Traveler Lead. Sam Jones, the noted evangelist, recently

delivered an address to the traveling fraternity, at Chicago, which was as follows: "As you know, brethren, this is a special service. Cards of invitations, perhaps to the number of 2,000, have been issued to the commercial travelers to be present, and it is to them that this sermon is directed. The commercial travelers of America, or to use a refined expression, the angels of commerce-[laughter]-are not very much like the angels of old, for they were few and far between; but you are many and your visits are made almost daily. You are legion. Perhaps there are 300,000 commercial travelers in America to-day. What a power worlds on every trip. [Laughter and apweaning from me. The curse of a traveling man is that you can't be at home when you are at home; and oh! how many of you have brought tears of blood to the eyes of your wives because of your indifference. If you are not a commercial traveler, then you don't know how hard it is for a commercial traveler to be a Christian. If it is essential, in order to be a first-class drummer, to smoke tobacco, drink liquor, and play cards, I'd rather be a third-rate dog than a firstclass commercial traveler. And now we come to the text: 'I thought on my ways and turned my feet unto thy testimonies.' Inconsiderateness curses the world. You never want to think of the right thing. You think about bonds and stocks, and tion.

Now, here I am a mortal being; I've got to sell goods for thirty years, but I've got to die some day, and then I want to look back and say that I've never done anything to displease God or to dishonor my own being. Some of you do things to accomplish different ends. Some of you have got the bottle, and some of you play cards, with something put up to make the game interesting. [Laughter.] And I could tell you of other things you do if it were not for the pure faces I see with bonnets on. [Laughter.] I've seen the time when I would have done devilish things, but you couldn't have hired me to do those things by the month. The great railroad strike in the Southwest has not come to an end so promptly as was announced. While the strike was in progress the companies strained every nerve to obtain men in the places of those who had left. To a great extent they succeeded, and Mr. Hoxie now announces that he needs but a few more men to complete his force. ## The Life of a Bank Check.

A case of peculiar interest to bankers and business men who handle commercial paper was recently decided by Judge Chipman, in the Superior Court at Detroit. It appears that on Saturday, August 8, 1885, Harmon S. Holmes, a merchant at Chelsea, sold some live stock to Charles Roe. The tran-Holmes a check on Vincent J. Scott's bank. Instead of presenting the check for payment, Holmes carried it home and deposited it with the Citizens' Bank of Chelsea for collection. When the case came to trial, the Detroit correspondent of the Chelsea bank, the Mechanics' Bank, claimed that the check was not received by them until 1 o'clock on Monday, too late to have it handled at the local clearing house. On Tuesday the check was dishonored, as on Monday night Scott's bank had forever closed its doors. Holmes sought to recover on the check, but Roe's counsel contended that Holmes had been guilty of negligence in not using proper diligence in presenting the check at Scott's bank; that the rule of law was that a check ought to be presented for collection within two days after being made; that the transaction having been made, and the parties both being here when the check was made, the collection of it should have been made here direct; and further, that the clearing house is for the convenience of banks and not for private indi-

Judge Chipman took the case from the jury and rendered a verdict for defendant.

The matter involves new phases in so far as clearing-houses are concerned, as questions of their liability on commercial paper may arise, if delay occurs in handling it.

Practical Formula for Pepsin.

From the Druggists' Circular. The principles in the manufacturing method here given, viz., extracting pepsin with muriatic acid, and precipitating it with as the writer is aware, general statements are about all that can be found in print on the subject unless it be patented processes, and any one attempting to make the article with only these principles as a guide, would probably meet with unexpected dif-

Only the washed and dissected inner coat of the stomachs of the animals (generally of the pig, but those of sheep may be used) are received. These portions of the stomachs are then chopped finely. This can be done in one of the ordinary cutting machines used in meat markets, the power being furnished either by steam or hand. Fifty stomachs can be macerated in a large-sized barrel (forty-five gallons). The barrel should be about three-fourths filled with water and then acidultated with 1 quart of muriatic acid (30 per cent.) The stomachs are left to macerate in this weak acid for forty-eight hours, stirring occasionally. If necessary the temperature should be kept down with ice to prevent decomposition and avoid a subsequent disagreeable odor. The solution is now strained through a coarse cloth (sacking will answer) into another barrel. The strained solution contains the pepsin, together with considerable mucus and other impurities.

