GRAND RAPIDS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1886.

NO. 163.

A Warning.

Pain is given for the wise purpose of informing us of the presence of danger and disease. Any little excitement of an unusual nature disturbs the balance of the system, the nervous energies are exhausted, and headache and a hundred other disturbances are the result. Many of the miseries of modern man and womanhood might be cured and prevented were their approach heeded and resisted, having their origin in derangements of the liver and blood, dyspepsia, jaundice, indigestion, costiveness and other unwholesome conditions. Evils of a diseased nature find a certain cure by the use of Golden Seal Bitters. In this medicine, nature, aided by art, has produced a rare combination of medicinal properties, wisely adapted for the cure of diseases common to mankind. The vitalizing principles embodied in Golden Seal Bitters will assuredly cure the broken down dyspeptic. Sold by Hazeltine, Perkins & Co., wholesale druggists, Grand Rapids, Mich.

CUSHMAN'S MENTHOL INHALER

NEURALGIA

Quickly relieved by Cushman's Menthol Inhaler when all others fail. How is that possible? Because by inhalation the very volatile remedy is carried directly to the delicate net work of nerves in the nose and head, and applied directly to the nerves, and so rapidly assimilated that quick relief is obtained. It will last six months to one year, and the last grain is as potent as the first inhalation. You will find it sells rapidly. Retail price, 50c.

The Cry of the Dreamer.
I am tired of planning and toiling,
In the crowded hives of men;
Heart weary of building and spoiling,
And spoiling and building again.
And I long for the dear old river,
Where I dreamed my youth away;
For a dreamer lives forever,
And a toiler dies in a day.

I am sick of the showy seeming,
Of a life that is half a lie;
Of the faces lined with scheming
In the throng that hurries by,
From the sleepless thoughts and endeavor,
I would go where the children play;
For a dreamer lives forever,
And a toiler dies in a day.

I feel no pride, but pity
For the burdens the rich endure.
There is nothing sweet in the city
But the patient lives of the poor.
Oh, the little hands too skillful,
And the child mind choked with weeds!
The daughter's heart grown willful,
And the father's heart that bleeds!

No, no! from the streets rude bustle,
From trophies of mart and stage,
I would fly to the woods' low rustle,
The meadow's softly rustling page.
Let me dream as of old by the river,
And be loved for the dreamer's sake;
For a dreamer lives forever,
And a toiler dies in a day.

EPISODE OF A NOTION PEDDLER.

A cold winter's night found a strange load of us gathered about the warm fire of a bar-room in a Northern Michigan village. Shortly after we arrived a notion peddler drove up and ordered that his horse should be stabled for the night. After he had eaten supper, he repaired to the bar-room and as soon as the ice was broken conversation flowed freely. Several anecdotes had been related and finally the peddler was asked to give us a story, as men of his profession were generally full of adventure and anecdote. He was a short, thick-set man somewhere about forty years of age, and gave evidence of great physical strength. He gave his name as Lemuel Vinney, and his home was at Grand Rapids.

"Well, gentlemen," he commenced, knocking the ashes from his pipe and putting it in his pocket, "suppose I tell you of about the last thing of any consequence that happened to me. It was about two months ago, one pleasant evening I pulled up at the door of a small hotel in a village in Hancock county, Indiana. I said it was pleasant; I meant it was warm, but it was cloudy and likely to be very dark. I went in and called for supper and had my horse taken care of, and after I had eaten I sat down in the bar-room. It began to rain about 8 o'clock, and for a while it poured down hard, and it was very dark outdoors.

"Now, I wanted to be in Jackson early the next morning, for I expected a load of goods there for me, which I meant to dispose of on my way home. The moon would rise about midnight, and I knew that if it did not rain I could get along very comfortably through the mud after that. So I asked the landlord if he would see that my horse was fed about midnight, as I wished to be off before 2. He expressed some surprise at this, and asked me why I did not stop to breakfast. I told him that I had sold my last load about all out, and that a new lot of goods was waiting for me at Jackson, and I wanted to be there for them before the express agent left in the morning. There was a number of people about while I told this, but I took little notice of them, one man only attracting my attention. I had in my possession a small package of placards which I was to deliver to the sheriff at Jackson, and they were notices for the detection of a notorious robber named Dick Hardhead. These bills gave a description of his person, and the man before me answered very well to it. In fact, it was perfect. He was a tall, well-formed man, rather slight in frame, and had the appearance of a gentleman, save that his face bore those hard, cruel marks which an observing man cannot mistake for anything but the index of a villainous disposition.

"When I went up to my room I asked the landlord who that man was describing the suspicious individual. He said he did not know him. He had come there that afternoon and intended to leave sometime during the next day. The host asked me why I wished to know, and I simply told him that the man's countenance was familiar, and I wished to know if I had ever been acquainted with him. I resolved not to let the landlord into the secret, but to hurry on to Jackson and there give information to the sheriff, and perhaps he might reach the inn before the villain left; for I had no doubts with regard to his identity.

"I had an alarm watch, and having set it to give the alarm at 1 o'clock. I went to sleep. I was aroused at the proper time and immediately got up and dressed myself. When I reached the yard I found the clouds all passed away and the moon was shining brightly. The hostler was easily aroused and by 2 o'clock I was on the road. The mud was deep and my horse could not travel very fast, yet it struck me that the beast made more work than was any need of, for the cart was nearly empty, my whole stock consisting of about half a dozen tin pans and a lot of loose rags.

"However, on we went, and in the course of half an hour I was clear of the village, and at a short distance ahead lay a large tract of forest, mostly of great pines. The road ran directly through this wood and, as near as I can remember, the distance was not far from twelve miles. The moon was in the east and, as this road run nearly west, I should have light enough. I had entered the wood and had gone, perhaps, half a mile when my wagon wheels settled, with a bump and a jerk, into a deep hole. I uttered an exclamation of astonishment; but that was not all. I heard another exclamation from another source!

"What could it be? I looked quickly around but could see nothing, and yet I knew that the sound I had heard was very close to me. As the hind wheels came up I felt something roll or tumble from one side to the other of my wagon and I could also feel the jar occasioned by the movement. It was simply a man in my cart! I knew this on the instant. You may have noticed my cart as I came up this evening. The main part of it opens behind, and there is room enough within for quite a party, providing they'd stow themselves close enough. Of course I felt puzzled. At last I wondered if some poor fellow had not taken this method to obtain a ride. But I soon gave this up, for I knew that any decent man would have asked me for a ride and taken it comfortably. My next idea was that somebody had got in there to sleep. But this passed away as quickly as it came, for no man would have broken into my cart for that purpose. And that thought, gentlemen, opened my eyes. Whoever was in there had broken in.

