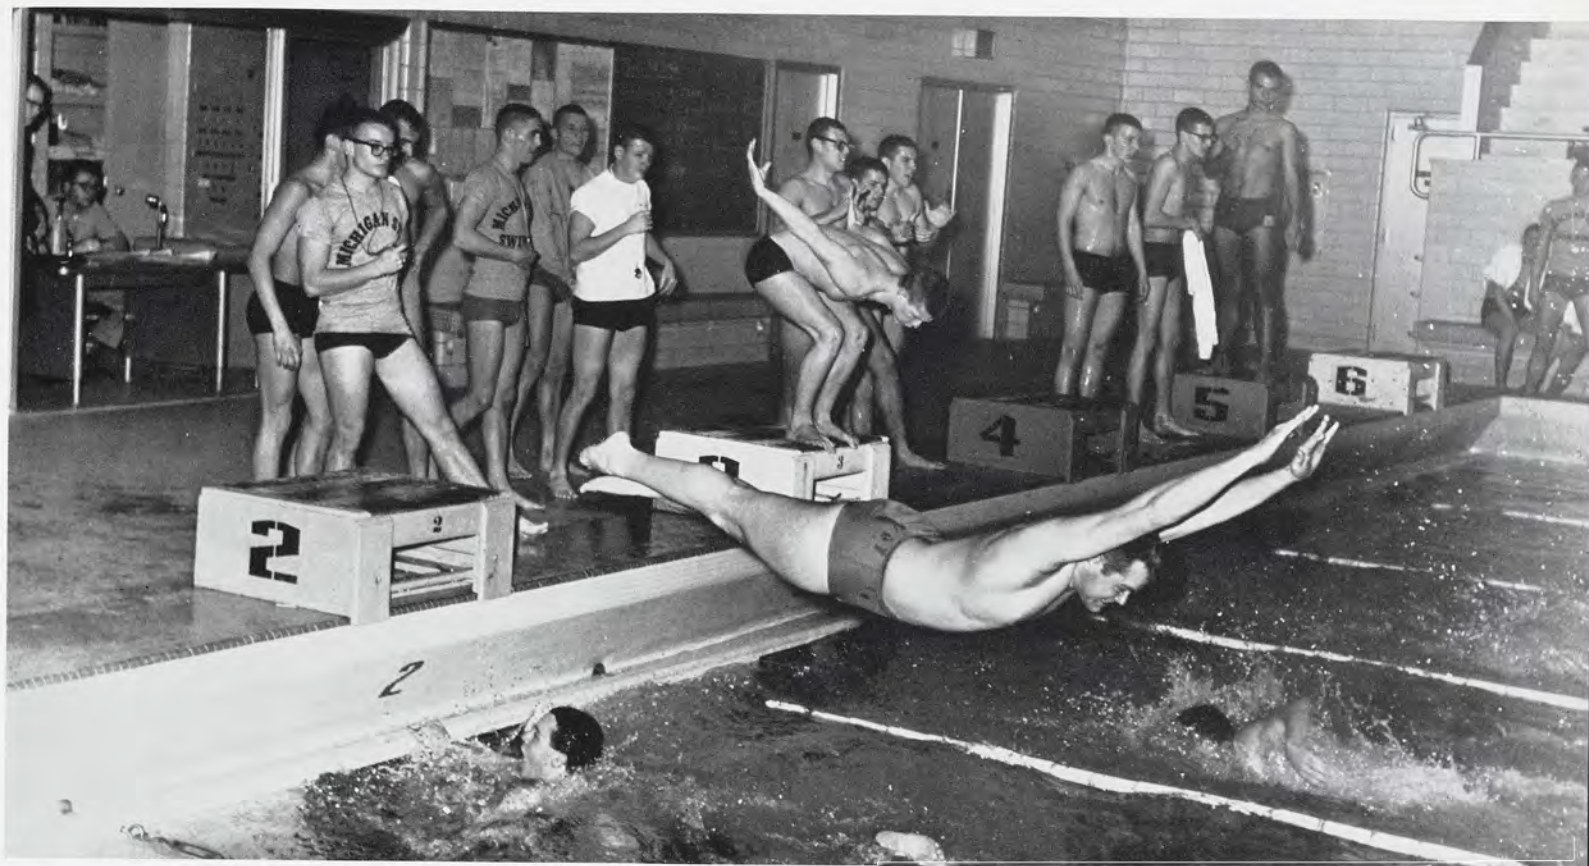

Handball is a popular conditioning sport with the male students and faculty and the 12 courts in the IM Building are usually filled to capacity.

Squash is played in a special court much like those used for handball and utilizes rackets and a small black ball as equipment for the two players.

Paddleball is a game that can be extremely vigorous for the accomplished or beginning player.

An important part of the 200-yard free style relay is a fast start at the tag of a teammate. This race is one of the many sport opportunities offered through the Intramural Program.

Basketball is the big activity during Winter term. The competition is divided into the fraternity, dormitory, and independent leagues as well as an additional short course league. All of these champions and other top teams compete for the All-University title.

Also popular during the winter months is swimming, divided into dormitory and fraternity competition. Other team contests include fraternity volleyball, dormitory and fraternity handball, short course and dormitory bowling and an open league in hockey.

Among the most important individual sports offered are badminton singles; foil, épée and sabre fencing; paddleball doubles; handball singles, and; table tennis singles. Wrestling and individual swimming events are also offered. A gymnastics meet highlights the schedule with events in high bar, parallel bars, rings, trampoline, and free exercise.

Sport skills include the basketball free throw and weightlifting.

Volleyball is just one of the sports that sees action in the multi-purpose gymnasiums in the Men's Intramural Building.

Poised for a rebound, two men's IM basketball teams battle it out during bloc competition.

Biting the ice to block the puck, a goalie defends his pay territory during IM ice hockey competition.

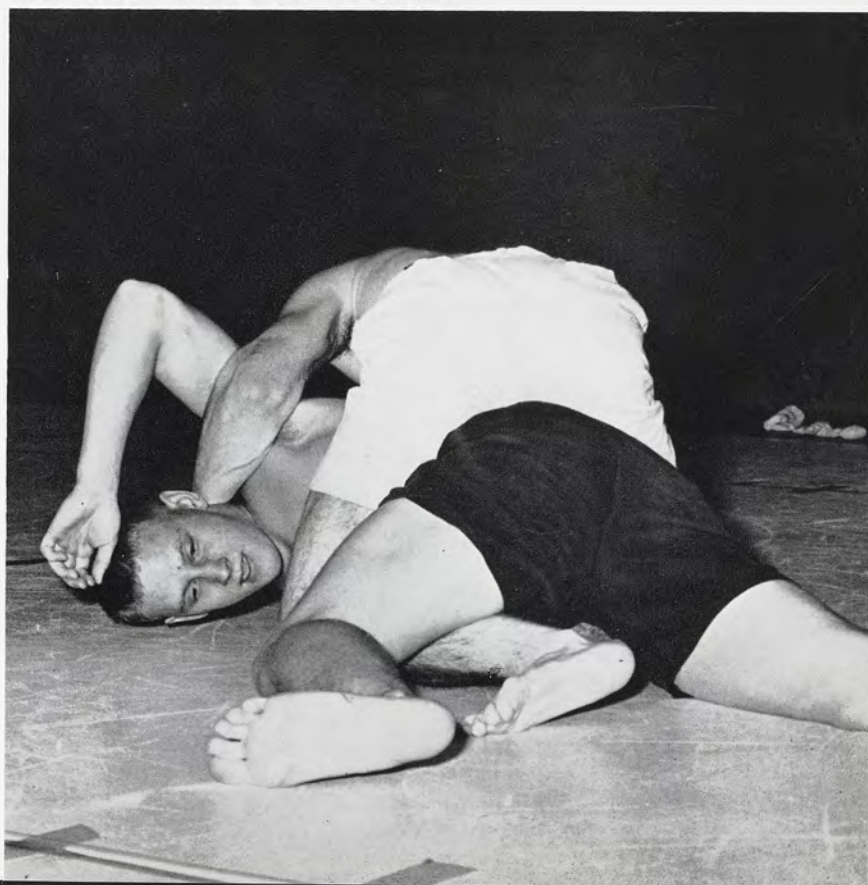

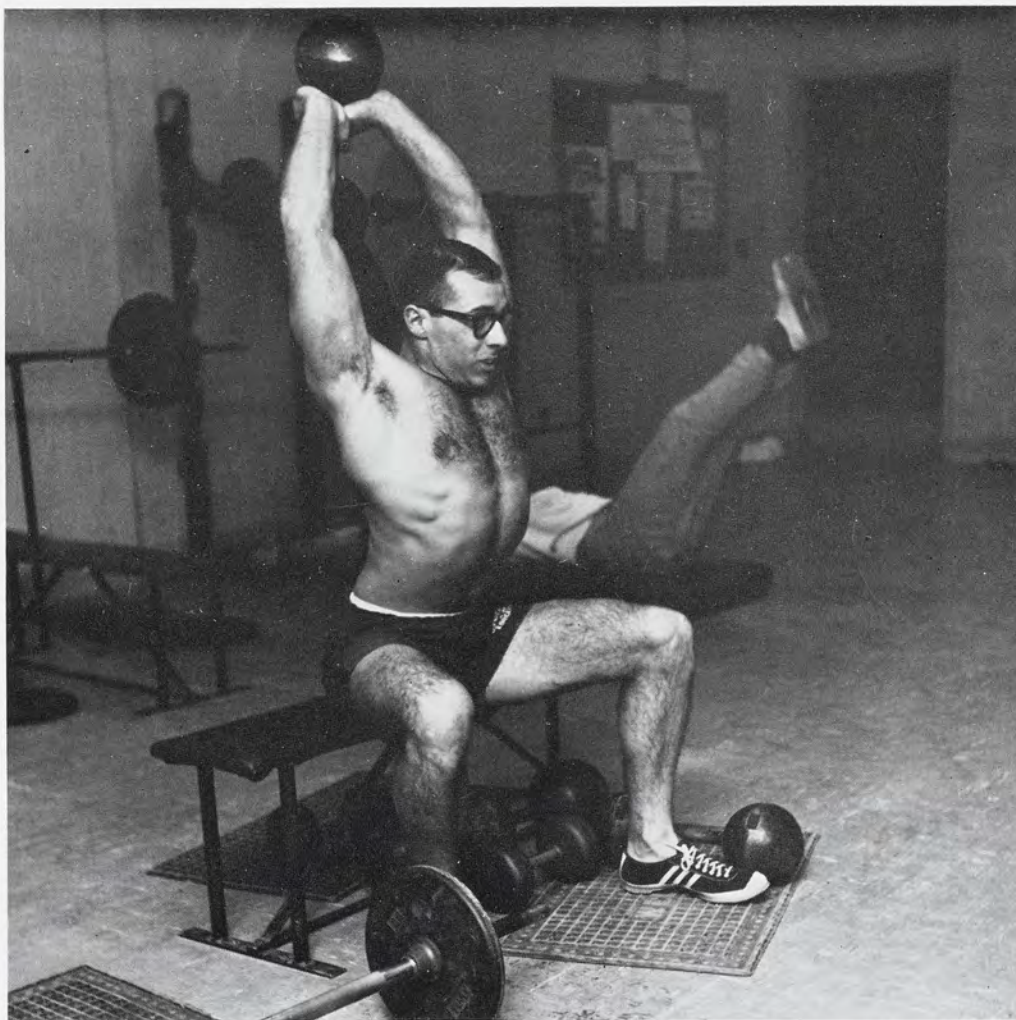

A skillful turn can make the difference between winning and placing even in IM meets.

Fraternity and dormitory track meets are held during the spring season. Alpha Tau Omega won in fraternity play and Bryan Hall topped all the trackmen in the dormitory league. In shot put Harold Laidlow (DTD) and Jerry Rush (Bryan) were the winners. Dave Scott (ATO) and Jim Tropea (Bryan) took the honors in the broad jump. The high jump went to Charles Mann (PK Sig) and Dave Cox (Rather). Jim Dobrei (DTD) and Jim Gordon (West Shaw) won the 100 yard dash. In the mile run, Dave Tate (AP Alpha) and Jay Stevens (Rather) copped the laurels. Alvin Waddles (AP Alpha) and Roger Evans (Bryan) were the champions of the 440. Jim Dobrei (DTD) and Jim Gordon (West Shaw) repeated in the 220 yard dash. The 60 yard low hurdles competition was won by Dave Pearce (Psi U) and Norman Frank (East Shaw). Finally, the 880 yard relay was taken by Lambda Chi Alpha (Cheesman, Buck, Bolt, Kuznich) and West Shaw Hall (Wareham, Gordon, Arnold, Lockwood).

Sports skills activity for the spring term was the baseball throw won by Allan Kaiser.

An IM grappler strains to pin his opponent.

Facilities in the Men's IM include a fully-equipped weight-lifting room open to any male student.

Any student may temporarily exchange his ID card for sports equipment at the window of the towel desk.

A graceful swing, and a look of hard determination, help maneuver an IM gymnastic enthusiast over the sidehorse.

The varsity crushed-brick track is the scene of the Intramural Track Tournament each Spring term.

Spring term, the intramural program takes on additional variety. One of the major activities is softball. Rather Hall stopped all competition in the dormitory league. The fraternity and independent champions were Zeta Beta Tau and the Integrals, respectively. The No Stars won in open league play and Zeta Beta Tau topped all the teams to become the All-University winners.

Team tennis, bowling, and golf are also held for fraternities and dormitories.

Individual sports contests were won by Bruce Earl in foil fencing, Tom Meyer in golf, Claude Fournel in paddleball singles, O. Honkalehto in squash, and Bob Hathaway in tennis singles. The skish activity champions were William Foster in the men's division and Gail Fox in the women's division.

The Women's Intramural Program includes tournaments in basketball for girls who wish to take advantage of it.

WOMEN'S SPORTS

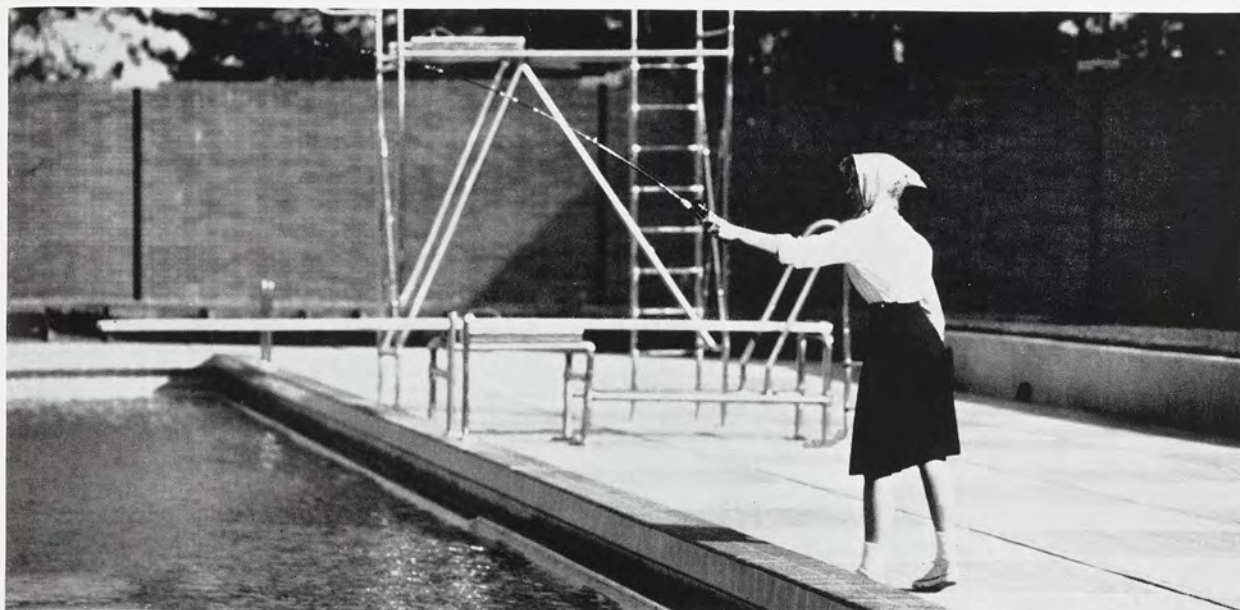

Through the Gymnastics Club, students may use all gymnastic apparatus and facilities for practice and learning.

Carry-over value from class activities, relaxation, and competition are the main purposes of the Women's Intramural Program. It enables all women to have an opportunity for physical activity in the sports in which they are interested as well as to learn new ones in their leisure hours.

An extensive women's sports program is a feature of the Women's Intramural Program. It is organized by the Women's Athletic Association, along with the Intramural Director. The Executive Board is made up of officers and sports managers chosen by petition. This Board makes all policies and rules which govern the program. Sports managers organize and carry out plans for competition, and each living unit has a Sports Chairman who organizes her unit into teams.

Both individual awards and letters are given on a point basis for participation. Teams also receive points toward the all-sports trophy.

Flycasting style among coeds is rated at the IM pool in a form of competition known as "skish".

A coed fencer scores a touch on her opponent.

The opponent is "scooped" in a spirited game of lacrosse, a favorite sport among coed athletes.

A coed diver shows perfect form in a back jack-knife.

Women's events are much the same as those of the Men's Intramural Program with the exception of field hockey.

Fall activities include volleyball, swimming, and field hockey. Since there are no separate or distinct leagues in the women's program, each team competes against another whether it be sorority or dormitory. Field hockey organizes one team to play against other competition. This year they compiled a record of three wins, two losses, and one tie.

In the winter, tournaments are held in basketball and bowling. Other activities include contests in badminton, riflery, and table tennis.

Spring term playoffs are held for golf, tennis and softball while contests in archery and fencing are also made available.

These sports are planned to consist of recreational activities that can be followed after graduation.

Coeds put their gymnastic abilities on public display during half-time at varsity basketball games and gymnastic meets. The intramural program provides instruction and facilities to help them.

ORGANIZATIONS

The system of student organizations at Michigan State University has become so complex that it takes the stadium concourse to introduce them to new students; a 59 page booklet, published by AUSG to describe and arrange them; and a special council to charter and co-ordinate them. They exist, all 200 of them, for many different purposes, but the primary ones are the expression of student leadership, the application of classroom material in professional areas, and the enjoyment of recreational and religious fellowship.

One major group of organizations concentrates on the execution of these goals, and another, the honoraries, on rewarding individuals who have realized them. On these grounds, then, the organizations are predicated: future excellence and past achievement.

Identified by her armband, a member of Tower Guard helps a student adjust her class schedule at registration.

Two coeds rehearse a German folk dance in preparation for an on-stage demonstration.

Several service and honorary organizations donate their time to reading to the blind students at MSU.

Gathered at hearthside, several of the members of Wesley Foundation hold an informal religious discussion.

Endless rounds of judging preface the selection of the Varsity Club Sweetheart at the annual Winterland Whirl.

The members of Orchesis dancing honorary give several on-stage demonstrations of their art each year.

Dressed to the teeth, Spartan gamblers blithely stake fortunes in play money on games of chance at the annual Students Off Campus Dance.

Student organizations are coordinated by an organizations council, headed up by the student government organizations director and composed of representatives from 13 major interest areas: Agriculture, All-university Honoraries, Business and Public Service, Communication arts, Education, Engineering, Home Economics, Military and Recreation, Recreation, Religion, Sciences and Arts, Social and Service, and Veterinary Medicine.

Also on the council is an AUSG-appointed charter review chairman, responsible for investigating all charter applications and reviewing club constitutions.

The Organizations Council meets weekly to discuss administrative issues, but allows individual autonomy in so far as possible.

Members of Green Splash limber up before going into formation.

HONORARIES

The blue blazer with the red and gold insignia identifies its wearer as a member of Excalibur, senior men's honorary. Thirteen outstanding senior men are selected each year by the previous year's members on the basis of scholarship, character and extra-curricular activities. Variety is stressed in these selections in order to form a well-rounded organization.

Tapping of several of the new members takes place in the spring at Water Carnival, and those remaining are tapped the following fall at Homecoming.

Awards given by Excalibur include presentation of the Distinguished Teachers Award. This award, in the form of a plaque, is given each year to one outstanding faculty member.

The members, also, reap rewards from some of their services. Theirs is the pleasant job of helping to elect and escort the Homecoming Queen and her court both at the football game and at the Homecoming dance. During the public coronation, they present the queen with her trophy.

The chapter holds weekly luncheon and business meetings in a special room reserved for their use at the Coral Gables.

Ken Applegate, President of Men's Halls Association, is typical of the Excalibur members in his role as a campus leader.

