JOHN'S LUCK.

W. H. Maher in American Grocer.

Twenty years ago this spring, when I man, I met a clerk in a country store whose made my first trip on the road as a saleshonest face and pleasant manners made me his friend at once. He had not been in the country long enough to speak English fluently, and as his customers were largely Germans it did not matter. It was easy to see that he would learn English as fast as it was needed, and that he was made of stuff which was bound to advance him in life.

In a few years he was introduced to me as the partner of his former employer, and it was a delight to watch his energetic way of doing business and to see his pleasant airs of any kind. His attention was wholly given to his business, and to this he gave all his days and a large share of his nights.

Other young men in the town spoke to me of John's luck. They called him lucky in getting to work for such an easy employer; lucky in getting an interest in so good a business, and lucky in all that he did. There is a strong inclination in the mind of the average man to make little of the abilities of a companion. It soothes his own pride to believe that the companion's advance was simply a piece of luck or chance rather than the result of merit or energy. And as no one can control "luck" his own failure, consequently, does not annoy him.

If you sit down and recall merchants whose progress you know, you always discover that the song of their success, no matter what words it is told in, is always in the one tune. They are hard workers; they are saving; they are careful in giving credit, and they watch their accounts close ly. John Konig had all these traits, but hard work only seemed to send more red blood into his cheeks, and responsibility never appeared to weigh on his spirits.

In a few years more he and a brother bought out the partner, securing a good bargain on long time, and the other dealers shook their heads at the load John had shouldered, and prophesied failure. But John's "luck" still stood his friend. He made payments easily, increased his trade, grew in influence, and at 35 would have been out of debt, but that he bought a stave factory, putting another brother into that as

This was a good investment. Timber was plenty, staves were in good demand at profitable prices, and the store and stave factory were made to help each other. Before this was wholly paid for he had another factory in operation, and before very long thereafter he and his brothers were owners of two stores and four stave factories.

His "luck" was now on everyone's tongue. He had been lucky in owning a store in good years; lucky in starting factories just when and where he did; lucky in having good brothers to take hold with him, and lucky to find everyone willing to give him credit and time. He laughed in his jovial way over his own "luck," evidently thinking of his career much as his neighbors thought of it; but when dull times came and sale of his principal store, people said, with one accord, that "John was the luckiest fellow that ever lived," and I saw that he was of their way of thinking.

But the stave business began to grow dull. As timber grew scarce it cost more. Competition in making staves ran down the price of the manufactured article, while competition in purchasing ran np the price of the raw material. People were not figuring how much money they were making but whether they were holding their own on any building, and if within three years it should crack or peel off, and thus fail to moderate pace were thankful if they came moderate pace were thankful if they came out even, but they who had been watching their riches grow rapidly each year were alert to find new ventures to restore their former profits.

The town of Colton had once had a grist work, and had ruined the last owner, when in this." fortunately it burned down. When on the face of the earth and in operation no one had given it credit for being of much help to the town, but when it was in ashes, every dull day, every unfortunate transactions was the grist mill, which they had despised when in existence.

A few weeks ago the mercantile agency notified me that Konig & Bros. had failed. I attended the meeting of creditors, but I observed that his townsmen, if they happened to be his creditors, were very bitter against him, and cursed him now much as a short while since they had lauded him.

He stood up before us all and told his story. I have never been so sorry for a man since I began business. No one doubted that he was telling the exact truth. He said: "I think I went into this thing as carefully and as cautiously as a man could have done. When we were ready to build we had $24,000 in the bank to our credit. We expected the mill would stand us $20,000. I heard of a very complete mill in Wayne that was about the size and capacity of the one we thought of putting up. I went there, accompanied by a millwright, who came to me well recommended. He offered to duplicate that mill for $18,000, and we told him to go ahead. The mill stood before us, before we had made one cent's worth of flour, $58,000. To raise this we had to borrow at 8 per cent. interest. such a profit in flour as I had been led to believe. We were always pressed for money and I have sold many a carload, not at $2.50 profit we figured on per barrel, but at a posicovered by mortgages to raise money for this mill."

"What do the assets show?" some one asked.

"About eleven cents on a dollar."

