A Warning.

Pain is given for the wise purpose of informing us of the presence of danger and disease. Any little excitement of an unusual nature disturbs the balance of the system, the ner yous energies are exhausted, and headache and a hundred other disturbances are the reand a hundred other disturbances are the result. Many of the miseries of modern man and womanhood might be cured and prevented were their approach heeded and resisted, having their origin in derangements of the liver and blood, dyspepsia, jaundice, indigestion, costiveness and other unwholesome conditions. Evils of a diseased nature find a certain cure by the use of Colden Seal Bitters. THE ANALYST.

I write these pages as a warning. I don't suppose any one will profit by it. From the time of Cassandra downward, nobody has ever paid attention to warnings. But that is not my affair.

A New York newspaper, some years ago, gave up several columns of its valuable space to the question: "What shall we do with our boys?" I perused the correspondence with a strong personal interest, for I myself am the proprietor of a boy-several boys, in point of fact; but I refer more particularly to my eldest, aged nineteen, as to whom I felt that it was time something was settled. I have a great belief-partly derived from the before mentioned correspondence, and partly from my own observation-in studying a boy's natural bent, and finding him an occupation in accordance with it. Such be ing the case, I began to study Augustus with elegant, stock packed. 100 12 oz. in a view to finding out his special aptitude; but, unless a really remarkable faculty of outgrowing his trousers may be so regarded, I could not for some time discover that he had any. By dint, however, of careful observation and cross-examination of the household, I elicited that he was addicted to making extremely offensive smells in the back kitchen, with chemicals, and that he had what is called a "collection" of beetles and other unpleasant insects stuck on pins in a box in his bedroom. It appeared, therefore, that his proclivities were scientific, and I ultimately decided to make an analyst of him. Accordingly, after disposing of sundry painas to premiums, Augustus was duly articled to a Public Analyst. I use capital letters The only safe way is to be in- because I observed that Mr. Scrutin himself always did so. Why, I cannot say. Possibly a public analyst-without capitalswould not command the same amount of public confidence. On consideration, I don't suppose he would.

Augustus's first demand on taking up his new occupation was a microscope. "And while you're about it," he suggested, "it had better be a good one." At first I was inclined to suspect that this was an artful would be devoted to post mortem examinations of deceased caterpillars or other kinever, that such was not the case, and that the microscope was nowadays "the very sheet-anchor of analytical science." The 'sheet-anchor" completely took the wind out of my sails. [I feel that there is rather a confusion of metaphor here, but not being a nautical person, I don't feel competent to set it right.] I surrendered, humbly remarking that I supposed $25 would cover it. The youthful analyst laughed me to scorn. The very least, he assured me, that a good working microscope could be got for would be $50 or $60. Ultimately I agreed to purthe contrary it was only just begun. No sooner had my analyst secured his microscope, than he began to insist upon the purchase of a number of auxiliary appliances, which, it appeared, no respectable microscope would be seen without. He broke mentioned, if I remember right, an "achromatic condenser," at $10. Next came a know); then a polarizing apparatus and a camera lucida ($6); then a micrometer and a microtome ($4 more); then somebody's prism at $3; and somebody else's microspectroscope, at I don't know how much. Here, however, I put my foot down. I am compelled to regard the sordid consideration of price, though science doesn't. The microscope and its subsidiary apparatus were duly delivered; but my analyst appeared to be in no particular hurry to convey them to the laboratory where he was studying. On my making a remark to this effect he replied: "Haven't taken them to the laboratory? No; and I'm not going to. Mr. Scrutin has got a precious sight better my report on it to-night." microscope than mine-cost $100 without the little extra articles, and they were about $60 more. He's got a microspectroscope, if I refrained from arguing the point, and mildly remarked that in that case he might saved me some $73. But he rejected the you don't get your proper weight." idea with scorn, and explained that his microscope was not for laboratory use, but for "private study."

So far as my observation went, my analyst's private study had hitherto been confined to a short pipe and the last number of tented myself by observing that I only hoped he would "stick to it." "No fear of that," he rejoined, as indignantly as a limpet might have done in answer to the same observation. "Why, microscopy is the most fascinating study out. Just take a squint at that, now." I looked down the tube, but couldn't see

"Oh, that's because you haven't got the focus-Now, try agai

I tried again, and saw a sort of network of red fiber.

"I'll bet a dollar you can't tell me what this is!" he exclaimed triumphantly.

I owned the soft impeachment. "That's the maxillary gland of a rat." "Dear me!" I said.

"Yes. Isn't it lovely? Here's another. this is?"

"Give it up," I said.

"That's a section of the epidermis of the great toe."

"What on earth have analysts got to do right." with great toes?"

frog's leg."

Mr. Scrutin surely doesn't analyze such things as these?"