The mucus and other impurities are separated from the pepsin by adding a small portion of salt (8 kilos) to each barrel and stirring energetically for several minutes with a paddle. This brings the impurities (mucus, etc.) and a small amount of pepsin to the surface, and in a few minutes they can be skimmed off. Now, add a larger portion of salt (28 kilos) and repeat the vigorous agitation of the contents of the barrel. The quality of salt should be ordinary table salt. It must be fine, so that it will of people in our own city who will go from dissolve readily. It is preferable to add the drug store to drug store getting estimates salt itself instead of a solution. The pepsin will now collect on the top of the liquid. This is skimmed off and placed upon muslin cloths to drain.

When partially drained it is well to wash the pepsin with water, to free it from some of the salt, which is quite difficult to separate. After being left to drain about twentyfour hours, transfer to bags (made of canton flannel), a small amount being placed in layers, with planks between, in an ordi- the first dose the patient slept four hours,

Pepsin carefully made in this way contains no mucus. It does contain salt but not an injurious amount. This small amount of salt can be completely removed, if desired, by redissolving the pepsin and precipitating with alcohol. However, the pepsin, when carefully made, contains very little salt, and when diluted with milk sugar to form saccharated pepsin, the form in which pepsin generally appears in the market, it is not recognizable to the

There are many particular brands of pepsin in the market, and for most of them greater digestive power, of course, is claimed than can be found in any other pepsin in commerce. Upon examination the writer has found that some of the brands, about which the most extravagant statements are made, test the lowest, when all are examined by a common standard (the United States Pharmacopæia method of assay). The reason of this is that some manufacturers have special assay methods printed upon their labels, and when tested by this process their own article will appear to be a superior one. For instance, a sample of pure pepsin advertised to be of a strength sufficient to dissolve 600 times its weight of albumen (by special process), really tested but 300 when assayed by the United States Pharmacopæia method.

And the variety of methods used by manifacturers for testing pepsin seems to be exceeded only by the variety of processes used for manufacturing the article, no two proprietors seeming to use the same process The difference in manufacturing processe is not in itself objectionable. The troubl is the products are unlike. Some sample contain other substances than pepsin in J. N. Harris & Co., Ltd., Cincinnati, O. large proportions. One firm now advertises the same article as "Peptone-Pepsin" as as "Pepsin," that was formerly sold as 'Golden Scale Pepsin," the proprietors of this pepsin now admitting that its composiis partly peptone or the product of the action of the gastric juice upon dried egg albumen, which is used to the extent of 400 pounds of ordinary coagulated egg albumen salt or alcohol, are well known. But as far to each 100 stomachs in the manufacturing

A druggist who was interviewed by a newspaper reporter is reported as saying: "If the public are taught to demand cheap prices, they can only blame themselves if they get cheap drugs and those inferior in quality. It is no less so in the drug business than in others. Yet there are plenty on prescriptions, entirely forgetting this fact, and taking risks on human life and health for the sake of a few cents." This is a sound argument which might be used by druggists much more freely than it is.

A serious mistake was made recently by a Marlette druggist in filling a prescription, by putting three ounces of chloral in place of three drams. Two doses of the compound were given, and nearly proved fatal. After and after the second dose, which was given After remaining in the press a few hours in the afternoon, she slept till morning, and the pepsin comes out in cakes that are tough, it was quite difficult to rouse her. ### SELLING CONSUMERS.

Jobbers to be Asked to Make No Exceptions.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association, which was held on the 6th, was well attended. Horton & Perkins were elected members of the Asso-

The special committee appointed to secure the signatures of the jobbers and commission merchants to an agreement not to sell to consumers reported that some would sign only with the understanding that they would be allowed to furnish hotels, restaurants and boarding houses.

E. E. Walker was of the opinion that grocers ought not to buy of an agent who sells

F. J. Dettenthaler expressed similar sentiments.

E. A. Stowe asserted that he was publishing the agreement in The Tradesman under a misapprehension as to its meaning. He thought it meant what it said. Under the present arrangement, the door is opened wide enough to allow the jobber to sell any housekeeper who has boarder, and in the absence of a boarder, the lady of the house can call her son a boarder and come in under the resolution relative to restaurants and boarding houses. He would either name of the exceptions to the agreement or allow no exceptions

President Herrick suggested that the Morton, Sweet's, Eagle, Clarendon and Bridge street houses be excepted in the agreement.

E. E. Walker moved that all the hotels be excluded from the agreement and that the jobbing houses be given the choice of selling the regular trade or the hotels.