"This shows mighty poor calculation, or fore you got down to such a point as this?" We kept hoping for a change for the bet-

"Yes," spoke up a rasping voice that I recognized as belonging to a little grocer in Colton, who had formerly been the loudest in singing the praises of "Lucky John," "he had the 'big head,' and couldn't see how anything of his could fail; he thought he had a sure thing on his luck, but she's gone back on him, gentlemen, and I'm $50 out." "Yes," said John bitterly, "I had plenty

What is needed is an escape that is manipulated by persons on the ground—one that can be raised, lowered, and moved to any window in the building, and rescue three or four men, women, or children at one time. There are patent fire escapes innumerable, some embracing ideas that are without doubt very ingenious, but they all contain this one great fault, they are not handled by persons on the ground. Again, architects and builders should take into consideration the fact that fire escapes, as they are now made, are not an enhancement to the good appearance of buildings.

About Cigars. Cigar Dealer in Chicago Herald.

The nineteen couldn't tell a good cigar from a poor one. When we began work I found there was no Even the people who pay pretty good prices for their cigars do so because they are proud. Subscribers and others, when writing o advertisers, will confer a favor on the pubsher by mentioning that they saw the adversement in the columns of this paper. During the height of the labor excitement in this city, the workingmen sent to Chicago for George A. Schilling as a proper person to guide them in their silly position on the eight hour question. Schilling responded to the call and delivered a number of harrangues to anxious listeners, who applauded him to the echo, while they turned deaf ears to life-long friends. Schilling returned to Chicago and championed the cause of the bomb throwers, and subsequent events have disclosed the fact that he was implicated in the anarchist plot which will go down to history as one of the blackest crimes ever perpetrated in a free country. Such are the men the workingmen turn to for advise in time of trouble!

The Workman, while admitting that boycotting is a crime in some states, asserts that such is not the case in Michigan. If the Workman will take the trouble to refer to Howell's compilation, chapter 321, section 9275, it will find that boycotting is a crime, according to the statute of this State, and that any one who practices boycotting is liable to punishment by imprisonment from three months in the county jail to two years in the State prison. Under this statute the editor and proprietor of the Workman are criminals and liable to arrest and punishment for the part their paper is taking in boycotting a certain mercantile & Lewis in the grocery business at Mc-

Adulterated Castor Oil. From the Druggists' Circular.

A confidential circular has recently been sent to wholesale druggists, soliciting orders for a new adulterant for castor oil. We do not know to what extent jobbers received such propositions, but this is certainly one of the boldest and plainest swindles of its kind we have ever heard of.

As a matter of interest we reproduce the circular in full, omitting only the name and address:

To Wholesale Druggists Only:

"C C Castor Oil" is offered to the whole sale drug trade only. "C C Castor Oil" is sold to the wholesale drug trade only. "C C Castor Oil" is sold on its merits, and we guarantee it to be and do all that we "C C Castor Oil" is sold at 62 cents per gallon-60 days or 6 per cent. discount for cash, f o b cars in Cleveland or Cicago. "C C Castor" is an adulterant for pure castor oil and our claims for it are based on the experience which two years' sales have brought us. "C C Castor Oil' has enabled us to make more money on castor oil within the past year than we have made before on all the castor oil we have sold in years," is what one of the leading wholesale druggists of America said to one of our representatives this spring.

"C C Castor Oil," will mix readily with pure castor oil; either best or No 2 or 3, at any temperature—will not separate as it has the same specific gravity-18 B. When mixed in equal portions with pure castor oil it cannot be detected, without long and ingenious tests, which are seldom applied.

If taken internally, is perfectly harmless, acting in unison with the castor oil, except ing to exert a mild sedative influence, which some of the best medical talent in the country have assured us, is highly beneficial in a majority of cases, where castor oil is prescribed.

If mixed with castor oil intended for lubricating purposes, the mixture will be found to be equally as good a lubricant as the pure castor would be. By using "C C Castor ward path. Spanish pharmaceutical papers Oil" you will be enabled to make a fair complain bitterly of hard times among the profit, without detriment to yourself on trade. Shop after shop is being closed, and goods which are already sold on a narrow in some houses the receipts have fallen to margin. From the teritory over which our one-fourth of what they were a short time sales are distributed, we know that no ago. The decline in legitimate pharmacy wholesale druggist in the United States can is ascribed principally to the establishsell pure castor oil without competing with ment of military pharmacies, and to the goods containing some of our "C C Castor increase of quackery and the sale of nostrums. Oil."

We invite your attention to these facts, and respectfully solicit your order for a sample barrel, or what you may need for

A sample of this adulterant shows it to be a liquid of about the same color and consisthat lasts some time. It does not dissolve in or mix clear with alcohol, and a mixture of it with castor oil is easily shown in this

This adulterant is probably nothing more than a heavy, light colored, neutral mineral oil, worth about twenty cents per gallon.