"My next thoughts were of Dick Hardhead. He had heard me say that my load was all sold out, and of course he supposed I had some money with me. And in this he was right, for I had over $2,000. I also thought that he meant to leave the cart when he supposed I had reached a safe place, and then either creep over and shoot me or knock me down, or, perhaps, slip out and ask for a ride, or something of that sort. All this passed through my mind by the time I had got a rod from the hole.

"Now, I never make it a point to brag of myself, but yet I have seen a great deal of the world, and I am pretty cool and clear-headed under difficulty. In a very few moments my resolution was formed. My horse was now knee deep in the mud, and I knew I could slip off without any noise. So I drew my revolver—I never travel in that country without it—it is a six-barreled one and sure fire. I drew this, and having twined the reins about the whipstock, I carefully slipped down in the mud, and as the cart passed on I went behind it and examined the hasp. The door of the cart lets down, and is fastened with a hasp which slips over a staple, and is then secured by a padlock. The padlock was gone, and the hasp was secured in its place by a bit of pine stick, so that a slight push from within could break it. My wheel-wrench hung in a leather bucket on the side of the cart, and I quickly took it out and slipped it into the staple, the iron handle just sliding down.

"Now I had him. My cart was almost new, with a stout frame of white oak, and made on purpose for hard usage, heavy loads, and service. I did not believe that any ordinary man could break out. I got onto my cart as noiselessly as I got off, and then urged my horse on, still keeping my pistol handy. I knew that at the distance of a mile further I should come to a good hard road, and allowed my horse to pick his own way through the mud. It was about 10 minutes after this that I heard a motion in the cart, followed by a grinding noise, as though some heavy force were being applied to the door. This continued some moments, and then came a heavy thump, as though the sole of a boot were applied to the door. I said nothing, but the idea struck me that the villain might try to judge about where I sat and shoot up through the top of the cart at me, so I sat down on the footboard.

"Of course I knew now that my unexpected passenger was a villain, for he must have been awake ever since I started, and nothing else in the world but absolute villainy would have caused him to remain quiet so long and then start up in this particular place. The thumping and pushing grew louder, and pretty soon I heard a human voice.

"Let me out of this!" he cried, and he yelled pretty loudly.

"I lifted my head up so as to make him think that I was sitting in my usual place, and then asked him what he was doing in there.

"Let me out and I'll tell ye," he replied.

"Tell me what you're in there for," I said.

"I got in here to sleep on your rags," he answered.

"How'd ye get in?" I asked.

"Let me out, or I'll shoot ye through the head," he yelled.

"Just at that moment my horse's feet struck the hard road, and I knew that the rest of the route to Jackson would be good going. The distance was twelve miles. I slipped back upon the footboard and took the whip. I had the same horse then I've got now; a tall, stout, powerful bay mare, and you may believe there's some go in her. At any rate, she struck a gait that even astonished me. She had had a good mess of oats, the night was cool, and she felt like going. In fifteen minutes we cleared the woods, and away we went at a great pace. The chap inside kept yelling to be let out, and threatened to shoot if I didn't let him out. Finally he stopped, and in a few moments came the reports of a pistol, one, two, three, four, one right after the other, and I heard the balls whiz over my head. If I had been on my seat one of those balls, if not two of them, must have gone through me. I popped up my head again and gave a yell and then a deep groan, and then I said, 'O, save me! I'm a dead man! Then I made a shuffling noise, as though I were falling off, and finally settled down on the foot-board, I now urged up the old mare by giving her an occasional poke with the butt of the whip, and she went along faster than ever.

"The man called out to me twice more pretty soon after this, and as he got no reply he made some tremendous endeavors to break the door open, and as this failed him he made several attempts upon the top. But I had no fears of his doing anything there, for the top of my cart is framed in with dovetails and each sleeper bolted to the posts with an iron bolt. I had it made so that I could carry heavy loads there. By-and-by, after all else had failed, the scamp commenced to holler 'whoa' to the horse, and kept it up until he became hoarse. All this time I kept perfectly quiet, holding the reins firmly and poking the beast with the whip.

"He wasn't an hour going that dozen miles—not a bit of it. I hadn't much fear; perhaps I might tell the truth and say that I had none, for I had a good pistol, and, more than that, my passenger was safe; yet I did feel glad when I came to the old four-barrel factory that stands at the edge of Jackson village, and in ten minutes more I hauled up in front of the tavern and found a couple of men cleaning down some stage horses.

"Well, old fellow," says I, as I get down and went round to the back of the wagon, 'you've had a good ride, haven't ye?"

"Who are you?" he cried, and his voice trembled a little, too, as he asked the question.

"I am the man you tried to shoot," I told him.

"Where am I? Let me out!" he yelled.

"Look here," said I 'we've come to a safe stopping place, and mind ye I've got a revolver ready for ye the moment ye show yourself. Now lay quiet."

"By this time the two hostlers had come to see what was the matter, and I explained it all to them. After this I got one of them to run and find the sheriff, and tell him what I believed I'd got for him. The first streaks of daylight were now just coming up and in half an hour it would be broad daylight. In less than that time the sheriff came and two other men with him. I told him the whole story in a few words, exhibited the hand-bills I had for him and then he made for the cart. He told the chap inside who he was and that if he made the least resistance he'd be a dead man. But, mind you, the sheriff didn't tell him the suspicions we had about him. Then I slipped the iron wrench out, and as I let the door down, the fellow made a spring. I caught him by the ankle and he came down on his face and in a moment more the officers had him. He was the very man I had suspected and his fine black clothes were pretty well covered with lint and dirt. He was marched off to the lockup, and I told the sheriff I should remain in the town all day.

"After breakfast the sheriff came down to the tavern and told me that I had caught the very bird; and that if I would remain until the next morning I should have the reward of $200 which had been offered. I found my goods all safe, paid the express agent for bringing them from Indianapolis, and then went to work to stow them away in my cart. I found the bullet-holes in the top of my vehicle just as I expected. They were in a line, about five inches apart, and had I been where I usually sit two of them would have hit me somewhere about the small of the back and passed upward, for they were sent with a heavy charge of powder, and his pistol was a heavy one.

"The next morning the sheriff called upon me and paid me $200 in gold, for he had made himself sure that he had got the villain. After an early dinner I set out, and here I am. I've sold my load all out and am now ready to lay up for the winter. I found a letter in the office at Portsmouth for me, from the sheriff of Hancock county, and he informed me that Mr. Hardhead is now in prison for life."

So ended the peddler's story. In the morning I had the curiosity to look at his cart, and I found the four bullet-holes just as he had told us, though they were now plugged up with vial corks. Vinney came out while I was looking and showed me the prints of the villain's feet upon the cart. They were plain, and must have been given with great force.