Milo G. Randall suggested that the agreement be modified so as to allow the jobbers to sell the hotels unbroken packages, such as a barrel of sugar or a chest of tea. Unless the Association does so he thought the hotel men would buy their supplies of outside

Grand Rapids. It should be the policy of all dealers to refuse to buy of jobbers who insisted upon selling hotels and restaur-

E. E. Walker said that the first thing he asked a traveling from Detroit or Chicago was whether he sold the hotels and restaurants. If he answered in the affirmative that ended the interview.

W. C. Harper moved as an amendment to Mr. Walker's motion that it be the sense of this association that the members ought to refuse to patronize any jobbing house which makes a practice of selling goods to

Walter Meech thought the language used by Mr. Harper was too strong, savoring of Car and local Sleeping Car Detroit to Grand

Mr. Harper said he might have said "cheerfully desist from patronizing," instead of "refuse to patronize," but declined to place the Association in an equivocal pos-

President Herrick said he believed in putting such statements in plain works, and in making them good by practice.

The motion and amendment were carried and the same committee-Messrs. Walker, Coye and DeJager-were instructed to present the matter to the jobbers again, Messrs. Dunaven, Elliott and Harper having been appointed to assist in the work.

E. E. Walker said he was already beginning to feel the effects of the agreement with jobbers. He had had several calls for a certain brand of soap in box lots and offered it to the customer at an advance of 7 cents, on first cost. He was invariably invariably informed that the customer was buying at 7 cents less, which lead him to think that the jobber or manufacturer was selling the consumer as cheap as they were

The special committee on Market reported that the subject of establishing a public market had been decided adverse to the Association, on account of a provision in the charter which would prevent such a movement being a success. The committee was instructed to proceed with the peddler nuisance and endeavor to secure the enactment of an ordinance, providing that every ped-

A check for the quarter's rent was ordered drawn on the treasury.

The following letter was read by the Sec-GRAND RAPIDS, April 5, 1886.

Retail Grocer's Association, Grand Rapids. GENTLEMEN—Since accepting your invitation to appear before you to discuss the subject of "Adulterated Groceries," at your next meeting, I find that this subject, which I consider of great importance not only to the retail grocer, but to every consumer in Michigan, is most comprehensive, embracing many matters which are worthy the careful thought and immediate action of those who desire the introduction and maintaining of a higher standard-higher grades of groceries of all kinds; hence, the time allotted for the preparation of this subject I find inadequate and must claim your indulgence in asking for a postponement of its discussion, for the present, promising you I will make good my engagement at the earliest possible date. Yours truly,

S. M. LEMON. The letter was laid on the table and Mr. Lemon granted two weeks' further time.

Several volunteers were instracted to wait on those grocers who have not yet joined the Association, and endeavor to secure their application for membership, when the meeting adjourned for two weeks.

Never to our knowledge has any medicine met with the success as has Golden Seal Bitters. It comprises the best remedies of the vegetable kingdom so as to derive the greatest medicinal effect, and is making wonderful cures.

Decline of the Kalamazoo Celery Industry. From the Kalamazoo Gazette.

A well-known celery king of this city being questioned a few days ago by a Gazette reporter as to what the prospects of the celery crop were this season, gave expression to an exceedingly pessimistic view relative to the future of this industry, by which so much wealth is yearly drawn to Kalamazoo. He may be a croaker, but his views are certainly worthy of some consideration. He

"The bottom is going to fall out of the celery business in Kalamazoo one of these days. Of course I'd advise people to stick to it just as long as there is any money in it, but I'll give you a pointer, those who get their living entirely out of celery had better be looking around for something to fall back on when they get to the jumping off

"What's the matter with celery?"

"There isn't as much money in it as there used to be. It's getting worse every year and newspaper men are to blame for it."