It is hardly probable that much of this kind of castor oil is sold to pharmacists, as it would more likely go to the grocery trade or ountry stores, who usually buy castor oil in small bottles, yet it is well to look out for

In localities where there is a strong groery or other competition, it might be interesting to see how the castor oil is labelled, and to test it as above. It would be interesting to know who the "leading wholesale druggist" referred to was. He certainly ought to be nearer the tail end than the lead, and the National Wholesale Druggist's Association, every member of which has probaby received this circular, should certainly ake some action in the matter.

That "some of the best medical talent in take some action in the matter. the country" could be induced to say of this adulteraut that its""mild sedative influence, is "highly beneficial in a majority of cases," if very remarkable, and it would also be interesting to know who they are.

The statement that every wholesale druggist has to compete with "goods" containing this adulterant, if true, would show that jobbers in all parts of the country were willing to increase their profits by means that ought to bring the severest condemnation and punishment.

Unfortunately many States have little or no legislation for the prevention of adulteration, and in others such laws are not enforc ed as vigorously as they should be.

The active denunciation and prosecution of such offenders will do much to strengthen pharmacists in the estimation of the medical profession and the public. We know of no more commendable or important undertaking for pharmaceutical associations and druggists all over the country. Let no guilty jobber escape.

President Heath tence as a medium quality of castor oil. It called the meeting to order, and appointed has a heavy greasy odor, and a peculiar taste I. C. Terry critic for the evening. After the reading of a few communications, the papers on "Inorganic Acids" and "Alkaloids" were then called for, but neither were finished and both were turned over to the next meeting. The members then settled down to discussions and social conversation, after which the critic's report was heard, and the meeting adjourned. The second June meeting, which fell on the 23d, was not held, owing to a lack of attendance sufficient to constitute a quorum. As there would be a three weeks' intermission before the next meeting, a special meeting was called on the 30th to discuss important matters relative to the Association. The next meeting falls on the 28th.

A Good Union Man.

John McGovern in Chicago Current.

It is not easy to live at all, and it is all the more difficult to live if we be forced to do work that has been thought out by others, and where our importance dwindles as population increases.

Therefore, if you and I be incapable of a happy financial calculation which, when submitted to the ordeal of practice, will bear out all or most of our hopes, then we must go to our fellowman who may have been able to think, or whose relatives may so have been able to think and ask him if he have not thought out more productive work than he can do with his own hands, and if he would not like to use our hands as well, and at his terms-because, in the end he must always make the terms, inasmuch as he makes all the money to pay us.

Here the word "hands" is mixed with a little brains—not much, but just enough to say "brains." It is not the kind of brains, however, that secures a wage-fund.

So, then, we go to work for this good man-good because he has the brains we have not. And next we find that after centuries of experiment, it has become known that the building of houses where there are no empty houses surely pays-something. We therefore go to our good employer and say: "Here, you are paying us something to be sure; yet you could pay us more before you would let us quit."

"But," says our employer, "there are so many men that, if you quit, I can get oth-

We find that to be the fact. We thereupon assert that we have wrongs, and form a society to band together all workers on buildings, for the purpose of cornering the

So, the work being hard, the season being short, and strikes being especially worrisome to a builder, we again wait on our employer and say: "Now we must have higher wages or we quit you."

have prepared for him, increases our wages her for the last thirty-five years a huge box and accepts for his own profits half of what containing all the bottles of medicine he he had thought out.

meeting and declare that no one knows how caused her death. much our employer is making. We no longer want to work; we want to wait on employers and demand more wages. We dream.

In our next interview with our employer, he tells us that we are asking more than he can make. We do not understand his attican make. We do not understand his attitude, but the fact is he is about to strike on us. As soon as he shall do so, we will suffer-unless we may have brains enough to take his place and think for ourselves. By thinking, of course, I mean to know the

So we strike, or rather, he strikes. We have asked him to plan and risk, and let us have the house in wages. He will not do it. So we all fall idle, and we all run down at the heels very fast. We find that we on the average, are as selfish as the employer, dition that pride sometimes makes the employer less selfish, while we are so poor that we cannot pay the fines that pride imposes.

Why do we form unions?

First, I apprehend, to corner the market and thus secure the largest share that our thinking comrade the "employer," can renounce; but, in the main, for the purpose of forging public opinion and enlarging personal liberty. An employer of union men is often the most loyal union man in his establishment. George W. Childs sends his check to the printers' union. This is because he is morally a member of that union. In his heart capital and labor are at peace. God bless all like him!