MORTAR BOARD

The top fifty women in each outgoing junior class are tapped at May Morning Sing for membership in Mortar Board, Senior Women's honorary. To achieve this honor as a senior, each woman must have contributed greatly to the University in qualities of scholarship, leadership and service.

Each year Mortar Board assists Dr. Gordon Sabine in entertaining the Alumni Distinguished Scholarship competitors.

GREEN HELMET

Regularly assisting the thirty-five women of Tower Guard in their registration duties are the thirty-five men of Green Helmet, sophomore men's honorary.

Green Helmet serves the university by sponsoring a program of orientation and guidance to freshmen Fall term and by offering a year round tutoring service to all students. They also join with other campus honoraries in ushering at commencement.

BLUE KEY

The qualities required for membership in Blue Key, national men's honorary, are junior or senior standing and outstanding achievement in campus leadership and service.

The favorite "duty" of the men of Blue Key is interviewing candidates for Miss MSU and selecting the queen, announced at J-Hop.

Founded locally in 1927, most meetings feature speakers or discussions on topics of local or national interest.

ALPHA LAMBDA DELTA

Being a "Smarty" is a privilege of Alpha Lambda Delta women. Receiving the pin in the form of a candle represents the effort put into a 3.5 all-university grade point average for two out of three terms of the girls' freshman year.

The women aid students with academic difficulties through their tutoring service. This year they added the responsibility of assisting at the rehabilitation hospital in Okemos.

TOWER GUARD

The thirty-five freshman women who stand among the top in their class comprise the membership of Tower Guard. They are chosen from one hundred girls after completion of two consecutive freshman terms.

Lantern Night and Serenade, Spinster Spin, Who's Who and What's What, and May Morning Sing all gain assistance from Tower Guard. In addition, each coed spends four hours a week reading to blind students.

Tower Guard offers tutoring to freshmen in a variety of lower college courses. Guest speakers play a large part in the social functions of the organization. At their annual joint meeting with Green Helmet, they heard Dr. Norman Hunt, distinguished visiting professor from Oxford.

Members of Tower Guard join with their senior counterparts, the women of Mortar Board, in serenading the living units of new members of both organizations.

PHI KAPPA PHI

Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honorary, selects undergraduate, graduate and faculty members on the criterion of academic excellence. The fifteen sophomores with the highest grade-point average, the top one and a half per cent of the junior class and the top seven per cent of the senior class are eligible for membership. Faculty initiates are invited to join on the basis of publications and general scholastic contributions.

Nominations are reviewed and invitations extended at the end of Winter term, and an annual initiation banquet is held during Spring term.

Faculty members: R. Nye, pres.; R. Sullivan; M. Lewis; A. Schnur; S. Nosow; S. Dexter; L. Malvern; H. Sell; R. Baker.

CIRCLE HONORARY

Honor comes to select residence hall women through the medium of singing voices each spring. In a midnight ceremony, the members of Circle Honorary move from hall to hall, serenading newly-chosen members.

Formed for the purpose of recognizing residence hall women who excel in scholarship, citizenship and service to their hall, Circle Honorary has served as a unifying organization among the various women's halls. The honorary was organized in 1959 with the help of the established Circle Honorary at University of Michigan.

ALPHA DELTA THETA

Alpha Delta Theta was organized to unite women enrolled in Medical Technology at MSU.

The organization performs many services to the University such as the presentation of a Uniform Style Show, a tea for seniors, a coffee hour for faculty and students, and various service projects for Giltner Hall including the decoration of the Christmas tree.

A service award is given each year to the member who has done the most for Alpha Delta Theta and who the girls would most like to work with in the laboratory.

BETA ALPHA PSI

Organized as the Alpha Omicron Chapter at MSU in 1954, Beta Alpha Psi, accounting honorary, stands for the ideal of service in the profession of accounting.

Membership is limited to advanced students in accounting; seniors must have a 3.0 all-college with a 3.5 in their major; juniors must have a 3.5 all-college with a 4.0 in their major.

BETA GAMMA SIGMA

Beta Gamma Sigma, graduate and undergraduate business administration honorary, is open to grad students in the top 20% of their class, seniors in the top 10% of theirs and the top 3% of the junior class.

The group invites speakers outstanding in business administration areas to foster professional interest among its members.

Row one: L. Maison; R. Quick, v. pres.; A. Sandrette, pres.; R. Salmonson; H. Miller; A. Olson.
Row 2: K. Weaver; J. Demaree; T. Farrell; T. Reiman; L. Silverman; R. Meulebrouck.

CHI EPSILON

Two first place awards in the 1961 Engineering Exposition, a monorail exhibit and the best engineered race car, testify to the abilities of Chi Epsilon members.

Formed in 1951 to foster ideals essential to civil engineering, Chi Epsilon stresses scholarship, character, practicability and sociability. Juniors and seniors who rank in the upper third of their class are eligible for membership.

ETA KAPPA NU

Outstanding scholarship in electrical engineering is recognized by Eta Kappa Nu, national electrical engineering honorary. The group selects from the upper third of the senior engineering class, and the upper fourth of the junior class.

The membership meets bi-weekly, and invites prominent speakers in the field to participate in their meetings. They also enter a display in the Engineering Exposition.

GREEN SPLASH

Can you do a Kip or a Catalina? These unusual sounding arrangements are simply synchronized swimming stunts and are part of the requirements for admission to Green Splash. In addition to ability in these and other stunts, a girl must possess an all-college 2.0 average, a skill in basic swimming strokes, and she must have earned her senior life-saving certificate.

Green Splash exists at MSU for girls who are especially interested in synchronized swimming and wish to participate outside of the regular classes offered. Many of the members of Green Splash have added their talents to past synchronized swim shows at MSU.

One of the many projects undertaken by Green Splash is a clinic conducted for high school students also with an interest in synchronized swimming.

Green Splash is under the guidance of swimming coach Miss Norma Stafford.

A love for the water is a prerequisite for the girls of Green Splash, who must put in hours of hard work to perfect their synchronized swimming stunts.

KAPPA DELTA PI

Membership in Kappa Delta Pi, Education honorary, is open to all education majors in the upper fifth of the junior and senior classes.

The organization encourages high professional and intellectual standards in its members and recognizes outstanding contributions to education.

Each year the Outstanding Senior award goes to a member of Kappa Delta Pi who is about to graduate. A minimum 3.5 all-college average is required for this award.

OMICRON NU

Omicron Nu, home economics honorary, was born on the MSU campus in 1910. The group recognizes superior scholarship and promotes leadership and research in the field of home economics.

The Home Economics Spring Honors Banquet at which ribbons and recognitions are awarded is sponsored each year by Omicron Nu.

PHI LAMBDA TAU

Scholastic achievement in engineering is recognized by membership in Phi Lambda Tau, engineering honorary. Engineering majors with a 2.7 all-college and in the upper half of their engineering class are eligible.

Phi Lambda Tau sponsors an exhibit for the annual Engineering Exposition with the other engineering honoraries on campus. They meet six times a year and invite prominent speakers in the field to address the club.

PI TAU SIGMA

Mechanical Engineers in the top 25% of the junior engineering class and in the top 35% of the senior class may become members of Pi Tau Sigma.

Each year the group gives the L. C. Miller Award to the outstanding sophomore engineering student. The chapter also sponsors refresher courses for mechanical engineers preparing for the Michigan Registration Examination.

SIGMA ALPHA ETA

The importance of communication through speech is fully recognized by the members of Sigma Alpha Eta, the newly organized speech honorary. Speech and hearing rehabilitation are given primary emphasis.

Sigma Alpha Eta provides learning experiences not offered in the formal course work. It also carries on correspondence with organizations interested in the field of speech and hearing.

SIGMA LAMBDA CHI

Juniors and seniors majoring in Lumber Merchandising or Residential Building are eligible to join Sigma Lambda Chi honorary.

The group maintains a loan fund for the men in their department. They also sponsor an annual awards banquet when the outstanding students receive scholarships and other awards. The men show off their talents in a display at the Lansing Home Show each year.

TAU BETA PI

The top one-eighth of the engineering junior class, and the top one-fifth of the senior class are invited to join Tau Beta Pi, engineering honorary.

Organized at MSU in 1892, Tau Beta Pi recognizes academic excellence and leadership within the field of engineering.

Each year Tau Beta Pi presents a slide rule to the outstanding freshman engineer.

TAU SIGMA

The purpose of Tau Sigma is to recognize scholastic achievement within the Colleges of Science and Arts and Business and Public Service. Juniors and seniors in these colleges with grade-point averages of 3.4 or higher are eligible.

Tau Sigma awards scholarship plaques to the top freshman students in each of the colleges represented.

Initiation takes place during a formal banquet meeting each Spring term.

THETA ALPHA PHI

The lure of the footlights and the smell of grease-paint have attracted the members of Theta Alpha Phi, national dramatics honorary. Membership is achieved through compiling points from working on campus productions.

The organization produces a full length play each year, sponsors a reading theater, and co-hosts coffee hours after the opening night of each play for the cast and audience.

XI SIGMA PI

Beta chapter of Xi Sigma Pi was organized on campus in 1916. A professional honorary for foresters, any junior in Forestry with a 2.8 all-college is eligible for membership.

Each year the group gives an award plaque to the top sophomore in forestry.

CLUBS AND SOCIETIES

ACCOUNTING AND FINANCE CLUB

The Accounting and Finance Club offers an opportunity for Business majors to become better acquainted with their faculty and other students with similar interests.

The organization was represented at Activities Carnival Fall term and members saw a film on public accounting.

AGRONOMY CLUB

The Agronomy Club may soon produce a first in consumer pleasure: hybrid popcorn. As their money-making project this year, members of the club did all the research work on this crop.

Soil judging contests are a main activity of this crop and soil science honorary, which participates in local, regional and national collegiate events. The soil judging team placed high in national competition last year, with one member taking the national first prize.

ALPHA PHI SIGMA

Police Administration majors with a two-point all-college are eligible for membership in Alpha Phi Sigma. This fraternity fosters the development of interest and understanding in the police administration course divisions.

Meetings of the group are often highlighted by speakers in the field of Police Administration.

AIChE

The American Institute of Chemical Engineers was organized for the advancement of Chemical Engineering in theory and practice and to encourage and maintain high professional standards among its members.

The members of AIChE took first place award for the best department in the Engineering Exposition. They also sponsor guest speakers at their meetings.

AIEE-IRE

The AIEE-IRE, abbreviation for American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the Institute of Radio Engineers, offers membership to all electrical engineering students.

The group encourages professional development of the students and increases their knowledge of the theory and practice of electrical engineering through lectures, films and field trips.

ASAE

The American Society of Agricultural Engineers reaches its peak of activity during Farmers' Week. The members serve lunch to the visitors, and act as general hosts of the campus.

The group also participates in campus activities such as Engineering Exposition and Activities Carnival, and sponsors its own program of field trips and guest speakers.

Anderson.

ASCE

Time for socializing as well as learning is provided for all civil engineers by the American Society of Civil Engineers. Members have the opportunity to become acquainted with fellow students and the engineering faculty as well as associating with the professional senior society.

Key activities include the Engineering Exposition, a Spring term picnic and a joint banquet with the chapter from the University of Michigan.

AFS-ASM

The American Foundrymen's Society and the American Society for Metals, organized at MSU in 1930, is open to all students interested in the foundry and metals industries. The group promotes interest, research, and technical developments in metallurgy.

The society plans field trips to modern metallurgical plants and engages speakers from the metallurgical industries. It is also active in the Engineering council.

ASME

The purpose of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers is to promote a general interest in, and a professional consciousness toward mechanical engineering.

Membership is open to all undergraduates with a two-point average who are Mechanical Engineering majors. Graduate students may also join.

The group takes part in the Engineering Exposition and invites various experts in the field to address the members.

BETA BETA BETA

Membership in Beta Beta Beta, biological sciences honorary, consists of a term of provisional status for juniors or seniors with a 2.6 average in biological sciences. Full membership requires 20 credits in the field.

The group sponsors an exhibit case in the Natural Science Building as an aid to the current topic of study in the University College course. Tri-Beta's purpose is to stimulate sound scholarship and to further research in biology.

Members of the AVMA spurred interest and recruited new members at the Activities Carnival Fall term.

AMERICAN VETERINARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

The Student Chapter of the American Veterinary Medical Association is open to all students in the professional veterinary medicine curriculum.

The club has been active in various social functions. This past year they participated in the Honors Convocation and the Career Carnival. For their work in the Career Carnival the members of AVMA were awarded second place.

The club gives an award each year to the most outstanding Veterinary Professor of the Year.

BLOCK AND BRIDLE

The purpose of Block and Bridle is to improve and promote interest in animal husbandry. In pursuit of this aim, the club awards 4-H and Moxley scholarships to superior students in animal husbandry. Composed of students majoring in animal husbandry, the club won several awards last year in livestock judging contests.

The club joins in sponsoring such annual events as the Spring Roundup, the Little International, the annual Horse Show, the Ox Roast and several livestock contests.

CHEERLEADERS

Admiration and response characterize the spectators as they watch the cheerleaders tumble, jump and literally fly through the air at football and basketball games. The cheerleaders become pseudo "Peter Pans" as they performed cheers on individual trampolines before crowds.

Their secret lies in a basic agility coupled with hard work, exercise and practice, practice, practice. They are selected by audition each spring.

DAIRY CLUB

The purpose of the Dairy Club is to promote a general knowledge of the dairy industry and to acquaint students interested in this field with each other.

The group is affiliated with the National American Dairy Science Association and will attend the national meeting scheduled for June at the University of Maryland. Camilla Cristman, national secretary, is a member of the local chapter.

DELTA PHI EPSILON

Careers in International Business and Government are the common interests uniting the men of Delta Phi Epsilon, national professional fraternity for International Trade and Diplomacy.

The fraternity was founded by candidates for the U. S. Foreign Service during World War I, and the MSU, Mu Chapter was established in 1955.

The fraternity's program includes frequent lectures and discussions to supplement classwork in international subjects.

DELTA PSI KAPPA

Providing freshmen Physical Education majors with handbooks of the curriculum, and special tutoring in physical education are the functions of Delta Psi Kappa, professional Physical Education Honorary for women.

Since 1948, when the group was organized on campus, the membership has selected girls with a 2.3 all-university grade-point average for the purpose of developing interest and promoting fellowship in this field.

Preparation for the future in the culinary arts is a part of the activity of the Delta Sigma Theta women.

DELTA SIGMA THETA

Organized in April, 1961, Delta Sigma Theta sorority has undertaken an ambitious program for a new group. The organization is primarily a service sorority, and they support five national projects, including libraries, job opportunities, community service, mental health and international work.

On a local level, the coeds sponsored a book drive to help fill the empty shelves of the library at the MSU-sponsored University of Nigeria. Book receptacles were distributed to all living units and convenient places on campus and the drive was climaxed by a dance, the admission to which was a book.

Delta Sigma Theta also hosted another dance earlier in the year. During intermission, a group of fraternity and sorority singers entertained the crowd.

ENGINEERING COUNCIL

All engineering groups on campus are well acquainted with the Engineering Council. This group is responsible for coordinating the activities and plans of all of the engineer organizations on campus.

The council is responsible for the successful continuation of the Engineering Exposition held every spring and are behind the micro-midget auto race.

The engineering organization judged most outstanding each year received the Dean's Trophy from the Council.

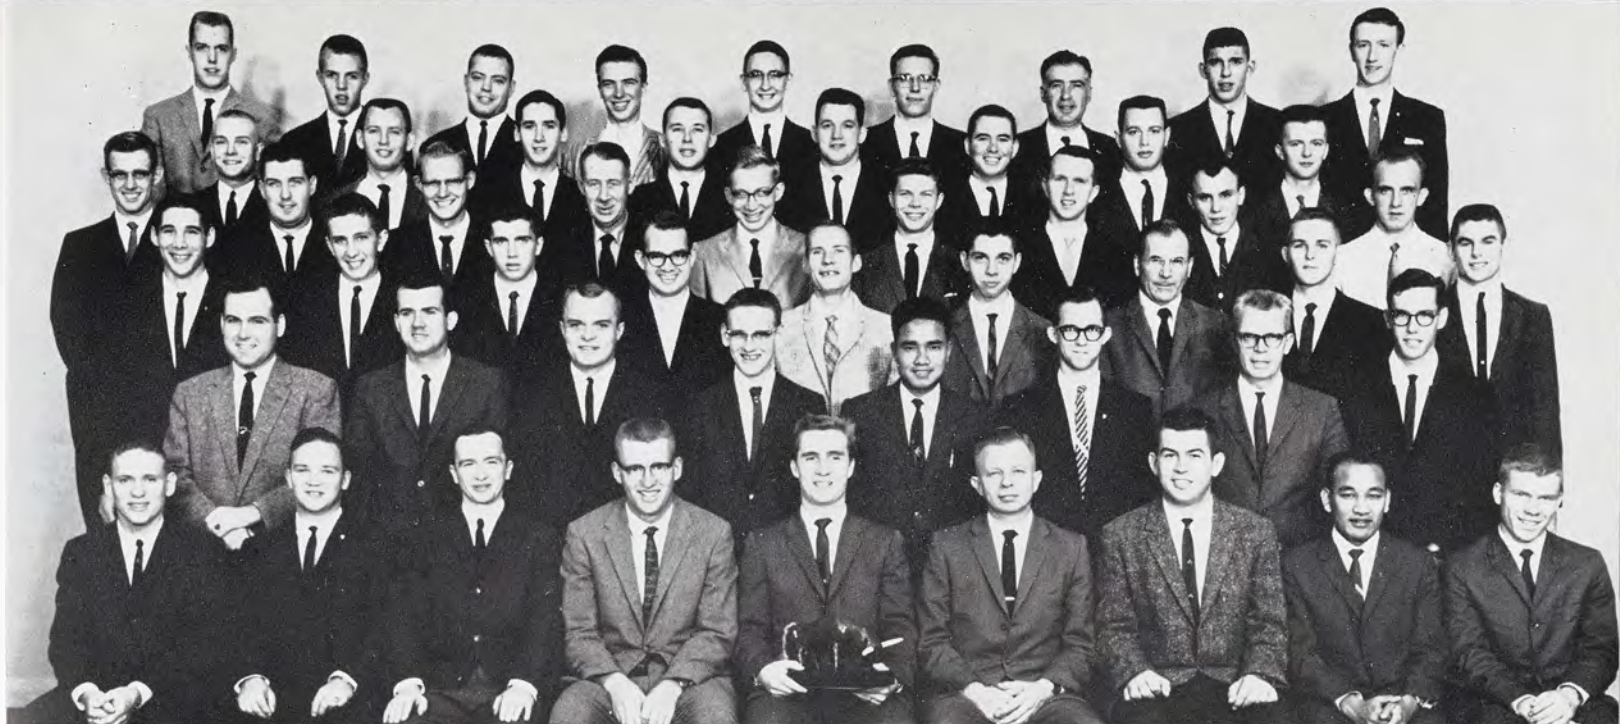

FLORICULTURE FORUM

The Floriculture Forum's purpose is to promote a general interest in floriculture by presenting current developments in the field and developing contacts with prominent men in the industry.

The group sponsored the "Carnations for Cancer" drive and presented awards at the annual Flower Show. Each year Forum members tour greenhouses and flower shops in other states with money earned from selling Mums during football games.

FORESTRY CLUB

The forestry clubs at MSU and U of M alternate each year as hosts of a forestry banquet. The highlight of the evening is an after-dinner lying contest. The winning dissembler receives a prize.

Another colorful activity of the Forestry Club was its Forester Shindig, a dance prefaced by weeks of careful beard-growing. All this foliage is shaved off in a race at the dance.

HOME ECONOMICS COUNCIL

Members of the Home Economics Council are presidents of the professional home economics clubs and committee chairmen chosen by the outgoing council.

The members participate in Who's Who and What's What, Activities Carnival, and AWS. They also provide a child-care service for the benefit of the faculty.

HPER CLUB

All coeds who are majors or minors in Physical Education are automatic members of the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Club. The purpose of the organization is to foster professional interest, and give the members a chance to meet socially.

The group elects an HPER board from the membership at large. The Board coordinates the activities throughout the year.

INDIAN STUDENT ASSOCIATION

The goal of the Indian Student Association is to provide fellowship for its members and promote a better understanding of India on campus.

The club is open to all Indian students, faculty and all others on the campus who are interested in India.

This year they received first place for their cultural program and second place for their exhibit at the 1961 International Festival.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

Membership in the Industrial Arts Education Association is open to majors and minors in the industrial arts.