"I can't say we do much in frogs' legs," he said; "but there are lots of things adulterated with potato. Flour and arrowroot, and butter, and cocoa, and-and-a heap and there you are! If you don't know what diseased potato looks like, your done."

"A pleasant lookout," I replied, "if half dozen of the commonest articles of food are habitually adulterated."

"Bless you, that's nothing," he replied. "If that was all, there wouldn't be much harm done. There are a jolly sight worse adulterations than that. In fact, pretty nearly everything's adulterated, and some of 'em with rank poisons."

"Rank poisons! That's manslaughter!" "Oh, no; it isn't," he calmly rejoined. "Of course they don't put in enough to kill disagreeing with you you can't swear what charges for private analyses. it is. It may be the nux vomica in the beer; but it's just as likely to be entozoa in the water, or copper in the last bottle of pickles. However, you're all right now. With an analyst in the family, at any rate, you shan't be poisoned without knowing it. I'll let you know what you are eating and drinking. This fellow"-and he patted the microscope affectionately-"will tell you all about that."

And it did. From that day forth I have never enjoyed a meal, and I never expect to do so again, I have always been particular to deal at respectable establishments, and to pay a fair price, in the hope of insuring a good article. I have, or had, a very tolerable apetite, and till that dreadful microscope came into the house I used to get a chase one at $50, and congratulated myself good deal of enjoyment out of life. But that at any rate that was done with. On now all is changed. My analyst began by adulterated, too?" undermining my faith in our baker. Now if there was one of our tradesmen in whom, more than another, I had confidence, it was the baker, who supplied what seemed to me a good, solid, satisfying article, with no nonsense about it. But one day, shortly them to me by degrees. At first he only after the conversation I have recorded, my analyst remarked at breakfast time: "We had a turn at bread vesterday at the labora-"double nose-piece" (why "double" I don't tory—examined five samples; and found three of 'm adulterated. And do you know" -holding up a piece of our own bread and smelling it critically-"I rather fancy this of ours is rather dickey."

"Nonsense?" I cried. "It's very good bread-capital bread."

"You may think so," he continued calmly; "but you're not an analyst. I shall take a sample of this to the laboratory, and you shall have my report upon it."

"Take it, by all means. But if you find anything wrong about that bread, I'll eat Better not make any rash promises. I'll take a good big sample, and you shall have On his return home in the evening, he be-

There's a little potato, and a little rice, and a little alum; and with those additions, it takes up have used Mr. Scrutin's microscope, and a great deal more water than it ought, so

"Ahem!" I said, "if that's the case, we'll change our baker. I'm not going to pay for a mixture of potatoes and water, and call it bread. But as for alum, that's all nonsense. If they put that in we should taste it."

"Oh, no; you wouldn't. When alum is some penny dreadful; but I did not think it put in bread it decomposes and forms sulwise to check his new-born ardor; I con- phate of potash, an aperient salt. It disagrees with you, of course, but you don't taste it. As for changing your baker, the next fellow you tried might be a jolly sight worse; he might put in bone-dust, or plaster of Paris, or sulphate of copper. And besides, half the adulterations are in the flour already, before it reaches the baker. anything at all, and made a remark to that little more on his own account."

And with that the matter dropped, so far as the bread was concerned; but my confidence was rudely shaken.

A few days later my analyst remarked: "I don't think much of this milk;" and he forthwith appropriated a sample for analytical purposes; but, happily, was compelled to own that it wasn't quite so bad as he expected. It had more than its proper proportion of water; but that might arise-he charitably suggested-from the cow being Now, just look at that." (a queer, granular unwell. To make up the deficiency it had looking object.) "You don't know what been fortified with treacle and colored with annatto, but these my analyst appeared to you get 'em twice over." "If that's the case, no more ground coffee for me. We'll grind our own, and then we are sure to be safe."

"You mustn't be too sure of that. Some years ago an ingenious firm took out of things. And the potatoes just as likely a patent for a machine to mould chicory into be deceased as not. It may be, anyhow, to the shape of coffee berries. Smart chaps those! And of course they can put anything they like into the chicory before they work it up." "That's pleasant, certainly. Then how is one to secure pure coffee?" "You can't secure it, except by sending a sample to us, or some other shop of the same sort, to have it analyzed; and if it's wrong, prosecute your grocer for adulteration. After doing that a few times, he might find it didn't pay and give it up."

Analysis of a sample of coffee, $5; analysis of butter, $10; analysis of milk, $5; you right off. And if you find something analysis of tea, $5. Those are the regular

"And how much would that cost?"

"Rather expensive, it seems. And how much would it cost to prosecute?"

"Ah, that I can't tell you," said the analyst. "Another fiver, or more, I daresay. But look at the satisfaction."

I did look at it, but ultimately decided to give my grocer the benefit of the doubt, and cherise a fond hope that he was better than his fellows. The subject dropped. But a few days later there chanced to be applepudding on the table. With the dish in question my analyst had always been in the habit of consuming brown sugar, and a good deal of it. Now, however, on the sugar-basin-best Demarara-being offered to him, he put on an expression as if he had been invited to partake of black draught.