"We-to blame for it!" "Yes, sir. The newspapers of the town have boomed celery until people outside have begun to think that there is a gold mine in this vegetable. Kalamazoo newspapers have published the immense amounts of celery shipped from here during the season, so many tons a day; they have figured out how many hundreds of thousands of dollars are brought to the city every year by the sale of this crop; they have told how the industry gives employment to a great number of people, and have whooped it up on the subject so often and so long that enterprising business men outside of Kalamazoo have begun to look around and inquire whether they can't have a slice of this rich thing, also; why they can't go to raising celery, too. When a man has a good thing, I believe in keeping it quiet. There are thousands of acres of low land in Michigan just as well adapted to raising celery as those about this city. There are thousands of men who are just as intelligent and who will learn just as readily how to raise it as the Hollanders around Kalamazoo. They have begun raising celery in other localities. I used to ship considerable celery to Jackson, but they have begun raising it there, and I did not fill a single order from that city last season. In a score or more localities in this State they have begun raising celery in a small way, and in several localities last year it was grown in quite respectable quantities. What is true of Michigan is true of other states. There are plenty of places in the United States in which I used to have a good business, but to which I didn't ship a single stalk last season. They have begun raising celery themselves in quantities sufficient to supply local con-

"It won't be many years before the celery business will become a local business. Market gardeners will select suitable land in the vicinity of all the large towns and will raise celery, just as they now raise radishes and lettuce, to supply the home demand. When that time comes, celery raising at Kalamazoo will dwindle down in magnitude to an agricultural industry of very much smaller proportions than now.

"Oh, I don't lay it all on you newspaper fellows, either. The hoggishness of the express companies is what is ruining our business. Notwithstanding the immense amounts of celery shipped from here, the express companies give rates on this class of business but very little better than they do on any other. They will ship a box of books to Atlanta for John Brown, who probably doesn't give them $5 worth of business a year, just as cheap as they will for a celery dealer who gives them thousands of dollars' worth. The express companies are making a good thing out of it now, but they are killing the goose that lays the golden eggs. What better inducement can a market gardener living within 20 or 30 miles of Boston have for raising celery than the fact that it costs as much to get a dozen celery to the metropolis as the celery costs in this city."

Commercial Museums.

A rather novel project is under consideration in Austria, namely, the establishment of a general commercial museum. A short time ago the director of the Austrian Oriental museum conceived the idea of transforming that institution into a great museum devoted to commercial purposes, and his plan is now being considered by representatives of the Government and commercial corporatious of the country. According to the plan the museum is intended to collect and examine all possible data respecting the production, the consumption, and the traffic of ported to or imported from foreign markets. tablish offices where information can be obtained as to the state of credit and the condition of trade in foreign parts. The scheme exigencies of a highly developed and widely extended commerce. The location chosen for the initiation of the enterprise, however, does not seem to be the most promising in the world. Such an institution would find a more congenial and natural home in a city like London or New York.

A Word to Potato Growers.

Tom Morehouse, the South Water street commission merchant, writes the Grand centuries had been idle and manured by the Traverse Herald as follows relative to the best varieties of potatoes to plant:

I am handling potatoes extensively, and have been for the past eighten years; and size and quality. Such raisins they had would advise all growers to discard the never seen before. ### Significance of the Signature of a Married Woman.

THE TRADESMAN is in receipt of the following enquiries:

Please state whether the wife who holds property in her name is liable if she signs a note with her husband to secure more time in his own business.

A customer wishes to know if a woman is liable for her husband's debt when she signs a note with him to the amount of said debt. Please answer through THE TRADES-

As both of the above enquiries are practically the same, one answer will suffice for both. The Supreme Court of Michigan, as well as similar tribunals in other States, have repeatedly held that a note given by a married woman is not valid unless it is uttered for her own individual indebtednessthat is, indebtedness contracted for the benefit of her own individual property. The only way she can be bound is by giving a there is ten million feet of lumber (mill tally) cut by a mill and piled in the yard, how much ought it to ship out? In other words, does a yard hold out with mill tally, or overrun?

Several other mill men whom THE TRADESMAN reporter interviewed also expressed similar opinions.

Valentia Orange Crop.

The crop of Valentia oranges this year is said to be very good and considerably larger than for many years past. The amount available for export is expected to reach 2,000,000 boxes, aggregating no less than 900,000,000 oranges.

Hides, Pelts and Furs.

Hides are unchanged. Pelts are lower and dull. Furs are a little lower. Wool is low er. Tallow is lower and very weak.

