In banking circles the feeling prevails that the retrenchment and moderation which has ruled during the past spring and summer will be continued in a less marked degree during the fall and winter. Recognizing the fact that for several years the various branches of the wholesale trade of this city have felt the need of an authorized representative of their interests, and that the retail dealers who look to this of a reliable commercial guide, we are pleased to present to the business men of from the Grand Rapids market, paying particular attention to the wants of the patrons

It is generally conceded among business men, that all men have not the same end in view in doing business. Business is generally supposed to be done to make money, but this is not always the case. There are firms who seem to have other motives for conducting business than making money. Certain it is that they don't make money. Their prices are too low for that. Why, then, do they do business? No one knows. Perhaps for pleasure, or for glory. This class of men are very disagreeable to have in a community where most men labor for money and their daily bread. They seem to have adopted the policy of working for nothing, and forcing others, if possible, to do the same thing. This is the class of men who sell goods cheaper than they can buy them, and pay for freight and cost of handling besides.

THE OLD OFFICE DESK.

BY H. J. SHELLMAN.

From morn till night and from year to year

Column on column must pass review,
And balance sheets be clear;
For the wheels of commerce must never cease,
They turn and turn through the weary years;
And the tired toilers find no release, Though lives be filled with tears.

I stand by the same old desk to-day,
Mustering numerals one by one,
Classing and grouping the same old way,
The work is never done;
It seems like a dream as I recall
The misty memories back to light,
The joys and sorrows, the hopes through all
That things would turn out right.

Right there's a stain from a splattering pen-lt's forty years if it's been a day— We used to use the gray goosequill then, And they had a splashing way. It's forty years—as a slender boy, I stood by my father's side to learn The knowledge of signs experts employ, And for which tyros yearn.

'Twas my first day, and I seized the pen With a nervous hand and a blushing brow.' Twas diffidence caused my trembling then; 'Tis age that makes it now. And here where the oilcloth's blistered up,

The water ran on a later day; Embarassed, I overturned the cup Which held love's first boquet.

And this great spot where the bottle fell,
That deluged the desk with the ink blood-red.
Chanced when the messenger came to tell
My baby-boy was dead.
"Tis thus I can trace the long, long years,
Noting the stains on its quaint old form,
Some standing for joys and some for tears;
Sunshine or passing storm.

A date scratched here means a baby born; One there means a child that died; This mark calls to mind a man forlorn, Crushed to earth in his pride, When the head of the house learned his loved

For forgery lay in a felon's cell; And that marks the sin of another one, A trusted one who fell.

Here, where the marks have an aimless trend,

I moved my pen in a dreamy way,
For death had taken my life's best friend,
My loving wife, away;
And, now, my desk is the only friend
That binds my heart to the days agone—
All else is new. As we near the end
We're desolate and lone.

It seems like a dream when I recall
The misty memories back to the light;
The joys and sorrows, the faith through all
That God sets all things right;

Then made a rooster cackle.
At last upon a drummer's check
He settled down to drill;
He prodded there for half an hour,
And then he broke his bill.

COMMERCIAL CHRONICLES.

I. And it came to pass that in the land of the Kentuckyites there dwelt a man of great wealth.

II. Yea, much had he of worldly goods, and of fine raiment, and of jewels; and the cattle on a thousand hills were his also.

III. And he did keep an inn, and verily many pilgrims, or, in the language of that land, drummers, did tarry and abide with

VII. And the name of this innkeeper was Oleman Jones; and mighty was his power in that land.

VIII. Now it came to pass that young drummer must rise very early in the morn, Perkins, son of the old man Perkins, jour- for the atmosphere is quite chilly when he neved to that land in search of customers. and did take with him many samples.

IX. Yea, many samples of divers goods and of many textures,-for was he not in the dry-goods trade?

X. And these samples did he carry in high trunks; and their size was even a marvel in that land of pilgrims.

XXIX. And Perkins did get back to Oleman Jones's house and did again open his big sample trunks. Yea, verily, he was busy with his samples as he never was be-him and said, "How now! Told I not thee to get? What meanest thou?"

XXXI. And Perkins answered simply, 'Jones, I'm busy now. No more foolishness for me; I want to show my samples once more to a customer.

XXXII. "And here, Jones, if thou ever seest me with thy girl again, blaze away with thy shot gun, and I won't say a word." XXXIII. Then said Oleman Jones unto

How the Exchanges Rule the Commercial World. While only one bushel it seven of the

When the Chicago Board of Trade was founded, its members were required to record their trancount is made of the steps. The Board was lately reported to have turned over as much wheat in one day as the whole State of Illiulative hogs outnumber two to one the live hogs in the United States, and it is safe to say that the Board raises five bushels of grain to every one produced by the farmers wheat, cotton, oil, or hogs. The honest industry that builds up things that would be new to Solomon, if he XX. And when Perkins had asked him our greatest fortunes is raising wheat and for his daughter's hand, he fell into a great pork on the Chicago Board of Trade, mining on the San Francisco Stock Exchange, building railroads in Wall Street, sinking oil wells in William Street, and picking cotton in Hanover Spuare. While the text-books of the science of Exchange are describing in infantile prattle the imaginary trade of prehistoric trout for pre-Adamite venison be-tween the "first hunter" and the "first fisherman," the industry of the cotton plantation the oil-fields, and the farm is being overlaid by an apparatus of Exchanges which will prove an extremely interesting study to the Ricardo of, say, the twenty-fifth century. These Exchanges are the creameries of the world of labor. The prices of the speculative wheat and spectral hog of the board fix those of the real wheat and the live hog of the field. The negro planter of Georgia who raises his bale and a half must sell it for what the Cotton Exchange says it is worth. The man who works in the ground must take the price fixed for him by the man who works in the air. No one can understand the "corner" who does not comprehend the development and reach of the Exchanges of our time. The manufacture of prices, like other modern industries, is being concentrated into vast establishments, and these are passing under the rule of bosses and syndicates. The markets, like political parties, are run by the machine. The people are are run by the machine. loosing the power of making prices as well as nominations. To Retail Druggists.

We commend to your favorable consideration and attention THE MICHIGAN TRADES-MAN. We believe that this paper will be to Druggists throughout the State of great benefit and interest. Particularly would we call your attention to the full and extended list and prices current for the drug market, which is to be one of the features of the paper; and as we shall ourselves make up the market changes and correct the list weekly it will always be fresh, and can be depended upon as containing the latest and fullest rea semi-monthly change list of important fluctuations occurring in the market, but have decided after this issue to discontinue the same, believing that this means of advising the trade will be more complete and