The members promote interest in this profession by inviting speakers to their meetings. They also attended a lecture of the Michigan Education Association.

The club doesn't neglect the social aspect of its organization, however. They had a social evening at the Forestry Cabin in the fall.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB

People from the four corners of the earth are brought together through the International Club. This organization welcomes anybody into its membership, American or foreign student, and provides its members with the opportunity for a stimulating exchange of ideas and customs.

A constant line of projects and activities keeps members busy. The club sponsors an annual international talent show, an international dinner, the International Festival, and the Cosmopolitan Ball.

AMERICAN MARKETING ASSOCIATION

Practical experience in the field of marketing is the goal of the American Marketing Association. To realize this aim, the group sponsors field trips and invites speakers to address its members.

The American Marketing Association organized an "Idea Fair" this spring, to hunt out new ideas in the field of marketing. The winning team was awarded a trophy.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF HOME BUILDERS

Organized in 1958 by junior and senior students in the Residential Building curriculum, the MSU Chapter of the National Association of Home Builders is open to all students majoring in residential building and related fields.

Members of the organization take part in Agriculture Council activities and Activities Carnival.

LES GOURMETS

Les Gourmets unites majors interested in restaurant management within the school of Hotel, Restaurant and Institutional Administration. The group invites prominent speakers in the field to address them and participates in the National Restaurant Association Show each year.

At Christmastime, the club sponsors a holiday party for underprivileged children.

HOTEL ASSOCIATION

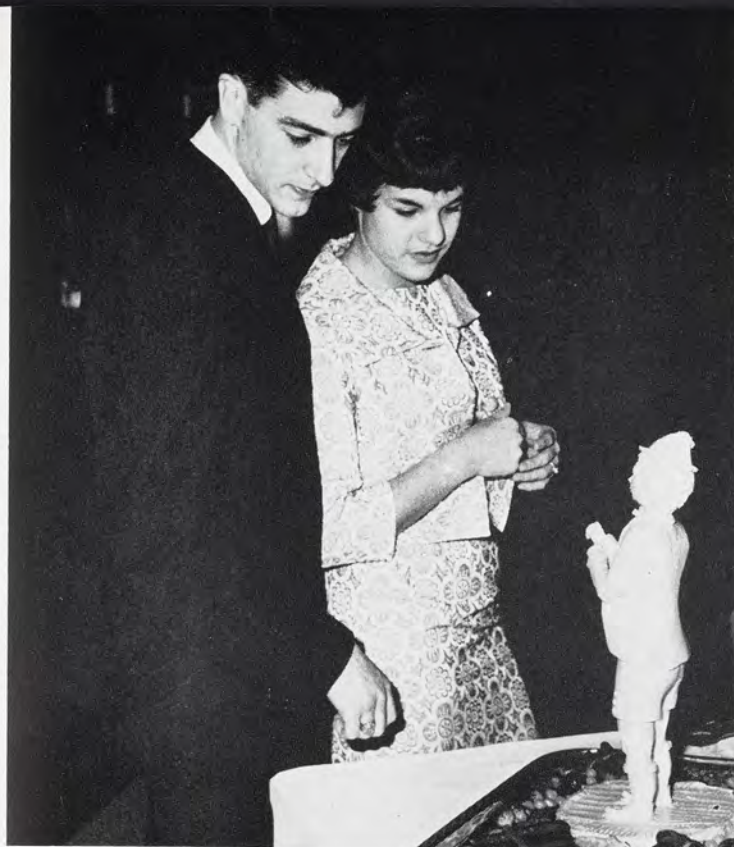

Potential hotel administrators find a valuable supplement to classroom education in the activities of the MSU Hotel Association.

The group integrates its members into the hotel industry through the maintaining of contacts in the field and through projects related to hotel work.

The Hotel Association co-sponsored a dinner dance with Les Gourmets this year, a sellout.

A statuette carved out of pure butter attracted a considerable amount of attention at the Dinner Dance.

DINNER DANCE

Snow-capped mountains, a village tavern and German music were all part of the "Golden Days of Heidelberg," the dinner dance co-sponsored by Les Gourmets and the Hotel Association.

Four banquet rooms in Kellogg Center were transformed into Teutonic splendor for the annual fete. This was the first year that the two organizations combined efforts for a single affair.

The 572 diners included faculty, students and invited guests from the Lansing area and the Hotel-Restaurant Management profession.

The members of Phi Mu Alpha, professional music fraternity, entertained during and following dinner. Each guest received an individual beer mug and a booklet containing household recipes of all the elaborate dishes served at the dinner dance.

Lines of chef-hatted members of Les Gourmets and Hotel Association served the many courses to students and faculty.

Some Theta Delts get rid of a little excess energy on a warm spring day with an active game of touch football.

OAKS CLUB OF THETA DELTA CHI

"Pretty soon now" — that's when the Oaks of Theta Delta Chi, a new colony, say their chapter will be installed.

Organized in January, 1960, the group is already active in campus activities. They participate on the M.S.U. Swimming Team, in the Marching Band, Spartan Hosts, Green Helmet, and various other organizations and honoraries.

The Theta Delts were honored Homecoming weekend when the Alpha Chi Omega's awarded them a "My Hero" trophy. As the men were industriously working on their own entry, flames were seen on the sorority's display. In the line of duty, the Theta Delts extinguished the flames and became the heroes of the day.

ORCHESIS

Members of Orchesis Dance Honorary appeared at Activities Carnival, Union Board Fine Arts Festival and half-time at basketball games.

Organized in 1938, Orchesis sponsors lecturers and performers concerned with the modern dance as an art form. Members are chosen on a tryout basis.

PHI GAMMA NU

The image of the American woman as scatter-brained is shattered by the members of Phi Gamma Nu, women's business sorority. Any coed business major with a two-point all-college and a 2.5 average in Business is eligible for membership.

These coeds participated in Activities Carnival and served as hostesses at an open house on the day Eppy Center was dedicated.

PI SIGMA EPSILON

Founded at M.S.U. in November, 1957, Pi Sigma Epsilon, food distribution fraternity, has spread to two other universities, Cornell and Southern California. All Mass Marketing Management majors are eligible for membership.

The purpose of the fraternity is to link the academic work and study in the food distribution industry with its business and social aspects.

POMOLER CLUB

"An apple a day keeps the doctor away" is the motto of the members of Pomoler Club. And these students practice what they preach. They are responsible for the year-round operation of the apple vending machine in the Horticulture Building.

The machine, aside from keeping the club's treasury stocked, gives the members valuable insight into consumer buying habits.

PORPOISE FRATERNITY

The pools on campus are the second homes of the members of Porpoise fraternity, swimming honorary. Members are selected on the basis of their interest and ability in aquatic sports in general.

The group sponsors water shows on Saturday mornings before home football games. They specialize in comedy diving, formation swimming and water skits. The club also assists Green Splash in their Spring term show.

PROMENADERS CLUB

"Swing your partner," says the caller, and the Promenaders begin another gay evening of dance.

The only requirements for membership are an interest and average ability in folk dancing and a lot of stamina. The group maintains a demonstration team which tours to various campus activities. They performed at half-time at the Indiana basketball game, as one of these events.

RIFLE CLUB

The purpose of the MSU Rifle Club is to promote and improve marksmanship. It provides an opportunity to learn handling and firing of rifles for the novice, or a chance to improve, for students who are already accomplished riflemen.

Each year the group gives an award to the outstanding male and female marksmen.

SCABBARD AND BLADE

Scabbard and Blade, the National Military Society, was organized to promote better relations between the military service and the civilian population. They try to give accurate information about the military requirements of the United States.

The group actively participates in the rifle league and national rifle and pistol matches. The members also assist each term in the campus blood drives.

Row one: J. Aitken; J. Thomas; J. Swainson; D. Blood; L. Schaadt; L. Zivic. Row 2: J. Hinckley, Jr.; Larry Walker; T. Morrow; J. Todd; M. Newman; J. Shepard; R. Waldren.

SPARTAN WOMEN'S LEAGUE

A friendly welcome to campus is extended to new faculty members by the teams of Spartan Hi-Wagon, sponsored and organized by Spartan Women's League.

This women's service organization also joins with other women's groups in sponsoring Spinster Spin, and with Alpha Phi Omega service honorary in sponsoring the Spring term blood drive.

2x4 CLUB

The purpose of the 2 x 4 Club is to promote further interest in wood and the use of forest products.

The club sponsored booths at the Lansing Home Show, the National Retail Lumber Dealers Convention and other various state lumber dealers conventions.

Organized in 1918, all majors in Lumber Merchandising or Wood Technology are eligible for membership in 2 x 4 Club.

SIGMA PHI DELTA

Engineering, whether it's mechanical, chemical, or electrical, has some characteristics in common in all its applied fields. These characteristics bind all engineering students together in Sigma Phi Delta.

The organization schedules well-known guest speakers throughout the year. It also publishes the Spartan Engineer, the journal for engineering students.

STUDENT ASSOCIATION OF LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS

The Student Association of Landscape Architects provides a program of professional interest for students majoring in this area.

The group meets bi-weekly, and emphasizes discussions, group projects and guest lecturers.

Varsity Club

Any undergraduate in good scholastic standing who has won a varsity letter is eligible for active membership in the MSU Varsity Club.

Each spring the Varsity Club sponsors the Varsity-Alumni game, and then presents an outstanding player award to the deserving alumni athlete.

The club also presents a scholarship award to its outstanding junior member and an award to the graduating senior who has done the most for the club.

Women's Athletic Association

The Women's Athletic Association is open to any coed who enjoys participation in sports. The members of this organization are in charge of all women's intramural activities, including sports competition in swimming, softball, bowling, golf, volleyball, and tennis.

WAA awards trophies to the girls who demonstrate excellence in the intramural contests.

VETERANS ASSOCIATION

Inter-service rivalry has no place in the MSU Veterans Club. Membership is open to any student who has returned from 22 months of active duty.

The annual Two-Point Dinner, sponsored by the Vets, is open to everyone who made a 2.0 or above the previous term. The club also sponsors Winterland Whirl, an all-university dance at which their Sweetheart is crowned.

Always ardent athletic supporters, the Vets reserve a block at every home football game and contribute to field spirit with their cowbell collection.

Members of the Vets Association sponsor an annual carwash, the proceeds of which go to Little League baseball. The profits from the Two-Point Dinner are contributed to the athletic department of the School for the Blind.

Jan Howard, the Vets Sweetheart, was crowned at the annual Winterland Whirl after being selected by votes cast by members attending.

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB

A blending of 60 voices in beautiful melody – Women's Glee Club. The women in this organization are primarily concerned with the expression through the medium of music, and with educational experience in group singing.

Women's Glee Club has many opportunities for public performance each year. The first performance takes place during fall term orientation week, when they sing at the annual AWS orientation program for new students.

They follow this up with a ceremonious Christmas

Vespers Service in Alumni Chapel, where they present both instrumental and choral numbers.

The annual spring concert of Women's Glee Club features a musical format ranging from popular to strictly classical pieces. Shortly after the concert, the glee club leaves the campus for several days for a musical tour of Michigan cities and high schools.

The most enjoyable event of the year for the musical coeds is the annual spring visit to the Boys' Vocational School, where they present a short concert and then invite the boys to join them in singing rounds of music.

Many hours of rehearsing are necessary before each of the many concerts that the Women's Glee Club gives each year.

RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATIONS

Bible study led by Rev. Didier is an important part of the spiritual life of the students in Baptist Student Fellowship.

BAPTIST STUDENT FELLOWSHIP

Baptist Student Fellowship was organized on campus in 1960 to provide a religious organization for Baptist students. The group sponsors Bible-study groups at their center, social events, and plays and special music programs.

In February the group hosted the eight annual Michigan Baptist Student Movement Convocation, a weekend gathering of Baptist students from colleges throughout the state.

CANTERBURY CLUB

Students belonging to the Episcopal Canterbury Club enjoy an active spiritual life. Meetings, held every Sunday evening, consist of prayer, fellowship and programs of inspiration and meditation.

Religious retreats, a pancake supper on Shrove Tuesday, an all-Parish dance, and exchanges with clubs from other universities were a few of the highlights included in this year's agenda.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE FOUNDATION

Uniting Christian Scientists at MSU and correcting erroneous impressions concerning the idea of the Christian Science religion are the main purposes of the Christian Science Foundation.

To promote this purpose, the group holds weekly testimonial meetings, and sponsors two lectures a year by well known Christian Science leaders.

Informal discussions on current religious topics are an important part of the student program at St. John's.

ST. JOHN'S STUDENT PARISH

The purpose of St. John's Student Parish is to mold Catholic students into a common united group through social, academic and religious activities.

In keeping with this aim, the Parish group held non-credit religion classes and daily religious services for its members at the Catholic Center.

Friday night movies and Saturday night dances were a regular part of the schedules for members, and few missed the semi-formal Cardinal Ball.

The group centers its activities around the modern new center, located centrally on M.A.C. avenue. Daily and Sunday services are held for Roman Catholic students in St. John's church, and the adjoining student center is available for social and informal religious activities.

Three priests are in residence at St. John's to assist students at any time.

CHRISTIAN STUDENT FOUNDATION

Members of Christian Student Foundation are stewards of ministry to all interdenominational faiths — Congregational, Evangelical United Brethren, and People's Church Students.

By working and learning with a cross-denominational group, CSF'ers have a unique vantage point from which to view modern religious life.

GAMMA DELTA

Gamma Delta, an organization for Lutheran students, gives its members the opportunity to grow in Christian knowledge and service. The group has regular Sunday night meetings which include supper and a program of inspiration. A winter camp and convocation is held each year.

Gamma Delta has its own chapter newspaper, "Luspar", and is part of an international project which sponsors missionaries in India.

HILLEL FOUNDATION

The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation is devoted to cultural, religious, social and counseling activities among Jewish university students. The regular Hillel program includes religious services on the Sabbath and holidays as well as forums, discussion and study groups.

Famous Biblical and historical events are celebrated through such ceremonies as the Passover Seder and the Purim "Hillel's z-a-Poppin" affair.

Hillel also sponsors the interfaith supper, athletic tournaments, folk dance groups and the Film Festival.

SPARTAN CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP

A non-denominational religious organization, Spartan Christian Fellowship, attempts to forward Christian principles through weekly Bible studies, discussions and prayer.

Social events of the group include hayrides, ice cream socials, picnics and banquets. Most of these informal gatherings center around Bethel Manor, a Christian living unit.

TRINITY COLLEGIATE FELLOWSHIP

Strengthening the spiritual life through discussions and social activities is the purpose of Trinity Collegiate Fellowship. Affiliated with the East Lansing Trinity Church, the Fellowship brings interested students together for hayrides, coffee hours, singing and serious discussions.

The members try to relate all the activities of the group to the deeper spiritual life of each individual.

WESLEY FOUNDATION

Wednesday morning communion and breakfast at the Methodist Student Center is a regular part of the Wesley Foundation's activities. Open to all students with a Methodist preference, it encourages religious and spiritual growth through a program and panel discussions and services. The foundation also provides aid to underprivileged children and sponsors foreign students.

STUDENT SERVICES

AUSG serves as one of the voices of the student body. Here they listen to President Larry Campbell.

Because services which students perform for each other also aid the university in creating outlets for student voice, MSU constructed a multi-million dollar building to centralize the organizations and bodies which serve the student body. Through them, a student may borrow money, give vent to his dissatisfaction, and receive valuable professional training.

Student services fall into three primary functional groups — governing bodies, student publications, and sponsors of special events such as Career Carnival and J-Hop. All three classes of services work through and with each other, and all share a common interest in being of service to fellow students.

BOARD OF STUDENT PUBLICATIONS

The main decision-making body regarding supervision of student publications is the MSU Board of Student Publications. The board is made up of publications editors, the Dean of Communication Arts, one AUSG representative and various administrative officials.

The board selects and formally appoints the editors and business managers of the student newspaper and yearbook, and the special interest magazines.

STATE NEWS EDITORIAL

"The second-largest morning daily in Michigan" may sound like a big claim for a student newspaper, but it's true and the group responsible for getting the State News out is the editorial staff. The copy for the paper goes to press by mid-evening, but proofreading and last minute breaks may keep night editors and staff writers up half the night.

New to the paper, this year, was the change from letterpress to offset printing, Spring term. Also a new feature was the weekly "Spotlight" supplement containing features and a preview of each week's events.

John Lang and Eric Peterson collaborate on make-up and layout for State News advertising.

STATE NEWS ADVERTISING

The one-dollar per student assessment did not lessen the need for advertising sales in the State News. The legislative budget cut forced the university to withhold the dollar it usually appropriates to the State News from students' course fees.

Staff members sell space to and make layouts for local merchants and businessmen and also handle national accounts. They also organize the classified advertising section of the paper.

STATE NEWS CIRCULATION

The unsung heroes of the Michigan State News are the individuals comprising the circulation staff. The buzz of the alarm clock at 5:00 a.m. starts them off delivering the newspaper to living units and campus buildings and offices five mornings a week.

In addition to circulating 20,300 papers daily, the staff mails copies to subscribers and advertisers. Another function of circulation is to keep the files of back issues of the State News up to date.

WOLVERINE EDITORIAL

Wolverine staffers discovered that the production of a 500-page book requires a combination of advance planning and constant updating. For instance, a copy staff, riding the crest of the football wave Fall term, eagerly planned a special Rosebowl Section. At the end of the Minnesota game nervous laughs began to be exchanged, and after Purdue a lot of red-penciling was needed.

WOLVERINE BUSINESS

Olive and Norman, the little "blob" people who reminded students and faculty to purchase their Wolverines, were the brain-children of the business department.

The year of a Wolverine business staffer is measured in "campaigns". From the contract-signing campaign to the final sales drive, the business manager and his workers survived constant peaks of activity.

MSU Veterinarian editors prepare for the publication of their Winter issue.

MSU VETERINARIAN

Designed for students majoring in Veterinary Medicine, the MSU Veterinarian is published tri-annually in fall, winter and spring terms. The three issues bring recent developments in the field, current research and clinical articles to its subscribers.

The magazine is one of the few veterinary student publications included in the Veterinary Indexing Service, and is supported by the Michigan Veterinary Medical Association's Official Journal.

The publication presents the "Best Instructor Award" to an outstanding educator in the College of Veterinary Medicine.

SPARTAN ENGINEER

"Spartan Engineer" has the job of keeping the engineering students informed of scientific news happenings on campus and off.

A variety of journalistic efforts are accepted. As much interest is taken in general contemporary developments in engineering as in technical and specialized subjects to produce a magazine of current interest.

At the annual Publications Banquet, members of the staff who have made outstanding contributions to the "Spartan Engineer" are rewarded for their efforts with various plaques and keys.

ACTIVITIES CARNIVAL

Sponsored by the Associated Women Students, the executive board of Activities Carnival plans the annual exposition of MSU's numerous student activities. Membership on carnival committees is assigned through petitioning.

The purpose of Activities Carnival is to acquaint new students with various campus clubs and organizations, and to give experienced members a chance to answer their questions. Many student groups take advantage of this opportunity to recruit new members as well as to give out information.

The Athletic Board handles all policy decisions relating to MSU's participation in inter-collegiate athletics.

Composed of 13 members, representing the faculty, the administration, alumni and the student body, the board also considers matters concerning athletic eligibility, local scheduling policy, ticket prices, TV and radio options, athletic awards, and the sports which the school will train for inter-collegiate competition.

AWS JUDICIARY

The AWS Judiciary Board attempts to maintain standards of conduct which are in harmony with the ideals of academic and social growth among all university women. Its decisions are printed in the green and white AWS Handbook, distributed to all women students. The board also discusses residence hall problems and acts upon petitions.

Members must have an all-university two point and are elected by the residents of women's dormitories.

CAREER CARNIVAL

The Career Carnival contradicted the meaning of most thirteenth anniversaries in celebrating another productive year. This opportunity for students to ask questions of the businessmen themselves, has received national recognition.

This year the executive committee of Career Carnival introduced the University to "Opportunities Unlimited." Eighty firms from business and industry, service and government, sent a total of 250 representatives.

AUSG EXECUTIVE

The Executive branch of All-University Student Government handles an array of services for the student body. Student loans, free mimeographing services, an orientation program and academic benefits such as lectures and seminars are all part of the services of AUSG to the student.

Heading the Executive branch, the president of AUSG appoints the cabinet members, subject to the approval of Student Congress.

STUDENT CONGRESS

Student Congress, the legislative branch of AUSG, is made up of representatives elected by living unit residents and off-campus students each spring. The Speaker of Student Congress heads up the group, which meets every Wednesday evening.