These foregoing observations might lead to the following soliloquy of a good union

"Our environments teach us that a form of labor union is necessary—just what form we do not yet know. It is our duty, as workmen, therefore, to be a member of some sort of society.

"It is my duty, if I be a union man, to attend all meetings and make those meetings as few as possible. It is my duty to see that the employer's side of our case is presented clearly and honestly. It is my duty to see that he be treated fairly. I must never forget my next day's toil in the heat of my oration. I must not go home thinking that I was a great man at the meeting, for that would be the commencement of a career as an 'agitator.'

"I must struggle to hold the liberties that I have. Indignities that profit my employer nothing, I must resist to starvation. Dirty back stairways and sixth story fire traps I must forever set my face against. In order to abolish the dirty back stairways, I must, however, aid my employer in punishing my drunken comrade who scandalizes better privileges every time he gets them.

"My work and the manner of doing it must be the foremost topic in my union. When the debate gets beyond that I had better call in my employer. "If I stick to my labor with both hands and brains, I shall help to form a public opinion which will abolish fire traps, bad smells, swearing foremen, truck stores, and all our ills. They will be abolished by law and by our employer. I must learn to give a good employer the benefit of all doubts. I can, I believe, best serve my own interests and those of my employer by holding to the independence of my union. A movement that looks to driving me from my work and ruining my employer when we are all doing well is beyond my sense of safety. I will not permit my union to take such a step. And I will not permit my union to exercise an authority over my own movements that I would call tyrannous in my employer. I will work, and if I feel that the condition of things is drifting beyond my reason, I will call on my employer and get his aid, for it is inconceivable by the utmost stretch of imagination, that I should ever escape toil. "I hope for eight hours of toil for five days and four for Saturdays, but that happy time is yet afar off. The hours of my toil are shortening and for that I thank God.

"I am, beyond question, the most independent, of civilized, worrying men, and I am led to believe that my humble lot in life is, after all, as healthy and happy as is the average with employers.

"I shall cease to ask for work whenever I feel I can do better alone. Till then I shall be very careful to avoid making my employ er strike on me.

"The ills I endure in the reduction of my wages are, I believe, largely caused by inincreased population. I, therefore, think immigration a bad thing.

"I grow daily more and more inclined to treat my Congressmen and Senators as my representatives and to hold them personally responsible for a neglect of my interests, yet whether or not they be guilty of anything more than ignorance is a question I cannot determine.

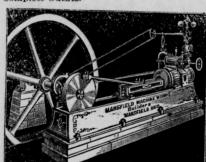

"I am not yet willing to work-for a corporation whose responsible head is beyond the reach of my union. I think I shall soon vote to have the Government absorb such corporations. I like them not. Meanwhile, my brothers who are willing to battle with them may fight the devil with fire, and I wish them the success I fear they will not

"But I live in the fear that I shall forget I must work. I hear so much talk about the rights of man that it sometimes makes

BUSINESS LAW.

Brief Digests of Recent Decisions in Courts of Last Resort.

AGREEMENT TO ARBITRATE-PENDING

An agreement to submit to arbitration, with a stipulation for an award and a judgment thereon, will not operate to discontinue a pending suit, according to the decision of the Supreme Court of Michigan in the case of Callinan vs. The Port Huron & Northwestern Railway Co.

ASSIGNMENT FOR CREDITORS-OMISSION FROM SCHEDULE.

Where a debtor who made a voluntary as signment for the benefit of creditors omitted from the schedule attached thereto a right of redemption which he had in certain premises conveyed by him to secure a debt, the Supreme Court of Georgia held that the omission was fatal to the assignment.

PROMISSORY NOTE-RELEASE OF PRINCI-

A suit brought upon a note against a principal debtor was dismissed at his solicitation, and he afterwards became insolvent. The Supreme Court of Tennesee held that the surety on the note should be released from liability, assuming that the money could have been made out of the principal if the suit had been prosecuted to final judgment.

CONTRACT TO TRANSFER INVENTOR'S

A suit brought to enforce a contract to transfer an inventor's right is not one in which the United States courts have particular jurisdiction, and where the parties to the suit are citizens of the same state the state courts have power in a proper case to decree a specific enforcement of the contract. So held by the Supreme Court of Michigan in the case of Nichols et al. vs.

LIABILITY OF CLOTHING-STORE KEEPERS.