"Raw sugar! No, thank you." "What's wrong with the sugar? Is that "Very probably," he loftly replied. "But that's a small matter. The genuine article is bad enough."

"Bad enough?" indignantly interposed my analyst's mamma.

"Yes. Did you ever hear of the sugarmite, Acarus sacchari-" "No; I can't say I ever did," I said, "and I don't want to, either. We have had enough of this sort of thing, and I am not going to have any more agonies over every article we eat."

I had again put my foot down. But it was too late. I had even forbidden my analyst, under penalty of forfeiture of his pocket-money for several months to come, telling us anything whatever about the food we eat or the drink we imbibe; but the mischief was done. I have lost my confidence in my fellow-man, and still more in my fellow-man's productions. I may try in an imperfect way to protect our household. I may give the strictest orders that none but the refinedest of sugars shall be admitted into our store cupboard; but who is to answer for the man who makes the jam and the marmalade, or the other man who makes the Maderia cakes and the three-cornered tarts? And how much is there that we have not heard? I have silenced my analyst's lips, it is true; but there is also a language of the eyes, and still more a language of the nose, and when with a scornful tip-tilt of the latter, he says, "No, thank you," to anything, my appetite is destroyed for that meal. I can't take a pill or black draught without my disordered imagination picturing my chemist "pestling a poisoned poison" behind his counter. I can't even eat a new-laid egg or crack a nut without wondering what it is adulterated with. This is morbid, no doubt. I am quite aware that it is morbid, but I can't help it. I am like Governor Sancho in the island of Barataria; my choicest dishes are whisked away from me-or rendered nauseous, which is as bad—at the bidding of a grim being who calls himself Analytical Science. He may not know anything about it, or he may be lying; but meanwhile he has spoiled my appetite, Of course, that doesn't prevent his doing a little more on his own account."

Out meanward as and the dish may go away untasted for me. Truly, a little knowledge is a dangerous thing. The moral of my painful story is obvious. I intend to bring up the rest of my family, if possible, to occupations involving no knowledge whatever.

The conviction of a New York musician on a charge of conspiracy, which consisted of instituting a boycott on the proprietor of a music garden, together with the conviction and sentence of several other boycotters in various parts of the country, is likely to have a salutary influence over the class of disreputables who deliberately seek to destroy a man's business. Nearly every State in the Union-Michigan not expected-has a law on the statute books which construes the practice of boycotting as a conspiracy and defines the boycotter as a criminal. In passing sentence on the New York musician cery business at Lowell. Clark, Jewell & above referred to, Judge Barrett gave the laboring men some very pertinent advice, which they would do well to heed:

I confess that I am in sympathy with every honest effort of laborers to better their condition. It is therefore with sorrow that I observe an inclination to lawlessness among these classes, because I know that it will alienate sympathy from them. The hopes of the laboring classes depend on a rigid adherence to law. If a large body of men combine to violate the law the result will be war. I wish to give this counsel to all people who wish to bind themselves together into trades unions. It is that before that place. Rindge, Bertsch & Co. furnishthey appoint any committee they appoint a ed the stock. Committee on Law, with the power to obtain wise counsel, not the demagogue, before taking any steps. Workingmen may combine together to better their condition and to get better wages, but they ma combine to conspire to interfere with the business of a man by forcing people not to deal with him.

THE TRADESMAN has no desire to belittle the attempted celebration of Independence Day in this city, but candor compels the statement that nothing like a general celebration will be observed here. In view of the three-day jubilee indulged in last year, it was thought best to give the surrounding towns an opportunity to celebrate this year, without let or hindrance. Late in the day, however, a traveling Indian show decided to make a stand here on the 3d and engaged several persons who are easily influenced by financial considerations to work up the semblance of a celebration, with a view to swelling the number of strangers who naturally flock to a large place on such an occasion. The work was undertaken too late in the day to enable the projectors to arrange a programme worth going ten miles to see and the necessary funds needed for a successful celebration are not forthcoming, as business men generally are not in sympathy with the movement. THE TRADESMAN utters this warning at this time, not to keep strangers away from the city on the 3d, but to prevent their coming here to be disappointed. There are plenty of things to be seen and any number of ways by which enjoyment may be obtained, but a genuine Fourth of July celebration is one of the things which cannot be seen in Grand Rapids this year.

"To what is the remarkable success attained by Hanhah, Lay & Co. due?" is a question frequently asked of THE TRADES-MAN. The results secured by the firm in question are due to perseverance, energy and good management, coupled with as grand opportunities as ever presented themselves. Nobody ever heard any complaint from the employes of the firm. The The pernicious system of truck pay never found lodgment in their curriculum. Every one moved along in the line of promotion, from the lowest step to the highest. This condition of affairs attracted the best men to be had and gave the firm the advantage of experienced assistants, who were disposed to regard their employers' interests the same as their own.