"Aurelia, darling, 'Yes, Arthur.' 'You know we are soon to be married.' 'Yes.' 'And we should learn to be economical in all things.' 'Yes.' 'Hadn't you better turn down the gas?"

"THE CANVASSING FRAUD."

Immediately upon receipt of the letter from Frank Hibbard, the Evert druggist, which is given on another page of this issue, THE TRADESMAN wrote for further particulars regarding the person referred to and the manner in which he proposed to operate his system. The reply came promptly at hand, as follows:

Agreeable to your request, I interviewed the local "attorney" established by the fellow who secured the memberships—and the $3. The person's name is C. H. Rose and he is free to admit that he does not see how the guarantee affords the member any advantages he did not already enjoy as an individual. He says the fellow left no printed blanks, rules, instructions or papers of any kind, except a written list of attorneys—evidently made up from some second-class directory. Rose thinks that he used the names of many business men on his certificates (which he exhibited as inducements) who did not join or pay him money. I know that he had the names of men belonging to recently organized local associations. This first led me to doubt him and afterwards caused him to give me a wide berth while in town.

The fellow sailed under the name of "I. E. Loomis," and registered from New York. He was accompanied by a lady and a little girl about six years old.

Mr. Hibbard also favors THE TRADESMAN with one of the certificates of membership given those who are so foolish as to pay the fellow $3, which bears strong evidence of fraud on its face. The advantages alleged to accrue to membership in "The United States Commercial Agency" are no advantages whatever, being no more than are possessed by the merchant before joining the "Agency"—and paying the $3. The scheme is about as clever as half the swindling games played upon the unwary merchant, but it does not possess a single element to recommend it to the consideration of any shrewd business man.

THE TRADESMAN would esteem it a favor to be informed of the whereabouts of the man who is working the fraudulent scheme, as he moves around about the State, and will endeavor to keep the trade posted as to his movements.

As will be seen by referring to the communication from the Secretary of the Greenville Business Men's Association, published elsewhere in this week's paper, that organization has taken the initiative in rendering it uncomfortable for the dead-beat who creeps into the ranks. Such a step is eminently proper and will secure the commendation of every friend of organization. As the cardinal principle of organization is fairness, it is manifestly unjust for any association to harbor an individual against whom its weapons would be turned were he not connected with the guild. As the tendency of organization is to elevate the standard of mercantile integrity, conformity with the laws of self-preservation would naturally dictate the expulsion of every person whose presence in the association would have a tendency to bring the organization into disrepute. The man who is unwilling to practice what he preaches should be summarily dealt with.

As an excellent illustration of the material benefits which can be secured through concerted effort in association work, THE TRADESMAN commends the action of the Lyons Business Men's Association in securing the location at that place of the Grand Ledge Chair Co., a manufacturing establishment heretofore located at Grand Ledge, but which has been prevailed upon to remove to Lyons by reason of the tempting offer held out to the concern to locate at that place.

Stone Bros., the Ionia dry goods firm, have failed again. The last time they failed, they settled for 25 cents on the dollar, which enabled the brothers to buy fine residences and their wives to lead the fashions of the town. As soon as they have effected a compromise this time, THE TRADESMAN will expect to learn that they have bought a brick block or purchased several thousand dollars' worth of bank stock. There's nothing like failing right, to get a good start in the world.

Burr Oak organized according to programme last Tuesday evening. Wayland organized Wednesday evening and Grand Haven Friday evening. Tustin organizes next Wednesday evening and Muir the following evening. Who says the work is not proceeding rapidly?

Greenville (50 members), Sparta (30 members) and Hastings (26 members) have identified themselves with the M. B. M. A. since the last report. This gives the State organization a total membership to date of 496.

The New York City grocers have been the victims of a species of contemptible persecution during the campaign. Those who refused to vote and work for Henry George, the communistic candidate for Mayor, have been boycotted by the Knights of Labor, and in some cases the Knights have gone so far as to place pickets around a grocer's establishment, to prevent his regular customers from trading with him. The freedom which the Knights of Labor claim for themselves they refuse to accord to others.

A State paper is authority for the statement that the Knights of Labor of Battle Creek are talking of starting a co-operative store, "where all sorts of goods will be furnished at cost." If the Knights of Labor of Battle Creek are half as smart as they evidently think they are, they will never let their project get further than "talk."

AMONG THE TRADE.

GRAND RAPIDS GOSSIP.

J. O. Sabin has engaged in the meat business at 694 South Division street.

Bale & Crandall have engaged in general trade at Amble. Cody, Ball & Co. furnished the stock.

Butters & Baldwin, druggists at Ludington, have purchased the drug stock of W. H. Taylor at that place.

Root & Finn, two of Coldwater's young business men, have purchased the general stock of Andrew Winchester, of Allen.

The Michigan Drug Exchange reports the sale of the Dr. J. W. Kirtland drug stock, at Lakeview, to C. F. Broden, late of Grand Rapids.

Wm. H. Merritt retired from the grocery firm of Merritt & Eckenfels, at Manistee, on Oct. 20. The business is continued by F. A. Eckenfels.

Hancock & Boyce write THE TRADESMAN as follows from Potosky: "We have purchased the grocery and provision stock of Rose Bros. & Co. at 5 per cent. less than inventory value, freight and cartage, the purchase price being $2,000. We have leased the old location for a term of years."

MANUFACTURING MATTERS.

David C. Bradley, of Bangor Furnace, is dead.

Hastings' new roller mill has a capacity of 400 barrels of flour per day.

The Mancelona broom factory is turning out 80 dozen brooms per day.

W. D. Wing & Co., at Wingleton, are rebuilding their planing mill, recently burned.

Snow Bros. have removed their grist mill from Woodland, Barry county, to Lake City.

The George W. Roby Lumber Co. has disposed of all its standing pine and will sell the mill as soon as a purchaser can be found.

J. J. Lyon, D. H. Hessler and B. W. Brewer have purchased the shingle mill at Indian River, owned by Foss & Leller, of Bay City.

STRAY FACTS.

The Bank of Mancelona moved into its new building October 25.

Fred E. Stone has engaged in the meat business at Grand Haven.

Daniel L. Johnson, miller at Yorkville, was recently burned out.

Abel A. Brockway, pine land and lumber dealer at Saginaw, is dead.

L. B. Crandall, agricultural implement dealer at Ithaca, has sold out.

Sherman & Rae, saloon keepers at Mecosta, are offering a compromise.

J. E. Smith succeeds Manee & Smith in the meat business at Eaton Rapids.

Willoughby & Davison succeed Peet & Peet in the hotel business at Ithaca.