Congress maintains five standing committees to investigate student problems. Other services for which the body is responsible is the Student Insurance Plan and the chartering of all student organizations.

ALL-UNIVERSITY JUDICIARY

Most cases of student discipline are brought before All-University Student Judiciary for primary considerations. This group of students selected from each class for a term of one year is empowered to decide the facts of each case and recommend disciplinary action.

The decisions of Judiciary are subject to approval by the office of the Dean, but it is a testimony to the court's good judgment that only two reversals have been made in the court's history.

STUDENT TRAFFIC APPEAL COURT

The Student Traffic Appeal Court is empowered by All-University Student Government to dismiss any fines imposed by the Campus Police for campus driving or parking violations.

Organized in 1956, the Student Traffic Appeal Court holds a record of lasting decisions. No verdict of the seven-member court has ever been reversed.

Members of the court are selected by the chief justice and the president of AUSG on the basis of interviews and petitions.

The whole Greek alphabet rather than the individual combinations is the sphere of the Inter-Fraternity Council. Under its guidance the spirit of brotherhood is extended among all the social fraternities.

The officers and the representatives of the various fraternities work together to provide a solid base for community-wide projects. The Council also functions as a supervisory body in the registration of male Greek social activities and as a judicial body in fraternity concerns.

The members of IFC need little prodding to collaborate with their sister organization, PanHellenic Council, in sponsoring the Greek dance in the fall and Greek Week in the spring.

The men of Theta Chi walked away from the annual IFC Fraternity Sing with another trophy to add to their collection.

WOMEN'S INTER-RESIDENCE COUNCIL

Women's Inter-Residence Council consists of representatives elected by all women's dormitories.

The group sponsors an Officers' Dessert, Freshman Mixers in cooperation with Men's Hall Association, and the Spartan Street Stomp.

Striving to lessen the bewilderment of new women students on the MSU campus, WIC organized a Freshman Orientation Program.

JUNIOR PAN-HELLENIC COUNCIL

Shortly after sorority pledges have fastened their new pins, they elect a representative to the Junior PanHellenic Council. These women, new to the sorority system, coordinate their classes, and expose them to the workings of the PanHellenic Council.

The council sponsors an activities carnival where the future initiates get a glance at the sorority system and find what part they would like to play in it.

MEN'S HALLS ASSOCIATION

"It's a man's world," aptly applies to the area of operations of the Men's Halls Association. This co-ordination body is made up of elected general officers and the presidents of the male living units on campus.

In addition to formulating policy for the men's residence halls, MHA sponsors social activities. Full-length motion pictures are featured every week. Dances in the lounges provide opportunities to socialize with the opposite sex.

The spirit of friendly competition is encouraged during Homecoming with the halls vying for the display trophies. Intramural sports divide the residence halls into opposing sides as teams compete for championship recognition.

This year MHA inherited the sponsorship of Block "S", the football card section. It also re-initiated a leadership training course for the five major chairmen of each precinct: activities, social, scholarship, athletics, and judicial.

Ken Applegate presides over the weekly meetings of the MHA which sets up dorm policies and sponsors activities for residents.

PANHELLENIC COUNCIL

The job of co-ordinating all of the sorority and rush activities belongs to the members of PanHellenic Council. The Council guides the activities of all sororities at MSU. By giving two scholarship trophies each year PanHel also serves as an academic guide to the sororities. These trophies are awarded to the sorority with the highest grade point average and to the one with the most improved average.

PanHel also does their share of good work for the community. Each year a full scholarship is given to a qualified foreign student, this year Art major and senior Yuko Matsuoko. Members of PanHel also do volunteer work at Olin Memorial Health Center.

Members of the PanHellenic Council are the Rush chairmen and assistants from each MSU sorority.

Spring Rush plans are discussed informally in small groups of PanHel members before final Council decisions are made.

PRESIDENT'S COUNCIL

White tablecloths on a few tables in the dining room mean that the President's Council is visiting that particular residence hall. Twice a month the presidents of the women's residence halls meet to have dinner and hold business meetings.

Discussion of mutual problems in the living units is the main order of business. Also the possibility of communal projects is examined.

WATER CARNIVAL

The Red Cedar River, ordinarily skimmed by a few canoes, becomes crowded with floats as Water Carnival literally takes over Spring Weekend.

Sponsored by the senior class, Water Carnival is under the steering of an executive committee. The members of the committee are selected by petition and interview. Their main duty is coordination of all aspects of the Carnival.

UNION BOARD

Called the "hub of campus activity," the Union Building is familiar to every MSU student. The group at the center of the hub is Union Board, which organizes and carries out one of the most extensive programs on campus.

The group is especially in the spotlight during their Union Board Week. A different event is planned for each evening of an entire week, including a jazz show, fashion show, original musical comedy and a dance.

Union Board also sponsors several year-round programs. They offer instruction in bridge and dancing, and, for those who are already proficient, tournaments in bridge, bowling, chess and billiards. Students lacking funds to "follow the team" in person do so through movies of away football games. The forum lectures introduce prominent speakers discussing contemporary and controversial subjects.

SENIOR CLASS COUNCIL

The Senior Council is a service organization as well as a class government for seniors. These elected officers of their senior class recognize outstanding seniors by selecting seniors of the week and year and by presenting an activities award.

Members of the Council completely take over during the last week of spring term, making their exit in a flourish. Excitement and anticipation are in order as the Council announces the outstanding seniors of the year, starts swinging Senior Swingout and takes care of last-minute details concerning their long-awaited commencement.

Selecting new members is the job of the four elected officers who make their choice on the basis of a petition and interview system. Each member is in charge of one of the council activities, but the efforts of all the members result in the success of their class activities.

Decisions concerning commencement Water Carnival and other Senior activities are made by the Senior Council.

FROSH-SOPH COUNCIL

Consisting of members elected by the freshman and sophomore classes, the Frosh-Soph Council was organized to co-ordinate activities of the two classes represented.

Each Fall term the Council organizes "Frosh-Soph Daze" to acquaint incoming freshmen with fellow class members and college life.

At the end of each term the Council presents University Co-ordinating Sessions to assist students in their preparation for University College final exams.

For MSU students with a flair for writing, the Council sponsors three essay contests during the year. Plaques and other prizes are awarded to those who demonstrate freshness and originality as well as a command of their subject.

J-COUNCIL

Officers of the Junior Council, elected by their classmates during the spring term of their sophomore year, and committee chairmen and members, selected by the officers on the basis of petitions and interviews shortly after elections, begin to mobilize their class in planning for graduation.

The most unusual innovation of J-Council in 1961-62 was a polling service set up for the use of any student organization interested in obtaining student opinion on a given subject. The polling bureau worked through the University in gaining access to its data processing equipment, recruited several students experienced in polling, and published a manual on interview training. AUSG utilized the service for research on a student discount service.

Another primary area of interest of the Junior Class Government was the foreign student program. Unlike the polling bureau, this project was not new to the J-Council, as this body fostered Campus UN in 1959 to stimulate interest in international affairs through an organized model. J-Council spent a good part of the year studying the possibility of aiding in the formation of an umbrella organization to co-ordinate the various foreign student clubs. This committee was divided into three operational groups. A survey sub-committee investigated the present structure of international groups at MSU; a program group compiled this information and made recommendations; and a secretarial staff assisted in the paper work of the project. Representatives of the various foreign student groups were contacted and met during Winter Term to study the recommendations of the committee.

As a service to the University, a letter was sent to each junior explaining to him the importance of the MSU Development Fund. He was not asked to contribute directly, but simply begin to realize the service to higher education which this fund represents.

The J-Council again sponsored the Outstanding Junior Awards. These presentations are made to juniors during Spring term who have been active in living units, campus organizations and activities, and governing bodies. Fifteen to twenty students are chosen by members of all-university honoraries, governing bodies and the J-Council.

The '63 Class Spirit Committee sponsored a Winter Sports Day in February. Groups of juniors drove to Echo Valley near Kalamazoo and spent a Saturday ice skating and tobogganing at the sports haven.

Count Basie's distinctive piano jazz was a hit with the students attending the annual J-Hop sponsored by the Junior Class.

In order to swell their diploma-time treasury, the J-Council sponsors an all-university dance, the J-Hop, each Winter term. This year the affair was built around an Oriental theme, but carried the solidly American music of Count Basie. Dubbed "Jade" and dance decorations included an oriental fountain, Japanese Lanterns and each couple received a teapot as a favor.

During intermission, Sandy McNeal was crowned Miss MSU by the members of Blue Key, junior and senior men's honorary.

The J-Hop was a sell-out for the second year in a row, despite its inherited reputation as a money-losing project.

The dancers at "Jade" were surrounded by an Oriental atmosphere and the big band sound of Count Basie.

MSA RESIDENCES

The foundation on Case had hardly settled before we began construction on another huge dormitory-classroom complex, even farther out in left field.

Butterfield and Rather saw their last year as men's residence halls. Next year they will house coeds, and Brody will no longer be the masculine stronghold of campus.

Shaw Hall, one of the largest dormitories in the world, reflects its glimmering face in the nighttime waters of the Red Cedar River.

STUDENT HOUSING

Preparing for a weekend date requires time and care no matter where a MSU coed may live.

One of the first important decisions a new student has to make, soon after he has been admitted, is the choice of a residence hall. He thinks about location, size, newness. The university has given a great deal of thought to these areas, too, for it knows that housing determines in large the first image an incoming student forms of MSU.

Although the second largest men's dormitory in the world, Shaw Hall, is located at MSU, and every dorm is relatively large, they are broken down into precincts, each with a resident advisor. The precincts of a dorm compete against each other academically and athletically, and the winner competes against other dorms. For social functions, the precincts plan together. In this manner, small groups of close friends are quickly formed, and larger groups develop shortly thereafter.

East Shaw residents find their feet sinking into the man-made mud as their opponents, West Shaw, out-tugs them in a spring tug-of-war behind the dormitory.

Dormitory life is intentionally an exercise in living with people of widely differing backgrounds. Hall assignments are made without regard to race, creed or color. Except for one precinct of French majors, and another of elementary education majors, no regard is given to academic interests. Foreign students, and even the physically handicapped, are scattered throughout the residence hall system. The close friendships that inevitably form, and that intangible spirit which naturally accompanies good friends when they compete with other teams, is a tribute to the philosophy of brotherhood upon which campus residence is predicated.

Always a pioneer in student housing, MSU was among the nation's first schools to build dorms for coeds. It is now among the first to build coed dorms. Case Hall opened its doors Fall term, and Wilson dormitory is scheduled for completion by next Fall term.

A manually operated traffic light was installed in front of the Brody Halls to aid the pedestrian residents during the traffic rush hours.

Time out from the university social calendar is used for study by two "charter members" of North Case Hall.

Off-campus housing at MSU includes a vast network of university-approved apartments, rooms and houses. Many Spartans, after completing their required year in the dormitory, prefer to escape the bustle of residence hall life, and live with a small group of friends.

Apartment life affords students the opportunities to get "domesticated." Many cook their own meals and keep their apartments cleaned. It is not unusual to see a group of budget-conscious males scrutinizing various brands of canned corn and complaining about the price of beef in any of the local supermarkets.

As an incentive for local landlords to keep up apartments and houses, and cultivate students tenancy, the University Housing Office offers an award to the best landlord for MSU students.

The Students' Off Campus organization sponsored a dance featuring gambling equipment from Harold's Club in Reno.

One of the "hazards" of off-campus living — house cleaning — is demonstrated in this male living quarters.

Refrigerator raids often accompany late hour . . .

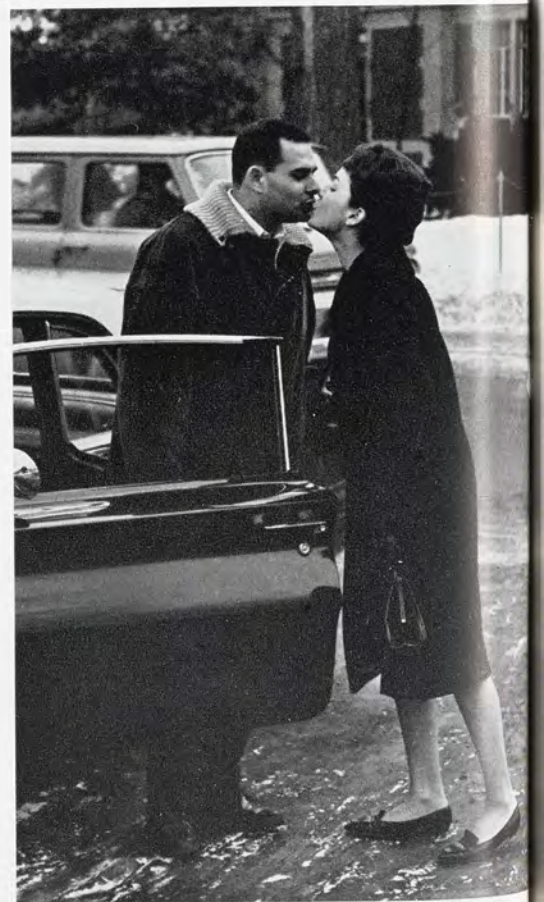

. . . study sessions for off-campus residents.

A little last-minute cross quizzing before the mid-term absorbs this married couple, on their way to a common class.

When both partners are in school, there's no begging off on the dish duty because of studying.

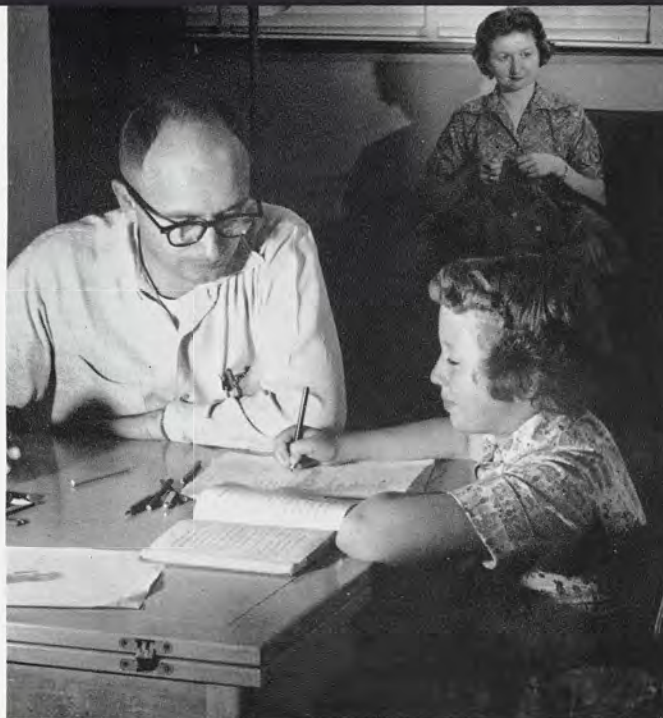

Many Spartan wives are working on their PhT — putting hubbie through!

Married students at MSU may apply for one of the 2,000 apartments grouped in three small communities: Spartan Village, Cherry Lane Apartments or University Village. Nearly 6,000 residents and their children list one of the three groups as their hometown.

MSU's Suburbia has all the facilities, problems and patterns of any community composed primarily of young married couples. Laundromats and milk stations swallow coins, wives group together in sewing circles and organize a baby-sitting service, and fathers interrupt their studies to fix formulas and repair tricycles.

Each apartment is equipped with a kitchenette, and couples may rent one-bedroom or two-bedroom units.

Daddy often interrupts his own homework to give some scholarly advice to another student in the family.

Some of the younger residents of married housing insist on approving the musical selections for the family stereo.

The new private phones in the dorms reduced the distance between Armstrong and coed halls to the twist of a finger.

ARMSTRONG

Armstrong Hall, in its second year as an undergraduate living unit, has become involved in many campus activities. The men of Armstrong enthusiastically participate in IM sports, Water Carnival, Homecoming, Jr. 500, and blood drives. Last year the IM handball representatives acquired the position of all-university runner-up.

During the Christmas season the residents of Armstrong sponsored a party to brighten the holidays for area orphans.

Armstrong men began their own luau when they staged their spring term party Hawaiian style in Kellogg Center's Big Ten Room. Over four hundred students were awed by the colorful water fountain, palm trees, and lighting effects. Highlighting the evening's menu were a roast pig with an apple in his mouth and a large baked tuna.

Books and notes get a thorough going over prior to mid terms and finals by the residents of Armstrong Hall.

BAILEY

Constant activity seems to be the keynote for the men of Bailey Hall this year. They participated in many campus-wide events and activities, including Homecoming, IM sports, Water Carnival and Jr. 500.

Bailey men are also fleet of foot, as they literally ran away with first place in the Turkey Trot. Their reward was a live turkey, awarded annually to the winner of the event held on Old College Field.

Spring term, Bailey men really go social with their annual term party. Other parties and special events, including exchange dinners with women's dormitories, occupy a large part of the calendar.

Selection as the "Bailey man" is the secret desire of every resident. The "Man of the Year" award is based on outstanding contributions to residence hall unity, activities and spirit.

Discussions about studies, future plans, and dates for the weekend are frequent between roommates in dormitories.

BRYAN

Winning and presenting awards are a major part of the program at Bryan Hall. Known for their enthusiastic spirit at the football games in "Block Bryan" which made them the possessors of the Spartan Spirit Trophy for the second time in two years, the men of Bryan were also awarded the All-Sports Trophy by the Intramural Department.

The giving of awards by Bryan includes scholastic trophies and scholarships to hall members.

BUTTERFIELD

The residents of Butterfield Hall achieved state-wide publicity Fall term by originating the MSU talkathon. Nearly 150 consecutive hours of gabbing were verified before final exam pressures, jabs by the State Legislature, and laryngitis prompted a "goodby." Meanwhile, the craze had spread; a twist-athon was begun by another hall; and a fraternity concluded the fad by organizing a study-thon.

The men of Butterfield organize their regular activities program around the three central areas of student life: scholastic, athletic and social.

A dinner honoring residents who have achieved a 3.2 or better is given each term. Butterfield participates in all IM sports, and retired the dormitory trophy in the junior 500. A dance club with over 100 members provides activity and instruction for everyone from twisters to waltzers.

The Butterfield Pin is awarded to outstanding leaders in the dorm.

Convenient grill facilities offer respite from studies for Case's male population.

SOUTH CASE

The men of South Case have refined a tradition of other men's living units to the extreme. Many dorms have sister dormitories with whom they socialize, but South Case has sister precincts with their next door neighbors, the women of North Case. They plan dances every Saturday night, and sponsor recreation nights on Fridays at the men's IM building. The dorm council also arranged to offer movies each Friday evening.

South Case men don't just socialize at the IM building. They were awarded the dormitory swimming championship after a successful year in the pool, and they participated in other IM sports. It may be difficult for them to keep in shape for long, however; Case is the only dorm on campus with elevator service, and everyone likes that easy living.

EMMONS

The trophy case in the lobby of Emmons Hall is more crowded by the shiny new pieces added this year. The men of Emmons took championship titles in both swimming and basketball and runner-up in IM bowling.

School spirit in Emmons is displayed as the men take part in Homecoming, Water Carnival, Jr. 500, and blood drives.

Each year a $100 scholarship is awarded to the outstanding student of the living unit. Applicants for the award are judged on the basis of scholarship, character, citizenship and leadership.

Cooperation, like helping a friend trim his sideburns, is the secret to successful dorm living.

RATHER

The energy of the men of Rather Hall was devoted primarily to IM sports this year. They took first place honors in the residence hall division in baseball, and walked away with the first, second and third place trophies in baseball.

They also entered Homecoming and Water Carnival, ending the year with a term party.

All this activity is coordinated by the Rather Hall Club, the officers of which plan each event and promote hall unity and spirit.

EAST SHAW

Spring study breaks often take the form of a softball pepper drill for the men of East Shaw.

East Shaw men claim an advantage over the other men's dormitories in that theirs is closest to a female living unit, Van Hoosen Hall. Their pleasant location also affords them easy access to classes.

An elective body of dorm officers and precinct representatives form the General Council, the hall government. This year's General Council has been an especially active one, dealing with such matters as all-campus radio and numerous internal problems. The residents claim that a strong government is necessary for the effective conduct of their dormitory's business.

East Shaw's enthusiasm in their participation in all-university and inter-dorm activities is evident from the array of trophies and awards in their showcase. These activities include Homecoming, Water Carnival, Junior 500 and intramural sports. This year's Homecoming display captured a second prize for them.

WEST SHAW

Athletics, scholarship, service and social life all rank equally in the program of West Shaw — and the men have trophies in all to prove their ability.