The Union should stop long enough to think that the establishment of creameries does not increase the quantity of butter made, but improves the quality. Moreover, it is well to bear in mind that while there is frequently no market for farm or dairy butter, creamery butter is always in demand at some price.

EDWARD TELFER,
OLIVER G. BROOKS.

Dated, Grand Rapids, June 22, 1886. The suit grew out of the failure of Norton & Wolff, which occurred last October, and the verdict is regarded as a practical victory for the plaintiffs in fifteen other similar actions brought by the other creditors of the firm. The testimony in the case showed that G. B. Norton had been engaged in trade at Otsego for nineteen years; that in the spring of 1885 he formed a co-partnerlegitimate needs, and when the purchasers knew they were insolvent; that their creditors were not informed of their condition until the crash came, when it was found that they owed about $70,000, and had but about $45,000 of available assets-a shrinkage of over $30,000 in less than eight months. The court held that all purchases made under such circumstances were fraud-

Lanolin is coming rapidly into use, considering its recent introduction to the profession in this country. One of the advantages it holds over lard for an ointment base, is the rapidity with which it is absorbed.

The Canadian Pharmaceutical Journal says that a quantity of benzoin was recently offered in the London market which was originally shipped from Sumatra, by the Dutch settlers, in the year 1691. The vessel conveying the drug was wrecked off the Cape of Good Hope, and from that time until lately, the cedar cases of benzoin have been at the bottom of the sea. The rescued drug was sold to a firm of benzoic acid manufacturers, as drug merchants regarded the sample with suspicion on account of its peculiar appearance, which neither resembled that of the Siam or Sumatra kinds collected in the present day, though, on assay, it turned out to be much superior.

Large cards have been hung in conspicuous positions in the hotels, announcing the date and place of the traveling men's picnic and inviting all visiting traveling men to join in the festivities.

THE TRADESMAN is requested to state that those who expect to obtain their meals at the pavillion next Saturday should leave word to that effect with the landlord as soon as they arrive on the grounds, in order that the necessary arrangements may be made.

THE TRADESMAN would esteem it an especial favor to have its attention called to any errors or omissions in the list of traveling men, published in another column this week. The list will be published again within a month, at which time it is hoped to have it absolutely correct.

A Coopersville correspondent writes as follows: "There was a fakir here last week who duped his patrons by means of the twodollars-in-an-envelope trick. Dan Beecher, who carries credentials from Bulkley, Lemon & Hoops, was one of the victims and workmen struck a vein of carbonic gas, Mike Griffin, our merchant, was also a heavy investor."

> Wm. Logie, who has managed the contribution to the U. B. A. Home, says that all the furniture and furnishings for the traveling men's room have been purchased and put in place and that as soon as those of the boys who are in arrears hand in their dollars all bills will be paid in full. Those who have neglected to pay their quota to the fund are requested to hand the same to Mr. Logie during the present week or leave it at THE TRADESMAN office. A description of the room, an inventory of its contents and the names of the donors will be published in THE TRADESMAN as soon as the work is completed.

Traverse City Journal: One of the most pleasant society events that has ever occurred here, was the marriage of Miss Sybil A. Day, of this place, and Mr. A. D. Baker, of Grand Rapids, which occurred Thursday evening at the residence of E. S. Pratt. The house was elegantly trimmed with evergreens and almost an unlimited supply of flowers. At about 9:30 the nuptial knot was tied by Rev. J. S. Large, and after the usual congratulations, the company partook of an elegant supper. Amid the best wishes of all, Mr. and Mrs. Baker took the 12:30 train for Grand Rapids, which is to be their future home. Among the guests from abaoad were Mrs. Johnson Large size... and Mrs. Dr. Gray, of Greenville; Mrs. Seeley, of Rochester, N. Y.; John P. Homiller J. N. the traveling men's picnic, to be held at Reed's Lake, Saturday, July 3. The committee on sports has arranged an interesting programme, composed of races, speeches, singing, etc. Red Headed Dave Smith has been engaged-at great expense (to his house)-to be present and will give a series of the delineations which have made him famous from Marquette to Michigan City. (Readers of THE TRADESMAN will remember that there is a State Prison at Michigan City and one in process of construction at Marquette.) Mr. Smith is "on the list" for a speech, a song and dance, and he will also acquaint his audience with his numerous other accomplishments. Ad. Morrison will engineer the musical feature of the occasion and see that an unrivaled glee club is properly practiced. Max Mills will deliver an original poem on "The Traveling Men" and W. G. Hawkins will recite the poem, "A Letter from Home." Several other literary features will also be introduced. THE TRADESMAN offers a box of genuine ten cent cigars to the winner of the fat men's race, and a similar prize to the champion of the lean men's race, the only stipulation being that the cigars be smoked on the ground. The base ball match, the foot ball contest, the tug of war, and other interesting features will serve to attract their share of participators. Every reputable traveling man is invited to be, present and from present indications there will be few who will fail to avail themselves of the opportunity.