W. S. May succeeds Allen & May in the blacksmith business at Stockbridge.

Frost & Brewster, lumber dealers and planing mill operators at Hudson, are closing out.

Geo. Metz is looking up machinery for his new tannery at Mill Creek. The buildings will not be erected until next spring.

On Mud lake, near Sault Ste. Marie, several camps have been located for putting in black birch and other hardwood logs.

Mack & Schmid, having purchased the wool of nearly all the buyers around Ann Arbor, sold it recently to a western mill located in the Mississippi valley.

A Fairfield correspondent writes as follows: Cheese factories are receiving about double the amount of milk now they did last year at this time of the season, and eight pounds make one of cheese.

Jasper Robinson purchased a tract of land of the Elk Rapids Iron Co., on Torch lake. Off the land, in 10 months, he cut 12,000 cords of wood, 440 cords of hemlock bark and 2,000,000 feet of hardwood logs.

Hastings is to have a second bank. Mr. C. Beebe, a Kalamazoo capitalist, is the prime mover in the matter, but the majority of the $50,000 capital is taken by business men and farmers in Hastings and vicinity.

A board of directors has been already chosen.

F. C. Beard has sold the southeast quarter of section 31, Mecosta township, to the Michigan Shingle Co., of Muskegon; consideration $2,600. There is estimated to be 1,700,000 feet of hemlock standing on the tract and it is the intention of the purchasers to put this timber into the Muskegon the coming winter.

OLD BARRELS

Setting about a store are unsightly, besides the projecting nails on them are dangerous to clothing. The enterprising grocer realizes the value of handsome and convenient fixtures, and to meet this demand the Woolson Spice Co., of Toledo, Ohio, have designed their

Lion Coffee Cabinet,

Of which the accompanying cut gives but a partial idea. In this cabinet is packed 120 one-pound packages of Lion Coffee, and we offer the goods at a price enabling the grocer to secure these cabinets without cost to himself. They are made air-tight, tongue and groove, beautifully grained and varnished, and are put together in the best possible manner. Complete set of casters, with screws, inside this cabinet. Their use in every grocery, after the coffee is sold out, is apparent; just the thing from which to retail nutmeg, prunes, hominy, dried fruits, bread, and a hundred other articles. Further, they take up no more floor room than a barrel, and do away with those unsightly things in a store. For price-list of Lion Coffee in these cabinets, see price-current in this paper. Read below what we say as to the quality of Lion Coffee.

This Coffee Cabinet Given Away.

A GOOD BREAKFAST

Is ALWAYS possible when a good cup of coffee is served. The grocer who sells LION COFFEE to his trade can invariably secure this result to them. LION COFFEE is always uniform; contains strength, flavor and true merit; is a successful blend of Mocha, Java and Rio. Packed only in one-pound airtight packages; roasted, but not ground; full net weight, and is never sold in bulk.

A Beautiful Picture Card

In every package. We solicit a sample order for a cabinet filled with LION COFFEE.

SOLIMAN SNOOKS

Relates His Experience at the Pharmaceutical Convention.

CANT HOOK CORNERS, Nov. 1, 1886.

My Dear Tradesman:

DEAR SIR—I don't know but it is getting to be rather an old chestnut down there; but I promised in my last to tell about the rest of the Pharmaceutical convention.

I was surprised at the splendid exhibit made in the hall. In fact, I think as a pure pharmacy exhibit, it was ahead of anything I saw in that line at the Centennial.

We circulated around the hall about fourteen times and every time around I took a drink of first-class wine from a pleasant chap at the right hand as you went in. It was a good sample. I really liked it better than a sample dose of castor oil that man gave me up in the other end of the building.

Mrs. Snooks got several presents—three bottles of perfume, a spatula, a cake of soap and a porous plaster. She is wearing the latter at present in the place of a new seal-skin what-you-may-call-it I promised to get her. A capsicum plaster is very warming and much cheaper.

We saw a wonderful carrot on exhibition. It looked like a person without any head with his hands and feet whittled off to a point. If it had been red instead of yellow I should have thought it was a dead-beat. I might mention several other things, but I must hurry on.

At 1:30 p. m., standard time we all filed out with our ribbons on our vests in a straggling procession for the depot. I heard a lady at the corner say, "This is the smartest looking lot of ministers I have seen yet." She evidently thought we were the ministerial convention or synod that met at the same time. By the way, I understand that it's a cold day when Grand Rapids don't have from one to three conventions meeting there at the same time. No wonder they get mixed. We got on the cars and were whirled, at the dizzy speed of half a mile per hour, to the Anti-Kalsomine grist mill. I did not think much of that, owing to a little accident I met with. I happened to get under a spout and down came about a peck of stone flour on my silk hat and into my north-east coat pocket. After that I passed for a miller.

Then we were conveyed per train to the plaster beds, where we witnessed a blow up with a hundred pounds of dynamite. That is powerful stuff, but I cannot help but observe that the blowing up I got for not wanting to have all my pockets and hands and my hat filled with sample rocks, was more powerful. I managed to get off with only about fifteen pounds of precious stones, which is better than some did. One poor drummer was loaded down with about seventy-five pounds of samples when we got back to the train.

In the evening we went to the show. We had two preserved seats right back of the head fiddler where we had a good view. Mrs. Snooks said she wondered if I wouldn't have secured seats a foot or so nearer, if it had not been for the railing around the band. Women are never satisfied. She would rather be back in the dress circle where she could see the hats and bonnets. All I cared for was the play and it was a serger. It was all about a chap that came to the city and lost his wife and two kids, and bought out a restaurant and run it. He was an honest, candid old farmer and did not understand city ways. I think he would make a good candidate for governor on an off year. Any how, the time he had in that hotel and restaurant, a getting tangled in the dumb waiter and speaking tube and stuck on the fly paper and everything was enough to make a dog laugh. I bursted three buttons off my vest, and Mehitable said she was actually ashamed to have me haw haw so loud. Bless her heart—what is a man to do when he sees something funny? Bust himself holding in I suppose. When the old chap on the stage chloroformed the cheese and nailed it down, I fell clean off my chair and pretty near had a stroke of apoplexy. I guess all the pharmacists enjoyed it, for I noticed a grin about six inches wide on all their faces.

Take it all in all I never had such an all-fired good time in my life, and I hope the next convention will be as good. I don't know though. That Potosky is a rather nice place, but, like the Corners, it is not so rushing as Chicago and Grand Rapids. This is no taffy.

I have been pretty busy lately writing a story about the time I kept a haunted store several years ago. It will be a ghost story. I will send you a sample chapter soon.

The Traveler's Latest Trick.