A person while trying on a suit of clothes in a clothing store left his own clothes in a closet to which he had been directed by a salesman in the store. Certain property was stolen from his clothes while they were in the closet. No negligence having been proven against the proprietors of the store, the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts held that they were not liable for the loss of the property.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF DEBT.

A statement made by the owner of real estate to a prospective purchaser that a third party from whom the former had borrowed money had something like $2,000 in it, and that he, the vendor, wanted to sell the property to pay him out of it, was held not to be such a distinct, positive and unambiguous recognition of the debt as to remove the bar of the statute of limitations. Gerhard vs. Gerhard, decided by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

INFRINGEMENT OF TRADE MARK.

The case of the British Tea Association (Limited) vs. Cooke, decided recently by the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice (England), arose upon an action by the plaintiff to restrain the defendants from infringing the plaintiff's trade mark 14 and 16 Pearl Street, of "Mandarin" tea. It appeared that the plaintiffs had for some time sold tea in small packages, each package having a label bearing as a trade-mark the figure of a Mandarin above the words "Imperial Mandarin Tea, imported from China." The defendants afterward sold tea in packages of a different color and appearance under the title "Mandarin Tea," but it was shown that "Mardarin tea" had been sold in the market before the registration of the plaintiff's trade mark. The court held that under the circumstances the trade-mark could not be held to have been infringed.

Ready to Flop.

From the Wall Street News.

A Western Michigan wool buyer who was circulating among farmers to engage their clips, met with one who was inclined to look upon the matter as a sort of gambling affair.

"You agree to buy my wool for so much, a month in advance of shearing," said he. "How do you know that wool won't go up or down? The price may be too much or not enough. It looks like flying in the face of Providence. After a long argument he agreed to leave it to his wife, and she re-

UNFAVORABLY REGARDED.

President Herrick's Project Not Generally Commended.

As stated by THE TRADESMAN last week, President Herrick will lay a proposition before the next meeting of the Retail Grocer's Association, proposing that a certain portion of every regular meeting of the Association be set apart for the transaction of business between the jobber and retailer and that the jobbing trade be invited to be present in person and present any bargains or specialties in their respective lives. With a view to determining how the project is likely to be regarded by the jobbers, a reporter of THE TRADESMAN was detailed to interview the local trade on the subject and herewith presents the arguments set forth other than his extracts, and determined that in the speakers' own language, as far as possible:

Amos S. Musselman (Amos S. Musselman & Co.)-I don't see anything out of the way in that suggestion and I think I should try and get around to the meetings as often as once a month. I don't think the relatoo intimate. The better they know each other the better it is for all concerned.

Oscar D. Fisher (Arthur Meigs & Co.)—I the result of the analysis as follows: am not favorably disposed toward the "open board" style of bartering, as it is my experience that it is not desirable to either buy or sell in that manner. Private sales are to be preferred at all times, as in that way each buyer thinks he is getting a little better bargain than his neighbor.

Samuel M. Lemon (Bulkley, Lemon & Hoops)—That would be a picnic for the retailer. If I offered a certain brand of tomatoes for 98 cents a dozen, some other jobber would be sure to offer the same goods for 97 cents. I don't think we are ready to engage | year. in business of that character.

Geo. R. Perry (Hawkins & Perry)-I don't think much of such a scheme. Sup- to all fear to their wholesomeness and posing there are fifty grocers present. One bring them, friends among people who man is sharp pay and another pays in four are not sure me roods they are now using months or whenever the fancy strikes him. If we offer a bargain, it is just as apt to be grabbed up by the slow payer as by the cash man. Such a project would give all an equal chance, which is contrary to the usages of the commercial world.

Chas. E. Olney (Olney, Shields & Co.)—I think the jobber and retailer ought to work together, and that is just what the jobbing establishments are for. It is the proper place for the transaction of business.

class farce. It would result in one jobber underbidding another until there would be the vanilla more satisfactorily than could no margin left on anything.

The Grocery Market.

Sugars are only fairly firm, the tendency being toward lower figures. Tea and coffee are steady. Salmon are high and scarce and canned mackeral are advancing. Nearly all kinds of canned fruits and vegetables are sustaining an upward movement, in consequence of the extended drought and the surety of a very considerable shortage. Tomatoes alone have advanced 21/2c a dozen within a week.

The orange crop is exhausted. Lemons are steady at full prices. They are worth more in New York than they are bringing through with harvesting and the yield is in Grand Rapids. Candy is steady. Nuts are steady, except grenoble walnuts, which are avancing.