Cold in the Head.

Strictly speaking, this is acute Catarrh, and for want of effectual means of treatment little attention is paid to it, and its annoying symptoms endured for several days develop into something more serious by the inflammation extending from the nose to the throat, lungs or ears. Cushman's Menthol Inhaler acts promptly and as by magic, relieving the itching, tingling and stuffed feeling in the head. At first, it increases the watery discharge from the nose, and by its continued use reduces the inflammation, and within a few hours the watery discharge is diminished, and the complications which usually follow a cold are avoided. avoided. All druggists should keep the Menthol Inhaler. Re tail price 50c.

BUSINESS LAW.

Brief Digests of Recent Decisions in Courts of Last Resort.

DEMAND NOTE-REASONABLE TIME. In states where "reasonable time" is defined by statute, a demand note, if not presented for payment before the lapse of the time specified in the defining statute, is overdue so as to subject any one taking it F. & P. M. trains to and from Ludington and Manistee. sented for payment before the lapse of the to all defenses to which it would be open in the hands of the payee, according to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States.

PROMISSORY NOTE - FRAUD - ATTACH-

Where a note was accepted in the settlement of an open account as an absolute payment of a debt due thereon, the Supreme Court of Kansas held that the fraudulent disposition of a part of his property by the debtor several months prior to the execution of the note, but during the existence of the open account, was not a ground for attachment in an action brought to recover upon the promissory note.

INSURANCE - LOSS - ASSIGNMENT OF CLAIM.

The Supreme Court of Wisconsin, held that a town insurance company, organized under the laws of 1872, which had been compelled to pay a loss caused by a fire started through the negligence of a railroad company, could take an assignment of the whole claim for damages from the insured exceeding the amount paid by it, and recover the full amount thereof from the railroad company.

MONEY PAID UNDER MISTAKE OF LAW. According to a recent decision of the English Court of Appeal, the rule that money paid under a mistake of law cannot be recovered from the person who has received it does not apply where the money has been paid to and received by an officer of the court in This capacity as such. This was a case where money was demanded by and paid to a trustee in a liquidation under the English Bankruptcy act of 1869, and the person paying the money discovered that he had not been legally liable to pay it. The court held that the trustee in the liquidation was bound to repay the money out of assets for distribution among the creditors.

BILL OF EXCHANGE—NOTICE OF DISHONOR The case of Coulsher vs. Toppin, decided recently by the English Court of Appeal, was one in which it appeared that the drawer of a bill of exchange before it became due wrote to the holder saying the bill would not be paid when due, though he believed it would ultimately be met by the administrators of the deceased acceptor. To this the holder replied in a letter saying that he must look to the drawer to take up the bill. The Court of Appeal held that these letters amounted to a waiver, and were equivalent to an intimation by the party entitled to notice that he was aware that the bill would be dishonored and that he would ultimately be looked to for pay-EMPLOYER AND EMPLOYEE-DISCHARGE. One James was employed by the Board of Commissioners of Allen county, Ohio, as superintendent of the stone and brick work in the construction of a court house, until the stone and brick work should be completed, at a salary of $100 per month. He was discharged from this employment before the expiration of the time fixed in the contract, but he was paid all the wages actually earned at the time of his discharge. He sued to recover certain subsequent installments as though earned, but a demurrer to his complaint was sustained by the Supreme Court of Ohio, which held that his remedy was by action for damages arising from breach of the contract.

Sayings of George Eliot.

The yoke a man creates for himself by wrong doing will breed hate in the kindliest nature.

Ingenious philosophers tell you, perhaps, that the great work of the steam engine is to create leisure for mankind. Do not believe them; it only creates a vacuum for eager thoughts to rush in.

A good, solid bit o' work lasts; if it's only lying a floor down, some body's the better for it being done well, besides the man as does it.

I wouldn't give a penny for a man as 'ud drive a nail in slack because he didn't get extra pay for it. There's nothing but what's bearable as long as a man can work; the nature o' things doesn't change, though it seems as if one's own life was nothing but change. Some folks' tongues are like the clocks as run on strikin', not to tell 'you, the time o' the day, because there's summat wrong i'

their own inside. That is the path we all like when we set out on our abandonment of egoism—the GRAND RAPIDS, path of martyrdom and endurance, where the palm-branches grow, rather than the steep highway of tolerance, just allowance and self-blame, where there are no leafy honors to be gathered and worn.

Adulteration of Candy.