"Train Talk" in Chicago Herald.

"Saw a new trick out in Iowa the other day," said a traveling man. "I was stopping at a little station on the Northwestern, and the hotel was close to the railroad track. The through passenger trains don't stop there. In the party sitting outside after dinner was a drummer who had a fine gold watch, with a case of extraordinary weight. He said it was the heaviest watchcase made, and the strongest.

"There is a funny thing about this watch of mine," he said; "it so strong that I can put it on the railroad track and let a train run over it and it will not be damaged in the least."

"Right on the rail?" queried one of the party.

"Yes, I'll place it right on the top of the rails where the wheels run, and it won't be hurt a particle."

"Bet you the cigars you dasset do it."

"The proposition was promptly accepted, and the whole crowd present included in the payment of the wager, no matter who lost. In a few moments a train was seen approaching, when the owner of the watch went out to the track, put his time-piece on the rail, and then walked back to the hotel porch and resumed his chair as cool as a cucumber. The train came thundering on, and the crowd got excited. They stood with open mouths, and thinking what a shame it was that an infernal fool should put such a fine watch on the rails to have it smashed into smithereens. When the locomotive struck the spot where the watch had been placed the crowd groaned and fancied they could see bits of gold flying along with the dust. But the owner of the watch sat quietly smoking his cigar, and as soon as the long train had passed, he walked out reached down and picked his watch up from the side of the rail, as perfect as if it had been in his pocket all the time.

"You see," he said, as we all lighted fresh cigars at the other fellow's expense, "there is no danger in this trick providing you place it near the edge of the rail, where the wheels have worn the face smooth so that the slightest disturbance will cause it to slide off inside the rail. The watch-case is oval, and that leaves an opening for the air to get under. If the jar of the rail did not cause the watch to fall off the pressure of the air from the approaching train surely would. I have performed that little trick hundreds of times and never met with an accident. One day a fresh traveling man from St. Louis, saw me do it and he at once declared that that was nothing—anyone could do that. So he went out in front of another train and put his watch on the rail. After the train had passed he found his watch about forty rods up the track. It was about as big as a saucer and as thin as a piece of light cardboard. He had made the fatal mistake of putting his watch near the end of a rail and so nicely balanced upon the top of the rail that it didn't fall off. This trick is just like any other, you want to know how to do it."

The Future of Oleo.

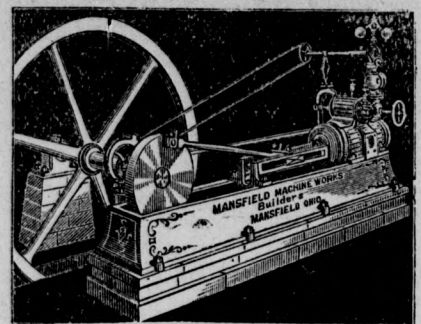

From the New York Market Journal.

Considerable curiosity prevails in regard to the prosperity of oleomargarine when the new law shall take effect. The question, plainly stated, is, when people know what they are buying, will they take oleomargarine? Opinions differ; some profess to believe that the article cannot stand upon its merits, but will die a speedy death, while others, who are unprejudiced and who have equal opportunities for forming correct conclusions, reason something as follows: Oleomargarine must now be nationally recognized as a legitimate article of trade which may be as openly and honorably dealt in as lard, butter or molasses. Its former patrons, such as boarding houses, restaurants, etc., will continue to buy it and increase in numbers. It will be kept in stock by many merchants who have never before handled it, and being easily obtainable, its general consumption may naturally be expected to rapidly increase. No product of modern times has been so extensively advertised as oleomargarine. The national controversy, both here and in Europe, in regard to its merits, as compared with butter, have widely educated the public in regard to them. Multitudes of reading people have been made aware, by the printed statements of scientific men of high character, that the two products were equally wholesome and nutritious, and that, by the exercise of the three senses—sight, smell and taste—it is difficult even for experts to distinguish the one from the other. But probably the greater demand for the article will come less from the reading and wealthy people, than from the working classes, who will be influenced by price. Many of the latter have now a vague prejudice against it from the attacks made upon it, which they do not fully understand. If, however, the quality of the oleomargarine put upon the market is kept at a high standard of purity and excellence, and proper measures are taken to enlighten the public in regard to it, these prejudices will soon pass away, and its use become popular and extensive. We have much mistaken the character, enterprise, energy and resources of the manufacturers and dealers in oleomargarine and its kindred products, if, under the present condition and prospects of the industry, they sit quietly down and permit themselves to be squelched.

Organization Notes.

THE TRADESMAN requests secretaries of local associations to send in full reports of all meetings, and other association news, for publication.

L. N. Fisher, the Detroit general dealer, recently called at THE TRADESMAN office to say that he was determined to have an association at his place.

The first notification sheet of the M. B. M. A. was issued November 1 and has been forwarded to all local associations entitled to the valuable information conveyed therein.

The Sparta Business Men's Association meets Thursday afternoon for the purpose of receiving the Lisbon merchants into the fold, as the latter cannot get away in the evening.

Sparta Sentinel: The Sparta Business Men's Association at their meeting last week, decided to close their stores at 7:30 p. m. each evening except Saturday, when they will close at 8 o'clock.

The Chicago Commercial Bulletin reprints from THE TRADESMAN the constitution of the Ada Business Men's Association, prefacing the same with the following complimentary remarks: "It is a new compilation, the result of great experience on the part of its authors, and is a model that can be profitably copied, with any alteration rendered necessary by local circumstances, by any new organization of similar views and purposes. We reproduce this document not only as an answer to various subscribers requesting information on the subject but as the best possible exposition of the ends, and the means of accomplishing the same of their business men's associations."

President Hamilton writes as follows: "I am actually surprised at the course organization is running. It is a big field to cover, even now, and what it may result in is beyond telling. Our efforts in the work are certainly apparent to even the little villager in the remotest corner. I feel that Northern Michigan ought to be coming into line a little faster, and if you feel that I could render any service in that line will gladly coincide with your suggestion, made some time ago, relating to my going out on missionary trips similar to your own. I feel that personal contact would throw much light upon the subject for me and stimulate further action."

Candy is in good request and prices are steady. Chestnuts are scarce and higher. New figs are in better supply and a little lower in price. The quality of best grades is fine. Bananas are plenty and cheap. Only Jamaica oranges are in market and prices are about the same. Floridas will soon arrive and promise a good crop. Lemons are good and cheap. Foreign nuts are steady. Peanuts are a shade lower. The new crop is said to be good.

Information Wanted.