Dehesa Raisins

The origin of the word "Dehesa" is quite interesting. The Spanish dictionaries do not enlighten us upon the subject further than that "dehesa" means pasture, and that "dehesar" is a verb that means to put into pasture any land not so used, and the connection between the pasture and the raisin brand is not explained. The true origin of the word is this: In the thirteenth century the Moors were expelled from Spain. Hitherto these people had constituted the most industrious part of the population, and it was through them that the country had been irrigated and cultivated to such an extent The largest amount of good tobacco for the that it was the most fertile part of the world. When the Moors were expelled, the most fertile part of Estremadura and Andalusia were turned into sheep pastures, and FINE CUTS the sheep husbandry increased so rapidly that it soon became the most important industry in Spain. These once fertile plains were left to themselves and soon became every winter, and in the summer they were a K. of L. taken up into the cooler mountains. It was found that this change of diet was highly tive to the owners, in consequence of which | freight. the latter became rich and powerful, and, in opposition to the people of the plains, organized a formidable association called the Mesta. To the cultivators of the soil this Mesta must have been something similar to what the cowboys of Arizona are to the more peaceful cultivators of that region. When bands of thousands of sheep traversed the cultivated fields regardless of roads or crops, it may well be understood what injury was done the tillers of the soil. This outrageous sheep monopoly, the Mesta, held sway for about 400 years, and was not abolished until the beginning of the present century-1817. These pasture lands, which were known as "dehesas," and which for sheep, were at last sold. On one of the finest dehesas a raisin vineyard was planted, and the raisins produced were of unusual

He Wrote a Check Right Off.

The other day a farmer-looking man enspeaking for Chicago's market only. I was tered a Griswold street bank with a check in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and which he handed to the paying-teller, and Baltimore in February last, and found the which was at once returned to him with

"No money here."

"What! Are you out of money?" asked "Oh, no. I mean that the man whose name is signed there has no money on de

"Is that so? Why, he's one of the nicest men I ever met."

"That may be, but his check isn't worth anything here."

"Isn't, eh? Why, he boarded with me a whole month, and we think everything of him. Maybe he's got money here and it's mislaid somewhere."

"The check is worthless, sir. He never had a dollar on deposit here."

"Never did, eh? I don't see how it comes about. When I asked him for his board money he wrote this check out as quick as a wink. You couldn't pay it and trust him for the money, eh?"

The teller looked at him in a sorrowful way for a moment, and the man continued: ray for a moment, and the man continued: Baking Powders, Extracts, Bluings, his feelings, you know."

"Say, that check is worthless, and I don't want you to bother me," exclaimed the tel-

"You don't, eh? Well; I won't; but I think it's a mean sort of a trick on your GRAND RAPIDS, part. When a man goes and writes a check right off like he did it ought to be paid. When I go home and he asks me if I got the money do you s'pose I'm going to tell him what you've said? Not much! I don't hurt nobody's feelings, if I can help it."

The Grocery Market.

Business and collections are both satisfactory. Sugars have at last taken an upward turn, hard sugars having advanced about three-sixteenths and soft sugars about an Barnhart Lumber Co., says the mill tally eighth. Kerosene oil has declined threeeighths of a cent and will probably go lowas it is generally calculated that it will hold er. Dried currants are higher and a still out sufficient to make up for the usual further advance is looked for. Other articles in the grocery line are about steady.

Candy is in fair demand and prices are steady. Nuts of all kinds are steady at last week's prices. Oranges are in good supply and unchanged. Lemons are in moderate supply and prices are gradually advancing. They are almost sure to rule high all through the season.

FRESH MEATS.

"Too Many Irons in the Fire."

From the Boston Budget.

This is an old proverb, another version of which is: "He that hath too many irons in the fire, some of them will burn." This morsel of metaphorical wisdom, evidently the work of a blacksmith, is, of course, intended as a warning against undertaking too much, and, at first sight, sounds like a prudential maxim, well adapted to secure efficiency and singleness of aim on the part of all workers. But, more closely considered, the precept shows itself for what it really is, a piece of narrow-minded petty prudence, adapted only for the guidance of incapables

The fact is, nobody who is good for anything needs any such cowardly caution about having "too many irons in the fire." Your active, efficient characters, they who do the largest share of work in the world, are the men who want and will have a great many "irons in the fire." Shovel, poker, tongs and all these masterly workmen keep them always hot and always busy. The rapidity of their daily accomplishment is only equaled by its variety. Both their combinations and their execution are such as perplex and startle little minds and lead them to repeat in full chatter much such bbl. petty maxims as the one now under consideration. It is by such men that human progress is advanced, inventions and discoveries are made, fortunes are won, and all valuable improvements and reforms are achieved.

A new element has been discovered by Professor Winkler, of Freidburg, for which the name germanium is proposed. It is said to resemble both antimony and bismuth in some of their respective characteristics; hence, if hereafter found to be sufficiently abundant, the therapeutical value of its compounds should be systematically $ ton. Ships, $16 $ ton. Middlings, $16 $ ton. inquired into.