So much has been said of late years about the adulterations and impurities of food and drink, says the New York Tribune that it is little wonder that people have come to believe these impositions and abuses prevail to a much greater extent than they really do. Thousands of persons talk about sanding sugar, grinding burnt beans with coffee, mixing willow leaves with tea, as though these frauds are regularly practiced by every grocer in the land. Nothing short of a chemical analysis would convince many that every quart of milk sold in the city is not more or less impure. There are those could not be induced to eat canned goods of any kind, while the aversion of some to pork, through fear of trichiniasis, is equal to Shylock's hatred of the unlovely animal.

All these are the evil results of an excellent reform, and are in a measure unavoidable. That there is yet room for improvement in every department of food manufacture no sensible person will deny. Indeed, it may be fairly said that a reformation in many branches of this important business has only begun. But between the real limit to which the evil of adulteration prevails and its imaginary extent there is a wide margin. Take the article of confectionery, for example. To many people an ordinary lump of candy represents a compound of glucose and terra alba, tinted with some poisonous coloring matter. Yet Dr. Edson is authority for the statement that there is not at present any injurious confectionery made or sold by any reputable house in this city. "How then," it may be asked, "does it happen that so many cases of candy poisoning occur?"

The question was put to one of the most prominent manufacturers of confectionery in this city the other day by a Tribune reporter and answered thus: "I have made it a point of late years to investigate every case of alleged poisoning from candy that has been reported in and around New York. The result of these inquiries enables me to affirm that the majority of such cases are without foundation. It has become so customary to attribute unusual sickness of children to this source that many, including physicians, do so when there are no grounds for it. I recall a case that happened in Brooklyn a year or two ago. Two children were taken ill suddenly and some of the papers reported that they had been poisoned by eating colored lozenges. Yet I have the written assurance of both the father of the children snd the physician who attended them that their sickness was due to other causes. In fact, they had not been eating candy at all for days previous to the attack. This is only one instance of many that I could tell you about. There are, however, some cases of candy poisoning that are genuine, but the candy is not the product of any reputable manufactory. It is stuff that is made by irresponsible persons in cellars and garrets, out of the way of the health officials. These persons, mostly foreigners, by the way, have no reputation to maintain. Their goods are hawked in the street for the most part, and they care little about the character or quality of the materials which they employ. It so happens, though, that they have little need for ingredients which are really dangerous. They make for the most part cheap, common stock, and corn meal, cerealine, starch and flour are the adulterants which they mostly use. If the health officials of other places were as wideawake as they are here, it would not be long before impure confectionery would be unknown in the United States.

"But it is not the health authorities alone who are trying to abolish the use of poisonous substances in this business. The National Confectioners' Association, a society composed of the leading candymakers of the country, will not only expell any member found guilty of using terra alba or other mineral substances or injurious colors in the manufacture of confectionery, but will also prosecute the guilty persons. Furthermore, it has a standing offer of $100 for evidence that will enable it to convict any person of this offense. The use of any material whatsoever that tends to reduce the quality of candy below the sugar standard is discountenanced by the association. The confectionery business has been injured greatly by false charges, but the abuses will be corrected shortly by legislative aid. The bill to amend the laws touching the adulteration of food, so as to include candies in its provisions, passed the Assembly and Senate and will doubtless become a law. This bill makes the use of deleterious ingredients in candy manufacture as great an offense in any part of the State as it now is in this city, which is under the special health code. Similar bills have been introduced in other State Legislatures where needed. There is no necessity for using any harmful material now. Sugar is cheap and chemistry has furnished us with all kinds of harmless vegetable colorings, making it inexcusable for anyone to employ chrome colors, Prussian blue, burnt umber, or Venetian red. If you have any doubts about a piece of candy being wholesome drop it into a cup of water. If pure it will readily dissolve, but if there are any mineral substances, tale or terra alba present they will remain undissolved. This is a simple test, but for ordinary purposes it is effective and certain."

The Fellow that Lost His Grip.

Earnest McGaffey in the Current.

The one I've journeyed on,
Over the rough, sharp gravel
From weary dusk to dawn.
But now I'm overtaken;
Booked for an outbound trip,
All shattered and sorrow-shaken—
A fellow that's lost his grip.

I was always counted plucky
And independent too,
Till I became unlucky
Then ev'rything fell through:
I never did any shirking
But somehow missed my tip,
And it kills a man for working
When he feels he's lost his grlp.

We're all of us men and brothers While there's an even race, I struggled like the others But couldn't make the pace; And now in a stranger city, My life, like a sinking ship, Goes down, with none to pity The fellow that lost his grip.

And to-day I heard the clinking And to-day I neard the clinking
Of rain-drops on the glass,
Their patter through the chinking,
Made some dull moments pass
More quickly, for they brought me
Relief in their cooling drip,
Some little patience taught me—
A fellow that's lost his grip.

I ve been a wandering rover,
A stone without the moss,
If I could live it over
Would life be such a loss?
Would misfortunes still befall me
Till they had me on the hip,
And would the world then call me
The fellow that lost his grip?