Will Wind Them Up.

The Grand Rapids School Furniture Co. has secured an injunction against Elijah Haney and the Haney Manufacturing Co., forbidding the latter to continue the manufacture of school seats with certain patented attachments owned by the Grand Rapids School Furniture Co. Haney and his company have been on their "last legs" for some time and this action will undoubtedly "wind them up."

IENNINGS VINDICATED.

He Maintains the Reputation of His Extracts at Any Hazard.

From THE TRADESMAN, June 30.

The reputation of Jennings' extracts for purity and strength has become a matter of ommon acknowledgment. They have stood the test of time and have come to be regarded by the trade and consumer as absolutely the best goods on the market. In view of these facts, Messrs. Jennings & Smith were somewhat surprised about two weeks ago to receive the following letter from a dealer who had handled their extracts many years:

LAWTON, June 11, 1886. Mess. Jennings & Smith. Grand Rapics:

GENTLEMEN-I sold six bottles of your best vanilla, to be put into ice cream, Wednesday, and it made twenty of our citi-Wednesday, and it made twenty of our citizens very sick, so sick that some came near dying. What do you suppose was the matter with it? The family who made the cream are not able to stand the loss (twelve gallons) and expect you will make it right with them and pay the costs of having it applying. Late some of the gream and it analyzed. I ate some of the cream and it made me very sick. I hope and expect you will have the vanilla analyzed, so that if it is pure I will not lose my trade on your extracts, which I have handled for so many

Hoping to hear from you by return mail, I remain.

Very Respectfully Yours,

B. J. DESENBERG. P. S.—I hope you will vindicate your-selves and me, as it will do us both great damage if it is not proven to be pure vanilla which was used. I think the vanilla is all right and the fault lies somewhere else. I expect you will have it analyzed by Prof. Kedzie of the Agricultural College, or at Ann Arbor, so that the people will see that it is impartial.

Confident of the purity of his goods, satis fied that the poisoning was due to causes no one should say aught against their purino one should say aught against their puri-ty, Mr. Jennings immediately repaired to any mixture with the rank acid coffees grow Lawton, where he arranged with the persons who made the ice cream to send a quantity of the cream and also some of the lined cartoons, and 2 lb tins by all leading vanilla to Prof. Vaughan, Professor of Retail Geocers. Chemistry at the State University, for tions between the jobber and retailer can be analysis. Prof. Vaughan, whose reputation is world-wide and whose opinions can by no possible means be impeached, reports

> The poison in the ice cream is due to the decomposition in the milk. The poison lobtained from one-half pint of cream produced in a cat the same symptoms which the persons suffered from. The people at Lawton thought that the poison was in the vanilla extract used and sent some of that, which I have analyzed and used myself without finding the least trace of poison. The poison is liable to be developed in any milk which is kept in unclean vessels or impure atmos phere. I found no mineral poison in it, no arsenic, etc., but succeeded in getting the same poison as I did from the cheese last

Such expert testimony as to the purity of Jennings' extracts will forever put an end are equally meritorious. LATER-STRONG TESTIMONY.

In his official report to the State Board of Health, Prof. Vaughan thus describes how he tested the purity of Jenning's extract of vanilla, which is the highest praise the article could possibly receive:

June 13, 1886, I received from Dr. Henry B. Baker, Secretary of the Michigan State Board of Health, a pint bottle about two-thirds full of melted ice cream, with the re-quest that I analyze it, as some 18 persons Heman G. Barlow (Cody, Ball & Co.)—
The absence of Mr. Ball has prevented me giving the subject that attention which its thought that the poison would be found in importance demands and which the trade the vanilla, because some lemon ice cream has reason to respect from the "best posted furnished at the same gathering had not affected those who ate of it. As the readiest means of deciding this, my assistant, Mr. Novie, and myself took at first 30 drops Frank Jewell (Clark, Jewell & Co.)—I each of the vanilla extract. No ill effects following this, Mr. Novie took two teahave been done by a chemical analysis.

The "Tradesman" Cigar.

Fox & Bradford have put on the market a new brand of cigars yclept "Tradesman." Here's to hoping that the cigar may be as successful as its illustrious namesake and give as universal satisfaction.

Henry Royce writes THE TRADESMAN as follows from Decatur: "I have been trying hard to find something in the way of news worth writing you, but news seems scarce, there being no business changes or anything of the kind. The farmers are nearly lots and 35@38c in carlots. generally good, some getting as high as forty bushels to the acre.