The athletes of West Shaw were named the Dormitory Champions in all-sports competition last spring, and, since they received this honor three years in a row, retired the trophy. This year they claimed the dormitory championship in table tennis and badminton, and second place in dormitory basketball.

Their term party spring quarter was planned around an oriental theme, and was named "Hana-Mi". The evening included a steak dinner and dancing.

West Shaw topped the list of living units in the percentage of its residents who contributed in the R.O.T.C. Blood Drive.

Both scholarship trophies offered by MHA — one for the highest hall average, and another for the highest freshman average — were claimed by West Shaw.

Weekly dances are a feature of West Shaw Hall social life.

ABBOT

Abbot Hall and Mason Hall share the dining area connecting the two dorms. It is turned into a study room for the residents each evening after dinner.

Each year one lucky Freshman girl in Abbot Hall is awarded a plaque as the Hall's most outstanding resident. This award, made by the House Council, is only one of many functions.

The women of Abbot Hall took third-place honors in Homecoming display competition, and celebrated at cider and donut hours held after each football game.

The addition of four education classrooms in Abbot Hall was a luxury, especially during the snowy winter months.

NORTH CAMPBELL

The residents of North Campbell Hall participated in many campus activities, including Water Carnival, Block "S" and intramural athletics.

The dorm claimed first place in the Fall Blood Drive. In the Junior 500, the coeds came from behind to capture second place in their heat. The girls also took second place in Homecoming Displays.

The dorm officers with the guidance of their housemother, Mrs. Fenstemacher, planned a term party and a scholarship dinner during Spring Term to close out the year.

SOUTH CAMPBELL

The residents of South Campbell Hall participated in many University sponsored activities during the year.

In Water Carnival, South Campbell's float won a first place trophy. First place also went to South Campbell in the 1961 Flower Show. Entering into fall activities, the coeds built a Homecoming display and participated in Block "S" activities.

Interested girls also sang in the dorm choir and played on the dorm's baseball team.

NORTH CASE

North Case houses only new students which facilitates the forming of close friendships. The coeds like to gather in one of the rooms and listen to new albums and keep in touch with the latest chatter.

Located on the south side of campus, Case Hall provides its occupants with many unique conveniences. This dormitory, the largest residence hall open to MSU students, welcomed incoming freshmen and transfer students Fall term of 1961.

Case offers distinction by being the first dormitory in the nation to include classrooms in the living unit. It cornerstones a new era of student housing at MSU in its co-educational facilities. Elevators, libraries, recreation and fine arts rooms, a coffee shop, study lounges and student conference rooms are among the various features available to students living in Case. Spacious study and sleeping areas, semi-private baths and extra closet space contribute towards the students' comfort.

"Pep" was the keynote of Gilchrist Hall this year, judging from the hectic pace set by these women. They took part in all campus activities in which they were eligible to participate.

The year was begun with a second place Homecoming Display. Other teams and groups followed through on the athletic teams and in other competition.

The Gilchrist girls also sponsored exchange dinners with men's dorms, and a special term party.

Group study sessions often eliminate needless overlap, and give coeds in Gilchrist a chance to socialize.

EAST LANDON

The women of East Landon are formidable competitors both in the classroom and in Women's IM sports.

Last year they were the recipients of the 1960-61 WIC Scholarship Award for dorms under 300 students.

In intramural sports East Landon coeds cheered their team on to capture first place in softball.

Service projects are also a part of dormitory life. An underprivileged family was provided for at Christmas-time by the House Council and anyone wishing to contribute gifts.

MASON

Athletics, activities and services claimed much of the spare time of the women of Mason Hall. They put down their books and cram sheets during finals in December in order to sponsor a needy family. The girls contributed clothing, food, toys and money in order to brighten a Christmas for someone in need.

They also participated in Homecoming, IM sports, and took second place with their Water Carnival float, working with the A E Pi's.

Mason was the sister dormitory of Bailey Hall this year, and many of their activities were planned together. The two groups published an inter-dorm newspaper which improved communications between the two groups, and during Winter term worked in snow sculpture together, followed by a mixer at Bailey. They also held several exchange dinners with their brother hall.

The dorm council planned open houses after each home football game, and the girls were free to invite their dates and their parents to any of them.

Until 1960, Mayo Dormitory was a graduate residence. Even though it is the oldest living unit on campus still in use as a residence, its traditions and customs are still in the process of formation.

The freshmen were introduced to their new home in September at a Stunt Night. The women of East Mayo also helped a needy family at Christmastime.

One tradition the girls would like to see continued: one of their number has been chosen to the Homecoming Court both years of the dorm's undergraduate history.

Waiting in the dinner line can be tiresome after a long day in classes, but conversation helps one forget a growling stomach.

Sports headlined the activity of the coeds in West Mary Mayo Dormitory. The girls won a first-place rating in swimming competition and participated in other sports including volleyball and baseball.

The girls shared their Christmas spirit with a needy family of ten children. Adopting the family for Christmastime, the coeds gathered toys, clothes and food, and provided the family with Christmas dinner.

Upholding the distinction of being the first women's dorm on campus, the girls of West Mary Mayo took part in numerous other campus activities while still keeping a high scholastic outlook.

Although their term party's theme this year was "Moods in Blue," it wasn't a blue year at all for the women of Snyder Hall. They have been active in university events socially, scholastically and athletically.

The dorm council invited a faculty member to the dorm for dinner once a week throughout the year. This form of "apple-polishing" must have done the trick, for the women of Snyder placed second in scholastic competition among the large dorms.

At Christmastime, these coeds stopped studying for finals long enough to carol at a home for the elderly nearby.

They also participated in Homecoming, IM sports, and Water Carnival.

Enthusiasm was the key word at North Williams this year. After wining first place in Homecoming with their ship bearing the slogan "Ship 'em back to Indiana," they went on to win two first place sports trophies.

The mixers and exchange dinners they held with various men's halls were planned and accepted enthusiastically by all the residents.

The girls gave a Christmas party for a group of underprivileged children from the Lansing area. Games, refreshments and a visit from Santa Claus brought much joy to the children and the residents of North Williams.

A game of cards fills the gap between classes and helps pass the time before dinner when some of the North Williams coeds might not feel like studying.

SOUTH WILLIAMS

South Williams women try to practice what they preach, for their aim is to help each coed adapt to college life in the best way suited for her and to encourage the use of individual talents.

They are able to do this in many and varied ways for South Williams takes part in almost all campus activities.

Their Homecoming, Snow Sculpture and Water Carnival displays showed that they used the artistic talents and abilities of all their women to the fullest.

Christmas was a special time to these coeds. They took time out from the hectic studying for finals to collect money and food to give to a needy family in the Lansing area.

Participation in a variety of campus activities characterized the year for the women of East Yakeley. They took part in Homecoming, the Snow Sculpture Contest, Junior 500 and Water Carnival.

Intramural sports activities also took their share of

GREEK LIVING

Fraternities and sororities began at Michigan State as literary societies, meeting regularly for fellowship and education through discussion. Gradually they began to emphasize the social and fraternal functions of small-group living units as well as the educational ones. Local chapters began to affiliate with national Greek-letter organizations in the 1870's, and the Greek system has since grown to include 28 fraternities and 20 sororities.

Members of these groups live in close-knit unity with each other, support competitive campus activities, such as Homecoming and Water Carnival, and provide a great part of campus social life. They also form convenient units, along with the dormitories and co-ops, for the university's intramural program.

Spartan Greeks have never formed a machine which ruthlessly dictates campus politics, nor have individuals from separate houses ever banded together in sub rosa organizations. Both of these misfortunes currently plague many large campuses.

The services which fraternities and sororities perform for the university and the community help keep the groups functioning as a unit, and allow them to contribute their efforts to worthwhile causes. Many alumni who continue to support Spartan athletics and other programs, stay interested in MSU through their Greek affiliations. Many houses plan service projects as a regular part of their yearly program. Some award scholarships to deserving members or to students outside the system. Nearly all of them encourage scholarship by awarding plaques or trophies to outstanding members.

The Delta Upsilon bell is a familiar sight at all home football games. After each MSU touchdown it rings out, in unison with the counting of the crowd, State's score.

A growing collection of nametags, endless conversation, and assignments past due mean it's Rush time for the fraternities.

The story of Greek-letter organizations in America is a strange mixture of an immense amount of testimony within the groups of their value, and an equal bulk of outside criticism. Something in the American character naturally deplores secrecy in group structure, and college fraternities have borne the brunt of this taboo since their inception. Shortly after they caught on in American universities, they were split down the middle by the Civil War. A half a century later, during World War I, the old suspicion of closed esoterics erupted into mass hysteria, and they were nearly banned by national law. The exodus of young men from college campuses at the outbreak of World War II nearly depopulated them, and between these crises, educators and administrators have criticized hazing practices and anti-intellectualism within them.

MSU had no fraternities during the Civil War, but has otherwise reflected the stormy development of the Greeks. Local chapters went into forced hibernation during the two World Wars, and only recently one MSU administrator called them the "intellectual skid row of the university." But the story has also been one of reformation. Ten years ago, the Greek grade-point average was consistently lower than the all-men's. Today it is the reverse. IFC passed a law this year forbidding hazing in any fraternity, and most houses have switched from Hell Week, to Help Week.

Many practice sessions are necessary before a group of Greek women are ready for the annual Sorority Sing competition.

Trying to catch the elusive Frisbee takes a steady eye and quick reflexes and is a popular springtime sport with many Greeks.

Fraternities and sororities have united into confederations in order to form their governing bodies, Inter-Fraternity Council, and PanHellenic Council. These groups have been granted original jurisdiction by the University in disciplinary action taken against any house. Individual chapters may be placed on scholastic probation for consistently failing to maintain a 2.2 house average, or on social probation for violation of the University Code of Student Conduct.

IFC and PanHel combine their efforts in the two main all-Greek functions of the year, a dance in the fall and Greek Week, an entire week of varied functions, in the spring.

The Powder Puff Bowl brings some fraternity men out in rare form to compete for queen of the event.

Springtime brings the lawn chairs out on the sun decks of many sorority houses for some early suntans.

Some swings at a practice ball in the backyard gets one sorority girl ready for an outing on the university course.

The single principle, which has sustained the Greek system through its turbulent, criticism-filled past, through many social black-eyes and much-publicized notoriety, is the spirit of brotherhood which is the inspiration of every group.

Brotherhood is hard to define, and harder to negotiate in the face of criticism, but it is easy to find examples of. Brotherhood is when one chapter sleeps and feeds another when its house is gutted by fire in the middle of the night. Brotherhood is when a sorority house breaks into a unified scream of delight because one of their sisters was announced as a Miss MSU finalist. Brotherhood is when one guy tries to impersonate a long distance operator in order to talk to a brother who is sick in Olin. And brotherhood is also when a house strands their Powder Puff Bowl queen candidate in downtown Lansing dressed in a lady's suit.

The excitement of rush begins with the greeting at the door by sorority members. The thrill experienced by the members is no less than that of the prospective pledges.

Disputes over a test question are quickly resolved when the text is consulted.

Alpha Epsilon Pi is still living up to its reputation for having prize-winning floats and displays in campus contests. They captured a first place with their Junior 500 float; and they walked off with the second place trophy from the 1961 Water Carnival.

The men also took part in the MSU intramural program.

Not to neglect their social interests, the fraternity members attended and gave many desserts and exchange dinners with the sorority houses on campus.

The Alpha Gamma Rho's participate actively in IM sports, Water Carnival, and Homecoming. Their rendition of "Hey, Look Me Over," won them a third place in IFC Sing.

The AGR's also accord unusual recognition to their cook, John Russell, who has been with them for fifteen years. The members claim they enjoy the best meals on campus.

Coaching the Gamma Phi Beta sorority to another victory in the annual Powder Puff Game was one of the achievements of the men of Beta Theta Pi.

In addition to this and other activities, the Beta's placed fourth in the Water Carnival. They also participated in IM sports and Greek Week.

One sad note, however. Their mascot, H. H. Herman, died. The beloved and devoted basset hound had been the house pet for eight years. Presently, his son, Stanley, is attempting to fill the gap left by Herman.

Much of the activity in the Beta House centers around Stanley, the canine member of the fraternity

Delta Chi

The Delta Chi's are proud of their own little combo which provides them many hours of entertainment.

Since the Delta Chi's were first organized on campus in 1935, they have proposed to develop personal qualities through group living.

The Delta Chi's stress extra curricular activities, and participate in all Intramural sports, Homecoming, Water Carnival and Greek Week. They sang their way into third place at the Inter-Fraternity Council Sing.

Dr. Gordon Sabine, vice-president in charge of Special Projects, and Dean Fuzak, Dean of Students, have been guest speakers at the House.

The men of Delta Chi have an avid interest in sports cars, and other activities as varied as skindiving and grilling at the Union.

Forty-eight feet of scaffolding did the trick for the men of Delta Sigma Phi in Homecoming competition Fall term. Their huge display of three giant witches chuckling over a cauldron took second place. The Delt Sigs proudly claim it was the largest display ever constructed on campus.

The group also walked off the Auditorium stage Spring term with second place in IFC Sing, the second time in two years they have won the trophy.

The entire first floor of their house was remodeled over the summer, and the group is careful to keep it looking in top form. One sacrifice for this luxury had to be made; the shaggy coat of Prince, their Great Dane, was too great a risk for the new rug, and he was honorably de-activated.

A little group singing around the piano keeps the Delt Sigs in fine voice for the IFC Sing competition in the spring.

Delta Tau Delta

A piano and a washtub bass, while not used to accompany a serenade, do provide a special kind of music for entertainment.

The men of Delta Tau Delta wound up last year by winning a first place trophy for their entry in the Water Carnival. Working with the women of Sigma Kappa, they constructed a floating still complete with a bathtub for gin, for the Roaring Twenties theme.

Some of the Delts must have refused the concoction, however, to stay in training for IM Sports. They have placed consistently high in the past year, taking the second-place trophy in all-university football competition, the second-place award in all-university track, and third place in swimming.

The Delts again assisted the women of Pi Beta Phi with their annual Christmas tree lighting ceremony in December, and closed out Winter term with a term party.

One of the brothers was honored to be chosen queen of the Powder Puff Bowl.

The highlight of the year for the men of Delta Upsilon was the dedication of their new house, located at Hagadorn and Grand River. The DU's all returned to campus a week before registration to put on final touches in time for rush.

A zeal for participation in extra-curricular activities is found among Delta Upsilon men. They received a third place for their Water Carnival float and a second place for their Community Help Week project.

Thousands of empty cigarette packages were collected by the DU's for a cigarette company contest. Their efforts netted them a new television set to go with their new house.

Some DU's impress a couple friends with their musical ability.

A friendly game of cards in the livingroom of their modern house keeps Farmhouse members busy during a free afternoon.

The men of Farmhouse continued their reign as the number one fraternity scholastically. They topped all others Fall, Winter, and Spring terms. In addition, they found time to rate high percentages in the blood drives.

The sports-minded at Farmhouse also did their share by participating in IM football, basketball, baseball, and bowling. Spring found Farmhouse tied for third place in the IFC baseball standings.

Farmhouse lists among its members, many campus leaders. The fraternity is primarily for men with an interest in agriculture, and the presidents of the Agricultural Education Club, Alpha Zeta, and ASAE are all on its roster.

In April, Farmhouse celebrated a proud occasion — the 25th anniversary of the local chapter.

The men of Kappa Sigma show interest in both leadership and scholarship. Members worked on committees in many varied activities to further academic and social life on campus.

This past year the Kappa Sigs participated in Homecoming, Water Carnival, and Fraternity Sing. In addition, the athletically-minded at Kappa Sigma were runners-up in all-university hockey competition, Winter term.

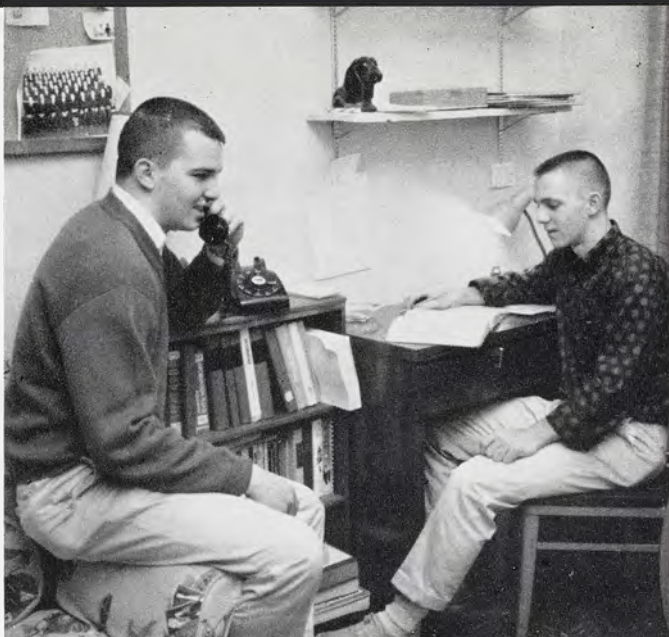

On the scholastic side, the Kappa Sigs awarded a scholarship each term to the most deserving member. This award was made at a formal awards dinner.

A "Scrabble" game with the housemother keeps a couple of Kappa Sigs on their toes and in need of some brotherly kibitzing.

When a brother's assistance fails to solve a math problem, a phone call can do the trick.

The proximity of the Lambda Chi Alpha House to the campus facilitates the close and active relations that the "Cross and Crescent" brothers maintain with the University.

Heading the list is the annual Junior 500 pushcart race, which overflows the campus with colorful pageantry each Spring term. The string of queens chosen to represent each living unit is headed by the Lambda Chi Crescent Queen and her court.

The coveted all-sports trophy found a home with the Lambda Chi's as a combined house effort told the tale of victory.

Individual members were found in Blue Key, Junior Council, Senior Council, All-University Judiciary, IFC, Student Government, and various social committees.

The Phi Delta Theta's played host to the whole Greek system when they provided the site of the Greek Feast, held during Greek Week, Spring term. They also organized a group of four fraternities and four sororities in a Sadie Hawkins Day race, and the gal who caught her guy brought him back to the Phi Delt house for a hot dog roast.

Fall Term the brothers treated their parents to a week-end of football and fun during their annual Parents' Week-end. The men play a little ball themselves and placed third in fraternity competition.

The Phi Delt's also entered other IM Sports, Water Carnival, Homecoming and Junior 500.

Looking through the house scrapbook brings back many fond memories to the Fiji's and is also a good conversation starter with guests and alumni.

Two traveling trophies have temporarily come to rest in the trophy case at the Phi Gamma Delta house. The ATO Help Week trophy was awarded to the Fiji's for their renovation of Lansing's first piece of fire equipment, on display at the Lansing Historical Society. The Fiji's won the first trophy awarded for the outstanding support of a fraternity in Greek Week.

The party calendar is highlighted by the annual Spring term Fiji Island party, when, for an evening, everyone's wish to be isolated on a South Seas island is realized.

The men of Phi Gamma Delta are also active in IM sports, IFC Sing, Homecoming and Water Carnival.

Each May the Fiji's summon their alumni back to the house for the annual Norris Pig Dinner, named in honor of author Frank Norris.

Organized on campus eight years ago, the men of Phi Kappa Psi are "old hands" in participating in university projects. The Phi Psi's originated "Bacchanalia" in 1960 as a pep rally for Homecoming.

The Phi Psi's also find time to support several other functions such as the Junior 500, Water Carnival, Campus Chest and sports. They finished second in bowling and football events in their intramural block.

The men of Phi Psi sponsored a Christmas party for a local group of underprivileged children.

The men of Phi Kappa Psi enjoy hearthside fellowship.

Phi Kappa Sigma

Phi Kappa Sigma became the home for a new mascot, this year. The puppy was never lacking in attention from his brothers.

Service to the community and to the fraternity system takes up a good deal of the spare time of the men of Phi Kappa Sigma. They entertained two Lansing children at a Christmas party. Winter term they sponsored the Pledge Class President's Assembly to orient new pledges through their representatives to the IFC. They hope that this event will become a tradition within the fraternity system.

The Skull House also enthusiastically supports all-university events, as is evidenced by their participation in Water Carnival, Junior 500, Greek Week and Homecoming.

The men climaxed their social year with their formal term party, the Black and Gold Ball.

Contributing many hours toward their service projects, the men of Phi Kappa Tau have discovered that the rewards are well worth the efforts. Phi Tau's enjoy sponsoring parties for underprivileged children of the Lansing area, and giving assistance to the Michigan School for the Blind ranked a high position on the year's service agenda.