President Hamilton has addressed the following letter to the presidents of the various local Associations:

TRAVERSE CITY, NOV. 1, 1886.
DEAR SIR—I would be very glad to have your reply upon some points connected with your local association work. We are desirous of ascertaining the good accomplished by each union, and, too, errors as well, that we may at our next meeting adopt the one and discard the other. I also want to ask you to make any suggestions to me relative to local or State work, now or at any future time. Be kind enough, if you will, to forward a set of blanks and constitution used by your association, stating if they meet your wants and in which direction they have produced the best results, viz., by effecting settlements or by preventing the solicitation of credits. Nearly all the organizations at first went to extremes, ours was conservative, others too radical; we aimed rather to curtail all credits and I hope that will be the battle cry at our March meeting. Do you admit members outside of the mercantile line?

What other class of work has your association accomplished. We have secured reductions in freight, opened a lecture field, secured a good enterprise and have other projects on foot. Where do you favor holding our next meeting? Have you joined the State Association? Hoping to hear from you, I am yours truly,
FRANK HAMILTON.

President Mich. Business Men's Association.

Good News from the Greenville Association.

GREENVILLE, Oct. 28, 1886.

E. A. Stowe, Grand Rapids:

DEAR SIR—At the special meeting of our Association held last evening, the following new members joined:

B. H. Packer, Miller & Paine, S. R. & A. B. Stevens, John Bowyer, A. I. Bliss, J. H. Edsall, T. R. Shepard, D. Silverthorn, E. Roosa, J. Callaghan, C. R. Kirkbride, Geo. Slawson, Hanson & Beardsley, John H. Passage, Gibson Bros., T. B. Inkle, A. O. Derby, W. Knapp, Jas. H. Mills & Son, Nelson & Crittenden, John Avery & Son, W. L. Hayden.

This gives us a total membership of fifty. The Association voted to join the State Association, and I herewith enclose five dollars per capita dues.

The following Business Committee was elected—R. F. Sprague, Wm. Bradley and D. Jacobson.

The following by-law was adopted: Any member of this Association who shall be reported as a delinquent shall stand expelled from this Association, except in the case of disputed accounts, which shall be referred to the Executive Committee for investigation and report, which report shall be acted upon by the Association.

The usual system of notification and collection blanks were adopted.

Respectfully yours,
E. J. CLARK.

Secretary Greenville Business Men's Association.

The Canvassing Fraud at Evart.

EVART, Oct. 27, 1886.

E. A. Stowe, Grand Rapids:

DEAR SIR—Seeing your letter from Charlevoix reminds me that on my return from the Business Men's Association, on September 22, bent on organizing an association here, I found that during my absence in Grand Rapids your Canvassing Fraud had been here and secured the names of almost every business man in town at $3 per head by displaying certificates of membership from the leading business men of nearly every town in the State. The list included many whom I knew in Sturgis and also in Ludington. Three dollars entitled them to membership for one year, but I noticed that the Sturgis certificates bore the date of 1884 and he could not account for their not being renewed. Other towns bore still older dates. He claimed to employ a collector in every town to give the collection of accounts his undivided attention and keep a book of all migratory dead-beats. His collector at this place had engaged to teach a district school before canvassing-fraud had left town. He had his wife with him and staid in town several days and seemed to be enjoying life. I have heard of no collections being made or efforts to collect, but do not suppose money would be refused, if offered.

If this will save any man in the State $3, you are welcome to use it.

Respectfully,
F. HIBBARD.

Smith Barnes on the Subject of Early Closing.

TRAVERSE CITY, Oct. 27, 1886.

E. A. Stowe, Grand Rapids:

DEAR SIR—On my return, I find your letter of the 12th inst., in which—at the instance of Mr. Hamilton—you request me to adopt the initiative in "setting the ball rolling" for early closing and short hours.

We are now opening at 7 a. m. and closing at 6 p. m., but with the duties incumbent upon me, I feel that it is more than I can consistently do, in justice to myself, at the present time to prepare such a paper as would be satisfactory to either.

My business record for the past several years has been in accordance with the principles advocated.

Earnest effort, close application, the best quality of brain, mental and physical condition adequate to the meeting of a miscellaneous patronage and serving the joint interests of buyer and seller, can only come as a result of shorter hours and more complete relaxation of body and mind.

The present pressure of correspondence is so great you will excuse so short a reply to your valued favor.

Very faithfully yours,
S. BARNES.

Will Be With You November 10.

TUSTIN, Oct. 28, 1886.

E. A. Stowe, Grand Rapids:

DEAR SIR—"Please tally one for Tustin."

At a meeting of our business men held last evening, it was unanimously voted that we do organize at once and the writer was requested to ascertain what night you can be with us after election is over.

Kindly advise me when you can come. The sooner the better.

Yours respectfully,
GEO. W. BEVINS.

The Invitation is Accepted.

WATLAND, Oct. 30, 1886.

E. A. Stowe, Grand Rapids:

DEAR SIR—Come and help us organize next Wednesday evening. We are anxiously waiting for you.

Respectfully yours,
E. W. PICKETT.

From the President of the Lowell Business Men's Association.

LOWELL, Oct. 26, 1886.

E. A. Stowe, Grand Rapids:

DEAR SIR—Enclosed please find the petition from our business men to the Superintendent of the D. G. H. & M. Railway. I did not try to get a long list of names but only went to our business men.

I received a card from you, notifying me of the semi-monthly meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association, but was not able to attend. Should be very glad to meet with you when it is convenient for me.

Our Association is doing nicely and we are better pleased with its workings every day.

With kind regards I remain
Very respectfully yours,
N. B. BLAIN.

DRUG QUOTATIONS IN LATIN.

How They are Regarded by the Trade.

GRAND RAPIDS, Oct. 28, 1886.

Editor MICHIGAN TRADESMAN:

DEAR SIR—We hope by all means that you will permanently adopt your new departure in giving drug quotations in Latin. It has many advantages to recommend it. Drugists are more familiar with the Latin names than the English, because their labels are all, or nearly all, in Latin. The few names in the list not generally known by the U. S. D., and that is an argument in its favor, as drugists will, in many cases, learn the Latin name to some drugs they never happened to learn the name of before. We can think of some other advantages too obvious to mention.

Welcome the new departure, say we. Very respectfully,
O. H. RICHMOND & CO.

ITS VALUE TO THE APRENTICE.

GRAND RAPIDS, Oct. 29, 1886.

E. A. Stowe, Grand Rapids:

DEAR SIR—Your valuable paper came to hand as usual this week and I notice the drug quotations are in Latin. This is a move in the right direction and one which any practical druggist ought to approve. The apprentice who has been in a drug store, say two, three or six months, will probably not know the meaning of this or that word and will turn to his Dispensary for an answer. He will then find the English word; also the German, French and Spanish translation. It will thus prepare a student to become thoroughly acquainted with the names of the drugs written in different languages and know their meaning and what they are at sight.