How swift the time is flying,
The goal is almost won;
1 am dying, dying, dying,
Bewept, bemoaned by none.
I hear the surf on unknown strands,
I feel my moorings slip,
Christ! reach me out thy saving hands,
I'm a fellow that lost his grip.

Organization of the Sturgis Business Men's Association.

In accordance with an invitation received | Sunday. Fourth edition. from the business men of Sturgis to address them on the advantages of an organization for protective and defensive purposes, the visit Leadville and other points before reeditor of The Tradesman met with a turning. He is expected back about July number of the leading merchants of that 10. place last Wednesday evening and assisted Peter Steketee, of the firm of P. Steketee in the organization of the Sturgis Business Men's Association.

Chairman Church called the meeting to order and F. Jorn acted as secretary. Mr. Church explained the object of the meeting and related his experience in communicating with the officers of several retailers' associations. In response to his inquiries, the Secretary of the Lowell Business Men's Protective Association answered as follows:

Our Association is working miracles. Men who never made any attempt to pay are now settling up even outlawed accounts. I tell you it "grinds" them awfully to think they will be listed as dead-beats.

Fred Cutler, Jr., Secretary of the Ionia Business Men's Protective Association, wrote as follows:

We are very much pleased with the working of the Association and have no doubt it right, you will find it a paying institution.

The chairman then introduced the editor of THE TRADESMAN, who explained the aims and objects of retailers' organizations. At the conclusion of his address, J. A. Dice moved that the organization of a Sturgis Business Men's Protective Association be proceeded with and that every reputable merchant of the place be invited to identify will be considerably lighter than usual, as himself with the movement. The motion the pack up to June 24 was only about 100,was unanimously carried. The chairman was then instructed to appoint a committee of five to prepare a draft of constitution and by-laws, which was constituted as follows: J. C. Davis, A. D. Cory, Henry L. Anthony, less than one-third of the usual amount hav-L. P. Zent and H. S. Church. The committee was instructed to be in readiness to report on the evening of July 2, to which date the meeting was adjourned. The business men of Sturgis are alive to the benefits of concerted action on all matters affecting the good of the trade and the indications are favorable for a large and prosperous organization.

JENNINGS VINDICATED.

He Maintains the Reputation of His Extracts at Any Hazard.

The reputation of Jennings' extracts for purity and strength has become a matter of common acknowledgment. They have stood the test of time and have come to be regarded by the trade and consumer as absolutely the best goods on the market. In view of these facts, Messrs. Jennings & Smith were somewhat surprised about two weeks ago to receive the following letter from a dealer who had handled their extracts many years:

LAWTON, June 11, 1886.

Mess. Jennings & Smith, Grand Rapics: GENTLEMEN-I sold six bottles of your best vanilla, to be put into ice cream, Wednesday, and it made twenty of our citizens very sick, so sick that some came near dying. What do you suppose was the matter with it? The family who made the cream are not able to stand the loss (twelve rallons) and expect you will make it right gallons) and expect you will make it right with them and pay the costs of having it analyzed. I ate some of the cream and it made me very sick. I hope and expect you will have the vanilla analyzed, so that if it is pure I will not less my trade on your content. is pure I will not lose my trade on your extracts, which I have handled for so many years now.

Hoping to hear from you by return mail, I remain,

Very Respectfully Yours, B. J. Desenberg.

P. S .- I hope you will vindicate your selves and me, as it will do us both great damage if it is not proven to be pure vanilla which was used. I think the vanilla is all right and the fault lies somewhere else. I expect you will have it analyzed by Prof. Kedzie of the Agricultural College, or at Ann Arbor, so that the people will see that it is impartial. Confident of the purity of his goods, satisfied that the poisoning was due to causes other than his extracts, and determined that no one should say aught against their purity, Mr. Jennings immediately repaired to Lawton, where he arranged with the persons who made the ice cream to send a quantity of the cream and also some of the vanilla to Prof. Vaughan, Professor of Chemistry at the State University, for analysis. Prof. Vaughan, whose reputation is world-wide and whose opinions can by no possible means be impeached, reports the result of the analysis as follows:

The poison in the ice cream is due to the decomposition in the milk. The poison I decomposition in the milk. The poison I obtained from one-half pint of cream produced in a cat the same symptoms which the persons suffered from. The people at Lawton thought that the poison was in the vanilla extract used and sent some of that, which I have analyzed and used myself without finding the logst trace of peigon. The poison is ing the least trace of poison. The poison is liable to be developed in any milk which is kept in unclean vessels or impure atmos-phere. I found no mineral poison in it, no arsenic, etc., but succeeded in getting the same poison as I did from the cheese last

Such expert testimony as to the purity of Jennings' extracts will forever put an end to all fear as to their wholesomeness and bring them new friends among people who are not sure the goods they are now using are equally meritorious.