Phi Tau participation in extra-curricular activities includes all inter-fraternity sports, IFC functions, Homecoming, Jr. 500, Water Carnival and other campus events.

Among the various and sundry trophies found in the Phi Tau house is the 1960-61 IFC Scholarship Improvement Trophy.

The unique Playboy Room provides the Phi Tau's with several sources of entertainment including a stereo and a TV set.

Phi Sigma Kappa

The Phi Sig three-piece string band fails to impress the house mascot, even though the serenade is especially for him.

The social highlight of the year for the men of Phi Sigma Kappa was their spring term-party, held at a local country club and brightened with a carnival atmosphere. The fraternity's Moonlight Girl was selected, and represented the group in all campus queen contests.

The Phi Sigs devote considerable time to various service projects. Fall term they sponsored a Halloween party for a group of orphans, and also held a car wash, the proceeds of which were donated to the Big Brothers Club of Lansing.

The aim of scholarship never loses the attention of the men of Phi Sigma Kappa, however, and they have rankings of third, fourth and sixth among fraternities for the past three terms to prove it.

The group supports all-university activities, such as Water Carnival, Homecoming, Jr. 500 and IM Sports.

The men of Pi Kappa Phi enthusiastically represented their fraternity in several IM sports and Homecoming. Besides paying a great deal of attention to all-university activities, the Pi Kapps placed a large amount of emphasis on scholastic achievement. Each term an award was presented to the outstanding pledge and scholar. At the end of the year, they recognized a senior member whom they felt had earned the honor.

In service to the community, the Pi Kapps participate in a community project in conjunction with the IFC-Pan-Hel councils.

Long walks and hitch-hiking are the prices they pay for a house in a quiet residential neighborhood, but one member is particularly appreciative of nearby wide-open spaces: the mascot, a collie dog.

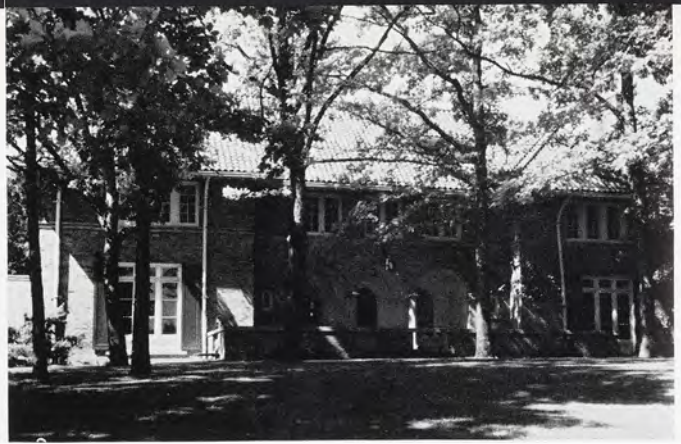

Pi Kappa Phi

Exercising their dogs is sometimes exhausting, and the Pi Kapps have to hold the canines down to catch their wind.

A brotherly discussion in the Psi U house can vary from the future term party to classes and instructors to last Saturday's dates.

The men of Psi Upsilon received the first place trophy at Evans Scholars Golf Day, placed first in their football block, and took third place honors in the Junior 500.

Psi U's social calendar was highlighted by a Christmas party for underprivileged children in the Lansing area.

Until a prize for simplicity is created in Homecoming display competition, the Psi U's will probably never win. Their elaborate display each year is a huge sign carefully erected in their front yard proclaiming simply "Rah!"

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, the largest national fraternity, was organized locally in 1927. Its primary purpose is to develop a well-rounded individual in the university context.

Emphasizing the academic and social life at MSU, the SAE's participated in the Inter-Fraternity Council, Union Board, Homecoming, Water Carnival and the All-University Student Government.

The SAE's captured first place in the fraternity division of the Junior 500. In athletics, they participated in IM sports and carried off first prize in golf and swimming competition besides taking second place in volleyball, and winning the block championships in basketball, football, and softball.

One of the most popular residents in the SAE house is an unabashed free-loader. The group's mascot, Brandy, a 200-pound St. Bernard, has never yet received a housebill.

SAE

Sigma Alpha Epsilon

Brandy, the SAE mascot, watches with a critical eye as his brothers enjoy a game of cards.

An offer to get them "fixed up" with a weekend date is taken with varying degrees of interest by some of the Sammys.

Chartered in 1959, Sigma Alpha Mu is one of the youngest fraternities on campus. Although busy founding the traditions and customs within their own group, the Sammys still found time for many outside activities. These include Homecoming, Greek Week, Jr. 500, IM sports and Water Carnival.

Last Spring, the brothers turned their parking lot into a carwash runway for the annual "Sammy Scrub." The proceeds from the project went to charity.

Recognizing the need for scholastic excellence among Greeks, the men of Sigma Alpha Mu award a scholastic plaque each year to the pledge class with the highest grade-point.

Fall term started off at an unusual pace as the Sigma Chi's sponsored an all-university "TGIF" party in their parking lot.

Social events enjoyed by Sigma Chi men are an annual "Dad's Day," a "Playboy" party, and their nationally known "Sweetheart Ball." The local sweetheart is named to national competition.

Sigma Chi's take active participation in numerous campus events. Included in this year's agenda were Homecoming, Water Carnival, Greek Week, and IM sports.

A "tape bug" and a couple of musically inclined brothers is all that's necessary for an informal Sigma Chi recording session.

The men of Sigma Nu spent an active year both scholastically and socially. Their annual White Rose formal was held spring term, and with the men of Alpha Tau Omega, they co-sponsored the annual Blackfoot-Whitefoot Ball.

Always ardent supporters of the IM athletic program, the Snakes walked away with first place honors in all-university touch football. They also entered teams in other sports.

Organized locally in 1934, the men of Sigma Nu performed their service function by making a donation to an orphanage.

They also entered Homecoming, Water Carnival and Greek Week competition.

The men of Sigma Phi Epsilon started off the year by moving into new headquarters, located on Sunset Drive. Many frustrating but enjoyable hours have been spent on reconditioning the house's interior and exterior and adding the finishing touches.

A unique member of the Sig Ep household is "Sparty", an overgrown replica of the Spartan statue's head. "Sparty", supported by one of the brothers, can be seen a mile away as he enthusiastically cheers the MSU football team off to victory.

Sigma Phi Epsilon members take an active part in various campus and IFC events. The fraternity also contributes to the support of two service organizations, Underprivileged Boys' Camps and the National Heart Fund.

Theta Chi

The pool table in the house recreation room helps the Theta Chi's keep a steady hand and a sharp eye.

If the men of Theta Chi continue to win the IFC Sing much longer, a new award will have to be established for other houses: first place excluding Theta Chi. The house has every first place trophy awarded since 1954 for the annual songfest.

When fire gutted the Phi Kappa Psi house across the street last spring, the Theta Chi house became temporary headquarters for both houses.

The Theta Chi's have also proven their talent for designing displays. At the Homecoming Game, the fraternity copped the first-place award.

Triangle fraternity offers men of similar backgrounds and interests an opportunity to share in social and athletic, as well as professional, activities. Chartered at MSU in 1955, the men of Triangle are all majors in engineering, architecture, mathematics, physics or chemistry.

The future engineers at Triangle sewed up a first-place award in Homecoming display competition, and a service award from the Engineering Council. All three Triangle pledge classes walked off with top honors scholastically in 1961. The group also takes part in IFC, Water Carnival and IM sports.

The men treated a group of Orphans to an afternoon of Big Ten football at the MSU-Illinois game as part of their service program.

Slip-sticks and parabolas are not the only things that the men of Triangle understand.

ZBT

Zeta Beta Tau

Some Zebe's relax in one of the rooms in their luxurious house before tackling evening homework.

The Greeks of Zeta Beta Tau have appropriately supported a Greek orphan for two years. They are the only social fraternity in the country which sponsors such a project.

Athletic prowess in the Zebe house is evidenced by the addition of three new trophies. ZBT teams copped the all-university baseball, bowling and ping pong cups last year.

In addition to these activities, the house entered Homecoming and Water Carnival competition, and the remaining IM sports.

To round out their service program, the men of ZBT aided the national Easter Seal campaign by giving their time and support.

Like all Greek organizations, the members of professional fraternities get a taste of the responsibilities of home maintenance.

Professional fraternities afford students the opportunity to live, work and learn with other men who aspire to the same career. They unite men of similar professional interests in order to allow them to mix their social and academic pursuits.

Three professional fraternities are chartered at MSU. Several other houses are made up of men primarily engaged in a specific course of study, or in a combination of courses. All of them maintain chapter houses in the East Lansing area.

The major advantage of these groups is in their opportunity to specialize in their activities. And through these projects and programs the members receive valuable professional training and practical experience as well as enjoying the fellowship of good friends.

Two members of Delta Sigma Pi make artistic contributions to the annual professional fraternity rush.

ALPHA CHI SIGMA

When the men of Alpha Chi Sigma manage to escape their books, they take great pleasure in the fraternal life. But for the most part, the minds of the members are happily occupied with elements and experiments. Five terms of chemistry are required for membership in Alpha Chi Sigma fraternity.

It seems that the emphasis on the books has paid off for the members, for the group consistently ranks high in fraternity scholarship competition.

DELTA SIGMA PI

The men of Delta Sigma Pi, professional business and social fraternity, sold their house during the summer, and spent a good deal of the year making plans to acquire another one. They took special caution, however, not to lose contact with each other by living in groups of four or five in off-campus housing.

The members visited the Oldsmobile parts and service warehouse Fall term on one of their frequent field trips. Their annual Rose Dance was held winter term, and a Rose Queen crowned to represent them in university queen contests.

Music is the primary interest in common with the brothers of Phi Mu Alpha and many music sessions result.

The men of Phi Mu Alpha have one great interest in common: a serious interest in music. Most of the members are music majors. The purpose of this fraternity, a national professional music fraternity, is to advance the cause of music in America.

One of the activities undertaken last year by Phi Mu Alpha was a concert given for the Michigan School for the Blind in Lansing.

During the past year several MSU music professors spoke to the Phi Mu Alphas. Professor Leonard Falcone, director of the Marching Band, and Professor Byron Autry shared their musical knowledge with the men.

The MSU Chapter of Phi Mu Alpha was founded in 1938 and is part of the National Professional Music Fraternity.

SORORITIES

From the frenzy of rush, to the proud pleasure of wearing a pledge pin, to the flushed satisfaction of formal initiation, sorority life at MSU is filled with excitement and activities.

The traffic rush at 1:00 A.M. on weekend nights may be a bit lighter at the sorority houses than at the dorms, and the rooms a bit larger, but the challenge and responsibility of sorority membership to most coeds are the close friendship and unity which are fostered by weekly meetings, song practices and frequent hen sessions.

The governing body of sororities is Pan-Hellenic Council, and sororities comply with the same AWS rules and obligations to which all coed living units agree. Freshmen begin rushing fall term by attending teas at all 28 houses on two consecutive weekends, and continue winter term to narrow down their choices in a series of teas and desserts.

It doesn't take long to wash a car when a group of Kappa Delta's all chip in to help a sister out.

A sister's new Fall suit receives admiring approval from her A Chi O critics.

Entertaining Lansing area children afflicted with Cerebral Palsy is the Alpha Chi Omega philanthropic project. Each year the coeds sponsor a party for these youngsters.

Campus activities included on the sorority's agenda were: Homecoming, Water Carnival, Jr. 500, Greek Week and Sorority Sing.

After working all evening on their Homecoming display, the A Chi O's were awakened at four in the morning to cries of "fire!" The flames were hardly extinguished before work had begun on another display.

The chance to go Christmas shopping was given to crippled children in the local area by the women of Alpha Delta Pi early in December. They took the children around to the local stores to buy gifts for their parents.

Breakfast was an unusually social meal for the Alpha Dels this year. The juniors in the house gave the seniors a breakfast in May, and in the fall the house sponsored a Buddy Breakfast, when each girl invited a friend from campus on a Saturday morning.

The two outstanding parties of the year were the annual term party in May with its traditional Southern cotillion theme, and a house party Fall term, entitled "La Rive Gauch" for its left bank atmosphere.

Alpha Epsilon Phi

An A E Phi that sits down at the piano soon finds herself surrounded by vocalizing sisters.

The local chapter of Alpha Epsilon Phi was organized at MSU in 1952, one of 44 chapters throughout the country.

For the second consecutive year the Alpha Epsilon Phi's won the Greek Week Participation Trophy for their co-operation in activities such as sorority sing, the Greek service project and Greek Feast.

This year the philanthropic project of the Alpha Epsilon Phi's centered around the collection of Dolls for Democracy.

Beides taking part in all campus activities, the AE-Phi's also had the usual round of term parties and dances.

The singing girls from Alpha Gam did it again last spring — they took the first place trophy in Sorority Sing for the fourth year in a row. Putting their good voices to year-round use, they sang in the Christmas Vespers Service again in December along with the men of Theta Chi.

These coeds support many campus activities, and placed third in Water Carnival competition last spring. They also work on homecoming, play IM sports and participate in Greek Week.

Each Saturday the Alpha Gams swam with a group of children from the Lansing School for the Blind. They also sponsor a fund raising project, the proceeds from which go for a party for a group of crippled children. This year the girls washed sixty cars in their parking lot for the project.

Alpha Kappa Alpha

The ritualistic handshake is demonstrated to the members of Alpha Kappa Alpha as they prepare for their Spring Rush.

Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, founded in 1954, has as its main purpose the goal of extending service to mankind. These coeds participate in various national programs, including the American Council on Human Rights, the National Health Program with its emphasis on finding a cure for Sickle Cell Anemia, the NAACP, Scholarship and Foreign Fellowship, and the National Housing Project.

The Alpha Kappa Alpha women brought in two firsts in campus competition. One honor was the highest donorship in the blood drive, among sororities, and in the Jr. 500 these girls found themselves "ahead by a mile." Talent and well-trained voices won for these coeds third place in the annual Sorority Sing.

The AKA girls have to dispose of their business duties at weekly meetings, but there is always time for socializing after.

Alpha Omicron Pi

The women of Alpha Omicron Pi tried a bit of sophisticated apple-polishing at a special faculty tea which they held Fall term. Honored guests were the deans, officers in men's and women's divisions, and the instructors of the A O Pi members.

The group participated in many all-campus events, such as Water Carnival, Sorority Sing, and IM Sports. They took second place among sororities in Homecoming competition Fall term.

The A O Pi's also spend a great deal of time in philanthropy projects. They sponsor a frontier nursing service in Kentucky, and raised money for the home at a card party Fall term.

The privilege of being able to play bridge to the background music of one of the sisters is afforded A O Pi's.

A ukulele is all that is needed to start a song session among the Alpha Phi's.

Coeds at the Alpha Phi house enjoy working on their national and local service projects. On the national level the sorority gave aid to people afflicted with Cardiac disease, and the girls helped support and entertained the children of a local underprivileged family.

Every year during sorority rush, an object of much admiration is the fascinating winding staircase at the Phi house.

The girls energetically participated in numerous campus activities, including Homecoming, Junior 500, Water Carnival, and Intramural sports.

The girls treated their fathers to a day of relaxation and entertainment during their Dads' Day celebration fall term. Included on the day's agenda was a delicious meal and the excitement of an afternoon football game.

Almost better than winning the Homecoming game for the Alpha Xi's was coming in first place among sororities in display competition. These coeds had worked into the wee hours putting on final touches, but that big new trophy more than compensated for the loss of sleep.

The women of Alpha Xi Delta spend much of their spare time working on service projects. Last spring they took a group of orphans to the circus when it came to Lansing, and they also contribute toward their national philanthropy project, juvenile delinquency. One of the group usually spends her summer working at Howell Settlement House in Chicago.

The Alpha Xi's participate in a variety of campus activities, including Water Carnival, Sorority Sing, and IM sports. They took third place in bowling Fall term.

Alpha Xi Delta

The Alpha Xi's are the proud owners of an electric organ and enjoy gathering around it for informal song sessions.

Active workers in many campus activities, the Chi O's prepare some publicity for the J-Hop.

The talent and ingenuity of the Chi Omega's brought them a first place in the Homecoming display contest and another first in the Floriculture Forum Show. Adding music to their list of skills, the coeds also captured fourth place in the annual Sorority Sing.

Chi Omega's were selected, this year, for the Engineering, Sigma Chi and Delta Chi "Sweetheart" Courts. They were also active in extra-curricular activities, participating in most campus events.

One policy practiced consistently by the Tri-Delts is philanthropy. Each year the sorority awards one local scholarship to a deserving person showing outstanding academic ability.

Those who live in the Tri-Delt house enjoy the many warm friendships and the companionship of group activities. Girls who own guitars have become popular among the sisters who sing.

Last year the volleyball trophy and the all-sports trophy went to the Delta Delta Delta's. They also participated in the Jr. 500, Sorority Sing, and Water Carnival.

The flag-stone steps of the Tri-Delt house are very attractive but cause several backaches during spring clean-up.

Delta Gamma sorority spent the year engaged in numerous efforts on their national service project, the blind. They worked through the Sight Conservation and Aid to the Blind, read to blind students on Campus and shared their Christmas spirit by celebrating with students from the Michigan School for the Blind.

A scholarship award given by the local alumnae was presented to the chapter for the fourth consecutive year.

An annual award, "Outstanding Junior," was also bestowed on a member. Another award, known as the "Anchor Man" award, is bestowed on a man from campus each year by the sorority. It is presented to the man chosen as most helpful to the sorority at their annual Anchor Ball.

A key word among Delta Zeta's is "service". These girls contribute to Gallaudet College, the only school of higher learning for deaf mutes in the United States, and to the Michigan Association for Better Hearing.

Once a month the DZ's give their time to assist at the Bogue Nursing Home located in Lansing. At Carville Hospital in Louisiana, a hospital for Hansen's Disease, they are supporting an elderly man. An annual Christmas party is given for underprivileged children in the Lansing area.

Every year the DZ's join with Phi Kappa Psi and Theta Chi fraternities to sponsor their annual Triad Dance.

Gamma Phi Beta

The latest in ski fashions is admired by the friends of a well-dressed Gamma Phi sister.

Nursing bruised shins and other battle scars, the fighting sisters of Gamma Phi Beta left the field of the annual Powderpuff Bowl in glorious victory for the fourth straight year. Coached and cheered on by the men of Beta Theta Pi, the Gamma Phi Eleven has become known as a team to be reckoned with. They entertained their dads after the game at a victory luncheon.

The Gamma Phi's also cooperate in a service program. The chapter sponsors a foster child in Korea and contributes to a home for underprivileged children. They also took second place in the Blood Drive.

To encourage academic achievement, their alums award a scholarship prize to the girl with the highest academic average.

Scholarship is a prime concern of the Kappa Alpha Thetas. In recognition of their scholastic achievements, they received the National Kappa Alpha Theta Scholarship Award and the MSU PanHel scholarship trophy.

The Thetas support the Institute of Logopedics in Wichita, Kan., and devote considerable time to an annual Christmas project for the underprivileged.

Not only do these coeds compete successfully for many queen's courts, but they claimed the coveted queen's position in the Jr. 500. Their musical talent captured them a second place in the annual Sorority Sing.

Two Thetas are doubtful about the warmth afforded by the costume of a skating sister despite its aesthetic values.

Kappa Delta

Two KD's review their class notes briefly before leaving the house for a morning exam.

Each fall Kappa Delta plays hostess when they hold their all-Greek Open House after one of the football games. The girls also treat their fathers to luncheon and a football game each season.

Another house tradition is the bridge tournament held every Spring term.

Besides being active in many campus events, the KD's are interested in blind children as their philanthropic project. They entertain the children at the Michigan School for the Blind each term. They also help to support the Crippled Children's Hospital in Richmond, Virginia.

Kappa Kappa Gamma

Kappa Kappa Gamma alumni were welcomed back this year at Homecoming by an MSU victory and a Kappa prize — the coeds build a third place display.

Last spring one speed-crazed sister steered her backers on to a third place victory in the Junior 500. The women of Kappa Kappa Gamma take part in Sorority Sing, Water Carnival, and intramural sports, and emerged in second place in swimming competition last year.

Kappa members stress service by assisting at the rehabilitation center in Okemos throughout the year.

Individual members have brought honor to the Kappa's by being chosen to reign as Harvest Ball Queen, and representatives on the Homecoming, Jr. 500 and Sigma Chi courts. Members of Mortar Board and Tower Guard also wear the familiar key.

Probably nothing gets more use at the Kappa house than the telephone, which is busy the larger part of each day.

A Bridge Game on the floor begins to take shape when one Phi Mu realizes that she has just the card she needs to play.