Yours respectfully,
THEO. KEMINK.

BETTER THAN EVER.

GRAND RAPIDS, Nov. 2, 1886.

E. A. Stowe, Grand Rapids:

DEAR SIR—You have done a good many good things for the drug trade, but you never did us a better service than when you changed your drug quotations into Latin. Your journal was worth all it cost before the change. Now it is worth twice its price.

Yours truly,
WILL L. WHITE.

A COOPERVILLE OPINION.

COOPERVILLE, Oct. 27, 1886.

E. A. Stowe, Grand Rapids:

DEAR SIR—I suppose your price list of drugs is for the especial benefit of druggists. That being the case, I see no objection to the medical name being used instead of the common name. Very respectfully,
C. E. BLAKELEY.

FROM THE FREEPORT HERALD.

THE MICHIGAN TRADESMAN now gives its drug quotations in Latin. This is a desirable feature and will demand a more generous support of that excellent publication from the drug trade.

PORK IN GREEK.

Chas. S. Robinson, the well-known provision traveler, says the drug quotations in Latin are "no good," and that unless the thing is stopped he will see to it that pork and hams are quoted in Greek.

FAVOR THE CHANGE.

J. Q. Look, of Lowell; S. E. Young, of Edmore; and Dr. John Lamoreaux, of Lakeview—all well-known druggists—favor the change from English to Latin.

The Drug Market.

German quinine is advancing. Linseed oil is off 2 cents. Iodine and Iodide of potash have sustained another decline. Oil cubes have advanced, in sympathy with cubeb berries.

Are Druggist Benefited by Local Associations?

"Sam Bucus" in Nashville Drugman.

I say that they are, and I think that every reasonable man will agree with me in this assertion. The advantages derived from such associations are many and varied. In the first place, we are all engaged in the same calling and it naturally follows that whatever affects one in a general way must affect the others, more or less, and does it not seem more like the proper thing that we should pull together, rather than that each should pull in a different direction? By our meeting together once or twice a month we become acquainted with each other, we rub off the rough corners, and will soon begin to regard our neighbor more in the light of a friend than an enemy. When you become well acquainted you will be surprised how often you will find yourself thinking, "Well, my neighbor Jones is not half so bad a fellow as I thought he was; I really like the man since I have come to know him. Can it be true that he said all the ugly things about me that Brown told me he said? He don't seem to me now to be that kind of a man. I hated to let that dollar bottle of medicine go at 75 cents and lose that quarter, for times are mighty dull and rents do not come down any, but Brown said Jones would sell it to him at that, but he would rather buy it of me, if I would let him have it at the same price."

The next bottle of medicine Brown wants he goes to Jones' store and calls for it. He asks what is the price of it. He knows as well as you do, but asks the question as innocently as if it was the first bottle he had ever seen. Jones tells him the price is one dollar. "Holy Horrors! One dollar? Why your neighbor only asks me 75 cents for it. You druggists must make an awful profit on your medicines. I do all my trading with you, but I see I will have to change houses, if this is the way you treat your friends—want to make your living off of them, do you?" as though you could expect to make it off your enemies. He is your enemy, the worst one you have, because by his misrepresentations to you, he is beating you out of your just profits and causing hard feelings to spring up between you and your neighbor, with whom you are not well acquainted.

Now, by coming together in our local associations, we learn to know each other better; will feel more kindly toward each other; can tell Mr. Brown "I know what you are saying about my neighbor is not true, for I have his word that he will not sell medicine for less than it is marked to sell at." We will feel more like brothers than enemies.

The cutting of prices does not do any of us any good. It does not create any greater demand for the medicines—we do not sell any more by it. If you cut the price your neighbor will soon hear of it, as in the case cited above, and will of course meet it. You seldom gain a customer by it, because the parties who run from store to store will not be satisfied if you should sell them goods at half their real value. They would want to go to another store next time, thinking they would do still better. By cutting we only lose the profit that we all need so much and should be laying up now especially, and you cause your neighbor to do the same.

An evening spent once or twice a month, or even oftener, in attending your local meetings, I think could be made both pleasant and profitable in more ways than we would at first imagine. By writing short essays on our mode of making the different preparations of the pharmacopoeia, or any other subject that may suggest itself, and by participating in the discussions that come up from time to time, we can improve ourselves in writing and composition, learn to speak without embarrassment, and to express our thoughts in logical and proper language. Many of us are young men; do not let us on that account be at all backward in expressing ourselves on any and all subjects that come up. Another one says may suggest something to another that he perhaps would never have thought of. If we go wrong, then we have the council of older heads with us, who can set us on the right track again by giving us the benefit of their age and experience. I think every town with three or more drug stores should organize a local association and think they would soon find it pleasant as well as profitable to hold their meetings regularly and let every member make it his special duty to be present at these meetings. I also think that the members of all the local Associations should become members of the State Association, and by their attendance at meetings of the same help to make it a grand success and an honor to our State.

Grand Rapids Pharmaceutical Society.

Thursday evening marks the close of the second year of the Grand Rapids Pharmaceutical Society and the beginning of a third year under very auspicious circumstances. The year just closed has not been without incident, but the organization enters upon a third year stronger in point of membership and influence than at any period in its history.

Frank J. Wurzburg, who has faithfully served the Society as President since its inception, feels impelled to relinquish the position to some other member, as the duties devolving upon the position of President of the M. S. P. A. require all his spare time. Frank Escott, who has written Secretary after his name for two years, is likely to be retained for a third term, as he has executed the duties of the office in a satisfactory manner.

Quinine Pills.*

Query No. 26. What is the best excipient (1) for uncoated quinine pills, (2) for such as are to be gelatin-coated?