What Not to Buy.

From the Hartford Post.

"Good morning, Cicely my dear," exclaimed her intimate as she called in on her way on a shopping tour. "Do go down and help me to select a new spring wrap. Now that's a good dear."

"Why, now, it really is impossible. You know I helped you select your winter cloak, painted and kalsomined and some are being remodeled throughout. Improvement is the thing." thing."

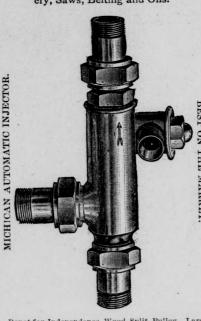

The prospects for a narrow gauge railroad from this place to Frankfort are reported want your judgment so as to know what not to buy."

No woman ever consented to such conditions, and no woman ever will.

The following quotations are given to show relative values, but they may be considered, to some extent, "outside prices," and are not as low as buyers of reasonable quantities can, in most instances, obtain them at. It will pay every merchant to make frequent visits to market, not only in respect to prices, but to keep posted on the ever-changing styles and fashions, many of which are never shown "on the road."

SALE—CONSIGNMENT—PASSAGE OF TITLE.

Where a manufacturer residing in one city receives through his agent residing in another an order for beer from a customer there and fills the order by delivering the beer to a common carrier at the place of manufacture, consigned to such customer at his place of residence or to such agent for him, there being nothing in the transaction indicating a different intention, the sale is complete, and the title passes at the place of shipment, even though the customer on receiving the beer at his place of residence pays to such agent there the purchase price. So held by the Supreme Court of Wisconsin.

TION. A contract for making certain changes in to be paid for as soon as the persons for whom the changes were made were "satisfied that the boilers as changed are a success." The New York Court of Appeals arbitrary determination of the persons for whom the changes were made, but that the boiler company were entitled to compensation when it had fully performed its work if there was no complaint of it. The court said: "Performance must of course accord with the terms of the contract; but if the themselves when they are satisfied there would be no obligation, and consequently true and proximate cause of death, and, no agreement that could be enforced." After citing a number of cases bearing upon the point involved the court added: "In the case before us the work required to be done was specified and was completed; the defendants made it available, and continued to to Detroit for "three pounds of fancy use the boilers without objection or complaint. If there was full performance on the plaintiff's part nothing more could be required, and the time for payment had ar-

ACCIDENT INSURANCE POLICY—SUICIDE-

INSANITY. In May, 1884, one Crandal insured his life for $10,000 in the Accident Insurance tion cannot regain his right to passage by Company of North America, against inoffering to pay the fare during or after the juries effected by "external, accidental or violent means." The policy was not to apply if death was caused wholly or in part by bodily infirmities or disease of the insured, and suicide was also expressly excepted. A bank authorized by its charter to deal in In June, 1884, the insured committed suipublic and private securities is not liable to cide while insane. The question whether a brokers' tax for buying and selling stocks the company under the circumstances was and bonds, according to the decision of the liable was presented lately before Judge Supreme Court of Tennessee in the case of Dyer, of the United States District Court State of Tennessee vs. Nashville Savings for the Eastern District of Wisconsin, where a decision was rendered holding the company liable. The two chief points discussed in the case were, first, whether the fact that the insured was insane when he committed suicide rendered the death one caused by bodily injuries effected through accidental means; and second, whether the death was due wholly or in part to bodily infirmities. In the case of insanity the court held the act of suicide was no more the man's act, in the sense of the law, than if he had been impelled by an irresistible physical power. When the insured, then, took his own life, it was not by his voluntary, rational act. The physical violence, therefore, which terminated his life was the same as if it had come upon him from sources outside of himself, and for which he was not responsible. The court said: "It must be held, therefore, that Crandal's death resulted from steam boilers provided that the boilers were 'bodily injuries effected through external, accidental and violent means within the meaning of the policy in suit." It was contended by the company upon the second point that insanity was a disease; that the held that payment did not depend on the death was caused by disease, and hence that the company was not liable. The court said that the rule set up in behalf of the company did not apply to accident policies, though it might be said that Crandal would not have committed suicide if he had not been insane, and so that insanity was a promoting cause of death, yet, the court said, defendants are at liberty to determine for the act of self-destruction should be regarded within the meaning of the policy as the