Founded locally in 1955, the Phi Mu house is the second newest sorority at MSU. The members have steadily founded traditions and built up a program of activities both within the house and on campus.

The Phi Mu's participated in Sorority Sing, Greek Feast, Junior 500, Water Carnival, Homecoming and the annual Turkey Trot.

In addition, they spend much of their spare time working with the Lansing Child Guidance Clinic.

In the spring the coeds honored their mothers at a special Mothers' Ceremony held during Parents' Weekend.

Pi Beta Phi

Keeping the house scrapbook up to date requires the constant attention of several members of Pi Beta Phi.

One of the big events of the year for the Pi Phi's was their part in opening the Christmas Season with their traditional Christmas Tree Lighting ceremony. Joining with them in the ceremony and in caroling afterwards were the brothers of Delta Tau Delta. The occasion was afforded a special atmosphere when two orphan children were chosen to do the actual tree lighting.

The sorority's annual Dads' Day was held on the date of the Northwestern football game. The Dads were treated to an afternoon at the game and a dinner at the sorority house.

The girls of the Pi Beta Phi House are continuing to sponsor a Settlement School in Tennessee, which they founded.

A raid on the refrigerator provides some Sigma Kappa's with a mid-afternoon snack.

Working with the Ingham County Rehabilitation Center was the local service project of Sigma Kappa this year. The girls visited old people's homes and brightened their holidays by making tray favors.

Last spring Sigma Kappa took first place in the Water Carnival; this year they sponsored a Father's Day, Mother's Day, and a Christmas party. A dinner was given during Fall term to honor those members who achieved exceptional scholarship.

An especially unusual meal is the annual turn-about dinner, where the girls serve the bus boys.

A helping hand isn't difficult to find in the Zeta Tau Alpha house. The girls, throughout the year, contributed to the Cerebral Palsy Foundation; on Valentine's Day they held a party for handicapped children; they also contribute to the ZTA Foundation Scholarship fund for deserving members and non-members.

When not bidding to ease the lives of the handicapped, the Zeta Tau's are bidding (usually according to Goren) at bridge, one of the favorite pastimes among the coeds.

Originality and exaggeration are reflected at the Zeta Tau house as the coeds prepare for a costume party.

CO-OPS & RELIGIOUS LIVING UNITS

Dinner time at Asher Student Foundation for Women, the only religious living unit for women at MSU, is a popular time for small group discussions as well as for the excellent food.

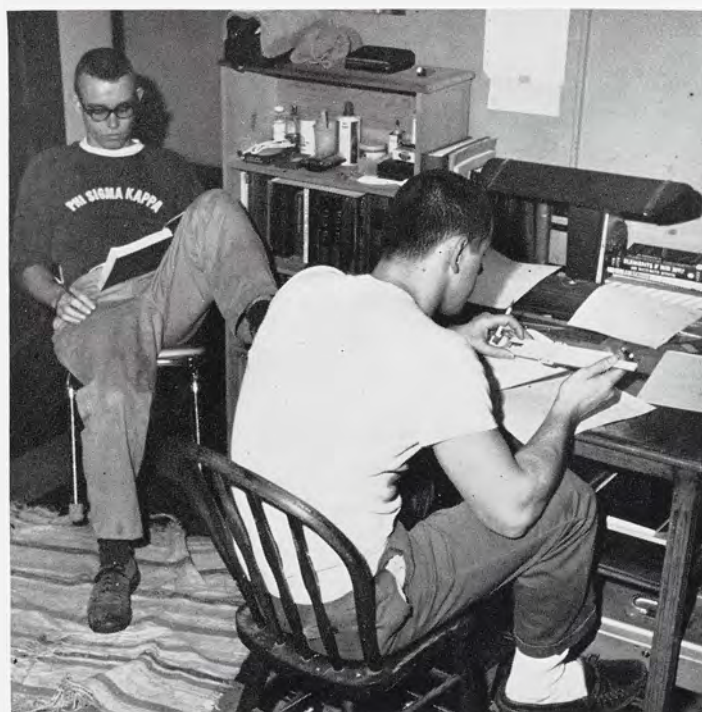

The co-operative houses of Michigan State serve as home for almost 300 students. Membership in any of the seven co-ops is open to any male student who is accepted by the members. The only other requirement is a 2.2 all-university grade point average.

The average cost of living in the co-ops is $150 per term plus four and one-half hours of work a week. For this, members receive both room and board. In some instances, kitchen privileges are also granted. All co-op members take an active part in the social and extra-curricular life on campus.

Studying by open discussion has its advantages and some of the members of Bethel Manor get the most out of it.

Bower House Co-op, religious living unit for men, provides ample study space for its residents.

Cooking for the other residents is only one of the household duties that MSU men living in co-ops must take his turn at.

The only difference between most religious living units and the co-ops is a denominational homogeneity within the house. The fellowship of shared work is augmented by similarity of faith. Often the residents of religious living units are active in their respective student religious organizations.

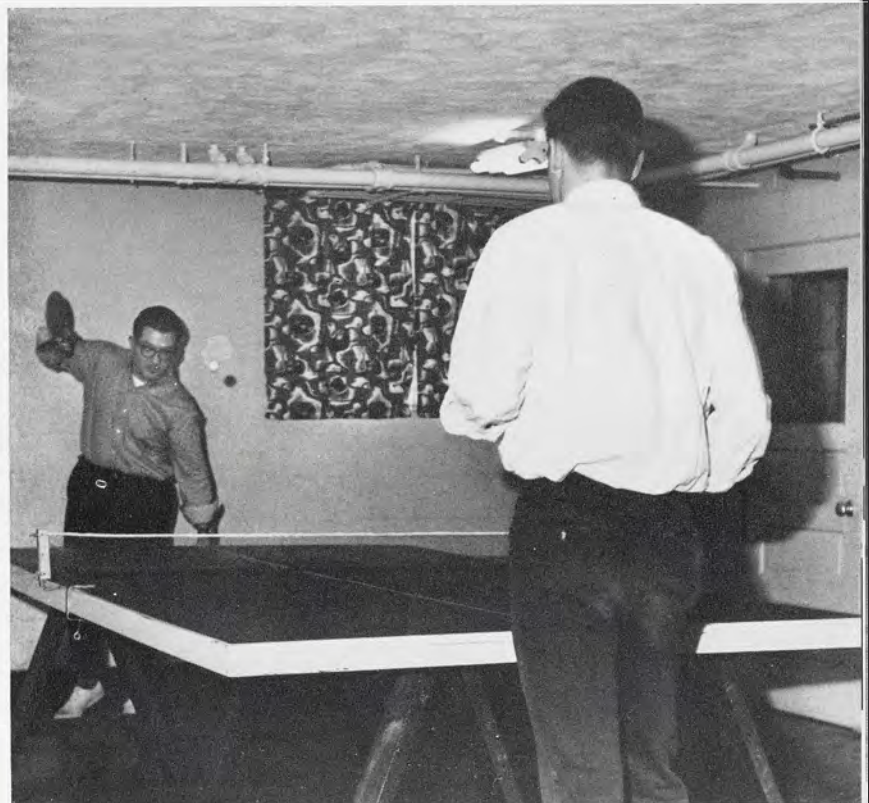

Here again, however, the close friendships which emerge from all types of communal living in a university atmosphere are the sine qua non of these groups also.

The Evans Scholars sponsor an All-University Golf Day every Spring term. The living unit is composed of former golf caddies.

Members of the co-op living units are often called upon for the maintenance and repair of their units.

Many of the co-operatives have "built-in" entertainment centers such as this ping pong set.

In spring a young man's fancy turns to . . . yard cleaning, raking and general preparations for warmer weather.

Informal discussions often involve a serious religious note at the Asher Student Foundation for Women.

The last five minutes before dinner sometimes produce ten minutes' worth of finishing-touch work.

A strong and deep understanding of the principles of the Christian Scientist faith is sought by the women of Asher House. The 23 women have elected cooperative living with others of their faith as a means of strengthening this understanding.

The group places strong emphasis on academic activities and were awarded a scholarship plaque by their advisory board for maintaining a house average above a three point.

Putting their best foot forward, a group of Asher Women, called the Asher Barbettes, did their stuff in the Union Board Talent Show.

Asher Student Foundation for Men provides a home for Christian Scientists who are attending MSU.

Each year the men give a Christmas party for underprivileged children. Also, prospective members sponsor a community service project.

Asher House men are also active on campus: they participate in Water Carnival, Homecoming and intramural sports. Last Spring they placed second in the Junior 500 race to round out a successful year.

ASHER MEN

Study space and study time are both at a high premium at the Asher house when mid-terms loom large.

A rack of magazines thoughtfully placed near a group of easy chairs is a popular spot in the Asher House for Men.

BETHEL MANOR

The student center at Bethel Manor provides a place for men of all religious denominations to live together and work together in developing Christian character, spiritual brotherhood and a sense of leadership.

Besides giving a home to these men, Bethel Manor serves as the student center for Spartan Christian Fellowship, a co-educational group of MSU students.

BOWER HOUSE

The experiences of living in a co-op have taught the men of Bower House to share the work as well as the fun of college. This type of living unit also has provided a way for many men to reduce the financial burden of higher education.

Extending the practice of team housework to athletics, Bower House participated in many IM sports. Other popular activities are exchange dinners throughout the year, and a term party.

EVANS SCHOLARS

Last year the Intramural Golf Championship went to the men of Evans Scholars Co-op. This is not at all unusual, though, for an interest in golf is one requirement for admittance to Evans Scholars. In addition, those selected must be from the top quarter of their high school graduating class and have caddied for two years at a Western Golf Association Club.

The Evans Scholars Co-op is one of several in the Big Ten and was begun in 1955 at MSU. The purpose of those in Evans Scholars is to allow worthy students with an interest in golf to be able to attend college. All who are in Evans Scholars receive their tuition and housing free.

ELSWORTH HOUSE

The Men of Elsworth House stubbornly refused to relinquish the ICC Scholarship trophy last year. They took first place scholastic honors all three terms, and have possessed the coveted award for 16 consecutive terms.

The Elsworth men are not dour-faced intellectuals, however. They received the "most humorous entry" award in the Jr. 500.

HEDRICK HOUSE

Hedrick House is a fine example of "Democracy In Action". The men work together to provide for themselves inexpensive living on a cooperative basis.

They are active in both varsity and intramural sports and other campus activities. The men won first place for Independent Homecoming Display and first place in blood donorship for the 1961 Blood Drive.

HOWLAND HOUSE

Howland House provides an economical way to obtain room and board for men with a 2.2 grade average and a willingness to work with forty fellow members.

The men are intramural-minded, competing in football, basketball, bowling and softball. They won the championship in softball in spring of '61.

MOTTS HOUSE

The men in Motts demonstrated their athletic prowess by winning both the football and basketball co-op division championships last year. Besides these achievements, they participated in other intramural sports, Homecoming, and gave a "Man of the Year" award to the outstanding member of the house. A spring picnic was also held with the alumni.

The scene is 7:30 a.m. on a weekday morning. Mr. MSU—which stands for married students' units as well as Michigan State University—is gulping down his last cup of coffee before his eight o'clock in Berkey. Mrs. MSU washes the cup before she drives him to his class, and then starts working on her own degree. It's called a PHT—Putting Hubby Thru—and it meets in the outer office of a department head.

While all this is going on, MSU Junior is preparing for his daily trek to the Red Cedar grade school.

All activity is reversed at Noon, when the family members come rushing back to the apartment for a co-operative lunch, and then the morning rush is relived.

In spite of the fact that the married apartments offer a good study atmosphere, most residents spend some time in the Library.

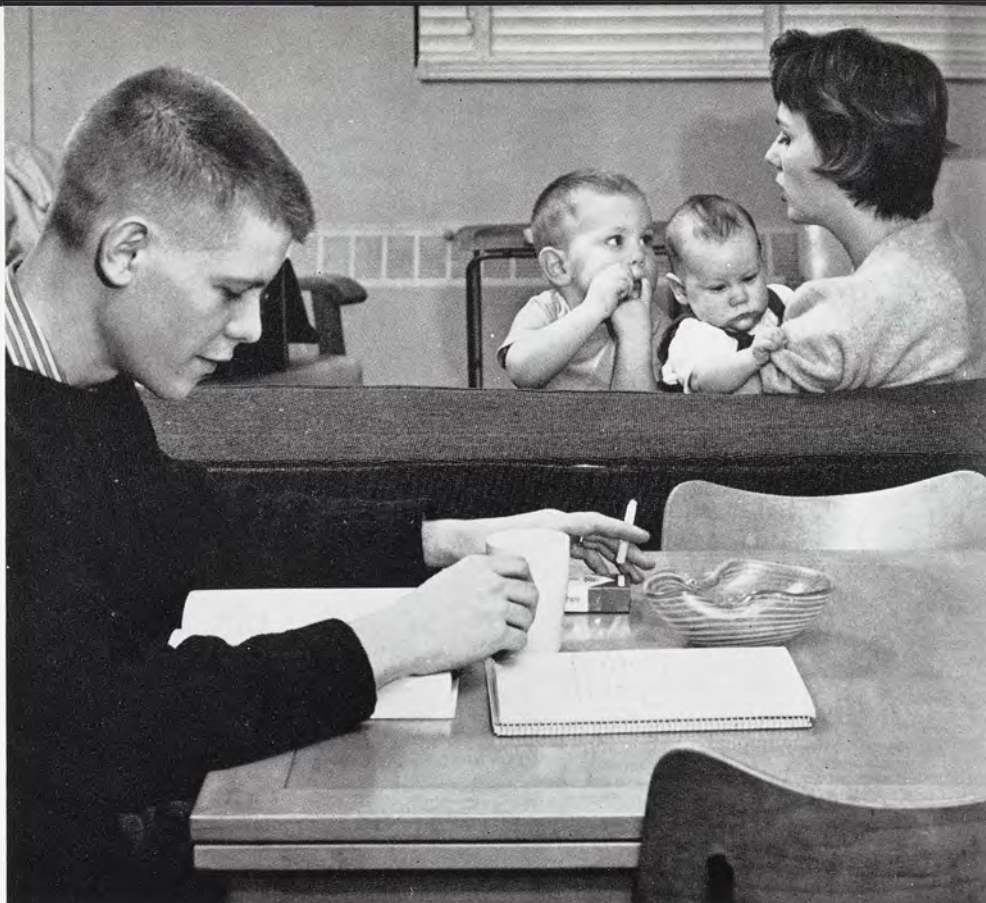

MARRIED HOUSING

The Spartan Village living blocs provide the residents with a sense of privacy, but also provide very close neighbors.

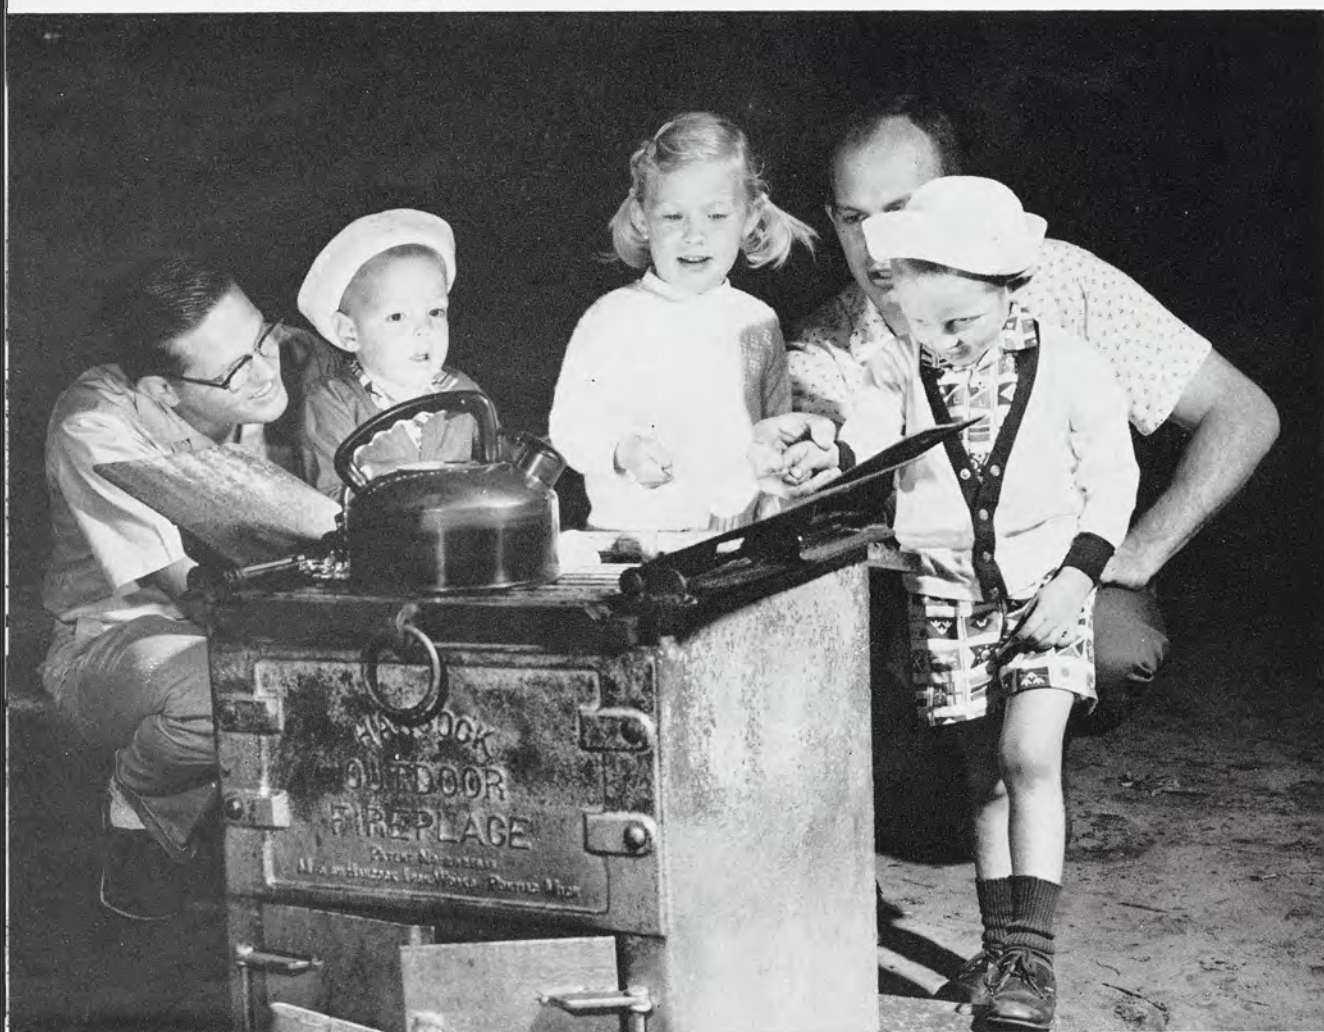

Daddy digs out a snow drift to make a cave for these delighted youngsters.

In the evening, the father of the family has studies to attend to, but mother has her hands full, too.

Roasting marshmallows over an outdoor fireplace in one of the Lansing parks on a Sunday evening is popular with married students and their children.

MSU Suburbia, whether it goes under the name of Spartan Village, Cherry Lane Apartments, or University Village, is the hometown of almost 2,000 children and their parents. These furnished red brick apartments and the more than 6,000 people living in them, have become a very special kind of community.

Like others living in small communities everywhere, MSU married students are concerned with the health and welfare of their family, the upkeep of their home, the condition of their car, and the elasticity of their budget. But, unlike other communities, when Dad rushed to his car in the morning it was not because he was late getting to the office, but because he was late for his eight o'clock at Berkey Hall.

Like other college students, the nearly 2,300 married students are concerned with instructor, term papers and grades. But unlike unmarried students, they are also concerned with fixing formulas and helping get the kids off to school before they go themselves.

A weekend evening in one of the apartments is spent by inviting the neighbors over for a card game.