Purely Personal.

Miscellaneous Dairy Notes.

The Chelsea creamery paid $2,250 for cream during the month of May. It has turned out as high as 1,000 pounds of butter per day.

Chas. A. Barnes, of Otsego, and R. D. McNaughton, of Coopersville, were in town Monday in attendance on the meeting of the Dairy Board of Trade.

A rope used for hoisting cream cans at the Nashville creamery recently broke and let down a can containing about 35 guages of cream. Ora Hullinger was deluged with cream, and presented such a ludicrous that if you organize one in Sturgis, and run | sight that his fellow employes have not done laughing yet.

The Grocery Market.

Business and collections are both brisk. Sugars are about the same as last week, but an advance in the near future is by no means improbable.

The new pack of Columbia River salmon 000 cases, which is largely below the average pack for this season of the year. The Sacramento River pack, which amounted to 48,500 cases last year, if a failure this year, GRAND RAPIDS, ing been secured.

Candy is steady. Nut are steady. Fruits are advancing and active.

Why is the Wayland cheese better than any other? Because the maker does not use a whey tank, but a cistern.

The Artist Drummer's Illustration.

"I suppose that you have all seen specimens of rapid painting," said a well-known commercial traveler, "but I'll bet that none of you ever saw a bit of quick sketching that nearly killed yourself laughing. Well, I C. & W. M. On board was a young chap who carries a full line of artists' materials, brushes, paints, etc., all in a snug little grip. He is something of an artist himself, and toon or picture is that the beholder is always expectfunny when he looks at a picture of that kind, and unconsciously ling to be pleased. He went on at this rate for quite a time, until one of the boys told him that he was getting mysterious and asked for an illustration.

"Well, I'll give you an illustration,' says he, and he opened up his sample case and what zeal is the advocate, or impartiality is got out some brushes and paints. 'You see to the judge. that bald-headed old codger sitting up there four or five seats ahead, sound asleep? larges the mind, its usefulness, promotes Well, if I should go and paint something on self-respect; its results, if successful, inthe back of his head, the probabilities are that you would no sooner see me at it than you would begin to laugh. And no matter what I might paint there you would laugh at it anyhow, simply because there is, or you think there is, something ridiculous in the very idea. I'll try it.'

"And he tried it. He stole up behind the sleeping man, made five or six light, quick assages with his brush, and then retired, eaving the bald-headed man with two faces. Was it funny? Well, if you're predisposed to heart disease, don't you ever stay around where a rapid painter is putting a face on a bald head or you'll laugh yourself into purgatory, sure."

Maxims for Merchants.

From the Dry Goods Chronicle. To get all we can and keep all we get is a doubtful natural right, and only applicable in a state of nature. Reputation is the salt of business; keeps it from decay and makes its workings safer than if regulated by statute.

Integrity is the corner-stone of the charer of the true man of business. Without ole edifice topples to its ruin

A penny is a very small matter, yet the comfort of thousands of families depends upon the proper spending and saving of pennies.

The best executive merchants are those who make their authority felt with as few did. It was about a month ago, down on words as possible, and never display it unnecessarily.

A right measure and manner in getting, saving, spending, giving, taking, lending, borrowing and bequeathing makes the perfect business man.

that the secret of The refusal which is at once the most safe from vacillation, and perhaps as little apt to give offense as any, is the point blank refusal without reason assigned.

Seventeen business men out of twenty ing something will admit that the true way to make their employees take an interest in their work is to give them an interest in its results.

In all cases of credit, where there are no words or acts of especial trust and configets himself in the mood wherein he is wil- dence, the relation of buyer and seller, of borrower and lender, is one of mutual promise and risk.

Honor is the foster parent of credit. It is the patron saint of business. It is to business men what courage is to the soldier,

Business engages, invigorates and encrease the power of doing what the head conceives and the heart desires. If there is any one worthy of success, in purchasing and selling pursuits, it is the man who looks into the resources—the outgoes and incomes of the branch of business that sways his investments.

Much depends upon the temperament of a merchant; it should he hopeful, that it may bear him up against faintheartedness, folly, falsehood and numberless discouragements. It should also be calm to withstand the pressure of business, and to prevent his running from one unfinished thing to begin something else.

Legal Enterprise in Dakota. "I sent you an account of $25 for collection," said a man coming into the office of a Dakota lawyer.

"Yes, you did."
"What success have you had?"
"Sued him last week and got it."

"That's good. Give me the money and tell me the amount of your fees and I will pay you."

"My fees are $50. I have given you credit for the $25 collected—pay me another $25 and we'll be square."
"What!" gasped the man, "I don't see where I make anything by collecting the debt."

"Nothing, my dear sir; from a money point of view, but you can have the satisfaction of knowing that a dishonest man has been brought to finite! You can use your own pleasure about paying that $25 now; I took the precaution to commence suit against you for the amout this morning."