Much has been written in regard to excipients for pill masses, and the efforts made by nearly all writers is to find a single excipient which will meet the requirements of all cases. Little or no information has been advanced by pill manufacturers with a view of enlightening the benighted pharmacist. In an attempt to answer this query the writer can speak with the experience, both of the benighted pharmacist and the manufacturer, having made uncoated pills for stock, and also gelatin-coated pills for market. Under the light of such experience, I regard the question of excipients as a very simple one. In the matter of quinine pills, the best excipient I have ever found for uncoated pills, after trying all which have been recommended by others, is simple syrup, U. S. P. When used alone it makes a soft plastic mass, which is easily rolled out and hardens in a short time. The pills can be kept for any length of time without impairing the solubility. Uncoated pills of quinine after having been kept for a year in my dispensing department have been found to show their effect on the system when taken, as quickly as quinine administered in powder. A number of test cases having been tried to prove it. I am satisfied in offering it as a conclusion. If the dispenser desires a small pill, combination of about five per cent. of po. tartaric acid with the quinine before adding the excipient will give an entirely satisfactory result without impairing the therapeutic effect of the pill. In either case the syrup should be carefully added in small quantities with a free use of the pestle. The mass works up easily, and when the operator thinks from the granular appearance of the same, that it needs just a few drops more to give it the proper consistence, if, instead of adding more he will knead a few minutes longer, and then take the mass in his hand it will soften and become plastic and be ready to roll out in good shape. The pills when made will retain their form nicely. The presence of any excess of syrup gives a result which is unsatisfactory. Section two of the query is answered by stating that the same excipient gives the best result in all cases. It has been my custom to add 60 grs. of po. gum arabic to every ounce of quinine employed, to give a greater adhesiveness to the mass. When it is intended to coat the pills, larger masses are usually made at one operation, and the gum arabic seems to give a mass which will hold its plasticity for a longer time. Glycerin should never be used as an excipient for any pill which is to be gelatin coated, and is not satisfactory for uncoated pills. On general principles simple syrup can oftener be used as an excipient for pill masses than any other substance which has come under my notice, especially for pills which are to be gelatin coated.

* Paper read by Chas. W. Holmes, at the recent meeting of the N. Y. State Pharmaceutical Association.

Muskegon Drug Clerk's Association.

MUSKEGON, Oct. 21, 1886.

The first regular meeting in Oct. was held at the Arlington on the 13th inst., with a fair attendance. Owing to the lateness of the hour before a quorum could be formed, the regular routine of business was transacted and aside from the appointment of W. E. LeFevre and D. A. Schumacher to prepare papers, to be read four weeks from date, nothing of importance was done and the meeting adjourned.

The second and last October meeting was held the 27th, all the members being present excepting one. The President called the meeting to order and appointed E. C. Bond as critic. After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, the following subjects were submitted:

No. 1. Does the process of decolorizing Tr. Iodine lessen the effect of the preparation?
No. 2. Does a tincture derive all the virtues of the drug from which it is made?
No. 3. What is the difference between oil cinnamon and oil cassia?

The questions formed the chief topic of discussion during the meeting. After appointing O. A. Lloyd, and T. Hyatt to prepare papers to be read four weeks from date, the critic's report was heard and the meeting adjourned.

The next meeting will be held Nov. 10.

Yours respectfully,

POSTAGE ON A WILD CAT.

Live Stock Not to be Sent by Mail, Even in New Mexico.

From the Guntown, N. M., Special.

The postmaster here died a year ago and much trouble has been experienced in finding a new one who would be satisfactory and competent. At length the people concluded to petition for the appointment of Sim Duff, who keeps a saloon here. As the request for Duff's appointment was almost unanimous it was supposed that he would get the place, but after a while a grocer named Beebe was appointed. That made everybody mad. To get even with all hands the citizens held a meeting and put up a job which was some time in coming to a head. One day last week old Herick Price, who used to live in Tennessee, drove up in front of Beebe's place, and yanked a young wildcat out of his wagon. The beast was frisky and ugly, but apparently not dangerous. On his collar was a card bearing the address:

To the President of the United States from the grateful Democratic citizens of Guntown, N. M.:
A natural curiosity. Democratic from tip to tip. Feed him and treat him gently. He is used to luxury.

Pulling the beast into the postoffice, old man Price asked what the postage on him would be. Beebe opened a book and pretended to read. At length he stammered out something to the effect that it would probably be about 10 stamps. Price bought the stamps, stuck them on the cat's collar, and turned him over to the postmaster, with an injunction to be careful of him.

That afternoon when the mail carrier came along he refused to take the animal. Beebe swore that he should, whereupon a fight ensued, and while it was in progress the wildcat got mad and ran into the grocery, where he crawled under a counter. When Beebe and the mail carrier had settled their differences, the former went after the cat, but was soon warned by the animal's demeanor that intimacy with him was not safe. By this time the town was on the outside watching the fun.

At length they hit upon the plan of putting a big leather mail bag near the cat with a piece of meat in it. The plan worked to perfection, and a few minutes later the crowd in front had the pleasure of seeing the driver and Beebe emerge, carrying the bag containing the compliments of the citizens of Guntown. To simplify matters Beebe had attached to the bag a card on which the mail carrier had written:

I WILL CAT IN THE POST OFFICE.

When the bag had been deposited in the wagon and the driver had whipped up his horses and vanished, the citizens called on Beebe and congratulated him on his success in his new place. Then all hands went away and awaited developments.

These came when a special agent arrived, deposited Beebe, and commissioned Duff as postmaster. He said it was a choice of evils, but that in a town like this it was necessary to have a man who knew the difference between fourth-class matter and live stock. When the wildcat in the bag reached Santa Fe nobody would touch the beast, and at length, on the advice of citizens, the mail carrier threw the whole outfit into a cistern, from which the bag and the defunct wildcat were fished the next morning. Duff is now doing the honors here for the United States government, and everybody is happy except Beebe.

Better be Definite.

From the Detroit Free Press.

A Detroit who was working across one of the northern counties with a horse and buggy this summer, met a farmer on foot and asked him how far it was to Greenville.

"Which one?" was the query, after half a minute spent in reflection.

"Why I didn't know that there was but one Greenville."

"Didn't you? There's one in South Carolina, a second in Kansas, a third in Ohio and a fourth in Iowa. Which one do you want to go to?"

"The nearest one."

"Well, that's about seven miles off. Next time you inquire for Greenville you better name the State. Got any tobacco?"

"Which tobacco do you want?"

"Why, I didn't know as there was more than one tobacco."

"Oh, yes there is. There's plug tobacco, fine cut, shorts and smoking. Which do you want?"

"Wall, I'll take plug."

"I haven't got any. Next time you inquire for tobacco you'd better mention the kind."

The two looked at each other for a minute and then separated for life.

Roofing Felt.

We shall be out with an ad next week for two and three ply roofing felt. Exactly the thing that the Centennial buildings were roofed with.

Anybody can put it on and it makes the best roof in the world. Can furnish samples next week.

CURTIS, DUNTON & Co.

No St. Paul relies for him: "Have you heard of that interesting case down East of a woman who was cured of paralysis by the miraculous power of a relic of St. Paul?"

"Yes, I have, but I'm from Minneapolis, and I wouldn't touch a relic of St. Paul with a ten foot pole."

Mother: "And do you think the good Lord will look out for my son, who is on the vast deep?" Parson: "Pardon me, Mrs. Harper, I never talk shop outside of the church."