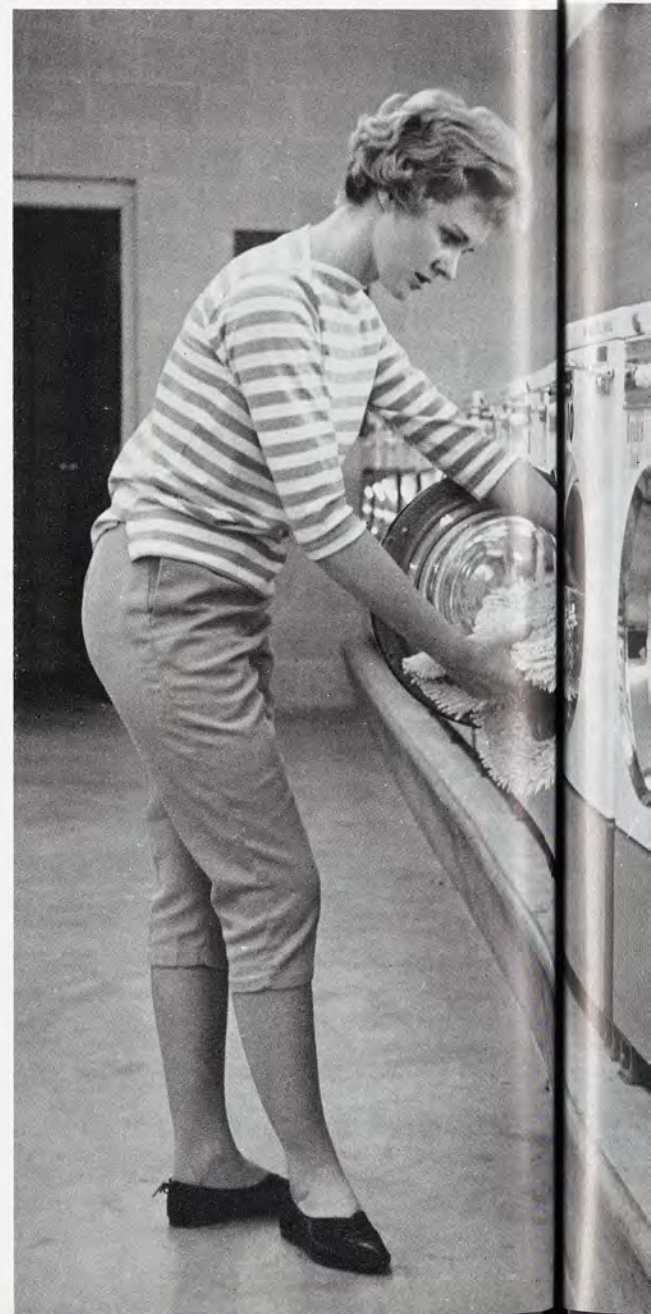

The conditions surrounding C. W. Mills' "white collar worker" and MSU's married student are surprisingly the same—a young married couple with a growing family, a small home in a residential neighborhood away from the city, traffic to fight in the morning and at night, and the many problems that concern all newly-married couples.

Those who reside in the MSU version of Suburbia, however, also have a problem that is shared by all college students, wherever they may live. This problem is characterized by textbooks and exams, and is commonly known as "grades."

Street lights receive a protective coat of paint in preparation for winter weather.

Each apartment unit includes coin-operated laundry facilities.

Children of students living in married housing have no trouble finding playmates.

Next door neighbors in married housing are often each other's hair stylists.

The morning visit by the milkman is very important to a couple of his best customers.

Although each of the furnished apartments follows the same basic floor pattern, and although each comes complete with wall-to-wall carpeting, and a fully equipped kitchen, the similarity between apartments ends at the front door.

Every apartment soon becomes an expression of the occupant's personality and individuality—personality seen in an elaborate hi-fi outfit, in personal paintings decorating the walls, or a living room filled with bookcases. The idea of conformity currently being tagged to the concept of American suburbia has little chance of catching on in Michigan State married housing.

The unit mail boxes are a popular mid-morning gathering place for short conversations among some wives.

Halloween is an important time for the kids living in the married housing units and this group brought their own accompanist.

The women of one apartment remove a morning snowfall.

Two biology majors in the class of 1980 examine a specimen.

A family snowball fight finds mom in a strategic position.

Grandma snaps a family graduation portrait.

MSU can indeed be proud, not only of the living facilities it provides for its married students, but of the opportunity it gives these same students to experience true community living while earning college degrees.

A black and white photograph of a family shopping in a grocery store. A man in a dark coat is pushing a shopping cart filled with groceries, including bags of chips and boxes of cereal. A woman in a light-colored coat stands behind the cart, smiling. A young boy is sitting in the cart, and a young girl is standing next to it, holding a bag of chips. The shelves in the background are stocked with various food items, including bread, cereal, and canned goods.

A car is an important luxury to many off-campus students who have to depend on it for transportation to and from campus.

OFF-CAMPUS LIVING

Thousands of Spartans met the challenge of off-campus living this year. Approximately 7,000 students, or 35 percent of the student body, made their "home away from home" in an off-campus dwelling. Those who waited until the beginning of Fall term to rent a roof over their heads found the competition keen.

As individuals and groups they rented rooms or apartments. Occasionally friends would join forces and rent a house.

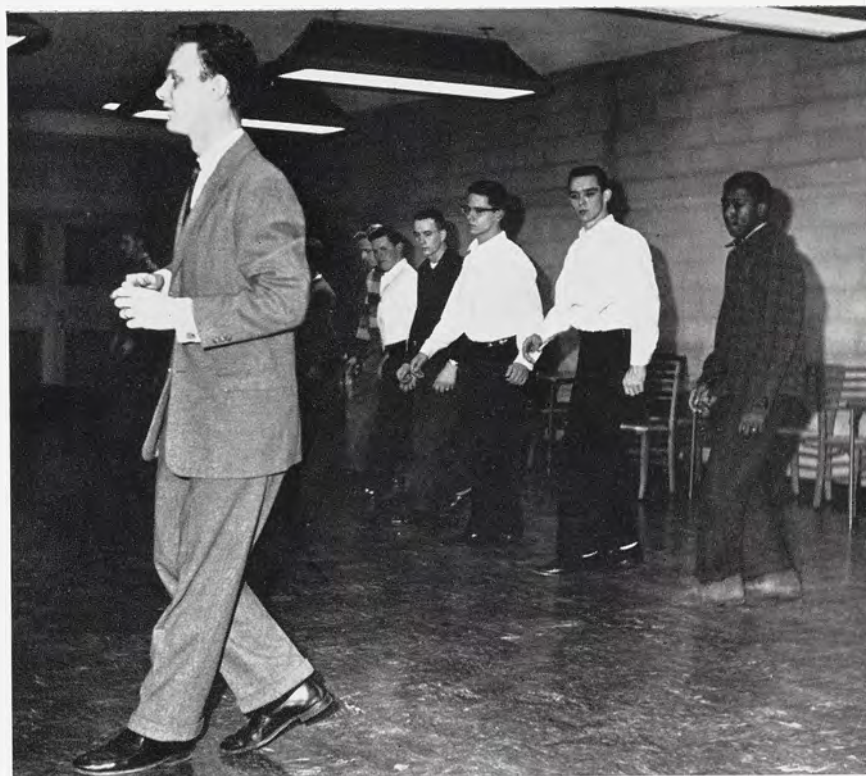

The big question which faced students interested in off-campus housing was an old one: "Shall we live in approved or unapproved housing?"

Approved housing applies to those landlords who request the university to inspect their units and judge whether they comply with standards the university recommends. Students of Sophomore standing are eligible to live in approved housing.

Unapproved housing is not as derogatory a term as it may sound. It simply means that the owners have not requested the university to make an inspection of their premises. In many cases these homes meet all the requirements for approved housing.

The age limit for unapproved housing is 25 for male or female unmarried students. Single male students over 21 may live in approved unsupervised housing. Students voiced considerable dissatisfaction with these eligibility requirements last fall, and a student-faculty committee was appointed to investigate solutions to housing problems off campus.

Off campus students proved to be a true cross section of university life. Over 2,000 of them were married, while 1,700 lived at home in nearby communities and commuted to the campus each day.

The Students Off Campus organization sponsored dance instruction for all interested students, Winter term.

The traffic light at the corner of Harrison and Kalamazoo directs hundreds of autos through the intersection daily, many of them coming in from off campus.

An off-campus student is studied carefully by the house pet.

During Spring Vacation, MSU students scatter all over the country: from the Mountains of Vermont to the crowded beaches of Ft. Lauderdale.

Some of the off-campus students living in the country have horses that provide a relaxing weekend.

Dish duty isn't cancelled by a telephone call in off-campus housing where each resident has to take a share of the duties.

The university maintains a housing office and counselors for the convenience of students. Landlords may place their names on lists of approved and unapproved facilities, and students use these lists as house-hunting guides.

An off-campus student's association brings this large and loosely-knit body of students together at social functions, and organizes athletic teams and other activities. The big reason, however, that many students move off-campus is to avoid organization and gain more privacy than the communal living of dormitories and Greek organizations afford.

Off campus living also can be a budget-stretcher and offers experience in keeping up with rent payments and realizing the responsibilities which accompany the right of privacy.

A game of Back-jack at the Students' Off Campus term party saw a large turnover of play cash.

MSA GRADUATES

*General MacArthur delivered the commencement challenge to the Class of 1961 on a warm, sunny June afternoon.
With his words still ringing in their ears,
the graduates left East Lansing
for Fort Bliss, Texas, and for IBM training programs and for Northwestern Law School and from the altar of the Alumni Chapel.*

The senior class sponsors it, but 400 students from all classes petition for it, and well over 300 of them work on it. Men's living units bid for their coed dorm and sorority partners as early as fall term, although it doesn't take place until late spring term. Students begin work on it in parkas and mufflers, and finish wearing bermudas and T-shirts. It ends on three spring evenings, and it's called Water Carnival.

The 1961 Water Carnival beat the yearly odds game of one night in three being rained out, although many "doubters" showed up carrying umbrellas. The carnival was headed by general chairman Arnie Roberts, who cut the red ribbon stretched across the Red Cedar to allow the first floats to glide by. Governor John B. Swainson officially opened the pageant.

The theme was "Only Yesterday," taken from the book written by Frederick Lewis Allen. Highlighting the wild era of raccoon coats, bathtub gin and speak-easy's, the 1920's, Delta Tau Delta and Sigma Kappa captured the coveted firstplace.

Each year the seniors have to go to the Union Bookstore for head, chest and height measurements for that cap and gown.

SENIOR ACTIVITIES

Many students from all classes and representing various living units and Greeks participate in the annual Water Carnival sponsored by the Senior Class.

A big part of the senior year is the name carving in one of the tables set aside for this purpose in Old College Hall.

General Douglas MacArthur.

For twenty minutes they filed into the stadium by fours in the warm June afternoon sunlight. They hadn't been together at a single time since the first day of Welcome Week when they were freshmen. Now they were assembled for the last time.

They stood along with the others in their college when it came time for the degrees to be conferred. They sat and listened as General Douglas MacArthur spoke, and then they filed out to go four thousand separate ways.

More than last year would go on to graduate school; it looked like fewer would go directly into the Armed Forces, but Berlin changed all that. Some would begin working, and many from this group would have June weddings.

Spartan Stadium was the scene of June Commencement. The large bowl was turned into a colorful display of flowers, flags and mortar boards.

General MacArthur, surrounded by administrators and geraniums, gave a commencement message that was well received.

George Romney addressed the graduates at Winter Commencement held in the Auditorium.

Larry Osterink finds himself in the spotlight as he has his senior pictures taken for the Wolverine by the Delma photographer.

It was an exciting year right from the first realization of being a senior, the yearbook portrait. It had been filled with interviews at the Placement Bureau, with Senior Night at the Gables, with ordering that cap and gown. But the best was still ahead. Senior Week is when the University pauses to honor her graduating seniors.

Each year, on the Sunday preceding commencement, 50 outstanding senior women are honored at Lantern Night. Previously the living units of these women have been serenaded, and a lantern left to mark their presence. At Lantern Night, after a colorful procession by coeds from each class, the names of these women are revealed and the "light of responsibility" is passed to the underclassmen.

During Senior Swingout, the next big event, seniors dressed in caps and gowns gather in front of their respective colleges, and, led by the marching band, march to Fairchild Theatre for Class Night.

Many seniors meet in the Alumni Memorial Chapel for marriage immediately after graduation.

Air Force General Laurence Kuter, Commander of NORAD, North American Defense Command, was the guest speaker at the annual Air Science-Military Science Spring Commissioning.

President and Mrs. John A. Hannah host the Senior reception in Cowles House each Spring term.

Always a big part of the senior year, are the many interviews with prospective employers in the Placement Bureau.

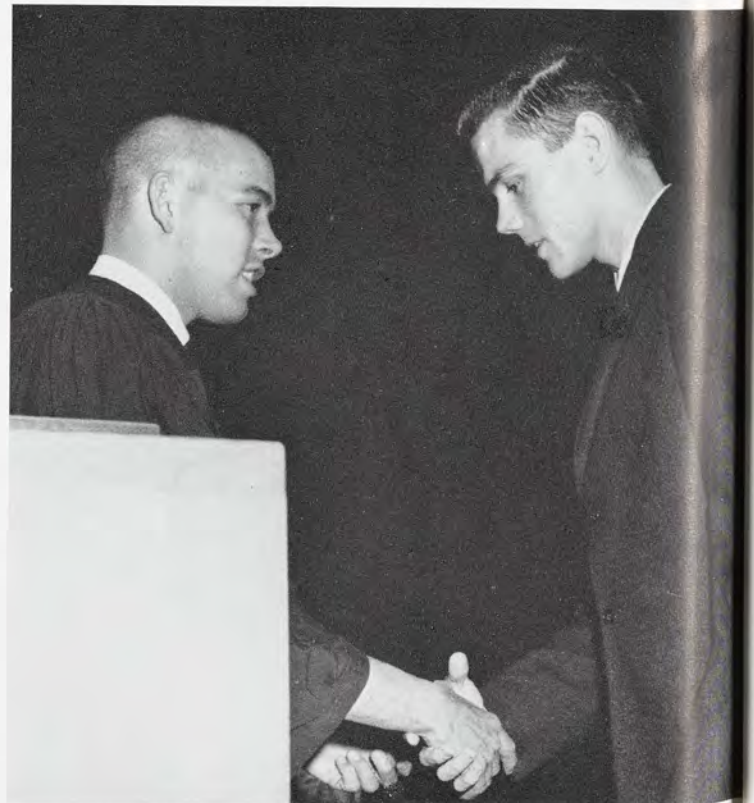

To honor those graduating seniors who have excelled scholastically, Honors College held a special breakfast during senior week. Three out of four who attended this breakfast will continue their education either at MSU or another institution.

On the day before commencement, the advanced Air Force and Army ROTC cadets received their commissions in an impressive military ceremony.

President and Mrs. Hannah entertained the entire Senior Class on two separate evenings at Cowles House. The hosts, along with class officers and university administrators, formed a receiving line and personally offered their congratulations to the graduating seniors.

Besides these all-class activities, most living units had special dinners and receptions to honor their seniors.

George Eickwort was honored as the Outstanding Senior at Senior Swingout, Spring term.

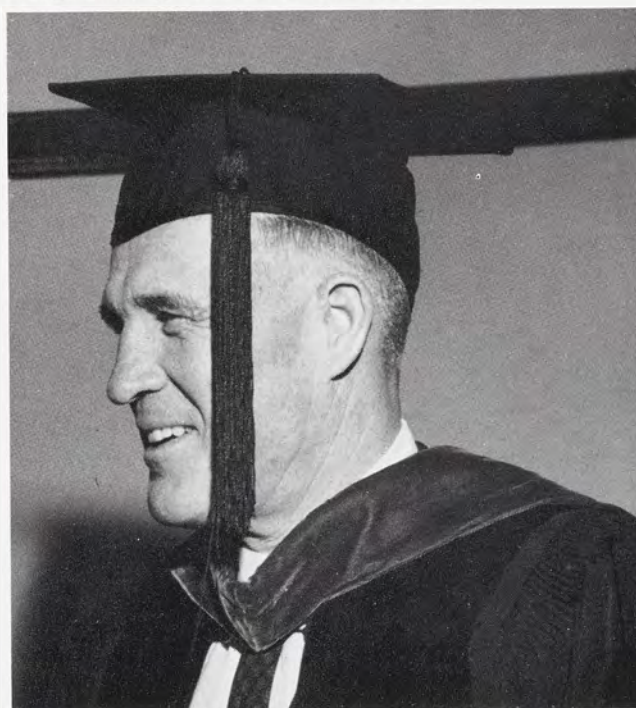

Spring graduates file into the Auditorium for the Senior Swingout program which honors outstanding achievement.

Moving a tassel from one side of a mortarboard to the other is a very symbolic gesture. To some graduates it symbolizes the negotiability of a diploma, the marketability of a degree. To others, it is the first stop on the way to a differently colored robe. To still others, it is a motion of finality, a symbol of the end of four years of one kind of life in preparation for another.

It is a symbolic gesture for the University, also. It means that there is room for another student—not in the sense of a reusable student number, but in terms of the availability of fine minds and equipment for a new student.

Graduation is a time of pride—for parents, for students, and for the University.

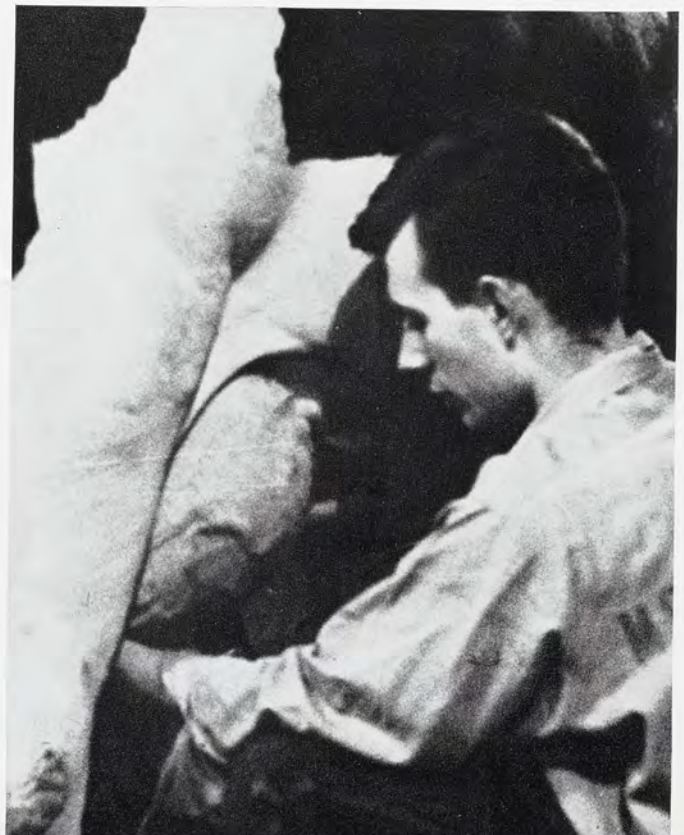

George Romney, President of American Motors.

The Poultry Department in the College of Agriculture has incubators to familiarize students with hatching procedures.

Students in Dairy have an opportunity to work in the MSU Dairy Plant for experience and part-time employment.

Three Agriculture students examine the College's collection of livestock jawbones.

COLLEGE OF COMMUNICATION ARTS

FOUNDED: 1955

DEAN: Fred S. Siebert

Students from an advertising class and from a television production course combine efforts in the production of a commercial, using the facilities of WMSB-TV.

Radio-TV majors receive technical experience in operating MSU's closed-circuit channels which televise class sessions.

COLLEGE OF VETERINARY MEDICINE

FOUNDED: 1910

DEAN: Willis W. Armistead

Checking their truck for supplies, four vets prepare to leave campus for farms near the Lansing area to care for livestock as part of MSU's veterinary service program.

To the many students who spent their valuable time working as photographers, typists, artists, and general office help, we can only offer our sincere thanks for making this what we believe to be a very successful 1962 WOLVERINE.

And to Mr. Ed Hackleman and Mr. Ralph Van Dyke of the Jahn and Ollier Engraving Company of Chicago who carefully supervised the technical parts of production and ironed out many problems, Mr. Sam Fields of Delma Studios of New York who provided the 2100 senior pictures, Mr. Jack Bundy of the S. K. Smith Company of Chicago who planned and supervised the production of the cover, and the Sander Wood Engraving Company of Chicago which made the distinctive wood-cuts used on the division pages and in the introductory and senior sections, we again offer sincere thank-you.

Special recognition must be given, however, to Mr. William McIlrath, Director of Student Publications at MSU, and Mr. John Vitovsky of the Speaker-Hines and Thomas Printing Company of Lansing, for their exhaustive contributions. To Mr. Mac for his invaluable advice, calming of frazzled nerves and prodding when they weren't frazzled enough. To John Vitovsky for his endless patience, respected advice and tireless help that went into putting the 1962 WOLVERINE to bed.

To everyone concerned who helped us with what seemed at times an insurmountable task, we extend our appreciation. Without these people the 1962 WOLVERINE could never have recorded this great year.
